Sketches of Pioneer Baptist Preachers in North Carolina.

BY JOHN W. MOORE, STATE HISTORIAN.

Memoir IV—Rev. Daniel Marshall

CHAPTER ONE.

Perhaps no people have yet lived in this orld with so broad and cosmopolitan a pirit as has been exemplified in North Car- lina. From the earliest times in her his- ory as a civilized community, not only indness and the most abounding hospital- ty have been shown to strangers; but to very new-comer, whatever his nationality, n equal share of honor and trust has been xtended, whenever such a man was wor- hy and fit for such marks of distinction. So far from our people manifesting anything f a spirit of jealousy toward our citizens of lien birth, it has really seemed that such n accident of nativity has worked in their favor, and in a thousand instances has given them the preference in popular favor over those who were so unfortunate as to be to "the manor born." Whatever may be said of the wisdom and propriety of such a trait, it at least proves the large hearted and un- selfish disposition of our people. With such a spirit and characteristic as a civilized com munity, it would be unpardonable if the life and labors of the Rev. Daniel Marshall were omitted from a catalogue of our pioneer Baptist preachers.

Like Shubal Stearns, Daniel Marshall was born in the year of our Lord 1706. This event occurred in the town of Windsor of the then Province of Connecticut. He was reared by a Presbyterian father and mother, and upon reaching years of maturity was admitted to all the rights and privileges of the church to which his parents belonged. This was a matter of course in Presbyterian practice, and was only remitted in such cases where the young men and women who had been christened in unconscious infancy destroyed all hope and imputation of virtue therein by outbreaking and abandoned courses of life. As this young Daniel Mar- shall not only conformed to the usual stand- ard of morality, but was also a believer in the articles of faith set forth in the West- minister Confession, he was not only made a member in full standing, but also in due season was appointed a deacon of his church. He had also married a wife in the mean- while, and saw children blooming like flow- ers in the household blessed by his thrifty and prosperous oversight.

Until Daniel Marshall reached the turn- ing of life in his thirty-ninth year, and thus saw his sun of existence reach its prime and begin the slow years of decline and decay, he lived on as he saw his friends and breth- ren did, in their cold and formal compli- ance with set rules of morality. In Connec- ticut this Presbyterian system had been made the religion of the Province with all the rights and authority of other established churches. All other forms of christian faith faith were only tolerated, as it was called in that day, because the great folks in Lon- don had of late changed their policy of persecution, and had furthermore sent word to every provincial governor in America that a like policy must mark their course toward dissenters. Up to the happening of this thrice-blessed change, the lives of all New England Baptists, outside of Rhode Is- land, had been full of peril and hardships. They were not only liable to pains and pen- alties as the result of their want of con- formity, but too often their land other prop- erty were taken from them to help in the construction of church buildings to be used by their neighbors who had thus robbed and punished them.

As State systems of christian faith had resulted in Great Britain and the continent of Europe, so did they in New England. The pristine fervor and devotion gradually diminished until, in the lapse of time, the machine morality, thus inculcated, ripened into such doubt and unbelief that the men and women, whose greatest means of wealth arose from slave-trading and rum-selling, became virtual infidels. They called them- selves Unitarians, and thereby denied the divinity of our Saviour. In the grip of a creed thus grown stale and outworn, Daniel Marshall was ere long to see how hostile his church brethren would prove themselves to anything like the true preaching and prac- tice of the gospel of peace. It was first seen in their rejection and scorn of Jona- than Edwards' pleas for the necessity of the new birth. When this great philosopher and theologian recalled the language of our Lord in his night talk with Nicodemus, and insisted that the Son of God was in earnest about what he told the Jewish ruler, the New England Pharisees were as deaf and blind as those of old, and, like their proto- types, they made life unhappy to all those who thus conformed to our Lord's teach- ings concerning this deep and awful mystery in the gospel plan of salvation.

But while church establishments and un- hallowed channels of commercial traffic had thus reacted so disastrously on the general spiritual life in New England, there were many noble exceptions to this general rule. There were still men and women left there who had never bowed the knee to Baal. The race of men who had made that stern and inhospitable clime not only to blossom as a rose, but it was also become largely the paladium and shrine for the largest and best hopes of the human race. Amid their frozen hills and storm-smitten coasts, men were nurturing a spirit of liberty and good will, which was in later years to prove a blessing to their descendants and mankind at large. Whatever their theological errors, they were yet true to the best interests of our race in their temporal concerns. Neither the might of banded kings, nor the fury of their Indian allies, could palsy that high New England spirit which sent so many of her sons to battle for the defence of free America.

Mr. Daniel Marshall was living, as he sup- posed, in the peace of God and in the enjoy- ment of the favor and confidence of such a people, when, in his thirty-ninth year, there came a moral earthquake and consequent upheaval of the spiritual dry bones. That mighty and glorious servant of the Most High, Rev. George Whitfield, like another Jonah amid the Ninevites, had come to show the careless New England multitudes how far they had come short in their duty to God. It was all in vain that the church au- thorities opposed and denounced this terri- ble exposer of their weakness and decay. Though they shut their church doors upon him, yet the broad fair fields and forests could still be used as standing ground for the vast multitudes that flocked to hear this matchless christian orator tell of what they had forgotten and overlooked in their care- less reading of the New Testament. The burden of his discourse was ever the neces- sity of faith, repentance and a changed heart in those who would flee the wrath of God. Like John the Baptist, exposing the emptiness of Jewish hopes, so did Whitfield uproot and confound the souls that had been so long reposing on beds of mere formality. The necessity of the new birth, its mysteri- ous dependence on the workings of the Holy Spirit, and the soul's sense of acceptance through the merits of our Lord's atonement, were almost like the preaching of a new gos- pel to the callous formalists. It was hateful and terrifying to their souls, just as the gracious discourses of the Redeemer had been to their ancient prototypes. As the Pharisees had resented the offers of our Sa- viour's terms, and refused him the privi- leges of their sanctuaries, so did they of New England shut up their hearts and church doors against this new apostle of righteousness.

Daniel Marshall had been in all the years of his professed christian life no better or worse than the multitude of his professing brethren. Like them he had been baptized in unconscious infancy, and as a matter of course, upon arriving at the years of discre- tion, he had been inducted into full fellow- ship in the church of his family and friends. Not only this, he had been so orderly in his walk and active in his church duties, he was made a deacon of the congregation. With all these testimonials from his friends and brethren touching his walk as a christian, he was yet made conscious of his exceeding needs when the true significance of our Lord's words to Nicodemus were at last im- pressed upon his soul. In an agony of grief and repentance over his blindness and dis regard of the Master's teaching, he cast all his old professions behind him as so many filthy rags, and, through a new found faith, reached "the peace of God which passeth all human understanding."

In the tremendous upheaval and renewal of christian life thus brought about under the evangel of Mr. Whitfield, Mr. Marshall, like a great host of other men, turned from all secular occupations, and began that life of devotion to the Master which was to em- brace the whole remnant of his stay in this world. In his new-born zeal he at once be- gan the preaching of that gospel which had been so long in reaching and filling his own soul. Nor was he content to thus discharge a sense of duty in proclaiming Christ to his civilized countrymen. In his burning zeal, the souls of the perishing heathen lay heavy upon his heart, and we find him proceeding to the headwaters of Susquehannah river as a missionary to the Indians. The war be- tween the tribes and white people arrested him in these labors, and he went South to continue the work thus made impossible at the North. It was thus the Rev. Shubal Stearns found him in 1758 laboring among the settlers of Northern Virginia, around a place known as Opequon. There were many things in common between the two evangelists to bind them into unusual affec- tion and brotherhood. They were the beaunt couriers of that great New Light Baptist movement which was ere long to become so potent in all the South. They were, as has already been told, brothers in law. Thus bound together, not only by the holy ties of religious and family affection, they united their efforts to widen the blessed influences that had so richly fallen upon themselves. But they found many things to oppose and nullify their best efforts in the valleys of Loudon, Fauquier and Fairfax counties. Not only was the old intolerant spirit of the Established Church people there to confront them, but the Regular Baptists of the same region manifested a coldness and aversion to the sterness of the new doctrines, that pained the anxious souls of the missionaries.

It was thus after a brief delay they shook the dust of Virginia from their feet and be- gan the long march for Sandy Creek in North Carolina. We have already told the marvelous tale of their labors and success- es in that region in the preceding memoir. It was thus so fixed by a gracious Providence that North Carolina was to become the focus from which issued all those potent streams which in a few years resulted in making such a host of the converts to the new order of things. From the Sandy Creek region as center they went out conquering and to con- quer, until in all the southern American Provinces the Separate or New Light Bap- tists, as they were known in that day, be- came the prevailing sect of our people.

In the loose and careless practice of the older Baptist churches, multitudes had been received into membership with no preten- sion that they had been converted. Even men in the pulpits and serving as pastors of churches could be found who made no scru- ple in declaring that they had no knowledge of any such thing as the new birth in the Lord. Pious moralists who, by virtue of their own weak wills, were seeking not only their own salvation, but were presuming to act as guides to their friends and country- men on the same great journey. It can be imagined then what a stir among the dry bones of such communities followed when Whitfield and the New Light preachers opened the batteries of their soul reaching interpretation of the everlasting gospel. That strong men fell as dead upon the ground and great crowds grew frantic with fear and repentance, is yet one of the world's most remarkable traditions. Whole com- munities as one man rose to the necessity of seeking a part in this mighty work of the people's salvation. Thus it was that Daniel Marshall, forsaking all things else, gave himself and all he had to further such mo- mentous interests. With unceasing toil and ever-weary journeyings he passed from county to county, and from Province to Province, repeating to ever new communi- ties the wondrous story of how Jesus Christ could save the perishing sons of men.

Overdoing Organization.

Unless the church militant has soon some blessed drawbacks, she is in imminent dan- ger of becoming too much organized. A certain normal balance of powers, as essen- tial to self-control and expansion of force in a religious body as in an individual life, may be destroyed by any mania or mono- mania. Organization overdone can do the mischief quite as easily as any other tem- porary rage which might not be as unani- mously welcomed. Even organization is under law, and must come into being ac- cording to a certain unwritten rule of order. This rule is evolutionary in its nature, not to be violated without danger of confusion of counsels and waste of power. There is a kind of organization that is born; that goes and grows by natural use. There is another kind that is hand-made—sometimes ma- chine-made. This kind goes too, and grows, alas! over fast for a season; but when at- tached to a church, abnormally develops one force at the expense of others, often at the cost of the whole.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL.

The church is for all ages and all classes. That is the fact that first faces us. The church is for young, middle-aged, aged, rich, poor, high, low, intelligent, and igno- rant. She is a great, gentle, loving, mother- bosom for the gathering and nourishing of all. She is an organism that holy love took for the expression of itself when it was very earnest about the welfare of men, and was making men exceedingly unselfish in their devotion to the present and future well be- ing of their fellows. We ought to remem- ber now, when church life tends towards a bewildering complexity, that at no time was the organism of the church more simple and natural than when she was endued with power from on high and making the Book of Acts. In high tides of spiritual activity, the church has shown capacity for adapting and applying her unified power to all the necessities of her complex life. It is then that no one class suffers, nor has any one class a monopoly of her care.

In times of religious quickening, when multitudes are being added unto the Lord, even the few simple organizations that may have been formed are in eclipse. They go down into silence for a season: all are lis- tening for what the Spirit is saying unto the church. The Sunday-school session becomes a church prayer-meeting, and who is think- ing of old or young, rich or poor, wise or ignorant? They all are of one accord, in one place, members many, but one body. The simple, natural institutions of praise, worship, prayer, edification by the ministry of the word, that came into being when apostolic power was reaching out after all classes to bless them, are the institutions that have survived everything that came in at other times, in other ways, and for other reasons. The church of Christ is a peculiar institution in this one respect, at least. Whatever survives in perennial power comes out of her own heart when it beats highest.

If the church is for all alike—all ages, all classes—then it follows that those services, fellowships, gatherings, that conserve the benefit of all, that promote unity by perpet- uating the true idea of the church, should always be first, be kept clearly in the fore- ground, and worked harder than anything else. Just here questions begin to come up. Is the church being kept well to the front? Are present tendencies, and the new organi- zations crowding in upon us helping to a gospel church, and emphasizing the spirit- ual growth and power of the whole body? Is the bewildering procession of societies, unions, circles, guilds, bands, etc., filing into the average church, helping those gen- eral agencies and activities that perpetuate the church as a distinct body and force in the world? Is there danger that the church may lose her distinctive individuality in the imagination and affection of her members, through the overcrowding of distracting, divisive, and rival organizations within her own fold? How fares the conception of her real efficiency, when it seems to be neces- sary to manufacture so many new societies out of her own members to increase that efficiency? Will there come as the upshot of this mania for organization an unreal idea of the church; that she is a sort of moribund mystery supposed to be hiding somewhere in the spaces between her own societies, if there can be spaces imagined? Or, that she is a sort of venerable, but su- perannuated old mother, who has lost her head and cannot any longer govern, and be- come paralytic in hands and feet, so that she is expected no longer to minister or to run on holy errands?

WHAT WILL BE ITS EFFECT.

What is to be the effect of these organiza- tions with their monopoly of time, force, and spirit, and their conventions, local, con- tinuous, annual, State, and national? How will the association meeting fare? And the State and national anniversaries? These are all agencies, gatherings of the whole church, representing and expressing her life. Should we make more of them or less? Will interest in them grow with the increase of other meetings devoted to a part of the church? One of the greatest difficulties of the present day is to induce laymen to in- terest themselves intelligently and actively in the larger work of the church; to get them to attend associations, conventions, anniversaries, councils. The great Hudson River South association, with 20,000 mem- bers, recently, we are told, transacted its annual business with a beggarly attendance of 150. Any one observing association meetings representing nearly fifty churches, will be impressed with the paucity of lay- men. Look for the men, the young men! No one will say that these regular meetings of the associated churches are not natural. They are surely to be perpetuated; what- ever else comes they must not fail. Shall the new societies and their many conven- tions increase interest in the old established church gatherings, or will they subtract precious interest and power from great de- nominational agencies and from normal church activities? These questions are simply raised. They are worth careful con- sideration.

Perhaps this impulse for organization would not have come if there had not been a manifest deficiency in the effectiveness of the church for interesting and training the young in her fold. It may be a natural ef- fort to supply what is lacking. Still the principle remains the same. Organization should be taken on as life and exercise re- quire it for efficiency and growing power. All organization that comes faster than that, or in other ways than that, will not stay. It ought to be a poor field for the profes- sional organizer, or for the man who organ- izes for revenue only, or who is organizing because he sees certain accompaniments of organization ahead that promise dividends for his purse.

CERTAIN SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTIONS.

Then there are supplementary questions that seem to raise themselves. We are quite emphatically told that certain things are "here." "This young people's move- ment," for instance, "is here—here to stay, and what are you going to do with it?" Well, let it stay, if it persists in a sturdy, sensible existence, naturally growing into stability of power and wholesomeness of in- fluence. If not, then watch its going, as go it will, if it has come unnaturally, lives on the diluted milk of religious sentimentalism, and only goes by the pumping of its own shackly, over-elaborated machinery. In very many cases the young peoples' society of Christian Endeavor is not staying as it did. The exceeding wealth and weight of "organization" that was suddenly buckled upon many a young stripling of a prayer- meeting, like Saul's armor upon the shep- herd boy, has, after some trial, been dis- creetly laid aside, and the young peoples' prayer-meeting is resuming its old simplic- ity, and finding its real power there. There is less cant perhaps, less giggling, less rapid transit to monthly, quarterly, semi-annual, and annual conventions and anniversaries, less pumping up of threadbare Scripture, poetry, and platitude, simply to keep a cer- tain silly pledge; but there is more simple, real expression of genuine religious feeling and aspiration. That a thing is "here," is not the great argument for its continued ex- istence. Perhaps it ought to go. Perhaps it ought never to have come. Perhaps its coming is its going, and does not warrant serious discussion. Some other things are here; have stayed some time. We cannot imagine them anywhere else, because here is the place for them. The church is here, for instance—has been for long, and here to stay, because there are so many that love and live in her; because she is everybody's home. Yes! The church is here; what are we going to do with her?

Another question: What shall we do with the aged if the whole church is run as a sort of incident and side issue to some over- grown young people's movement most in- geniously, elaborately organized, and with a self-perpetuating organ attachment? Some of the old people in the churches are being made to feel pretty old—all behind the times—and bitterly so. They hear only one emphasis, only one phrase—"the young people, the young people, the young peo- ple,"—first, last, all the time. Organize the "young people," "entertain the young people," "feed the young people," "amuse the young people," "keep the young people jolly," "set the young people going," "get a new minister for the young people." How conspicuously old and superannuated the disciple must feel, who is not young, in the church that is in prompt step with this mania for organization! He and his side- tracked coadjutors in antiquity must seri- ously doubt whether the traditional "row of pins" would not well represent their value in Zion. Do these distinctions and feelings hint that, perhaps, a good thing is carried too far already? Is there danger of the other extreme? What will such an ex- treme do for the whole church?

Perhaps we are in a transition period in church efficiency as in doctrinal form and emphasis; that the mania for organization merely marks that transition; that the church is groping to find what methods of blessing all shall be best; that the fittest will survive; and this period of ingenuity and contrivance is necessary to determine what will best accord with the fullest effi- ciency of a gospel church. In that case no one should take himself or his hobbies too seriously, lest both be cast-aways. A heal- thy suspense may save bitter disappoint- ment, and keep us ready to further the good thing, even if it is not ours.

Then there is the reflection which all this organization casts upon the faded flowers of a former period. I profoundly commisserate you brethren who have passed the dead line of forty. You grew, you were not made. Had you been made, you might have stayed. You are the most disorganized corporation of christians under the sun. Something is seriously lacking in you. "One thing thou lackest." Not "the one thing needful" ex- actly. Not old fashioned repentance. Not the ancient grip of faith. Not the worn-out reverence and trembling of soul as you lis- tened for the soft goings of the Eternal. Not the peace which the Lord left to the simple- hearted disciples. You have these bare and unpretentious trifles, but, alas! you lack one thing upon which the modern church insists and subsists; you lack organization; you have life, but you have no machinery. You are like a clock with no wheels in it that go round. You don't tick. Neither do you tell the time of day. You have mem- ories, but what are they? Memories of a struggle of spirit, of a wrestling unto blood that they used to call repentance; memories of a grip upon the substance of things hoped for and yet unseen; memories of an assur- ance that gave a deep quietude to the spirit, of an illuminated book that revealed all things. But alas, alas! you are seriously belated by reason of the neglect of your early organization. Listen! Do you hear those grinding wheels? Yes. Well, every one of them is necessary to manufacture and keep running men and women in Christ Jesus. Not one of them ran to make you. You know little, can do less, even if you re- member more. You insist that what you remember is a warm church—body of Christ—a praying prayer-meeting, a real Sunday school, a deepening and heightening experience, growth in grace and passion of obedience? And is that all? Well! I sim- ply drop my flower upon your disorganized masses of precious reminiscence and reality, and utter the comrade's melancholy wail: Alas, my brother!

In this entire business of over-organiza- tion many go ahead with swift footed and unsuspicious enthusiasm, as if sure that or- ganizasion was a Jerusalem whither they must hasten to receive the power. Others, older and better acquainted with human nature and its sources of true power, go slower, and take at least a part of a day to set up some sizable queries. Are they wise, or foolish? Another query. Can the mod- ern church do by organization what she fails to accomplish for lack of consecration? Still another query.—C. H. W., in Exam- iner of Dec. 3.

An old man once said: "For a long time I used to puzzle myself about the difficulties in the Bible, until at last I came to the con- clusion that reading the Bible is like eating fish. When I come to a difficulty, I lay it aside and call it a bone. Why should I choke over a bone when there is so much good meat left for me? Some day, perhaps, I may find that even the bone may afford me nourishment."

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1892.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

BRO. DUNCAN MCNEIL, of Richmond county, will represent the BIBLICAL RECORDER in the counties of Richmond, Anson, Montgomery, Robeson, Columbus, Brunswick and Bladen.

BRO. CHARLES C. TEAGUE will look after the interest of this paper in the counties of Chatham, Moore and Randolph.

"Let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home; for it is a shame for women to speak in the church. Let the women learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence. For Adam was first formed, then Eve. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being decived was in the transgression. If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord."—New Testament.

"For what if some did not believe, ('the oracles of God'), shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect? God forbid; yea, let God be true, but every man a liar."—Romans 3.

"Let the women preach, no matter what Paul says."—Sam Jones, Methodist.

"Women might, could, would, and should preach the gospel if they want to."—J. P. Landis, Methodist Ecumenical Council.

OUR subscribers who are in arrears will please renew their subscriptions at as early a day as practicable. We need the money, or we certainly would not now, when times are so hard, call on them for it. The first of January is a specially hard time with us. Through the special favor of our brethren we have heretofore at the end of each year been enabled to promptly meet all outstanding bills, and thus save our credit as editor of a journal that teaches, and ought to practice, honesty and fair dealing. Unless the brethren who owe us pay up, and those who have not as yet renewed their subscriptions do so at an early day, we shall not be able to practice as we preach on January 1st, 1892. Knowing that money was scarce, we have patiently waited until necessity forces us to call on our delinquent subscribers for help. Please remit what is due us at once.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Ever since the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel unto every creature," was given, the duty to give the gospel to those that are without it, has been imperative. Some one has said, "The spirit of Christ is the spirit of missions," and remembering the fact that Christ left his home in glory to bring good news to men, and that during his earthly ministry he went about continually doing good, we are not exaggerating when we say that he himself was a foreign missionary, and those who have caught the true spirit of the gospel must be missionaries. It is an undoubted fact that the immediate followers of Christ went forth from Jerusalem, as a religious centre, to different parts of the world to "preach Christ, and him crucified." With but few exceptions, the apostles were missionaries, and most of them foreign missionaries. The Apostle Paul, "born in due time," was added to the apostolic college, and was pre-eminently distinguished for his missionary zeal and activity.

It is true that several centuries after the death of the apostles that the then prevalent christianity had become more or less corrupted by the admixture of Judaism on the one part and paganism on the other. The unholy union between Church and State, effected when Constantine took the church under his fostering care, and the stealthy spiritual and temporal usurpations of the Pope at Rome, gradually produced such a state of things in the church or churches of those centuries that there was little of the apostolic purity among them, and but little of the missionary zeal of earlier times. The success of the Reformation in Europe impressed the Roman Pontiffs the necessity of trying to regain their lost influence and power by sending missionaries to many heathen lands. The direct and marked missionary efforts of the Romish church, then, dates from the time that the Reformation was an assured success in Europe.

Whilst Rome has won her thousands of converts, and whilst some of the men she has sent as her missionaries have been men possessing great zeal, force of character, and possible piety, in spite of the system they so blindly advocated, yet we may doubt whether the full indoctrination into the Romish system of faith has greatly improved the nations that have accepted it.

It has been only within the last hundred years that mission work has been pushed with marked success on the part of the Protestant world. One of the most remarkable facts true of our Baptist people is, that as soon as they have become strong enough in any land to show the faith by which they are actuated, they have been distinguished for their missionary zeal. It is also an encouraging fact that God has signally blessed the efforts of our missionaries in foreign fields.

The following comparison will be found interesting reading. All the Protestant denominations in the United States, except the Baptists, have in the foreign field 815 missionaries, with 860 ordained native assistants; church members, 146,063; having expended last year 3,315,870. The Baptists have, in the foreign field, 170 missionaries; 579 ordained assistants; church members, counting Cuba for the present with the foreign work, 145,313; money expended $707,135. (See Home Field for December.) So that the Baptists, with scarcely more than one fifth of the men sent from this country, or of the money expended, number more members in foreign fields than all other denominations combined.

The above facts are mentioned with no view of boasting, but as a matter for devout thankfulness to God for the marked manner in which the seal of his divine approval rests upon the labors of our missionaries. The above facts become more striking when we remember that our missionaries have been, as a rule, cautious in the reception of church members. They are not in the habit of subsidizing people, or of offering temporal rewards, as an inducement for them to come within the folds of our churches. Our ideas of church constituency debar our missionaries from receiving any of the heathen into church membership, except such as give evidence of a change of heart.

We rejoice greatly in the success of the missions of our Northern brethren. They have a much larger number of missionaries, and expend annually much larger sums of money in the work than the Southern Baptists do, through their Foreign Mission Board. This paper would not be complete, however, without special reference to the foreign work of our Convention. By reference to the minutes of the Convention for the year 1891, which contain the latest authorized data obtainable, it will be seen that, counting the American missionaries, their wives, and the unmarried female missionaries, we have from the South in the foreign field a total of eighty six missionaries. These have 23 ordained and 53 unordained native assistants. These missionaries are thus distributed: China, 37; Africa, 10; Italy, 3; Brazil, 11; Mexico, 21; Japan, 4. Some recent appointments will swell this list.

The number of church members reported on the various fields occupied by the missionaries of our Southern Board is not large, but considering the fact that our missionaries aim for quality rather than quantity, we have have every reason to be encouraged and to persevere in the blessed work of sending the gospel to the perishing. Let us pray the Lord of the harvest, not only that he should send forth more laborers from our own shores into the great harvest field of the world, but that he would raise up on these mission fields men from among the natives that shall wield among their people such influence as Diaz now wields among the people of his native Isle. It is just possible that we have overlooked the importance of developing native talent. Some may think that it is best to push the work mainly through our foreign missionaries; others, that it is best to expend our main efforts on the native ministry. The truth of it is that neither one of these plans, to the exclusion of the other, seems to be the divine plan. That plan appears to be that both the foreign missionary and the native should work together until the country is christianized, and then the foreign missionary can seek other fields. This rule seems to hold good whether it takes only a few years or more than one generation to accomplish such results.

China, while one of the oldest of our mission fields, is also one of the most difficult. Yet in China the light is breaking, and some of the best talent of the South is in that field. Japan, while a new field, is a promising one; and we think our Board acted wisely in opening that field, because success in either China or Japan will have a reciprocal effect on the people of those empires. The mission in Africa, though attended with many difficulties, seems to be making headway, especially during the last few years. The mission in Italy is a mission to the very seat of Popery, and every inch of territory gained there, and every soul won to Christ, is obtained under the keenest opposition. None but those who have been placed in circumstances in which the usages and traditions of centuries and the great tides of popular opinion and governmental influence are all against them, can tell anything of the obstacles that have to be overcome in such a country as Italy. Many of our people had been led to entertain too sanguine hopes about our success in Italy by supposing that the tide had set strongly against Romanism. But such, we think, is the case only to a certain extent. The dream of the Italian patriot for years has been a "United Italy." That dream was realized in the reign of Victor Emmanuel, and has been perpetuated under that of Humbert. The lamentations of the Pope at the loss of his temporal power have doubtless created, especially among the Italians, a certain amount of sympathy for him, and thus they have been drawn closer to him. The upheaval in Italy seems to be more of a civil than religious kind, and Catholicism appears to be about as firmly imbedded as ever in the affections of the Italians, though civil changes do often effect a change in the religious status of the countries in which they occur. Let us hope and pray that this may be the ultimate effect in Italy.

The mission in Brazil, though comparatively a new one, is hopeful. This country is in an unsettled state, so far as civil government is concerned. Her people are trying to establish a Republic, but owing to the long night of ignorance, superstition and popery, from which they are just issuing, it is difficult to predict what the result will be. Mexico, though a new mission, is one of the most promising. Owing to the close contact of the Mexicans with their powerful and enlightened neighbors, there is more hope for their future as a government and for their religious prosperity. Public schools, railroads, republican institutions, and, above all, the religion of Christ, are producing wonders among this interesting people. May the Lord hasten the day when Mexico's civil and religious freedom and enlightenment may be such as to render her future secure in both government and religion.

A PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

The National League for the Protection of American Institutions has prepared an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which will be submitted to both houses of Congress shortly after they resume their sessions. The amendment which, if adopted, will be the XVI amendment, reads as follows:

"No State shall pass any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the full exercise thereof, or use its property or credit, or any money raised by taxation, or authorize either to issue bonds for the purpose of founding, maintaining or aiding, by appropriation, payment for services, expenses or otherwise, any church, religious denomination or religious society, or any institution, society, or undertaking which is wholly, or in part, under sectarian or ecclesiastical control."

Every Baptist in the United States who knows how our fathers struggled for religious liberty, and for the separation of Church and State, will heartily endorse the proposed amendment. We are in favor of so amending our own State Constitution as to prevent all moneys collected by taxation from ever and in any way being applied to churches, socities, and any other than State Institutions managed wholly by officers appointed by the State.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Hon. George W. Blount of Wilson spent the Christmas holidays in Hickory.

....Rev. James H. Wright, former pastor of the West End Baptist church, Petersburg, Va., is critically ill and not expected to recover.

....Rev. W. F. Watson removes from Carthage, N. C., to Dunn, N. C. Bro. Watson is one of our best young preachers and pastors, and the brethren in Dunn are to be heartily congratulated on his settlement as pastor in their midst.

....Tickets are out for the marriage on Jan. 12th, of Miss Sue Funk of Hagerstown, Md., and Mr. George B. Carter of Colorado Springs, Col.

....Rev. Dr. H. A. Tupper of the Broadway Baptist church, Louisville, Ky., has accepted the call to the Seventh Baptist church, Baltimore, Md.

....The church in Elizabeth City, in addition to all the work done on their splendid new house of worship, added two hundred dollars to their pastor's salary.

....Rev. B. Craig reports that all his churches have paid the amounts assigned them for the Havana house. Bro. Craig changes his office from Union to Ahoskie.

....Prof. G. C. Briggs of Salisbury, Mo., one of the most successful teachers and managers of a school of high grade, sends us a pleasant letter from his home in the far West.

....The first section of the Union Meeting of the Central Association will be held on the 29th of January with the Harris Chapel church, Franklin county, instead of Wake Union.

....Rev. J. A. Stradley of Oxford spent his Christmas holidays struggling with a good case of grippe. He is better now, and will have something to say to his brethren after a while.

....Rev. W. E Penn of Eureka Springs, Arkansas, will ship you one hundred of the combined Harvest Bells song book to one address for $50, from St. Louis, Mo. "It is a Baptist book."

....Rev. M. L. Green has resigned his churches in the Chowan Association, and moved from Bethlehem to Ahoskie. Bro. Green's correspondents will please note the change in his office.

....Rev. W. C. Barrett of Franklinton will begin a meeting at Lillington, Harnett county, on the fourth Sunday night of this month. He desires the members of the church to pray for the success of the meeting.

....Rev. Dr. William Harris, pastor of the First church, Montgomery, Ala., died at his residence in that city on Dec. 26th. For a year or two before going to Alabama, he was pastor of the Seventh church, Baltimore, Md.

....You can see from the Treasurer's acknowledgements in this paper for the "Havana House" that the churches have done well. Thanks to all. Next week we will state the facts about the work.—C. Durham.

....Rev. W. S. Ballard of Southport, N. C., wrote to us under date of Dec. 23rd, that he had decided to take charge of churches near Scotland Neck, N. C. He speaks in the highest terms of his brethren in and around Southport.

....Bro. J. T. Jordan of Troy, Texas, in renewing his subscription, says: "I have been in Texas four months; find some good Baptists, but have never found truer, nobler, better brethren than in North Carolina. Success to the RECORDER."

....There are 80,000 more Missionary Baptists in North Carolina than the combined number of all other denominations, and counting our Antimissionary, Campbellite and Free will brethren as Baptists, there are at least 100,000 more Baptists in North Carolina than there are of all other names, creeds, isms or sects.

....Rev. C. W. Matthews, who has moved his office from Land of Promise, Va., to Creeds, Va., writes: "Many of our people have died from grippe, and many are still suffering from its dreadful effects. Our parsonage is rapidly nearing completion. My correspondents will please note the change in my address."

....Rev. O. L. Stringfield has just closed a gracious series of meetings with the church at Hephzibah, in which fifteen persons professed faith in Christ. Bro. Stringfield reports the new building for the Wakefield High School rapidly approaching completion. This is one of the best and most successfully managed schools in North Carolina.

....Rev. Dr. W. A. Nelson of Asheville tendered his resignation as pastor of the First church of that city last week, and preached his closing sermon on Sunday last Dr. Nelson is dearly loved by the church, but having suffered much with his throat recently, he felt that a rest from preaching was necessary to his restoration. He goes to Aiken, S. C.

....Prof. F. P. Hobgood of Oxford again takes charge of the Oxford Female Seminary as President. The Spring term begins January 20th. Bro. Hobgood is a born teacher, and his friends and the friends of the Oxford Female Seminary should rally to his support. We heartily commend President Hobgood and the Seminary to all our readers. Get ready and fill every room in the school on the 20th.

....The Baptist sisters of the church in Reidsville, N. C., are supporting a young minister in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, and will send him to China as missionary and support him there when he finishes his education. The church in Reidsville has only 250 members, but it is leading all its sister churches, and setting them a good example. They are greatly pleased with Pastor Howard.

....A brother, or rather a member of a Baptist church at ——— N. C., who owed us for the RECORDER from Feb. 27th, 1889, to Jan. 1st, 1892, sends us word that he does not intend to pay for the paper, and does not want it, &c. If all the Baptists in North Carolina were such as he, the Devil would have a walk-over in this State. A revival of debt-paying religion is badly needed in his section. The man who can pay his honest debts and will not, is unfit for church membership in any sort of a church.

....Rev. D. J. Clark of Clarkton, N. C., is making an earnest effort to build a house of worship for the little church in his section. He needs about five hundred dollars to complete the work. We commend the enterprise to our readers. See acknowledgments in another column.

....A young lady graduate of Thomasville Female College wishes a situation as teacher of English branches in a school or family school. She is a Baptist of highest standing and experience. Best of testimonials and references. If any of our readers wish such a teacher in the families or neighborhood they will please apply to us.

....Rev. Dr. John S. Watkins, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Raleigh, has tendered his resignation in order to accept a call to the pastorate of the Presbyterian church in Spartanburg, S. C. Dr. Watkins is a learned and gifted preacher, pastor and writer, and with all is a splendid christian gentleman. We have known and loved him for years, and regret his removal from Raleigh.

....Rev. J. F. Love of Rocky Mount writes: "I have recently been on a visit to my parents in Elizabeth City. Bro. Thomas I think it not extravagant to say, is preaching to a larger average congregation than any man in the State. All goes well in that part of the Tar River. Dr. Hufham, if he be not in the 'succession,' is succeeding at Tarboro. Battle at Wilson fills to overflowing his house. He needs his new house to accommodate his large audiences."

....A little more than a year ago, we made this announcement: "The Arkansas Baptist will hereafter be furnished to ministers who aid in its circulation, at one dollar per year." This is less than the actural cost, and, therefore, our contribution to them. But we find that we are sending the paper to about ane thousand preachers on these terms; some have aided greatly in increasing our circulation; others have done but little or nothing.—Arkansas Baptist. Exactly.

....Rev. Dr. Cornelius Tyree of Salem, Va., died after a brief illness on Dec. 23rd. He was in his seventy seventh year. Dr. Tyree has been for many years one of the most distinguished preachers and authors of Virginia, a man of splendid gifts, indomitable energy and industry, and of blameless character. For years he has written regularly for the RECORDER. His writings, like his head and heart, were clear, forcible and true. There were few like him in the earth, and we sadly feel the loss we have sustained in his death.

....On Dec. 27th, Cedar Rock Baptist Sunday-school, Franklin county, elected the following officers for the year 1892: Superintendent—Willis M. Boone; Assistant—C. B. H. Stallings; Secretary—J. T. Inscore; Treasurer—S. H. Boone; Organist—Mrs. W. B. Coppedge; Librarian—R. H. Duke. The retiring Superintendent, Bro. J. A. Coppedge, has been in office fourteen years, and leaves the school in good condition. During the exercises a collection was taken for the Baptist Orphanage.

....Rev. A. L. Stough of Lancaster, S. C., writes: "Madame Rumor says times are hard, but I feel they must get a great deal harder before I can do without the RECORDER. Makes me feel like I was back in the Old North State when I read the RECORDER. I have labored so long along the line of the two Carolinas, sometimes on one side of the line, then on the other, so the two seem to me like twin sisters. Religious newspapers, in the providence of God, have been a great blessing to me, hence I feel it my duty to pray for editors as honored instruments in God's hands of doing good."

....A young colored preacher from the South, who spent several sessions in Shaw University and studied theology under Rev. Dr. T. E. Skinner, is now attending the Theological Seminary in Colgate University, Hamilton, N. Y. In a most complimentary letter to Dr. Skinner, he says: "My experience North is driving me more and more to the conclusion that the South is, and is destined to be, the purest, sweetest and most glorious section of the world. And in spite of all the slavery and hardships of the past, and the fading prejudices of the present, God was wise in placing the majority of the colored people in the South. We expect to still labor for the South until it becomes the envied spot of the whole earth."

....The editor of the Arkansas Baptist, Rev. W. A. Clark, has been quite sick recently, and winds up the labors of 1891 with the following: "To day's labor closes our work on volume eleven. None can know the anxiety and burdens we have borne during 1891. Only the God we try to serve has heard the prayers offered, witnessed the midnight toil, the tears that oftimes came unbidden, the mistakes made, the agony incident to being misjudged by some, censured by others, and confidence sometimes misplaced. But the Lord has crowned the year with mercies. Every prospect is brighter. The Lord be praised for the mighty host of friends and helpers we have had, and for the clear sky in which the sun of 1891 sets."

...."A Baptist preacher in Wilkes who skipped with a Sister."—State Chronicle. The foregoing heads a horrible article in regard to "Harrison Blankenship, a Baptist preacher." There is no such preacher on our roll. Guess it is another Roan story.—Charity and Children. We never heard of a Baptist preacher named Harrison Blankenship. We have published a list of our preachers every year for eleven years, and no such man has ever been reported to or appeared in the minutes of any Association. If he was ever mentioned among our ministers, he must have been a most insignificant fellow. We were sorry for the State Chronicle and its brethren, and felt disposed, at the time we read the article referred to by Bro. Mills, to let them enjoy whatever of comfort could be derived from the Blankenship incident.

Dr. R. D. Fleming's Letter.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—On the 9th of Decem I sent to Dr. W. S. Black an article in ly to his editorial published in the Or an's Friend at Oxford reflecting on me d my resolutions. On the 18th he wrote that for reasons given, the article could t appear in the Friend. I thought it not ght that the paper of an institution I am ing taxed to support should be used to at ck me and I not be allowed to reply in the per in the spirit of said editorial. So he turned my communication, and I have ow changed it right much, taking out the pirit of his article, and send it to you, and ope you will give it place in the RECORDER.

Most respectfully, R. D. FLEMING.

Warrenton, Jan. 1, 1892.

REV. DR. W. S. BLACK,

Supt. Oxford Orphanage, Oxford, N. C.:

Dear Doctor:—My attention has been called o your article published in the Orphan's Friend in reference to the resolutions I fered at our Baptist State Convention at oldsboro. I expected the resolutions would ause some people to show themselves in eir true colors, but did not expect the first ticle would show so plainly that I was eling with a subject about which some ople are very sensitive. I must say I was terly astonished at the spirit of your arti , coming as it does from a professed ristian and minister, whose calling ought be a guarantee of his christian spirit. It ems that you would destroy me with one sh of your pen. Why such bitter feeling wards the man? Why did you not discuss e principles I set forth? Ah!

Not yet purged off, of spleen and sour disdain."

But I will not in this article notice your personal attack and comparison of myself, or any other brother, any more than to say that from your standpoint I was completely demolished—yes, a heathen devoured by a christian. But to this I submit for the sake of the cause I represent, which will live, grow and bring forth fruit some day. There is consolation in the fact that great men should have seen enough in my resolutions to cause them to attack anybody. Such great minds would not fight the wind. My resolutions only contend for christians working as christians for the Lord's cause and to keep public money from being misappropriated. Are not both of these right and proper principles? I hope you will not fear to put yourself on record on these points. I would suggest that you and your friends should take your hands out of the public treasury (even though they are there according to law), and pay your own bills with your own money, because all law is not right. You imply that the Orphanage at Oxford is a State institution as others you mention are, but I think you will recognize this as a mistake of yours, and calculated to mislead people. If so, please let me know when it became such and how. State institutions are not generally run by private organizations or churches, though in this State such things have been attempted, and to some extent done. But "the sun do move," and all these things must have an end.

You also imply that I endorsed every act of the last Legislature, except the one making the appropriation to Oxford. Please tell me how you know that. Our Legislature never made any appropriation to Bro. Mills in the beginning of his work at Oxford as a Baptist. He never asked it as a Baptist, but the appeal was made as a Mason, or as the representative of the Masons, and it was granted as such. Baptists have always combatted the idea of being taxed by the State for private or sectarian purposes, even though they were for Baptists.

My resolutions do not propose to force anybody to do anything, but to urge christians to do what almost every one would say was a christian duty. I am sure you wish I were the only man in that Convention wicked enough to endorse the resolutions—you almost say so, but I am glad to say that I find ten times as many who endorsed them as I had expected. I did not hear a half dozen express dissent from the spirit of the resolutions; some said they did not think them prudent just now. It was a new proposition, and I assure you I am satisfied with the impression made by the resolutions. Now, brethren will think more about this matter, as it is a battle which the christians of this country will have to fight; and when they examine the question involved closely, as they ought to do, I have little doubt about the conclusion to which they will come.

All christian charity must be voluntary. There is no christian charity in taxing the people for the support of private enterprises; therefore, I am pleading for the masses who have to submit to taxation for the support of the State, and ought to be relieved of the burden of supporting private enterprises of any sort, except as they may choose to do so. If our rights under the Constitution are not protected, where may we not expect soon to land? As the ball of Legislative precedent has already begun to roll, and unless it is stopped, we will have to raise many thousands more than we do now by taxation, and the State may be bankrupt, as every society that now exists, and that may come into existence, will have the right to claim State support.

Now, Doctor, has not the Lord left these children here as the wards of christianity? Has not Christ taught you and me, as christians, to provide for these children, and not as Masons, or members of other secret societies? How are you living up to the divinely-imposed obligation? Are you willing to continue to let Christless organizations and the State do the work for the Master which you as a christian ought to do, and simply draw your large salary, live easy, and do no practical christian work, that men may see what christianity does, and glorify your Father in heaven?

I think you assert positively that I would turn the two hundred orphans now at Oxford out of house and home, with no one to care for them. Do you know that to be true? If not, allow me to suggest that you are more reckless in your statements than a minister of Christ ought to be. I find it hard to think that you really wish to deceive people and make them believe what is not true about a matter of this sort. So far from this being true, I desire and am trying to have the orphans better cared for than they ever have been. We have seen that if left to secret societies alone, they would not be cared for. If the State had done nothing, would the Masons have turned the children out to grass? Even yet, we have to regret that without the State, they would have a poor showing. But I hope a better time is coming for these poor homeless children, for they are not at home with the Masons; nor is the State their divinely-appointed father, so that they are not at home with the State; nor will they be at home until they are under the care and protection of the churches of Christ, which organizations ought to do this work. I believe if all the money which God gives his people for the purpose of carrying forward his work in the world, was put into the treasury of the different churches, and not diverted, as it now is, into unchristian channels, there would not be one orphan in the State uncared for, where now there are about six hundred. This money would be spent more in accordance with the Divine will, and hence more good would result, and christians would not be taxed one dollar more than they now pay out, but the money would be flowing in the proper channel. God has sent his messenger, and he has prepared and shown us the way, but we have departed from it. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked." Let us return and "Bring all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing." Then may we expect to reap the fruits of our labor. The Bible is clear that we may not expect a blessing except in the line of duty.

The Presbyterians, Episcopalians and Baptists are doing orphan work without State aid. Your denomination is large and wealthy, and when they properly take charge, as they ought to do, of the two hundred children now at Oxford, it will be better for the children, better for you as individuals and as a denomination, and, I hope and believe, better for the world to see what christianity is doing, and you will not appear to be getting behind a society to get the ten thousadd dollars of State money, as it now seems you are doing.

I hope the good Lord will bring about the end desired, and that is, for his people to do his work as his people and through the divinely appointed institutions (his churches), and not through human institutions. When this comes to pass, many hearts in this grand old commonwealth will rejoice and be glad. May the God of the orphans, and our God, guide us into all truth; then you and I will see alike and believe the same things.

R. D. FLEMING.

The Oxford Female Seminary.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I am glad to be able to report that the Oxford Female Seminary has passed into the hands of Prof. F. P. Hobgood, who built up the school from the first, and carried it to its high degree of excellence. Prof. Hobgood, full of vim and vigor, is determined to make the Seminary one of the best schools in the land. The Spring term will open on the twentieth of January. Parents and those having girls to send to school may rest assured that the Seminary under Prof. Hobgood's charge will continue to offer excellent educational advantages. We of Oxford congratulate ourselves that the perpetuation of this fine school is guaranteed to the town and to the Baptists of the State. The public may be confident that the school as conducted by Prof. Hobgood will be worthy of their best patronage.

JNO. S. HARDAWAY.

Letter from Wilson's Mills.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—We are moving along in our work here. We have our house raised. The window casing is all there, but not all in yet. Some of the weather-boarding has been put on, and the work will continue to go on. We hope to finish the house by midsummer. We are not building a very large house, but one large enough for our necessities—one that will hold at least three hundred. We are using good, substantial material, and the work is done by the very best workmen.

Now I have made these statements that the brethren and sisters may know what we are doing for the Master. We are only a band of twenty-three, and only a few of these are males. The fact that we are few does not argue that we do not need a house of worship. We appeal to every Baptist in the State, who may read this, for help. Dear friends, if you can sympathize with those in need of aid, please send some of your sympathy in the shape of money. Please, dear reader, send us one dollar, and it will be thankfully received and acknowledged. The Lord will bless you for your contribution, and it will be a blessing to us. Aid us at once, friends, for we need money now. Direct all amounts to the undersigned.

Awaiting many prompt responses, I am

Yours fraternally,

J. L. COTTINGHAM.

Wilson's Mills, Dec. 28, 1891.

Ordination.

After a very satisfactory examination Bro. R. H. Jones was ordained to the gospel ministry last Sunday evening at Wakefield, N. C., in the presence of a large and appropriate audience. The writer preached the sermon. Text 1 Tim. 4: 12. Bro. G. W. Coppedge offerd a most earnest prayer. The writer delivered the charges, and after some beautiful words by Bro. Coppedge, he presented the Bible as his rule of faith and practice. After the benediction by Bro. Jones adjourned.

O. L. STRINGFIELD, Sec.

The Baptist Female University.

A STATEMENT FROM THE COMMITTE SHOWING THE CONDITION OF THE ENTERPRISE

Messrs. N. B. Broughton, C. Durham, W. N. Jones, J. C. Scarboro and W. G. Upchurch, constituting the local committee in charge of the matter of the Baptist Female University, have issued through the financial secretary, Mr. J. B. Boone, a statement to the contributors to the proposed institution, showing the progress and condition of the enterprise. In this statement the committee says:

The citizens of Raleigh offered to the trustees of the University $25,000 and a site to secure the location in this city. The trustees canvassed all the propositions, and decided to locate the institution in Raleigh; and after looking at all the available suburban sites, including the Pullen, the Grissom and the Adams lots. They agreed that if the citzens of Raleigh would pay for the above-named property they would locate the institution thereon.

The members of the board who were citizens of Raleigh, after consultation among themselves and with many of our citizens, agreed to accept the proposition. After a thorough canvass to secure the funds to pay for the site, the necessary amount was not obtained. This result was reported to a meeting of the board of trustees at Goldsboro, N. C., in November last. At that the whole subject of the University was fully discussed and the trustees unanimously agreed to stand by their decision to locate the University in Raleigh. They also expressed their preference for the site already chosen; but appointed a committee of five of their number, residents of Raleigh, to whom they entrusted the matter of changing the site if necessary, and to whom they gave instructions to collect and use the funds already subscribed, and to solicit other funds in and outside of Raleigh, and to make such purchases as might be necessary, and press the work committed to them as rapidly as possible. The committee met a few days after their appointment, and after ascertaining that they could obtain the vacant lot of the Len. H. Adams property, adjoining the Pullen lot, unanimously agreed on that plan; and have purchased said lot at a cost of $2,000, paid the money for it and obtained a deed thereof. The Grissom lot has been purchased and paid for at a cost of $2,100, and the Pullen lot has been contracted for at a cost of $10,000, of which $3,000 has been paid—leaving a balance due of $7,000. The late purchase of the Adams lot gives a key to the situation, so that we have the very site on which the building would be erected, even though we owned the whole square. We now have two acres of ground.

Collections are now being made as rapidly as possible to finish paying for the Pullen lot. There are good subscriptions, sufficient when paid, in the hands of the financial secretary, to finish paying for this lot.

The committe are greatly encouraged with the progress of the work already attained, and hereby desire to ask all those who have subscribed to this enterprise to pay their subscription as soon as possible, to the end that the Pullen property may be paid for at the earliest possible moment and a deed obtained therefor. When this is done work will be commenced upon the building.

Sawyer's Creek Church, Camden County.

My connection commenced with Sawyer's Creek January, 1862. I have known it intimately since that time. Taken altogether, the 25th day (Christmas) of the present month, was the best day I ever saw there. The expectation of everybody, as far as I have been able to learn, was fully met, except one man, about whom I will tell you before I am through. The Sunday-school had arranged to make all the scholars a nice present on that day. The young people decorated the church beautifully, and erected a Jacobs-ladder on the rostrum beautified with moss, on which all the presents were tastefully arranged. At 10 o'clock the doors were opened, and old and young rushed in to see the sight. The children for sometime could not keep still; they talked, and almost danced—with eyes, feet and hands, talked all over. The superintendent, W. G. Ferebee, succeeded after a while in quieting things, when an appropriate hymn was sung and a prayer offered. The superintendent then made a very appropriate talk, telling them how hard he had worked to build up the school (which we all knew before) and how happy he was, with the facts before him, that his labors were not in vain; also, how hard he tried in selecting the presents to give satisfaction. Just there he said, he was sure he would not satisfy all, and that somebody would be dissatisfied. His expectations were not met; he was the only one disappointed; as everybody was more than pleased and wondered how he could buy so much, of such a quality, with so little money. We then had some charming singing by the little girls. But with the eloquent speach from the superintendent, a talk from the pastor and the singing that charmed the old folks, the children neither heard or cared for what the superintendent or pastor said, or what the girls sang. Their eyes and hearts were fixed on Jacobs-ladder. Now the superintendent takes out his little book and calls out the names of all the scholars, and as each name is called they march up and receive their presents and return to their seats, with glad happy hearts. Then with joyful hearts all return to their homes, and think, resolved to make the school better the coming year.

If you will not accuse me of boasting (why may I not be allowed to boast a little?) let me say, that from all I know of Sunday-schools, we have at Sawyer's Creek the best country school in the State, and a model superintendent for city or country. It requires as much tact to run successfully a Sunday school, as it does to run a national bank. We have enrolled 200 scholars, with an average attendence of 165. Our collections average two dollars every Sunday. I said it was the best day I ever saw at Sawyer's Creek church, because as far as I can judge, the church is in a better condition than I ever saw it. Our congregations are large and very attentive, and we close the year with the pastor paid and all other debts settled.

My church at Providence is in a better condition, as far as I can judge, than I have seen it for years.

I want to record the goodness of the Lord to me during the past year: much to sorrow over, yet very much to rejoice over. My health has been poor, but even that has been a blessing.

1891—What of It?

Bro. Bailey:—The year with its responsibilities is gone. The opportunities that came with it, improved or unimproved, will come no more. 'Tis of no avail to say, "It might have been." But we, as Baptists, have abundant reason to thank God and take courage, that has been all along the line. Our pastors are doing more and better work than ever before. Our churches are by scores, waking up to clearer conseptions of duty, and realizing more fully their mission in the world.

Our mission work was never so vigorously prosecuted. This is true at home and across the seas. The cries in missions is passed; yet I believe the day of missions is just dawning. That as we begin to ask great things and expect great things of God, the Sun of Righteousness, full orbed, will rise upon the world, and nations shall be born in a day.

WAKE FOREST.

Our College, God bless her! under the guidence of the very best College President, aided by an able and consecrated Faculty, is doing a work to be surpassed only by the work she will do in years just before her.

THE RECORDER,

to its years of experience, is adding youthful vigor and is so much better than ever.

MY FIELD.

In my own fields of labor, I can report progress:

Apex is a small church, and there is not a wealthy man in it; yet we have built a neat infant-class room,—paid one hundred dollars to Wake Forest Endowment—altogether paying over eight dollars per member for all objects. At our last meeting the church paid fifty per cent more than its apportionment for the Havana house.

Cumberland Union another small church, paid one hundred dollars to the Endowment every member contributing. It has just raised over its quota for the Cuban house. I know of no church that is at work more earnestly or unitedly.

Cameron, Moore county—last spring, having one Sunday unfilled, I of my own accord, began work here as an independent missionary. This is a village on the railroad with about three hundred inhabitants. I found six or eight Baptists. By the kindness of Methodists, I have been preaching monthly in their church. Some months since, we planned to build. Now, we have a good lot, lumber secured for building, and nearly money enough to build. We were just getting ready to constitute a church, when we proposed to Crane's Creek, a little weak church of thirty members, three miles in the country, to move to Cameron and co operate with us. Crane's Creek will be changed to Cameron church, and the prospect is now encouraging for that field. This work I have done without compensation, only Cameron friends have paid my railroad fare.

Accept my hearty good wishes for the new year. Yours,

J. M. WHITE.

Compare Results.

The Fife meeting in Oxford was good. It has greatly blessed our town. But in results, let us compare it with a meeting held with a little country church. I take this country meeting of a sample of many others.

In the Oxford meeting, three hundred dollars were spent in preparing a house in which to preach. In the country meeting, not a dollar was spent in preparations.

In the town meeting, there was a congregation of from 1,500, to 3,000 from which to draw material. In the country meeting, the congregation averaged about two hundred. The town meeting continued eleven days. The country meeting lasted eight days. In the town meeting, the preacher had ten or a dozen other preachers, and the christian workers of all the churches to help him. In the country meeting, the pastor, aided by three or four lay workers, did all the work. In the town meeting, about three hundred new recruits declared themselves for Christ. In the country meeting, about fifty-five confessed Christ as Lord and Master. From the town meeting, perhaps one hundred have become church members. The number may reach one hundred and fifty. From the country meeting, about fifty have become church members.

I present this comparison for the encouragement of the many humble workers, who are called to labor in small fields.

Letter from Rev. A. D. Hunter.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—This is my first since the Methodist Conference here, so a few words. Our Methodist brethren are doing good work. The Bishop said 6,000 had been added to the churches in the State during the year, and that they now had 118,000 white members in the Methodist Episcopal church of North Carolina. A Presiding Elder said, "The followers of John the Baptist have been to Goldsboro this year, so now let the followers of John Wesley go the next year." So they are to meet in Goldsboro next year. Yours in Christ,

A. D. HUNTER.

Board of Missions.

The Board of Missions and Sunday-schools will hold a meeting in the Mission Rooms January 12th, 1892, at 7:30 o'clock p. m.

J. C. SCARBOROUGH, Pres.

C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec'y.

Bertie Union Meeting.

The next session of the Bertie Union Meeting convenes with the church at St. John's. Elder H. T. Williams is to preach the introductory, Elder Dancy Cole, alternate; Elder C. W. Scarboro to preach the missionary sermon, Elder J. N. Hoggard, alternate.

PRACTICAL SUBJECTS.

1. Our mission in China. To brethren James S. Mitchell and Elder C. W. Scarboro.

2. The duty of a church to a member who neglects Sunday services, but is punctual in his attendance upon the Saturday conference. To Bro. A. J. Cobb and Elder T. G. Wood.

3. Romans 8: 27. Subject: The office of the Holy Spirit. To Elder B. B. Williams.

4. How may our present method of conducting protracted meetings be improved upon? To Bro. W. P. Shaw and Elder L. M. Curtis.

5. Would it be wise for all the Baptist churches composing the Bertie Union Meeting to adopt one song-book? To Bro. H. A. Foushee and Elder C. B. Williams.

A. J. COBB, Secretary.

BY O. L. STRINGFIELD.

1. My Brother, I charge you to turn a deaf ear to all lies respecting you or your work. If you are worth much as a preacher, the devil will surely undertake to damage you.

2. I charge you to be strictly honest in all your business engagements. If you cannot pay your debts at the proper time, be sure that you satisfy the person you owe so that you may not lose his most kindly feeling.

3. You are now chosen to fill the high office of a minister of Jesus Christ, I charge you before God that you do not use this high office for any pecuniary or social profit. How degrading to the character of a minister of God to walk into a store to buy goods and say "you must remember I am a preacher" or "a poor preacher" and you ought to sell me goods cheaper." If he ought this is no time to take a collection for preachers. Such go even to hotels and eat like hard times were gone forever, and then enquire at the clerk's office if he is to pay full fare! Eat soda crackers before you do that. Be a man! Pay your way like a man! Paul never asked the boatman for half fare, nor a merchant to "come down a little."

Nor are you to use this office for social advantage. Because you are a minister does not mean that you are a social companion for any and every individual.

4. Pull off your ministerial gloves (if you wear them), and even your clerical coat to serve humanity. Jesus came not to be ministered unto, but to minister. There are tears that can be wiped away in no other way. Stand with your people as one of them and not as a stature above them.

Sin a Detective.

Men need to keep in mind the warning of Moses to the tribes who abode beyond the Jordan: "Be sure your sin will find you out." The devil is continually telling them that in some way or other they shall be able to escape the penalty of their sins. But God can not be mocked; sooner or later all sins will receive their punishment.—Standard Mission Quarterly.

If it costs too much to be a zealous and successful christian, it will cost infinitely more to live and die an impenitent sinner. Bible religion costs self-denial; sin costs self destruction.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

May God's salvation be your wall and bulwark, dear reader.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1892.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

BRO. DUNCAN MCNEIL, of Richmond county, will represent the BIBLICAL RECORDER in the counties of Richmond, Anson, Montgomery, Robeson, Columbus, Brunswick and Bladen.

BRO. CHARLES C. TEAGUE will look after the interest of this paper in the counties of Chatham, Moore and Randolph.

"Let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home; for it is a shame for women to speak in the church. Let the women learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence. For Adam was first formed, then Eve. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being decived was in the transgression. If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord."—New Testament.

"For what if some did not believe, ('the oracles of God'), shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect? God forbid; yea, let God be true, but every man a liar."—Romans 3.

"Let the women preach, no matter what Paul says."—Sam Jones, Methodist.

"Women might, could, would, and should preach the gospel if they want to."—J. P. Landis, Methodist Ecumenical Council.

OUR subscribers who are in arrears will please renew their subscriptions at as early a day as practicable. We need the money, or we certainly would not now, when times are so hard, call on them for it. The first of January is a specially hard time with us. Through the special favor of our brethren we have heretofore at the end of each year been enabled to promptly meet all outstanding bills, and thus save our credit as editor of a journal that teaches, and ought to practice, honesty and fair dealing. Unless the brethren who owe us pay up, and those who have not as yet renewed their subscriptions do so at an early day, we shall not be able to practice as we preach on January 1st, 1892. Knowing that money was scarce, we have patiently waited until necessity forces us to call on our delinquent subscribers for help. Please remit what is due us at once.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Ever since the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel unto every creature," was given, the duty to give the gospel to those that are without it, has been imperative. Some one has said, "The spirit of Christ is the spirit of missions," and remembering the fact that Christ left his home in glory to bring good news to men, and that during his earthly ministry he went about continually doing good, we are not exaggerating when we say that he himself was a foreign missionary, and those who have caught the true spirit of the gospel must be missionaries. It is an undoubted fact that the immediate followers of Christ went forth from Jerusalem, as a religious centre, to different parts of the world to "preach Christ, and him crucified." With but few exceptions, the apostles were missionaries, and most of them foreign missionaries. The Apostle Paul, "born in due time," was added to the apostolic college, and was pre-eminently distinguished for his missionary zeal and activity.

It is true that several centuries after the death of the apostles that the then prevalent christianity had become more or less corrupted by the admixture of Judaism on the one part and paganism on the other. The unholy union between Church and State, effected when Constantine took the church under his fostering care, and the stealthy spiritual and temporal usurpations of the Pope at Rome, gradually produced such a state of things in the church or churches of those centuries that there was little of the apostolic purity among them, and but little of the missionary zeal of earlier times. The success of the Reformation in Europe impressed the Roman Pontiffs the necessity of trying to regain their lost influence and power by sending missionaries to many heathen lands. The direct and marked missionary efforts of the Romish church, then, dates from the time that the Reformation was an assured success in Europe.

Whilst Rome has won her thousands of converts, and whilst some of the men she has sent as her missionaries have been men possessing great zeal, force of character, and possible piety, in spite of the system they so blindly advocated, yet we may doubt whether the full indoctrination into the Romish system of faith has greatly improved the nations that have accepted it.

It has been only within the last hundred years that mission work has been pushed with marked success on the part of the Protestant world. One of the most remarkable facts true of our Baptist people is, that as soon as they have become strong enough in any land to show the faith by which they are actuated, they have been distinguished for their missionary zeal. It is also an encouraging fact that God has signally blessed the efforts of our missionaries in foreign fields.

The following comparison will be found interesting reading. All the Protestant denominations in the United States, except the Baptists, have in the foreign field 815 missionaries, with 860 ordained native assistants; church members, 146,063; having expended last year 3,315,870. The Baptists have, in the foreign field, 170 missionaries; 579 ordained assistants; church members, counting Cuba for the present with the foreign work, 145,313; money expended $707,135. (See Home Field for December.) So that the Baptists, with scarcely more than one-fifth of the men sent from this country, or of the money expended, number more members in foreign fields than all other denominations combined.

The above facts are mentioned with no view of boasting, but as a matter for devout thankfulness to God for the marked manner in which the seal of his divine approval rests upon the labors of our missionaries. The above facts become more striking when we remember that our missionaries have been, as a rule, cautious in the reception of church members. They are not in the habit of subsidizing people, or of offering temporal rewards, as an inducement for them to come within the folds of our churches. Our ideas of church constituency debar our missionaries from receiving any of the heathen into church membership, except such as give evidence of a change of heart.

We rejoice greatly in the success of the missions of our Northern brethren. They have a much larger number of missionaries, and expend annually much larger sums of money in the work than the Southern Baptists do, through their Foreign Mission Board. This paper would not be complete, however, without special reference to the foreign work of our Convention. By reference to the minutes of the Convention for the year 1891, which contain the latest authorized data obtainable, it will be seen that, counting the American missionaries, their wives, and the unmarried female missionaries, we have from the South in the foreign field a total of eighty six missionaries. These have 23 ordained and 53 unordained native assistants. These missionaries are thus distributed: China, 37; Africa, 10; Italy, 3; Brazil, 11; Mexico, 21; Japan, 4. Some recent appointments will swell this list.

The number of church members reported on the various fields occupied by the missionaries of our Southern Board is not large, but considering the fact that our missionaries aim for quality rather than quantity, we have have every reason to be encouraged and to persevere in the blessed work of sending the gospel to the perishing. Let us pray the Lord of the harvest, not only that he should send forth more laborers from our own shores into the great harvest field of the world, but that he would raise up on these mission fields men from among the natives that shall wield among their people such influence as Diaz now wields among the people of his native Isle. It is just possible that we have overlooked the importance of developing native talent. Some may think that it is best to push the work mainly through our foreign missionaries; others, that it is best to expend our main efforts on the native ministry. The truth of it is that neither one of these plans, to the exclusion of the other, seems to be the divine plan. That plan appears to be that both the foreign missionary and the native should work together until the country is christianized, and then the foreign missionary can seek other fields. This rule seems to hold good whether it takes only a few years or more than one generation to accomplish such results.

China, while one of the oldest of our mission fields, is also one of the most difficult. Yet in China the light is breaking, and some of the best talent of the South is in that field. Japan, while a new field, is a promising one; and we think our Board acted wisely in opening that field, because success in either China or Japan will have a reciprocal effect on the people of those empires. The mission in Africa, though attended with many difficulties, seems to be making headway, especially during the last few years. The mission in Italy is a mission to the very seat of Popery, and every inch of territory gained there, and every soul won to Christ, is obtained under the keenest opposition. None but those who have been placed in circumstances in which the usages and traditions of centuries and the great tides of popular opinion and governmental influence are all against them, can tell anything of the obstacles that have to be overcome in such a country as Italy. Many of our people had been led to entertain too sanguine hopes about our success in Italy by supposing that the tide had set strongly against Romanism. But such, we think, is the case only to a certain extent. The dream of the Italian patriot for years has been a "United Italy." That dream was realized in the reign of Victor Emmanuel, and has been perpetuated under that of Humbert. The lamentations of the Pope at the loss of his temporal power have doubtless created, especially among the Italians, a certain amount of sympathy for him, and thus they have been drawn closer to him. The upheaval in Italy seems to be more of a civil than religious kind, and Catholicism appears to be about as firmly imbedded as ever in the affections of the Italians, though civil changes do often effect a change in the religious status of the countries in which they occur. Let us hope and pray that this may be the ultimate effect in Italy.

The mission in Brazil, though comparatively a new one, is hopeful. This country is in an unsettled state, so far as civil government is concerned. Her people are trying to establish a Republic, but owing to the long night of ignorance, superstition and popery, from which they are just issuing, it is difficult to predict what the result will be. Mexico, though a new mission, is one of the most promising. Owing to the close contact of the Mexicans with their powerful and enlightened neighbors, there is more hope for their future as a government and for their religious prosperity. Public schools, railroads, republican institutions, and, above all, the religion of Christ, are producing wonders among this interesting people. May the Lord hasten the day when Mexico's civil and religious freedom and enlightenment may be such as to render her future secure in both government and religion.

A PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

The National League for the Protection of American Institutions has prepared an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which will be submitted to both houses of Congress shortly after they resume their sessions. The amendment which, if adopted, will be the XVI amendment, reads as follows:

"No State shall pass any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the full exercise thereof, or use its property or credit, or any money raised by taxation, or authorize either to issue bonds for the purpose of founding, maintaining or aiding, by appropriation, payment for services, expenses or otherwise, any church, religious denomination or religious society, or any institution, society, or undertaking which is wholly, or in part, under sectarian or ecclesiastical control."

Every Baptist in the United States who knows how our fathers struggled for religious liberty, and for the separation of Church and State, will heartily endorse the proposed amendment. We are in favor of so amending our own State Constitution as to prevent all moneys collected by taxation from ever and in any way being applied to churches, socities, and any other than State Institutions managed wholly by officers appointed by the State.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Hon. George W. Blount of Wilson spent the Christmas holidays in Hickory.

....Bro. C. B. Pridgen of Kelley's has our thanks for a list of subscribers from his office.

....Rev. R. B. Garrett of Austin, Texas, declines the call to the First church, Petersburg, Va.

....Rev. Dr. Hall of the Baptist Tabernacle, Raleigh, received twelve new members on Sunday last.

....Rev. A. L. Stough of Lancaster, S. C., has received an unanimous call to the pastorate of the church in Kinston, N. C.

....Rev. P. S. C. Davis has removed from Fentress, Va., to Shiloh, N. C. His correspondents will please note the change in his office.

....Rev. James H. Wright, former pastor of the West End Baptist church, Petersburg, Va., is critically ill and not expected to recover.

....Rev. W. F. Watson removes from Carthage, N. C., to Dunn, N. C. Bro. Watson is one of our best young preachers and pastors, and the brethren in Dunn are to be heartily congratulated on his settlement as pastor in their midst.

....Tickets are out for the marriage on Jan. 12th, of Miss Sue Funk of Hagerstown, Md., and Mr. George B. Carter of Colorado Springs, Col.

....Rev. Dr. H. A. Tupper of the Broadway Baptist church, Louisville, Ky., has accepted the call to the Seventh Baptist church, Baltimore, Md.

....The church in Elizabeth City, in addition to all the work done on their splendid new house of worship, added two hundred dollars to their pastor's salary.

....Rev. B. Craig reports that all his churches have paid the amounts assigned them for the Havana house. Bro. Craig changes his office from Union to Ahoskie.

....Prof. G. C. Briggs of Salisbury, Mo., one of the most successful teachers and managers of a school of high grade, sends us a pleasant letter from his home in the far West.

....The first section of the Union Meeting of the Central Association will be held on the 29th of January with the Harris Chapel church, Franklin county, instead of Wake Union.

....Rev. J. A. Stradley of Oxford spent his Christmas holidays struggling with a good case of grippe. He is better now, and will have something to say to his brethren after a while.

....Rev. W. E Penn of Eureka Springs, Arkansas, will ship you one hundred of the combined Harvest Bells song book to one address for $50, from St. Louis, Mo. "It is a Baptist book."

....Rev. M. L. Green has resigned his churches in the Chowan Association, and moved from Bethlehem to Ahoskie. Bro. Green's correspondents will please note the change in his office.

....Rev. W. C. Barrett of Franklinton will begin a meeting at Lillington, Harnett county, on the fourth Sunday night of this month. He desires the members of the church to pray for the success of the meeting.

....Rev. Dr. William Harris, pastor of the First church, Montgomery, Ala., died at his residence in that city on Dec. 26th. For a year or two before going to Alabama, he was pastor of the Seventh church, Baltimore, Md.

....You can see from the Treasurer's acknowledgements in this paper for the "Havana House" that the churches have done well. Thanks to all. Next week we will state the facts about the work.—C. Durham.

....Rev. W. S. Ballard of Southport, N. C., wrote to us under date of Dec. 23rd, that he had decided to take charge of churches near Scotland Neck, N. C. He speaks in the highest terms of his brethren in and around Southport.

....Bro. J. T. Jordan of Troy, Texas, in renewing his subscription, says: "I have been in Texas four months; find some good Baptists, but have never found truer, nobler, better brethren than in North Carolina. Success to the RECORDER."

....There are 80,000 more Missionary Baptists in North Carolina than the combined number of all other denominations, and counting our Antimissionary, Campbellite and Free-will brethren as Baptists, there are at least 100,000 more Baptists in North Carolina than there are of all other names, creeds, isms or sects.

....Rev. C. W. Matthews, who has moved his office from Land of Promise, Va., to Creeds, Va., writes: "Many of our people have died from grippe, and many are still suffering from its dreadful effects. Our parsonage is rapidly nearing completion. My correspondents will please note the change in my address."

....Rev. O. L. Stringfield has just closed a gracious series of meetings with the church at Hephzibah, in which fifteen persons professed faith in Christ. Bro. Stringfield reports the new building for the Wakefield High School rapidly approaching completion. This is one of the best and most successfully managed schools in North Carolina.

....Rev. Dr. W. A. Nelson of Asheville tendered his resignation as pastor of the First church of that city last week, and preached his closing sermon on Sunday last. Dr. Nelson is dearly loved by the church, but having suffered much with his throat recently, he felt that a rest from preaching was necessary to his restoration. He goes to Aiken, S. C.

....Prof. F. P. Hobgood of Oxford again takes charge of the Oxford Female Seminary as President. The Spring term begins January 20th. Bro. Hobgood is a born teacher, and his friends and the friends of the Oxford Female Seminary should rally to his support. We heartily commend President Hobgood and the Seminary to all our readers. Get ready and fill every room in the school on the 20th.

....The Baptist sisters of the church in Reidsville, N. C., are supporting a young minister in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, and will send him to China as missionary and support him there when he finishes his education. The church in Reidsville has only 250 members, but it is leading all its sister churches, and setting them a good example. They are greatly pleased with Pastor Howard.

....A brother, or rather a member of a Baptist church at ——— N. C., who owed us for the RECORDER from Feb. 27th, 1889, to Jan. 1st, 1892, sends us word that he does not intend to pay for the paper, and does not want it, &c. If all the Baptists in North Carolina were such as he, the Devil would have a walk-over in this State. A revival of debt-paying religion is badly needed in his section. The man who can pay his honest debts and will not, is unfit for church membership in any sort of a church.

....Rev. D. J. Clark of Clarkton, N. C., is making an earnest effort to build a house of worship for the little church in his section. He needs about five hundred dollars to complete the work. We commend the enterprise to our readers. See acknowledgments in another column.

....A young lady graduate of Thomasville Female College wishes a situation as teacher of English branches in a school or family school. She is a Baptist of highest standing and experience. Best of testimonials as references. If any of our readers wish such a teacher in the families or neighborhood they will please apply to us.

....Rev. Dr. John S. Watkins, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Raleigh, has tendered his resignation in order to accept a call to the pastorate of the Presbyterian church in Spartanburg, S. C. Dr. Watkins is a learned and gifted preacher, pastor and writer, and with all is a splendid christian gentleman. We have known and loved him for years, and regret his removal from Raleigh.

....Rev. J. F. Love of Rocky Mount writes: "I have recently been on a visit to my parents in Elizabeth City. Bro. Thomas, I think it not extravagant to say, is preaching to a larger average congregation than any man in the State. All goes well in the part of the Tar River. Dr. Hufham, it will be not in the 'succession,' is succeeding at Tarboro. Battle at Wilson fills to overflowing his house. He needs his new house to accommodate his large audiences."

....A little more than a year ago, we made this announcement: "The Arkansas Baptist will hereafter be furnished to ministers who aid in its circulation, at one dollar per year." This is less than the actural cost, and, therefore, our contribution to them. But we find that we are sending the paper to about ane thousand preachers on these terms; some have aided greatly in increasing our circulation; others have done but little or nothing.—Arkansas Baptist. Exactly.

....Rev. Dr. Cornelius Tyree of Salem, Va., died after a brief illness on Dec. 23rd. He was in his seventy seventh year. Dr. Tyree has been for many years one of the most distinguished preachers and authors of Virginia, a man of splendid gifts, indomitable energy and industry, and of blameless character. For years he has written regularly for the RECORDER. His writings, like his head and heart, were clear, forcible and true. There were few like him in the earth, and we sadly feel the loss we have sustained in his death.

....On Dec. 27th, Cedar Rock Baptist Sunday-school, Franklin county, elected the following officers for the year 1892: Superintendent—Willis M. Boone; Assistant—G. B. H. Stallings; Secretary—J. T. Inscore; Treasurer—S. H. Boone; Organist—Mrs. W. B. Coppedge; Librarian—R. H. Duke. The retiring Superintendent, Bro. J. A. Coppedge, has been in office fourteen years, and leaves the school in good condition. During the exercises a collection was taken for the Baptist Orphanage.

....Rev. A. L. Stough of Lancaster, S. C., writes: "Madame Rumor says times are hard, but I feel they must get a great deal harder before I can do without the RECORDER. Makes me feel like I was back in the Old North State when I read the RECORDER. I have labored so long along the line of the two Carolinas, sometimes on one side of the line, then on the other, so the two seem to me like twin sisters. Religious newspapers in the providence of God, have been a great blessing to me, hence I feel it my duty to pray for editors as honored instruments in God's hands of doing good."

....A young colored preacher from the South, who spent several sessions in Shaw University and studied theology under Rev. Dr. T. E. Skinner, is now attending the Theological Seminary in Colgate University, Hamilton, N. Y. In a most complimentary letter to Dr. Skinner, he says: "My experience North is driving me more and more to the conclusion that the South is, and is destined to be, the purest, sweetest, and most glorious section of the world. And in spite of all the slavery and hardships of the past, and the fading prejudices of the present, God was wise in placing the majority of the colored people in the South. We expect to still labor for the South until it becomes the envied spot of the whole earth."

....The editor of the Arkansas Baptist, Rev. W. A. Clark, has been quite sick recently, and winds up the labors of 1891 with the following: "To day's labor closes our work on volume eleven. None can know the anxiety and burdens we have borne during 1891. Only the God we try to serve has heard the prayers offered, witnessed the midnight toil, the tears that oftimes came unbidden, the mistakes made, the agony incident to being misjudged by some, censured by others, and confidence sometimes misplaced. But the Lord has crowned the year with mercies. Every prospect is brighter. The Lord be praised for the mighty host of friends and helpers we have had, and for the clear sky in which the sun of 1891 sets."

...."A Baptist preacher in Wilkes who skipped with a Sister."—State Chronicle. The foregoing heads a horrible article in regard to "Harrison Blankenship, a Baptist preacher." There is no such preacher on our roll. Guess it is another Roan story.—Charity and Children. We never heard of a Baptist preacher named Harrison Blankenship. We have published a list of our preachers every year for eleven years, and no such man has ever been reported to us or appeared in the minutes of any Association. If he was ever mentioned among our ministers, he must have been a most insignificant fellow. We were sorry for the State Chronicle and its brethren, and felt disposed, at the time we read the article referred to by Bro. Mills, to let them enjoy whatever of comfort could be derived form the Blankenship incident.

Dr. R. D. Fleming's Letter.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—On the 9th of Decem I sent to Dr. W. S. Black an article in ly to his editorial published in the Or- an's Friend at Oxford reflecting on me d my resolutions. On the 18th he wrote that for reasons given, the article could appear in the Friend. I thought it not ght that the paper of an institution I am ing taxed to support should be used to at- ck me and I not be allowed to reply in the per in the spirit of said editorial. So he turned my communication, and I have ow changed it right much, taking out the pirit of his article, and send it to you, and ope you will give it place in the RECORDER.

Most respectfully, R. D. FLEMING.

Warrenton, Jan. 1, 1892.

Rev. Dr. W. S. BLACK,

Supt. Oxford Orphanage, Oxford, N. C.:

Dear Doctor:—My attention has been called o your article published in the Orphan's riend in reference to the resolutions I ffered at our Baptist State Convention at oldsboro. I expected the resolutions would ause some people to show themselves in heir true colors, but did not expect the first rticle would show so plainly that I was ealing with a subject about which some eople are very sensitive. I must say I was terly astonished at the spirit of your arti- , coming as it does from a professed hristian and minister, whose calling ought be a guarantee of his christian spirit. It eems that you would destroy me with one ush of your pen. Why such bitter feeling owards the man? Why did you not discuss he principles I set forth? Ah!

Not yet purged off of spleen and sour disdain."

But I will not in this article notice your ersonal attack and comparison of myself, r any other brother, any more than to say hat from your standpoint I was completely emolished—yes, a heathen devoured by a hristian. But to this I submit for the sake of the cause I represent, which will live, row and bring forth fruit some day. There is consolation in the fact that great men hould have seen enough in my resolutions to cause them to attack anybody. Such reat minds would not fight the wind. My esolutions only contend for christians work- ng as christians for the Lord's cause and to eep public money from being misappro- priated. Are not both of these right and proper principles? I hope you will not fear to put yourself on record on these points. I would suggest that you and your friends should take your hands out of the public treasury (even though they are there ac- cording to law), and pay your own bills with your own money, because all law is not right. You imply that the Orphanage at Oxford is a State institution as others you mention are, but I think you will recognize this as a mistake of yours, and calculated to mislead people. If so, please let me know when it became such and how. State insti- tutions are not generally run by private or- ganizations or churches, though in this State such things have been attempted, and to some extent done. But "the sun do move," and all these things must have an end.

My resolutions do not propose to force anybody to do anything, but to urge chris- tians to do what almost every one would say was a christian duty. I am sure you wish I were the only man in that Convention wicked enough to endorse the resolutions—you almost say so, but I am glad to say that I find ten times as many who endorsed them as I had expected. I did not hear a half dozen express dissent from the spirit of the resolutions; some said they did not think them prudent just now. It was a new prop- osition, and I assure you I am satisfied with the impression made by the resolutions. Now, brethren will think more about this matter, as it is a battle which the christians of this country will have to fight; and when they examine the question involved closely, as they ought to do, I have little doubt about the conclusion to which they will come.

All christian charity must be voluntary. There is no christian charity in taxing the people for the support of private enterprises; therefore, I am pleading for the masses who have to submit to taxation for the support of the State, and ought to be relieved of the burden of supporting private enterprises of any sort, except as they may choose to do so. If our rights under the Constitution are not protected, where may we not expect soon to land? As the ball of Legislative precedent has already begun to roll, and un- less it is stopped, we will have to raise many thousands more than we do now by taxa- tion, and the State may be bankrupt, as ev- ery society that now exists, and that may come into existence, will have the right to claim State support.

Now, Doctor, has not the Lord left these children here as the wards of christianity? Has not Christ taught you and me, as chris- tians, to provide for these children, and not as Masons, or members of other secret soci- eties? How are you living up to the di- vinely-imposed obligation? Are you willing to continue to let Christless organizations and the State do the work for the Master which you as a christian ought to do, and simply draw your large salary, live easy, and do no practical christian work, that men may see what christianity does, and glorify your Father in heaven?

I think you assert positively that I would turn the two hundred orphans now at Ox- ford out of house and home, with no one to care for them. Do you know that to be true? If not, allow me to suggest that you are more reckless in your statements than a minister of Christ ought to be. I find it hard to think that you really wish to deceive people and make them believe what is not true about a matter of this sort. So far from this being true, I desire and am trying to have the orphans better cared for than they ever have been. We have seen that if left to secret societies alone, they would not be cared for. If the State had done nothing, would the Masons have turned the children out to grass? Even yet, we have to regret that without the State, they would have a poor showing. But I hope a better time is coming for these poor homeless children, for they are not at home with the Masons; nor is the State their divinely-appointed father, so that they are not at home with the State; nor will they be at home until they are under the care and protection of the churches of Christ, which organizations ought to do this work. I believe if all the money which God gives his people for the purpose of carrying forward his work in the world, was put into the treasury of the dif- ferent churches, and not diverted, as it now is, into unchristian channels, there would not be one orphan in the State uncared for, where now there are about six hundred. This money would be spent more in accord- ance with the Divine will, and hence more good would result, and christians would not be taxed one dollar more than they now pay out, but the money would be flowing in the proper channel. God has sent his messen- ger, and he has prepared and shown us the way, but we have departed from it. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked." Let us return and "Bring all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing." Then may we expect to reap the fruits of our labor. The Bible is clear that we may not expect a blessing except in the line of duty.

The Presbyterians, Episcopalians and Bap- tists are doing orphan work without State aid. Your denomination is large and wealthy, and when they properly take charge, as they ought to do, of the two hun- dred children now at Oxford, it will be bet- ter for the children, better for you as indi- viduals and as a denomination, and, I hope and believe, better for the world to see what christianity is doing, and you will not ap- pear to be getting behind a society to get the ten thousadd dollars of State money, as it now seems you are doing.

I hope the good Lord will bring about the end desired, and that is, for his people to do his work as his people and through the di- vinely appointed institutions (his churches), and not through human institutions. When this comes to pass, many hearts in this grand old commonwealth will rejoice and be glad. May the God of the orphans, and our God, guide us into all truth; then you and I will see alike and believe the same things.

R. D. FLEMING.

The Oxford Female Seminary.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I am glad to be able to report that the Oxford Female Seminary has passed into the hands of Prof. F. P. Hobgood, who built up the school from the first, and carried it to its high degree of ex- cellence. Prof. Hobgood, full of vim and vigor, is determined to make the Seminary one of the best schools in the land. The Spring term will open on the twentieth of January. Parents and those having girls to send to school may rest assured that the Seminary under Prof. Hobgood's charge will continue to offer excellent educational advantages. We of Oxford congratulate ourselves that the perpetuation of this fine school is guaranteed to the town and to the Baptists of the State. The public may be confident that the school as conducted by Prof. Hobgood will be worthy of their best patronage.

JNO. S. HARDAWAY.

Letter from Wilson's Mills.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—We are moving along in our work here. We have our house raised. The window casing is all there, but not all in yet. Some of the weather-boarding has been put on, and the work will continue to go on. We hope to finish the house by mid- summer. We are not building a very large house, but one large enough for our neces- sities—one that will hold at least three hun- dred. We are using good, substantial ma- terial, and the work is done by the very best workmen.

Now I have made these statements that the brethren and sisters may know what we are doing for the Master. We are only a band of twenty-three, and only a few of these are males. The fact that we are few does not argue that we do not need a house of worship. We appeal to every Baptist in the State, who may read this, for help. Dear friends, if you can sympathize with those in need of aid, please send some of your sym- pathy in the shape of money. Please, dear reader, send us one dollar, and it will be thankfully received and acknowledged. The Lord will bless you for your contribution, and it will be a blessing to us. Aid us at once, friends, for we need money now. Di- rect all amounts to the undersigned.

Awaiting many prompt responses, I am

Yours fraternally,

J. L. COTTINGHAM.

Ordination.

After a very satisfactory examination Bro. R. H. Jones was ordained to the gospel ministry last Sunday evening at Wakefield, N. C., in the presence of a large and appropriate audience. The writer preached the sermon. Text 1 Tim. 4: 12. Bro. G. W. Coppedge offerd a most earnest prayer. The writer delivered the charges, and after some beautiful words by Bro. Coppedge, he pre- sented the Bible as his rule of faith and practice. After the benediction by Bro. Jones adjourned.

The Baptist Female University.

A STATEMENT FROM THE COMMITTE SHOW— THE CONDITION OF THE ENTERPRISE

Messrs. N. B. Broughton, C. Durham, W. N. Jones, J. C. Scarboro and W. G. Up- church, constituting the local committee in charge of the matter of the Baptist Female University, have issued through the finan- cial secretary, Mr. J. B. Boone, a statement to the contributors to the proposed institu- tion, showing the progress and condition of the enterprise. In this statement the com- mittee says:

The citizens of Raleigh offered to the trustees of the University $25,000 and a site to secure the location in this city. The trustees canvassed all the propositions, and decided to locate the institution in Raleigh; and after looking at all the available sub- urban sites, including the Pullen, the Gris- som and the Adams lots. They agreed that if the citzens of Raleigh would pay for the above-named property they would locate the institution thereon.

The members of the board who were citi- zens of Raleigh, after consultation among themselves and with many of our citizens, agreed to accept the proposition. After a thorough canvass to secure the funds to pay for the site, the necessary amount was not obtained. This result was reported to a meeting of the board of trustees at Golds- boro, N. C., in November last. At that the whole subject of the University was fully discussed and the trustees unanimously agreed to stand by their decision to locate the University in Raleigh. They also ex- pressed their preference for the site already chosen; but appointed a committee of five of their number, residents of Raleigh, to whom they entrusted the matter of chang- ing the site if necessary, and to whom they gave instructions to collect and use the funds already subscribed, and to solicit other funds in and outside of Raleigh, and to make such purchases as might be neces- sary, and press the work committed to them as rapidly as possible. The committee met a few days after their appointment, and after ascertaining that they could obtain the vacant lot of the Len. H. Adams property, adjoining the Pullen lot, unanimously agreed on that plan; and have purchased said lot at a cost of $2,000, paid the money for it and obtained a deed thereof. The Grissom lot has been purchased and paid for at a cost of $2,100, and the Pullen lot has been contract- ed for at a cost of $10,000, of which $3,000 has been paid—leaving a balance due of $7,000. The late purchase of the Adams lot gives a key to the situation, so that we have the very site on which the building would be erected, even though we owned the whole square. We now have two acres of ground.

Collections are now being made as rapidly as possible to finish paying for the Pullen lot. There are good subscriptions, sufficient when paid, in the hands of the financial secretary, to finish paying for this lot.

The committe are greatly encouraged with the progress of the work already at- tained, and hereby desire to ask all those who have subscribed to this enterprise to pay their subscription as soon as possible, to the end that the Pullen property may be paid for at the earliest possible moment and a deed obtained therefor. When this is done work will be commenced upon the building.

Sawyer's Creek Church, Camden County.

My connection commenced with Sawyer's Creek January, 1862. I have known it intimately since that time. Taken altogether, the 25th day (Christmas) of the present month, was the best day I ever saw there. The expectation of everybody, as far as I have been able to learn, was fully met, ex- cept one man, about whom I will tell you before I am through. The Sunday-school had arranged to make all the scholars a nice present on that day. The young people deco- rated the church beautifully, and erected a Jacobs-ladder on the rostrum beautified with moss, on which all the presents were taste- fully arranged. At 10 o'clock the doors were opened, and old and young rushed in to see the sight. The children for sometime could not keep still; they talked, and almost danced—with eyes, feet and hands, talked all over. The superintendent, W. G. Fere- bee, succeeded after a while in quieting things, when an appropriate hymn was sung and a prayer offered. The superinten- dent then made a very appropriate talk, telling them how hard he had worked to build up the school (which we all knew be- fore) and how happy he was, with the facts before him, that his labors were not in vain; also, how hard he tried in selecting the presents to give satisfaction. Just there he said, he was sure he would not satisfy all, and that somebody would be dissatisfied. His expectations were not met; he was the only one disappointed; as everybody was more than pleased and wondered how he could buy so much, of such a quality, with so little money. We then had some charm- ing singing by the little girls. But with the eloquent speach from the superintendent, a talk from the pastor and the singing that charmed the old folks, the children neither heard or cared for what the superintendent or pastor said, or what the girls sang. Their eyes and hearts were fixed on Jacobs-lad- der. Now the superintendent takes out his little book and calls out the names of all the scholars, and as each name is called they march up and receive their presents and re- turn to their seats, with glad happy hearts. Then with joyful hearts all return to their homes, and think, resolved to make the school better the coming year.

If you will not accuse me of boasting (why may I not be allowed to boast a little?) let me say, that from all I know of Sunday- schools, we have at Sawyer's Creek the best country school in the State, and a model superintendent for city or country. It re- quires as much tact to run successfully a Sunday school, as it does to run a national bank. We have enrolled 200 scholars, with an average attendence of 165. Our collec- tions average two dollars every Sunday. I said it was the best day I ever saw at Saw- yer's Creek church, because as far as I can judge, the church is in a better condition than I ever saw it. Our congregations are large and very attentive, and we close the year with the pastor paid and all other debts settled.

My church at Providence is in a better con dition, as far as I can judge, than I have seen it for years.

I want to record the goodness of the Lord to me during the past year: much to sorrow over, yet very much to rejoice over. My health has been poor, but even that has been a blessing.

R. R. OVERBY.

1891—What of It?

Bro. Bailey:—The year with its responsi- bilities is gone. The opportunities that came with it, improved or unimproved, will come no more. 'Tis of no avail to say, "It might have been." But we, as Baptists, have abundant reason to thank God and take courage, that has been all along the line. Our pastors are doing more and better work than ever be- fore. Our churches are by scores, waking up to clearer conseptions of duty, and realiz- ing more fully their mission in the world.

Our mission work was never so vigorously prosecuted. This is true at home and across the seas. The cries in missions is passed; yet I believe the day of missions is just dawning. That as we begin to ask great things and expect great things of God, the Sun of Righteousness, full orbed, will rise upon the world, and nations shall be born in a day.

WAKE FOREST.

Our College, God bless her! under the guidence of the very best College President, aided by an able and consecrated Faculty, is doing a work to be surpassed only by the work she will do in years just before her.

THE RECORDER,

to its years of experience, is adding youth- ful vigor and is so much better than ever.

MY FIELD.

In my own fields of labor, I can report progress:

Apex is a small church, and there is not a wealthy man in it; yet we have built a neat infant-class room,—paid one hundred dollars to Wake Forest Endowment—altо- gether paying over eight dollars per mem- ber for all objects. At our last meeting the church paid fifty per cent more than its apportionment for the Havana house.

Cumberland Union another small church, paid one hundred dollars to the Endowment every member contributing. It has just raised over its quota for the Cuban house. I know of no church that is at work more earnestly or unitedly.

Cameron, Moore county—last spring, hav- ing one Sunday unfilled, I of my own accord, began work here as an independent mission- ary. This is a village on the railroad with about three hundred inhabitants. I found six or eight Baptists. By the kindness of Methodists, I have been preaching monthly in their church. Some months since, we planned to build. Now, we have a good lot, lumber secured for building, and nearly money enough to build. We were just get- ting ready to constitute a church, when we proposed to Crane's Creek, a little weak church of thirty members, three miles in the country, to move to Cameron and co operate with us. Crane's Creek will be changed to Cameron church, and the prospect is now encouraging for that field. This work I have done without compensation, only Cameron friends have paid my railroad fare.

Accept my hearty good wishes for the new year. Yours, J. M. WHITE.

Compare Results.

The Fife meeting in Oxford was good. It has greatly blessed our town. But in results, let us compare it with a meeting held with a little country church. I take this country meeting of a sample of many others.

In the Oxford meeting, three hundred dollars were spent in preparing a house in which to preach. In the country meeting, not a dollar was spent in preparations.

In the town meeting, there was a congre- gation of from 1,500, to 3,000 from which to draw material. In the country meeting, the congregation averaged about two hun- dred. The town meeting continued eleven days. The country meeting lasted eight days. In the town meeting, the preacher had ten or a dozen other preachers, and the christian workers of all the churches to help him. In the country meeting, the pastor, aided by three or four lay workers, did all the work. In the town meeting, about three huudred new recruits declared themselves for Christ. In the country meet- ing, about fifty-five confessed Christ as Lord and Master. From the town meeting, per- haps one hundred have become church mem- bers. The number may reach one hundred and fifty. From the country meeting, about fifty have become church members.

I present this comparison for the en- couragement of the many humble workers, who are called to labor in small fields.

Letter from Rev. A. D. Hunter.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—This is my first since the Methodist Conference here, so a few words. Our Methodist brethren are doing good work. The Bishop said 6,000 had been added to the churches in the State during the year, and that they now had 118,000 white members in the Methodist Episcopal church of North Carolina. A Presiding Elder said, "The followers of John the Baptist have been to Goldsboro this year, so now let the followers of John Wesley go the next year." So they are to meet in Goldsboro next year. Yours in Christ,

A. D. HUNTER.

Charge Delivered at the Ordination of Rev. R. A. Jones.

BY O. L. STRINGFIELD.

1. My Brother, I charge you to turn a deaf ear to all lies respecting you or your work. If you are worth much as a preacher, the devil will surely undertake to damage you.

2. I charge you to be strictly honest in all your business engagements. If you cannot pay your debts at the proper time, be sure that you satisfy the person you owe so that you may not lose his most kindly feeling.

3. You are now chosen to fill the high office of a minister of Jesus Christ, I charge you before God that you do not use this high office for any pecuniary or social profit. How degrading to the character of a minister of God to walk into a store to buy goods and say "you must remember I am a preacher" or "a poor preacher" and you ought to sell me goods cheaper." If he ought this is no time to take a collection for preachers. Such go even to hotels and eat like hard times were gone forever, and then enquire at the clerk's office if he is to pay full fare! Eat soda crackers before you do that. Be a man! Pay your way like a man! Paul never asked the boatman for half fare, nor a merchant to "come down a little."

Nor are you to use this office for social ad- vantage. Because you are a minister does not mean that you are a social companion for any and every individual.

4. Pull off your ministerial gloves (if you wear them), and even your clerical coat to serve humanity. Jesus came not to be ministered unto, but to minister. There are tears that can be wiped away in no other way. Stand with your people as one of them and not as a stature above them.

Sin a Detective.

Men need to keep in mind the warning of Moses to the tribes who abode beyond the Jordan: "Be sure your sin will find you our." The devil is continually telling them that in some way or other they shall be able to escape the penalty of their sins. But God can not be mocked; sooner or later all sins will receive their punishment.—State Mission Quarterly.

If it costs too much to be a zealous and successful christian, it will cost infinitely more to live and die an impenitent sinner. Bible religion costs self-denial; sin costs self destruction.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

May God's salvation be your wall and bul- wark, dear reader.

An Inquirer's Letter.

The following letter was sent by Mrs. Yates with this comment:—

"Dr. Ella Swinney's medical work of seven years has produced some very pleasing results. This letter shows one such case. I know her very well, and can testify. Her mission is the Seventh Day Baptist. E. M. Y."

The very interesting letter given below was written to Dr. Swinney by a young lady, the only child of a wealthy family living in the native city Shanghai. The doctor had been called to visit the family professionally, and had told them "the old, old story Jesus and his love."

"Dr. Swinney:—Peace be to you! I have taken great pleasure in hearing the doctrine you have so often explained to me.

"In my home we have many idols, and I never knew any other worship than that paid to these gods.

"I did not know I had any sins, nor that these were false gods, and therefore I always reverenced them and fasted at the usual times, thinking if I did no great evil I would have no sins that would need repentance; thus you see my heart was happy all the time. But now in reading the Holy Scriptures I grieve in anguish of soul as I think of my many sins, and regret very much that I have not worshipped the true God at all, but always the false ones.

"Because I do not now worship the idols and our ancestors, my people here at home sneer at me and say, 'I suppose it is because you want to be a christian, that you have become so wicked you do not reverence our ancestors.' According to the custom, five times in the year we have great feasts in idol worship; now, the first time this year I bowed before the idols, but at the second feast I would not do so, and ever since that time I have prayed three times each day to the true God in heaven.

"I ask the Lord in great mercy to help me understand plainly, also I beg him to forgive my many sins. Do you think the great God will forgive me? I implore you, doctor, to pray to the Lord for me.

"My desire each Sabbath would be to go and worship with you and hear the gospel, yet I am afraid of the fierce talk it would cause in my home, and so I dare not go.

"Still, should you have baptism at any time, I should like to go very much, though if any of my people accompanied me I could not worship openly before them; and on this account, doctor, will you ask me to kneel down at prayer time when I come, and then I can do so before them all.

"The Scriptures seem very precious to me when I read them, and I have the desire to know more and more; but at present I simply know that there is but one only true God, and that to worship idols is not only of no use but also very sinful.

"It seems very difficult in the midst of so much opposition to try to be a christian, yet I not only try but am anxious that my mother should believe in the doctrine too.

"Though she has always worshipped the idols, yet she has had some misgivings about its being perfectly right to do so. Lately she has been more influenced by the talk of those around us, and has resisted these convictions. I wish she would quickly change her mind and see the real truth, then I should be happy indeed. But now I know she has not really repented, and it troubles me very much.

"Still, doctor, do not speak of this letter, yet whenever you see her very earnestly and plainly talk with her and help her to understand the gospel. She tells me all the time she cannot believe, and so I know she is not really and truly trusting in Jesus.

"I shall always pray to the one true God, and trusting in the merits of Christ, hope that I shall receive the forgiveness of my sins.

"Do you think I shall ever receive this perfect peace in my heart?

"May peace and tranquility be yours!

If you feel weak and all worn out take BROWN'S IRON BITTERS

Where can we obtain the best helps for our Sunday-school? This is the question often asked. Now, it is neither desirable nor necessary that we should go into needless comparison with different publishing houses. For we all know that for our purpose, as Baptist Sunday schools, we cannot find in all the broad range of Sunday school literature anything superior to the books, pamphlets, and periodicals issued by our own house, the American Baptist Publication Society. Samples of the periodicals are furnished free of charge.

Hints for the Preacher.

Don't mumble your words. Chew your food, but not your language.

Don't speak in a monotone. The voice has numerous keys; play on as many as possible.

Don't be untidy. You cannot teach men to become clean inside if you are unclean outside.

Don't grow "weary in well doing." "Kill yourself with work, and pray yourself alive again."

Don't forget the boys and girls, in service and out. Their attention is well worth gaining, and you may often be able to reach older hearts through younger ears.

Don't neglect study and closet prayer. The finest of human pipes give forth no music unless filled with the Divine breath.

Don't seek the praise of men. Preach in such a way that they will not be so much pleased with you as displeased with themselves.

Don't scold your congregation or the burden bearers. Attack measures and hit people only when they stand between you and the devil.

Don't grumble because of little fruit. The hand must pluck the few ears, and patiently labor for the sheaves of the greater harvest by-and-by.

Don't get the blues on stormy days, because only few are out. Preach your level best to small assemblies. Jesus talked to one woman at the well, and she got Samaria out to hear him next day.

Don't exhaust your lungs, but keep them full. Take long breaths, then you will not close each sentence ah, with a terrible gasp-ah, as if dying for air ah, and so strain your lung-ah, and never find it out-ah, till the Philistines make sport of you-ah. Inflate your lungs.

Don't advertise false isms and the men who create them. It is not necessary to expend consecrated energies in striking at goats with the club of a Hercules. If a mischievous error is at work, publish the gospel truth all the more to counteract, rather than fence with its author and thus add to his reputation.—Rev. S. A. Northrup.

The explosion of a bomb is not more sudden or unlooked for than the attack of some malignant disease which would not occur were the blood in order. To impure blood is due a great variety of ills that make life a burden.

All the year round, you may rely upon Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify the blood and invigorate the system. It's not like the sarsaparillas, that are said to be good for the blood in March, April and May. The "Discovery" works equally well at all times, and in all cases of blood-taints, or humors, no matter what their name or nature.

It's the cheapest blood-purifier, sold through druggists, because you only pay for the good you get.

Your money is returned if it doesn't benefit or cure you.

Can you ask more?

"Is life worth living?" "That depends on the liver." Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the best Liver Pills.

POKINE.

I have used the within remedy (Pokine) with great success. JAMES H. LASSITER.

I have used the Pokine Remedy (prepared by W. T. Cheatham, Jr.) in case of Sciatica with the result of positive relief in a few hours, and believe if used as directed is will effect a permanent cure.
J. L. H. MISSILLIER.

MARCH 6, 1891.
For the benefit of the public, I unhesitatingly recommend Cheatham's wonderful remedy, "Pokine," to all sufferers of rheumatism. It has produced marvelous results in my case. I was a sufferer of the malady for five years, and after taking a few bottles was entirely cured.
Very respectfully,
W. W. DOWTIN.

HENDERSON, N. C., March 7, '91.
MR. W. T. CHEATHAM:
Dear Sir—My wife was down in bed with rheumatism, and the Pokine I bought of you gave her relief after taking four doses. She has not been troubled since. It is the best medicine she ever took for rheumatism. Respectfully,
ZACK DAVIS.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM, JR:
Dear Sir—I have been afflicted with rheumatism time and again, for the past thirteen years. I have received more relief from Pokine than any medicine I ever took, and therefore take great pleasure in recommending it to all sufferers of rheumatism. Very respectfully,
F. G. MITCHELL.

JANUARY 19, 1891.
W. T. CHEATHAM, JR.:
Dear Sir—I desire to say that in January last I was down with rheumatism; my suffering was great, and I was completely prostrated. One bottle of your Pokine completely relieved me, and I have not had any rheumatism since. My son also was relieved of rheumatism by Pokine.
Yours truly,
CHARLES G. BURROUGHS.

HENDERSON, N. C., Sept. 16, '91.
MR. W. T. CHEATHAM, JR.:
Your rheumatic cure, Pokine, has completely cured me. I. M. GREEN.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM, JR., Henderson, N. C.:
Dear Sir—Being asked my opinion of your rheumatic remedy, Pokine, will gladly state I deem it the only medicine of its kind on the market that will accomplish that which is exclusively claimed for it. Being a sufferer of rheumatism, I consequently tried many remedies, until finally relieved by Pokine. Very respectfully,
J. A. KELLY.

1864 SADLER'S BRYANT & STRATTON COLLEGE BALTO
FOUNDED IN 1864 by the present executive—27 YEARS of continuous and successful management—Increased annual attendance—Now occupying four buildings—Stands unrivaled in facilities for educating YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN for success in life. In deciding upon a school for their children, PARENTS should send them to THE BEST, because it pays. It may require the expenditure of a few dollars more at first, but it will prove the cheapest in the end. CHEAP tuition is very dear, because it means cheap teachers, cheap surroundings, inferior facilities, and offers NO opportunities for securing POSITIONS for its pupils and graduates. This Institution, owing to its HIGH standard of excellence, has placed in desirable positions more young men and women from Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, than all similar institutions combined. The Old and New.

BY REV. H. D. LEQUEUX.

Farewell, old year! Thy work is done;
The curtain falls on ninety-one,
Whose rose-hued hopes and gloomy fears
Have mingled with preceding years

A long farewell to ninety-one!
All hail the year that's just begun;
And may we for the Master do
A grander work in ninety-two

Than we have ever done before
To spread the Truth from shore to shore,
And tell the nations of the earth
Of Bethlehem's Babe, whose wondrous birth

Brought immortality to light
And chased away the shades of night,—
Whose precious blood the ransom paid
And for our sins atonement made.

O may we consecrate anew
Our lives to God in ninety-two;
And should we not be spared to see
The curtain rise on ninety-three,

Then may our spirits wing their flight,
On viewless wing thro' cloudless light
To that eternal home above
Whose very atmosphere is love!

Letter from Rev. G. W. Greene.

THE SOUTH CHINA MISSION.

The veteran of the missionaries of the Southern Baptist Convention is Dr. R. H. Graves, who has been in Canton more than than thirty-five years. During all these years he has led this mission, having its center in this city, has preached the gospel regularly, has put himself among the foremost in his knowledge of the Chinese language, and at the same time has kept pace with the current of sound thinking in the religious world. Just at this time he is in Shanghai, an influential member of a committee, appointed by the Missionary Conference of 1890, to consider the expediency of making a single version of the Scriptures for all China.

Mrs. Graves, formerly Mrs. Sanford of Mississippi, spent some years among the Chinese in California, and has been here several years, giving special attention to the schools and to the training of the christian women.

Rev. E. Z. Simmons and wife came to this city from Mississippi more than twenty years ago. Bro. Simmons speaks the Chinese with fluency, and is a valuable worker among this people.

Rev. T. M. McCloy came out from Scotland as a colporter of the British and Foreign Bible Society. After he had labored in this capacity for some years, he desired to do regular mission work and asked to be attached to this mission. He is in hearty sympathy with Southern Baptists in our principles and our work. During the past year he and Mrs. McCloy, with their two little girls, have been living in Macao, not being able to rent a house here.

Miss Lula Whildren came from South Carolina about twenty years ago, and after a long period of very zealous labors, her health failed, and it was necessary for her to take a long rest. During part of this time she worked among the Chinese in Baltimore. At length returning health enabled her to enter again upon her loved work in Canton. She is especially zealous and efficient in her work among the heathen women and children. Her friends in the mission find it necessary to keep watch over her, lest she work too hard for her strength.

Miss Mollie McMinn from Missouri has been in the work only two years. Faithful and patient study of the language have enabled her to begin work among the women. Small of body, she is yet large in faith and zeal and common sense and bids fair to be one of our most useful workers.

Miss Nellie Hartwell, daughter of Dr. J. B. Hartwell of San Francisco, a member of this mission for several years, was two weeks ago married to Rev. Andrew Beattie of Canada, a Presbyterian missionary.

Miss H. F. North labors under the supervision of our Board in connection with this mission, but receives no salary from the Board, living on her own means. She has a home in the mission premises, but just now she is at Shien Hing, quite a distance in the country, living alone without any foreign associate. She will return to Canton before the severest of the winter comes on, as the native houses are not sufficiently comfortable for cold weather.

Last week the mission force was increased by the arrival of Miss C. J. White. For some time she has been laboring with Dr. Hartwell in San Francisco. At first she was appointed to accompany Miss Miner to Chinkiang, but having learned something of the Cantonese dialect in San Francisco, she was, at her own request, transferred to Canton.

So it will be seen that the present force here consists of four men and their wives and four unmarried ladies. The number of children was more than doubled by our arrival, there being none here except Bro. McCloy's two little girls, aged three and one. Little Bessie speaks Chinese but not English. While playing with our children, she has begun to speak English a little. Felix is quite a pet, being the only boy in the Baptist mission. He has learned one Chinese sentence, the first in our phrase book, meaning, "Bring me a cup of tea," and whenever he is addressed in Chinese, he replies with that command.

Besides Baptists, several other denominations are represented. The Presbyterians of the North have a strong force, including several preachers and three doctors and a hospital. One of these doctors is a young lady. The oldest of the missionaries, now resident in Canton, is Dr. Kerr, an able physician. The English Wesleyans have a station here and one or more in the country. The London Missionary Society has several missionaries here, some being Wesleyans and others Independents. This Society is represented in Hong Kong by Dr. Chalmers, an Independent, a distinguished Chinese scholar and a very able man, who insists on translating baptize by the Chinese word, which means to dip.

The Mission of the United Brethren consists of one young lady, but in a few days she is to be joined by another young lady. So far as Canton is concerned, that denomination seems to be misnamed.

There is also a German Mission, of which I have little information, and the Catholics have a magnificent cathedral and other mission property, and their work is in charge of a French bishop and a number of priests.

Bro. Williams' Letter to the late George W. Thompson.

Dear Bro. Thompson:—Yours to hand in due time. I was glad to learn that you were still living, though sorry to learn that you were and have been so sorely afflicted in your last days. We are but frail mortals at best, but with that blessed hope our afflictions are but transitory, and our days of suffering soon pass away and we go to that rest that God has prepared for his people.

I have been truly blessed. My general health is good. I have no chronic disease, and my little bad feelings at times comes from indigestion, and I can generally overcome it by using prudence in my diet, &c.

I read and do all my writing without glasses. It is true I have to wear glasses all the time to see off, but when I read or write I have to lay by my glasses. I am what is called short-sighted. I travel about alone. I have children in Southern Kentucky, and I go up there and spend my summers with them. I was up there this summer, and went and came alone. I have no family. I spend most of my time with my son, Dr. D. S. Williams, of this place. I am in the same condition of all our Southern people who had negroes before the war, poor, and dependent on my children for a living, but thank God they are able and willing to help me I have three sons engineers, and they will and do pass me on the railroads, and Dr. Williams is surgeon, so I can move from one point to another without much expense.

Your dear friendly letter brought so many of the dear old brethren to my mind. Bros. Crenshaw, Justice, Fort, Purefoy—yea, and many others with whom we as Trustees of Wake Forest College used to labor and pray for the upbuilding and the prosperity of that institution. Oh, my brother, if we have done nothing more in our godly efforts, the upbuilding of that College is a great work. God has blessed our labors and heard our prayers, and when we shall have passed away and our names are lost to the rising generation, Wake Forest College will be dispensing blessings to posterity. We can but exclaim in our old age, to God be all the glory. We did the best we could, and we can but rejoice. It has ever been to me a source of pleasure to think of Wake Forest and the labors and the anxiety that we all felt in getting up that institution. I would be so glad if I could hear often from the dear old place, but the dear friends I used to know have passed away, and you only are left. I thank you kindly for your letter, and I shall be glad to still hear from you and some of the young brethren that know me.

Farewell, my dear brother. We will meet by-and-by and never part. You are my senior by a few years. I shall be eighty-five in May next. God bless you, my dear Bro. Thompson.

Your brother in Christ,

D. S. WILLIAMS.

Texarkana, Ark., Nov. 30, 1891.

A Little Girl,

The daughter of J. B. Cox, a leading merchant of Big Island, Va., who had an alarming cough, baffling the skill of the physician, was cured by the use of Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein.

North Carolina Baptist Historical Society.

The section around Madison and Milton is rich in Baptist history. I am looking for some points of interest from a number of the brethren in the section. I am surprised to see the interest which is being shown in getting up Baptist history.

This week I learned from Prof. J. T. Alderman, who is now teaching at Reidsville, that he had for the past five years been collecting history in the old Yadkin Association. He has the original manuscript record of this Association organized in 1786, with John Cleveland as Moderator. The latter was succeeded by John Gano, who, it will be remembered, was Gen. Washington's chaplain in the Revolution, and who also was among the first, if not the first, to establish a Baptist church in New York City. The record is well preserved although over one hundred years old, the ink has not faded, and the handwriting is beautiful.

Bro. Alderman has consented to read a paper on the history of the old Yadkin Association at our meeting at Wake Forest in June next.

Letter from Lumberton.

Dear Recorder:—On the evening of Dec. 17th, 1891, a presbytery, composed of Revs. J. J. Scott, I. P. Hedgpeth and the writer, met at Rowland, N. C., for the purpose of organizing a Baptist church at that point. As we have no church building there, we met in the depot which the Railroad Company loaned us untill we can build.

At 7:30 p. m., the congregation met. After reading of the Scriptures by the writer, and prayer by Bro. Scott, we proceeded to organize. Bro. Scott was elected Moderator, and the writer, Secretary. The letters were then called for and read. Five letters were presented. An opportunity was then given for any one who wished to join by experience, but none came. The right hand of fellowship was then extended to the members, and they made arrangements with Bro. Scott to preach for them the first Sunday in January, morning and night. We were then dismissed with prayer by Bro. Hedgpeth, asking the Divine blessing to rest upon the little band.

Rowland is quite a new town and bids fair to be a place of some note. I am glad to know the Baptists are starting with the town, and have purchased a very desirable lot for their church. They have already some money towards their building, but not near enough. I therefore appeal to all those who are interested in this noble enterprise, to lend them a helping hand. They are a noble little band, and are willing to do all they can.

Besides Rowland, we have another very important point, Maxton, which also needs our help at this time. The brethren there have just completed a small chapel to worship in till they can complete their church. The Lord willing, I will preach for them the first Tuesday (5th) night in January at seven o'clock.

In regarding to my work at Lumberton, I wish to say the Lord is greatly blessing us and to him be all the glory.

I close with the best wishes for the RECORDER.

F. H. MARTIN.

Lumberton, Dec. 19, 1891.

The American Baptist Publication Society is the Baptist Book Concern, Bible Society, Track Society, Sunday-school Union, Colporteur Agency, and Periodical Publishing House, all in one. Every Baptist should know its work and object. We would recommend every pastor, superintendent, and teacher to write to the Society for a report, —"Engine of Power,"—a catalogue, and price list of their periodical, tracts, and books, that they may arm themselves with good, sound, and wholesome doctrines.

A Wonderful Prayer-Meeting.

In May, 1891, Charles H. Spurgeon was taken violently sick, and early in June, after a partial recovery, came a relapse, as it seemed, unto death. His recovery was pronounced impossible, at least, by human means.

The great congregation of more than six thousand souls, to whom he preaches, determined to unite in earnest daily prayer to God for Mr. Spurgeon's recovery. Now, hear it all ye people, for twenty-one weeks, daily, at 7 o'clock a. m. and at 7 o'clock p. m., that great congregation assembled in the Tabernacle for prayer. They were thronged. People of every name and order, in addition to his own congregation, came, and Mr. Spurgeon was really overwhelmed by the attention of all classes and conditions of people.

Seven thousand messages of condolence and sympathy, resolutions of various religious bodies in all parts of the world, &c., and other documents, from the lowest and highest in society, with fifty telegrams daily of inquiry, came to his home in Beulah Hill. Bishops and archbishops, statesmen and all classes called to offer sympathy and service. Even Jewish Rabbies called to offer sympathy and service, and to assure the sick man that all Israel was praying to Jehovah for his restoration.

Spurgeon is improving—has been taken from the jaws of death. Most emphatically this Tabernacle is a house of prayer. Prayer-meetings before preaching and after preaching, and in numerous rooms, and at almost all hours, for these forty years when this one man has preached the gospel to the same congregation! Here is simplicity in worship! Here is believing supplication! Here is simple gospel preaching! Here is plain statements of Bible truth! Here is the largest congregation in the world! This, too, not only when Spurgeon preaches, but when the people know his place will be filled by another! He is, perhaps, the mightiest mission force in the world!

Brethren, let us pray, believe the Bible, preach the simple, vigorous gospel! Worship in simplicity! Feed, train and fight in the Lord's army! Realize man's depravity and degradation, guilt and need! the Spirit's presence and power? the gospel's fullness and glory! our opportunities and obligations! our sources of strength and success! our accountability and future reward!

CONSUMPTION

THE BEST POSITIVELY CURED. THE BEST

Camm's Emulsion of Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, combined with the Hypophosphites, is recommended on its merit alone. It is prescribed by many of the leading Physicians of every state in the Union, besides being recommended by the Doctors and teachers of Medicine in Europe. This alone goes far to establish the justice of its claim to superiority. It is beyond doubt the best remedy in the world for the cure of Consumption, and all kindred diseases. It will positively cure consumption, if used before this fearful disease has made too much headway, particularly if it is persevered in after the arrest of the disease. Wherever there is any wasting disease of any kind, Camm's Emulsion is the remedy. To derive the full benefit from this truly valuable medicine, it is recommended that it be used only by the advice of an intelligent Physician. For sale by all druggists. Manufactured only by E. A. What record have you made during 1891?

The Best Made Better.

For the last twenty years we have thought and said the The Baptist Teacher was the best of its kind. Now, we have to say, that the best has been made better. The last copy of the Teacher is superior to any of its preceding numbers. Editorials, contributions, lesson notes, Editor's drawer, library notes,—all its contents, from beginning to end, are up to the very highest point of excellence. How the American Baptist Publication Society can furnish such a monthly for only fifty cents a year is what puzzles the average newspaper proprietor. If you would be well and wisely taught, get the Baptist Teacher for the coming year.

Caldwell County Union.

The next session of this Union will convene with the Rocky Spring church, Collettsville, N. C., commencing on Friday before the fifth Sunday in January, 1892. Rev. W. H. Davis will preach the introductory sermon, Rev. J. F. Crisp, alternate.

QUERIES.

Judson College

In looking around the Baptist field of the western part of our State, to find the factors which have had influence in elevating the people and giving the Baptists a stronger footing, we see, prominently at work, Judson College. This institution has had a troubled existence and has passed through many vicissitudes. But all the time it has been doing good work—work that has told and that will tell for future generations. Since 1878 the building has been occupied by teachers. Fourteen years of work, fourteen years employed in training minds, fourteen years of earnest christian labor! And the fruit is already being seen.

Many earnest young ministers are now at work in these western counties, preaching the word intelligently, encouraging the people to educate their children and pushing mission work with vigor. And they love to tell how they owe their increased usefulness to Judson College. Some of these young men have moved to other States and are winning laurels as teachers. Some of them are gaining fame as rising lawyers. Some have turned their talents to business, and are making elegant homes for their families. Some of the young ministers are at the Louisville Seminary, preparing to widen still further their spheres of usefulness.

There are now at Judson six young preachers. One of these will graduate at the coming commencement. He has already become most favorably known as an earnest, able preacher, and if God spares him, he will wield a powerful influence for good in his native section.

I do not know much of the work done here by those who preceded Brother J. B. Boone, but I do know that he did a great amount of good in his teaching. I have heard young preachers here speak of him as they would of a beloved father. His sacrifices for the good of those committed to his care, while here, are known above and will be jewels in his crown of rejoicing.

The future is known only to the All-Wise; but if he sees fit to allow Judson to go on increasing in usefulness, it will be impossible to calculate the vast benefit the institution will be to our people.

RICH'D H. LEWIS.

Hendersonville, Jan. 2, 1892.

"A Holy Life."

Guthrie illustrated the emptiness of a mere profession by the simile of a tree lying across the path, apparently a fair and mighty object, but the foot lightly placed upon it breaks through the bark and sinks down into the body, for insects and poisonous fungi have attacked the core and hollowed out the heart. "Take care," said he, "that your heart is not hollowed out, and nothing left but the crust and shell of empty profession." There are some who began the christian life full of warmth, ardor and zeal, who are still regular attendants at the religious services, but scarcely the fruit-bearing branches that witness nearness to the Master; it would be possible to live beneath their roof in a state of unconsciousness as to religious influences, which certainly ought not to be the case with any who name the name of Christ. Religion is not a matter for Sundays only, for outside respectability, or even a mere matter of subscriptions and religious work, but it is a vital every-day concern, affecting the heart. It is an easy thing, but a dangerous condition, for us to glide into the customary groove of attending meetings and performing good works, thereby increasing our responsibilities the more while our own souls are full of worldly tendrils. It has been truly said that it costs but little nowadays to multiply copies of the Bible in our homes; our personal concern must be that God's word is hidden within our hearts, and that is the rule and chart whereby we are steering the bark of our every day life, not only in perilous places when storms seem threatening, but when all around us things betoken fair weather and prosperity. —Quiver.

Graded Helps.

The arrangement of its Sunday-school literature by the American Baptist Publication Society is helpfully suggestive. Here we see six grades provided for—enough, but not too many, for any school that would do its work thoroughly and systematically. The provisions for each separate grade are full and, in every respect, complete. Primary, Intermediate, Advanced, Senior, Teacher, Superintendent—all are well equipped for the best work of which they are capable. It would seem impossible for any Sunday-school to use such helps and so arranged, without becoming itself better managed and more helpful to every individual connected with it. Give the Society's Helps a fair trial in your schools.

Let the Sun Shine.

The way to keep the Sabbath is not to sit around with a long face, trying to see how dismal you can make it for children and others who are naturally joyous, but make it the brightest and happiest day in all the week. No matter how thick and black the clouds are over head, make Sunday bright and cheerful in the home. Determine that you will rejoice in the Lord, though the heavens fall. Say with the psalmist, "I will bless the Lord at all times. His praise shall continually be in my mouth." If the devil can tempt you to make the Sabbath a cold, miserable, bleak and cheerless day at home, he won't care how happy you get at class meeting. It is the religion that shines at home that makes the devil gnash his teeth. If you haven't got that kind seek it till you find it.—Ram's Horn.

Should the farmer plant less acreage in cotton than heretofore? is a question now agitating the minds of farmers and others. The low price of the staple suggests the raising of home supplies by our farmers.

On the Increase.

As there are now so many good papers and Sunday-school Helps issued, the American Baptist Publication Society thought it possible that there might be a slight falling off in their circulation for January, 1892. They, therefore, on the 24th of December, compared the orders received up to that date for 1892 with the orders up to the same day last December for 1891 and report the following encouraging results. The increase in circulation up to that day for January, 1892, over January, 1891, for the different publications named below, is as follows:

Baptist Superintendent, increase,		1,000
Baptist Teacher	"	2,000
Senior Quarterly,	"	2,300
Advanced Quarterly,	"	16,500
Primary Quarterly,	"	5,500
Our Young People,	"	11,500
Young Reaper,	"	10,000
Sunlight,	"	12,300
Our Little Ones,	"	4,500

This is encouraging, and there is reason for expecting that this increase will be greatly enlarged.

Resolutions by Mt. Olivet Baptist Church.

Bro. J. W. Sledge, having resigned as pastor of this church, we offer the following resolutions of respect and appreciation to Bro. Sledge:

WHEREAS, Bro. Sledge has been our pastor five years. During the time, he missed only two appointments. He done a noble work among us for the blessed Master; baptized fifty-eight of our members, while many others have been led from darkness to light, and the church built up and strengthened. We as a church shall miss his guidance and love for the cause of our blessed Master. As individuals, we shall his visits to our homes. Whereas, his pastoral relations with the Mt. Olivet Baptist church are now at an end; therefore, be it Resolved 1. That we express to him our sincere regret in having to part with him.

2. That we tender to him our heartfelt thanks for his self-sacrificing labors and his consecrated life among us.

3. That we shall always look upon him as one of the best pastors the church ever had.

4. We will follow him with our prayers and gladly welcome him to our homes whenever he may find it convenient to visit us.

Programme for Western Union Raleigh Association.

This Union is to meet with Cary Baptist church on Friday before the fifth Sunday in January, 1892.

At 11 o'clock a. m., sermon by Rev. W. S. Olive.

Organization.

2 p. m. Should the churches of the Raleigh Association fellowship members who will not pay their just debts? Discussion to be led by brethren L. D. Baucom and Adolphus Hunter.

7 p. m., sermon by Rev. J. M. White.

Saturday, 9:30 a. m., devotional services.

10 a. m. Mission work in bounds of Raleigh Association. To be led by brethren N. B. Broughton and J. M. Beaty.

1:30 p. m. Experimental Sunday-school work. W. B. Upchurch, R. E. L. Yates and C. H. Utley.

Sunday, 9:30 a. m., Sunday-school, directed by Superintendent of the Sunday-school of Cary church.

11 a. m. Sermon by Rev. W. B. Morton.

It is earnestly requested that every church in the Western Section will be represented. It is important, as there is work to be done that concerns every church. Let every pastor having charges in this section come, and urge his churches to send with their delegates a liberal contribution for Associational Missions. We want full reports from all the Sunday-schools in our section.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

The place where the fire starts is generally well insured.

The cruiser "Raleigh" will be launched in a short time at Norfolk, Va.

Oak Ridge Institute moved into its new $12,000 building on the first of the year.

Labor agents are making a vigorous effort to carry laborers out of the State to the turpentine fields of Georgia.

The papers have it that Ex-President Cleaveland and his wife will visit friends in Wilmington at no distant date.

The National Bank of Newbern, said to be one of the soundest in the State, has declared its forty-fourth annual dividend.

Union county claims the finest court house in the State, and is going to make an effort to build a jail in keeping with it.

A fight in regard to liquor licenses has been going on between the county commissioners of Mecklenburg county and the Board of Aldermen of Charlotte.

Mr. Perrin Busbee, formerly of Raleigh, but late of Denver, Colorado, died at his home in the latter place a few days since. His remains were brought to Raleigh for interment.

Mt. Airy commenced the new year with a $100,000 fire. Many of the leading business houses were reduced to ashes. Several persons were injured. Most of the property was partly insured, and will be rebuilt in a few months.

General News.

Our new Secretary of War, Stephen B. Elkins, entered upon his labors on the first.

An effort is being made at the North to break up the cruel and unnatural sport of racing horses in the winter time.

Bishop Loughlin of Brooklyn, New York, one of the most prominent Catholics of this country, died recently at his home in New York.

The recent accident on the New York Central has caused the officials of that road to adopt the Block system of railroading. The change will cost over $1,000,000.

The fight between the United States and Chili seems to have amounted to nothing. Chili will unquestionably be willing to submit all questions of dispute to arbitration.

During the past two weeks more has been done to close up the most vicious dives of the city of New York than has been done heretofore in the past six months. Two of the most prominent places of amusement (?) have been closed and their proprietors locked up.

The death of Senator Plumb leaves Kansas almost without a representative in the Senate. Senator Peffer is a new man, and cannot be expected to secure for his State what she deserves at the hands of our lawmakers. Who is to take the place of Plumb it is hard to say. Bishop W. Preston, who has been appointed to take his place, is almost entirely without legislative experience.

We are a patient people—the ox is nowhere in comparison.

We buy lamp-chimneys by the dozen; they go on snapping and popping and flying in pieces; and we go on buying the very same chimneys year after year.

Our dealer is willing to sell us a chimney a week for every lamp we burn—a hundred or more a year—and we plow for him, pay him for goading us.

Macbeth's "pearl top" and "pearl glass" do not break from heat; they are made of tough glass.

As likely as not our dealer would rather his chimneys would break; "it's good for the business," says he. He buys the brittlest ones he can get.

"What are you going to do about it?"

RAND—SMITH—On December 22d, 1891, at the residence of the bride's father, in Greene county, by Rev. G. L. Finch, Mr. Walter Rand of Johnston county and Miss Delia Smith of Greene county.

DIED.

BEAM—The infant son of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Beam passed into eternity on November 9th, 1891, aged one month. The flower that blooms but for a day fulfills its mission, and though it leaves a vacancy, there still remains a fragrance. God plucked the little bud that it might bloom in his own garden above. "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord." B.

PHILLIPS—Mrs. S. A. Phillips of Fayetteville, after a long and severe sickness, died on November 29th, 1891. The writer knew her years ago as one of the most faithful and devoted members of the Fayetteville Baptist church, but had not heard of her death till recently informed of the same by her son, who is now in Raleigh. May God comfort the bereaved family. N. B. C.

BROOKS—On November 21st, 1891, Miss Hallie Brooks, only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Z. T. Brooks of Roxboro, N. C., departed this life, aged eighteen years. She died rejoicing in the hope of a Saviour's love. She was buried at Shiloh, the Primitive Baptist church near Daysville, Monday afternoon. Rev. A. N. Hall conducted the services. May God bless her father, mother and brother with grace to enable them to meet her in glory, and may the sweet and gentle influence of her life live on till time shall be no more.

J. A. B.

POOL—On November 21st, 1891, Bro. Dudley Pool departed this life, aged seventy-six years. He has left a life of suffering and sorrow, and is now enjoying eternal bliss in God's realm above. Bro. Pool was a great sufferer from rheumatism, but bore his affliction with christian fortitude. Though very feeble, the pastor seldom missed his familiar face in his accustomed seat. On the last Sunday before he died he was present at church, doing his duty as best he knew how. He is now with his dear wife, whom he so sorely missed, and by whose side he begged that his remains might be laid to rest "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

J. A. B.

WHITLEY—Sister Addie Perkins Whitley, wife of Bro. J. A. Whitley, and daughter of W. H. and Mary L. Perkins, was born in Pitt county October 22d, 1848; professed religion very young and united with the M. E. Church, South; was married the 16th of January, 1863, to J. A. Whitley, Esq., and died Dec. 8th, 1891, at her home near Everett's. A few years before her death she united with the Missionary Baptists, but never forgot that in the church of her parents she first found a christian home.

In all the relations of life, whether daughter, sister, wife, mother or friend, she was a genuine type of true womanhood. But it was as a christian her life was singularly beautiful. She abhorred that which was evil and cleaved to that which was good; was ever kind and true to all classes and conditions of humanity. She was diligent in business, fervent in spirit, and served faithfully the Lord. She rejoiced in hope, was patient in tribulation, instant in prayer, distributed to the necessity of saints, was given to hospitality, rejoiced with the joyful and wept with the sorrowful, looked diligently after the ways of her own household, and in everything showed herself a pattern of good works.

A disconsolate husband, three sons and three daughters, an aged mother, several brothers, besides other relatives and friends, mourn her demise, but sorrow not as those who have no hope.

Tributes of Respect.

The Sunday-school of Yeopim church passed the following resolutions upon the death of Bro. W. H. Jordan:—

WHEREAS, Bro. W. H. Jordan was accidentally shot and killed Nov. 25th, 1891, the Sunday-school at this place has lost one of its faithful workers and encouragers.

Resolved, That we express our heartfelt sorrow at his death, and bow humbly before an Alwise Brovidence.

2. That we extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathies in this sad bereavement.

3. That we ask the BIBLICAL RECORDER and Fisherman and Farmer to publish this.

Done by order of Yeopim Sunday-school, December 13th, 1891.

M. D. HARRIS,
Committee.

Why death, the inevitable visitor to all mortals, should lay his cold, icy fingers upon one who is in the bloom of youth, striving earnestly and diligently to equip himself for the duties of active, manly life, and claim him for the tomb, is difficult for human beings to reconcile with the infinite goodness and mercy of him who has power over the lives of men. But we know that the Supreme Ruler can make no mistakes and, when, in that wisdom which surpasses our conception, he takes from us one of our number, we should remember that "he doeth all things well," and in the depths of our hearts say, "Thy will be done."

On the morning of the sixth of December the soul of Josiah Gregory, tired of its earthly prison-house, winged its everlasting flight to the God who gave it, and left us to mourn and weep. But why should we weep?

"There is no death! what seems so is transition;
This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portal we call death."

During his short stay with us he was constant and diligent in his application to duty, honest and upright in his dealings with his fellow-students, and lived an exemplary christian life. Therefore, in respect to his memory, be it Resolved 1. That, as Philomathesians, we have lost a friend.

2. That, as Philomathesians, we have lost an earnest, active member.

3. That, as a Society, we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, to the Economist-Falcon, to the BIBLICAL RECORDER, to the Wake Forest Student, and a copy be spread upon the records of the Society.

5. That we wear the usual badge of mourning thirty days.

As You go Through Life.

Don't look for the flaws as you go thro' life;
And even when you find them,
It is wise and kind to be somewhat blind
And look for the virtues behind them.
For the cloud est night has a hint of light
Somewere in its shadows hiding;
It is better by far to hunt for a star
Than the spots on the sun abiding.

The current of life runs every way
To the bosom of God's great ocean;
Don't set your face against the river's course
And think to alter its motion.
Don't waste a curse on the universe
Remember it lived before you;
Don't butt at the story with your puny form—
But bend and let it go o'er you.

The world will never adjust itself
To suit your whims to the letter;
Some things must go wrong your whole life long,
And the sooner you know it the better.
It is folly to fight with the infinite,
And go under at last in the wrestle,
The wiser man shapes into God's wise plan
As the water shapes into a vessel.

Ned Hoyt's Luck.

"Lucky Ned Hoyt!" was the popular subriquet of the railway magnate.

"A man," his associates would tell you, "of only modern talents, born in poverty, with no family or social influence, yet he had mounted the ladder of success rapidly and steadily. Nothing to help him but luck, blind luck."

Let us look a little at the steps of this ladder up which Ned climbed so fast. He was the son of a poor woman, who gave him a few years' schooling and then found him a place as "elevator boy" in a hotel. Ned had one aim, to find work on a railroad, and there to make his way up. He stuck to that one idea, he never changed it, he never forgot it. The men who used the elevator daily found the boy always polite and eager to be of use. He became a favorite, especially with one, a station-master on a railway leading out of the city. To him Ned, choosing a moment when he was in good humor, frankly told his story and his hope. "Can you give me work?" he asked.

"Yes" the man said, "in the yard; but it will be hard and poor pay. Better stay where you are."

"You can never rise in an elevator—above the fifth story," retorted Ned, laughing.

He was set at handling freight on the platform. In a month he attracted the notice of all the men in the yard by his unfailing promptness, energy, and good humored courtesy. His eyes and ears were always open, and he was eager to learn the business and the methods of the road.

One day the freight master needed a temporary helper in his office, as one of the clerks was absent—suddenly ill. He applied to the yard-master for a substitute, "If you've got a wide awake young fellow, not afraid to work."

"Here's your man!" said the yard-master, tapping Ned on the back.

"What Luck Hoyt has!" said his companions as he went into the office.

At the end of the week the sick man returned, but Ned had made himself too useful to be dismissed from the office. A year later a small road applied to the larger one for a man competent to superintend its freight department. Nobody was surprised when Hoyt was chosen.

Ned threw himself into the interests of the new road with zeal, and introduced into its management the methods of the older systems. At last he saw an opportunity for a grand coup by which to insure the success of the road and his own as well. By building a short branch it would tap the trade of a productive region. He urged this action upon the directors; the road was built. In a few years two great railways saw the vast advantages held by the smaller line, and bid high for it against each other. The short road was at last incorporated in one of the larger ones, and Hoyt was taken into its board of management.

"Blind luck!" cried the men whom he had left behind.

But as years passed, and Hoyt, always cheerful, energetic and good-humored, steadily rose to the chief control of the road, never failing to see and secure and opening for its advancement or his own, his comrades began to suspect that there was some secret in his success other than that of luck.

Manners in Children.

Says Elizabeth Scovil in The Ladies' Home Journal:

"If we desire children to be courteous we must treat them with respect. They will infallibly copy our manners; so we must take care that they are the best. Let us be as careful of their feelings as we wish them to be of those of others. When it is necessary to administer reproof, let it be given in private. Many children are very sensitive on this point, and they feel acutely, although they cannot put their emotions with words. To tell a child in public that it has been rude, or lacking in good breeding, is as unpardonable as it would be to tell a guest so. If in no excuses to say that we are trying to teach it to do better; we can do this with [illegible] if we take it aside at the first [illegible] moment and gently point out [illegible] was and what should be [illegible] time."

Reading Aloud.

A PLEASANT FORM OF ENTERTAINMENT FOR THE HOME CIRCLE.

Really, it is hard to imagine any family, any band of friends, as complete without the habit of reading aloud. What more pleasant way of passing a winter evening by the fire, a summer afternoon under the trees, a rainy morning in the nursery, an otherwise irksome hour in the room of the convalescent? What a means of unifying family interest and sympathy and taste! It doesn't leave anybody out, as is the case when one most perforce sew, and another pores over an absorbing book, without so much as a word to throw a dog across its cover. Then it leads to discrimination in the choice of books. Trash that might be indulged in alone really seems too cheap to occupy a whole family. From the best stories, and these are many and priceless, the demand reaches out to biography, travel, history, poetry. It seems a delight to associate books with the places and companions where and with whom they were read. The interest of all combines to strengthen and sweeten ties and memories.

It is as well worth one's while to learn to read well as to sing well. Perhaps, in the long run, reading aloud goes even beyond music as a factor in the most delightful home life. Shuffling, stumbling, nasal reading is far from pleasure giving, and almost as bad as airish elocutionary efforts kept up by the hour. A simple, fluent, straightforward way of getting over the pages is the best, with a natural pitch of voice that comforts alike the reader's throat and the listener's ear.—Examiner.

A Great Fish.

Fish of such size that they can swallow a man whole, and which are so formed as to naturally swallow their prey whole, have been found in the Mediterranean. The white shark, having teeth merely incisive, have no choice except between swallowing its prey whole or cutting off a portion of it. It cannot hold its prey or swallow it piecemeal. Its voracity leads it to swallow at once all which it can. A natural historian of repute relates: "In 1758, in stormy weather, a sailer fell overboard from a frigate in the Mediterranean. A shark was close by, which, as he was swimming and crying for help, took him in his wide throat, so that he forthwith disappeared. Other sailors had leaped into the sloop to help their comrade while yet swimming; the Captain had a gun which stood on the deck discharged at the fish, which struck it so that it cast out the sailor which it had in its throat, who was taken up alive, and little injured, by the sloop which had come up. The fish was harpooned, taken up on the frigate and died. The Captain made a present of the fish to the sailor what, by God's providence, had been so wonderfully preserved. "The sailor went round Europe exhibiting it."—Pusey.

Electropoise. (TRADE MARK)

OFFICE OF YORK ENTERPRISE, YORKVILLE, S. C., Aug. 14, '91.

ATLANTIC ELECTROPOISE—Gentlemen: For the past five years my wife has been a sufferer from dyspepsia. So completely did the disease make a wreck of her former self that life was almost despaired of. Her nervous system was almost entirely destroyed, and the slightest noise would throw her into a nervous spasm, which would last for hours. Medical skill failed to bring any relief.

Through the recommendation of an eminent divine we were induced to try the Electropoise. After a persistent use of the instrument, the effect has been wonderful. Her nervous system has been restored to its almost normal condition; her digestion is wonderfully improved; she is rapidly gaining in flesh; and, upon the whole, is making a rapid recovery, which speaks volumes for the wonderful curative powers of the Electropoise, as her case was considered hopeless. If any are skeptical on the subject, let them try the Electropoise, and its wonderful powers will quickly dispel all doubt. Yours truly. W. M. PROPST.

COOPER'S MAMMOTH BRICK WAREHOUSE,

Henderson, N. C.

The unanimous verdict of its thousands of patrons is that the HIGHEST PRICES and BIGGEST AVERAGES are always obtained on its floors. I have just closed a most successful and satisfactory season, selling more pounds of tobacco and paying out

than in any previous year of the market's history; and enter upon the new crop year determined to labor even more industriously, if possible, for the welfare of my patrons than ever before. The Henderson market was never in better condition or its future more encouraging. The coming year promises to be the best we have ever had, and COOPER'S WAREHOUSE, which, as farmers know, has always held the best records for high prices, clever treatment and good accommodations, is strengthening itself with every sale. Ask your neighbor who has sold with us, and hear what he says.

With grateful acknowledgment I return thanks to my friends and customers who have so liberally extended to me their generous patronage for the past nineteen years, making COOPER'S not only the leading warehouse in this the leading Bright market, in number of pounds of farmers' tobacco sold and amount of money obtained therefor, but also the

LEADER IN PRICES.

I promise to show my appreciation of this confidence by ever striving to please; by renewing and increasing my best efforts to give entire satisfaction in the management, handling and selling of your tobacco.

Hoping to continue to serve my patrons, and to make many new ones during the season of 1891-'92, I remain, the farmers' friend,

BY JOHN W. MOORE, STATE HISTORIAN.

MEMOIR IV—REV. DANIEL MARSHALL.

CHAPTER TWO.

When the Rev. Daniel Marshall came to the conclusion that it was his duty to bear the glad tidings he had so recently accepted in all their fulness to the Mohawk Indians, he was living on his Connecticut farm. This plantation was so well stocked and so productive, that he and his family were in circumstances of great ease and comfort, so far as mere worldly prosperity was concerned. With a wife who returned all his overflowing affection, and three children, it would seem that a mighty conviction of duty must have lain at the bottom of the impulse that broke up all this beautiful home life of ease and comfort, to undertake the hard and perilous mission among the savages. Nothing could more forcibly demonstrate the zeal and unselfishness of the man. Like the Apostle Paul, he gave up all things in his devotion to what he felt called to do in the Lord's service. He had not become a Baptist in all his sentiments until he reached the little Baptist church in Opequon near Winchester in Virginia. This occurred in his forty-eighth year, so we see that he was almost an old man before he became fully identified with us as a denomination.

But though so late in reaching such conclusions, Mr. Marshall's subsequent course in life was to largely atone for all delay in the performance of so momentous a duty. It was so provided that in one of his missions in the Old Dominion, that he was so happy as to include Col. Samuel Harris among the number of his converts. This gentleman by his talents and social eminence had exerted great influence in Virginia, and a mighty stir was made in Episcopal circles by the news of his conversion and joining the Baptist church. Under the Royal Governor he had been appointed commander of one of the forts which were kept garrisoned at that day as a defence against the great northwestern tribes of Indians. Col. Harris at once resigned this and all other secular employments, and became a renowned and effective agent in the spread of Baptist principles. Perhaps not even the Rev. John Leland did more to make the State so great a center of Baptist influence. Mr. Marshall, with such a coadjutor, became mighty in the pulling down of strongholds. Over all that broad region south of James river, like Paul and Silas, these two evangelists pressed on in their work until scarce a man could be found who had not been warned and invited to accept of the terms of a salvation so sweeping and broadcast in its terms and limits.

It was all in vain that the authorities and adherents of the Established Church in Virginia sought to put a stop to such an evangel by invoking the aid of the legal authorities. They filled the loathsome jails with Baptist preachers on the false pretence that these ministers of peace and righteousness were disturbers of the public peace. Men who were so meek and gentle that they refused to resent the most wanton and inexcusable invasions on their personal rights, were held up to public scorn as malefactors for no other reason than their efforts to seek and to save perishing souls. It is one of the world's ablest epics to tell of what moral heroism these Baptist evangelists displayed in their battle with the intrenched hosts of the intolerant Churchmen. Even as late as that time, when James Madison had become a leader in public affairs in one of his letters we are told of how five blameless and eloquent men of God lay confined for tedious weeks in his vicinity simply because they had felt it their duty to preach the gospel of Christ as they believed it in their hearts and souls. It was all in vain that the statute of 1st William and Mary had proclaimed toleration to every part of the British Empire. These promoters of both the law and the gospel, on the false plea that the Baptist preachers were disturbers of the public peace, could find magistrates of their own faith who were wicked enough to thus violate laws both human and divine.

But in these, as in almost all other, instances of such oppression, the blood of the martyrs became the seed of the church. In spite of all the injustice and suffering undergone, the evangelists bore bravely on the Baptist banners until the persecuting Churchmen had but a pitiful remnant of the people left to do their bidding. The work thus bravely executed was also to be further blessed. It not only held the ground thus gained under suffering and tears; the great mind of Thomas Jefferson and that of his compeer Madison were to be not only enlisted for the defence of the Baptist people, but in due season to evolve from a study of their practice and principles the grandest features of our civil polity as a republic. Most emphatically in this way had the stone which was rejected by the builders, become the head of the corner."

When Mr. Marshall was ordained to the full gospel ministry by his brothers in law, the Rev. Messrs. Stearns and Ledbetter, he assumed the pastorate of the church on Abbott's Creek. While thus serving this flock as a special duty, he was also abundant and unceasing in his excursions to distant points to thus bear abroad the glad tiding of peace and love. This work had become as necessary to his peace of mind as the air he breathed. He could find no peace with the knowledge that men and women within reach were yet unblest with the knowledge of the Lord. He met no such stern antagonisms in North Carolina as were vouchsafed in Virginia and were to be encountered still later in his life in Georgia. Gov. Tryon and his subordinates in the Provincial Government were very harsh and unfeeling too often in their treatment of our people, but in religious matters he concerned himself no further than to do all he could toward saddling Episcopal rectors on communities that rarely wished for such gifts. In some of his letters he expressed great scorn for all people who were so besotted as to hold Baptist sentiments, but he had seen too much of the danger of his interfering with popular liberty in the stamp act trouble to venture on anything like religious persecution. It may be that the imprisonment of the Newbern Baptists had the officious countenance of the Governor, but if so, we now lack evidence of the fact. As a rule, religious liberty was ever the undisputed right of all North Carolina people without any regard to the nature of their creeds.

Thus abundant in labors and highly blessed in all that he undertook in the Lord's service, Mr. Marshall spent the term of his residence in the Old North State. He saw the feeble beginnings of his and Mr. Stearns' labors expand into the great historic body known as the Sandy Creek Baptist Association, and he heard many moving accounts of how under Burkitt and the New Light doctrines were prospering in the Albemarle region.

Mr. Marshall had but one son by his first wife, but being so unfortunate as to lose her, he married again in 1748 Miss Martha, a sister of the Rev. Shubal Stearns. This remarkable woman proved a rare blessing to her husband and all others who came within the magic spell of her personal influence. She was as famous as her husband for her zeal and devotion. With no disposition to usurp the religious functions peculiar to male members of orthodox christian churches, she could still on proper occasion melt the hearts of all who heard her in prayer and exhortation. Her oldest son, the Rev. Abraham Marshall, won a great place in the love and admiration of his countrymen for his piety and eloquence. With him and numerous other descendents around her, Mrs. Marshall survived to extreme old age.

In those pre-revolutionary days in our history as a people, there was no little talk and belief in the near approach of the millenium. At one period of his life Mr. Marshall was a firm adherent of this persuasion, which had originated in America just previous to the advent of John Wesley and George Whitfield. Multitudes were in daily expectation of the second coming of our Lord, and they produced a great awakening in the hearts of the people. The most careless and unbelieving, seeing such men as Daniel Marshall abandoning their comfortable homes and forsaking everything in the shape of property in their zeal for the cause, profoundly dreaded the possibility of such an event as that which was so confidently predicted. With the popular mind thus possessed with the possibility of such an event as the second coming of our Lord, it is not wonderful that multitudes to so impressed should have sought safety, both for soul and body, by making a full surrender of all their rebellious and sceptical promptings, and in seeking a part in the great atonement accomplished for all true believers on Calvary. When the times of such religious excitement over the expected coming of our Lord have passed by with nothing to justify such an expectation, it is too common for worldly people and too many professed christians to sneer at the credulity of such dupes, as they are called; but let all such remember that the Master himself declared that this momentous incident of the coming ages was to be as a thief in the night in the matter of its approach. Then let no man sneer at his brother for a mistake concerning this tremendous and uncertain event which so surely awaits its fulfilment somewhere in the coming years. If not even the angels can foretell that day and hour, it may be well pardoned in any human intelligence that it should be mistaken in surmises on this subject.

Mr. Daniel Marshall was not a Baptist when he indulged in his anticipations of our Lord's speedy coming again on earth. Laborious and useful years of service, both among his own countrymen and the heathen Mohawks, intervened between such an expectation and his acceptance of the truth as Baptists hold it. If he ever was vain and fantastic in this respect, it was before he became a member of the Virginia Baptist church. Let us remember, too, that if our Saviour had thus failed to realize the anticipations of his faithful servant, this disappointment worked no abatement in his zeal and devotion to the great work of deliverance from sin and of fealty to the Prince of Peace. Like a tireless and valiant soldier of the Cross, the Rev. Daniel Marshall became, if anything, more eager than ever to spend and be spent in the sacred work of human salvation.

It was thus that ere long Daniel Marshall was again found turning away from home and all its creature comforts to undergo hardships and sufferings in another missionary journey and settlement in the Province of Georgia. There selecting a home near what is now the city of Augusta, he resumed the work he had so successfully prosecuted in so many previous fields of labor. The same fervor of soul and pathetic eloquence were his as he implored his new neighbors to seek the salvation which was so free to all who will only open their sinful hearts for its entrance. The old man more eloquent and dauntless than ever paused never a moment in his work by reason of human obstacles. It was in vain that the civil and religious authorities of St. Paul's Parish procured his arrest and temporary imprisonment. Repeating Peter and John's reply to the Sanhedrim's command and enjoining their cessation of proclaiming the resurrection and ascension of our Lord, he told his tormentors that their orders for his silence in their bailiwick were impossible of being complied with on his part. That as the herald of our Lord's coming kingdom in their midst, his duties were of such a nature as to transcend and overshadow in importance all the laws and injunctions framed by human authorities. Not even when in the midst of the Revolution he fell captive to his British enemies, did his fortitude forsake him. Having asked and obtained permission of the officer in charge to speak and pray for these enemies of himself and his cherished American cause, he so impressed them that they at once gave him his liberty. Thus in faithful service to God and his fellowmen the good old man labored on in his mission until on the 2nd day of November, 1784, he rested from his long and useful career among men and went to receive the reward awaiting the redeemed.

The Sunday-school Problem.

The caption of this brief article may surprise some of your readers, and they say to themselves, "What, is the Sunday-school still a problem?" Let me check any feeling of surprise in the outset by saying that the problem here mentioned is not a problem concerning the Sunday-school as an institution, but concerning the management of the Sunday-school interests by the Baptist State Convention, or to make the statement a little broader, by the Baptists of North Carolina.

I think with this definition of my problem the most of my readers will agree that the Sunday-school interests of our denomination is quite a problem.

There can be no doubt that the Sunday-school work in our Convention has been, to use an expression of a friend interested on the subject, side-tracked for a great many years. It never has received the attention at the State Convention that its importance demands. It usually is put off till the last, or crowded in between other objects that overwhelm it. The Convention tries to atone for this in some measure by having what is called a Sunday-school mass-meeting on Sunday where the Convention is in session. And here let me ease my mind of a long pent up opinion about Sunday-school mass meetings. I think there is nothing which argues so strongly for the vitality, yea, I might almost say the divinity of the Sunday-school idea, as its ability to survive so many mass-meetings. Of all sanctimonious humbugs I know of none greater than the average Sunday-school mass-meeting. I have heard so much pious twaddle and consecrated platitudes gotten off at such meetings that I have several times felt that the name might be so as to leave off the "m." The children as a rule are bored, the Sunday-school workers are scored, while the patient public, who do not yield to the somnolent influences of such occasions and go to sleep, are surfeited with rehashed old sermons and pious nonsense until they scarcely want to hear talk of Sunday-schools for weeks to come. It is a wonderfully vital institution that can survive such afflictions and infections.

At the Associations the Sunday-school interests are treated about the same way. The subject usually comes up late on the last day of the meeting, when the delegates who have not gone home are so tired of discussing and arguing, that they could not listen with patience to Patrick Henry, were he present with all the eloquence of revolutionary days. The average Baptist Association is certainly one exemplification of "the patience of the saints." Thus you see both at the Convention and at the Associations the Sunday-school is snowed under or sidetracked.

How, then, is the problem to be solved? Some of our leaders in the denomination, and wise leaders, too, think they see the solution in a separate State Sunday-school Convention, with its own Board, to which is to be entrusted the management of the Sunday-school work. Then as constituents of the State Convention, the Associations are to be organized in the same way. That is to say, the Sunday-school Convention and the Sunday-school Associations are to be distinct from and independent of all church control. I for one am old fogy enough not to see in this movement the Eldorado of Sunday-school success that some of my brethren see. When this plan shall be thoroughly organized—which to my pessimistic temperament it don't seem likely to ever be—the millenium of Sunday-school prosperity will not then be ushered in. The plan of organizing the Sunday-school as a separate thing from the churches and the Convention of the churches, strikes my thick skull as being just a little dangerous in its tendency. Because if the Sunday-school Associations and Convention are to manage our interests, they will be managed in part by unconverted men and by Pedobaptist people too.

Any member of any Baptist Sunday-school within the bounds of an Association or Sunday-school Convention, whether converted or unconverted, Catholic, Infidel, or Jew, is eligible as a delegate to such Association or Convention; and if any Sunday-school were to elect a Pedobaptist who happened to be a member of the school, or an unconverted man, the Association or Convention, it seems to me would not have the right to reject him. As a case in point, when the Anson Sunday-school Association met in Wadesboro, there were several Pedobaptist members, because the delegation was chosen by the Sunday school and not by the church.

Then, besides, I do not see how, with all our other denominational meetings, we can afford the time for holding Sunday school Associations and Conventions. We have the State Conventions annually, also our Associations. Then our Union Meetings every fifth Sunday. When can we find time for all these meetings? And besides this there will be constant friction about the prerogatives of these meetings. It will be a constant question as to what relation these distinct Sunday-school meetings have to the Convention and District Associations. You may say they are to be subordinate to the State Convention and the regular Associations. But that depends. How can one independent body dictate to another independent and distinct body?

But this is all "destructive criticism," and why pull down without putting up something in its place? Well, I, like every other of the 200,000 white Baptists in the State have a plan. Did you ever see one that did not have a plan? My plan is this: Don't separate the Sunday-school Board from the Board of Missions. If the Corresponding Secretary of the Mission Board cannot attend to both departments, then give him an assistant to manage the Sunday-school department. And instead of spending his time in organizing Sunday-school Associations, let him give his attention to organizing new Sunday-schools and strengthening old ones and holding Sunday school institutes. Let him press the missionary feature of the Sunday-school work, and work in the financial feature as a subordinate consideration. But let him be a regular commercial drummer for the Supply Store. Then in each District Association let one whole day be given to the discussion of Sunday-schools. Let it not be the first day nor the last day, but one of the best days right in the middle of the meeting. And let the executive committee arrange and publish a program, with speakers on each topic announced, of course giving the secretary or agent of this work a place on the program. And let this program be published in time for the speakers to make preparation.

Then the same plan may be pursued at the State Convention. Take a whole day for considering the Sunday-school work, and let a regular program be published in advance by the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools. It seems to me that the ends may be accomplished far better than in separate Sunday-school organization. And thus instead of considering the Sunday-school interests at the fag end of the Convention and imposing on a patient community the terrible ordeal of a Sunday-school mass meeting on Sunday, these interests will have their proper attention in the proper time. Yours very amiably,

A. W. PRICE.

A World of Opportunity.

However a man is gifted, whether for active enterprise or for thought, or for charity, there lies around him a world of opportunity. So far behind are we socially, morally, intellectually, that one might be forgiven if he supposed the world were made but yesterday, and nothing yet had been done. Does no ambition fire us to help the despairing, starving, sinking people around us? If a few more years be added to our life, would we not strive to put something right, to sweep out some little corner, to awaken some soul to see and rejoice in the growing light.—Good Words.

Kindness in woman, not her beauteous looks, shall win my love.—Shakespeare.

The Fife Meeting in Oxford.

When it was known that Evangelist W. P. Fife was coming to Oxford to hold a meeting, many christians regretted his coming. From what they had heard, they were afraid of the man and his methods. But as he had been invited alone by unconverted people, christians could not afford to stand aloof. They felt it their duty to get all the good they could from the meeting for the town. As soon as they began to attend the meetings, their prejudices began to melt away. They found that they had formed wrong opinions about the evangelist and his work.

Mr. Fife could not be classed among those who are commonly called great preachers. He would hardly reach mediocrity in the usual sense of greatness. But for clear views of the simple teachings of God's word, and for ability to present these truths simply, clearly, pointedly and effectively to the people, in this sense he is a great preacher.

An intelligent lady said to a friend in my hearing: "You ought to go and hear Mr. Fife. He makes things so plain. Many things about the Bible I never understood before are now clear to me."

Most of his public discourses are Bible readings, made very impressive and instructive by a few explanatory and applying remarks. He is an intensely earnest preacher. His preaching cannot fail to do much good.

As to Mr. Fife's methods, I could not say they are faultless. But there is as little, possibly less to object to, than in the methods of any other conductor of extensive revivals I have heard. He spent the first four days of the meeting laboring to get christians right with God and their fellow beings. I think it was the fifth day when he first asked for penitents and professions of faith. He said no solid work could be done until christians got right. Mr. Fife warned people not to make false professions of faith. Following his teachings and invitations, no one had reason to make a mistake in regard to their conversion.

But there was trouble along this line, not with Mr. Fife, but with some of his imprudent workers. He insisted on every christian working among the impenitent. Some of these workers were so ignorant themselves as to think that all a penitent had to do in order to become a christian was simply to make up their minds to do better and go and give the preacher their hand. I heard some of these workers thus teaching penitents. I was shocked.

If this article should come to the notice of Bro. Fife, I would kindly suggest to him the propriety of lecturing his workers on the subject of how to work among penitents. Untold damage is done in nearly all revival meetings by ignorant, imprudent workers.

Bro. Fife insisted on every one having a Bible and carrying it to church. It was a beautiful sight to see five hundred or a thousand Bibles in the hands of worshippers. Many precious truths were gathered as we studied this blessed Book together. Our service of the meeting would have been more satisfactory to many if Bibles had have been opened, and 1 Cor. 14: 34, 35, and 1 Tim. 2: 11, 12 had been silently read.

But there were so many good things in the meeting that it is hard to look long at the few objectionable things.

I could fill column after column about this precious meeting. But one thing more must suffice.

Many speakers and writers about this meeting have emphasized the statement that "All denominational lines seemed to be obliterated." These lines were not obliterated. They were not drawn. They did not appear. There was no need for them. Mr. Fife came among us with Bible in hand to accomplish one object—one only; that was to lead sinners to embrace Christ. In this one work christians of every name united with him. It was common ground on which we could meet and work. As christians, we were drawn more closely and lovingly together than ever before. I rejoice in this. But I, for one, "obliterated no denominational line." I compromised no Bible principle. I could not do it under the teaching of Fife. He insisted that only young converts, but old ones too, should take the Bible, and the Bible alone, as their guide in all things. He has caused me to love my Bible better than ever before. I have come out of the meeting, I trust, a better christian, and certainly no less a Baptist than before. If I follow the Bible alone, as he tells me to do, I am obliged to be a Baptist.

God bless Bro. Fife, and make him a power for good wherever he goes.

J. A. STRADLEY.

Nothing can produce so great a serenity of life as a mind free from guilt, and kept untainted, not only from actions, but purposes that are wicked. By this means the soul will be not only unpolluted, but not disturbed; the fountain will run clear and unsullied, and the streams that flow from it will be just and honest deeds, ecstacies of satisfaction, a brisk energy of spirit, which makes a man an enthusiast in his joy, and a tenacious memory sweeter than hope. For as shrubs which are cut down with the morning dew upon them do for a long time after retain their fragrancy, so the good actions of a wise man perfume his mind, and leave a rich scene behind them. So that joy is, as it were, watered with these remembrances, and owes its flourishing to them.—Plutarch.

BRO. DUNCAN MCNEIL, of Richmond county, will represent the BIBLICAL RECORDER in the counties of Richmond, Anson, Montgomery, Robeson, Columbus, Brunswick and Bladen.

"Let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home; for it is a shame for women to speak in the church. Let the women learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence. For Adam was first formed, then Eve. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being decived was in the transgression. If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord."—New Testament.

"For what if some did not believe, ('the oracles of God'), shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect? God forbid; yea, let God be true, but every man a liar."—Romans 3.

"Let the women preach, no matter what Paul says."—Sam Jones, Methodist.

"Women might, could, would, and should preach the gospel if they want to."—J. P. Landis, Methodist Ecumenical Council.

CENTENNIAL OF MISSIONS.

The report of the committee on Missionary Centennial, made at the last Southern Baptist Convention, embodied the following recommendations:—

"First. That the deliverance of the Convention, given in section five of the report of the committee at Fort Worth, in favor of putting one hundred new missionaries in the field as a memorial of the centennial of modern missions, be carried out, and that vigorous efforts be promptly made to increase the contributions to our Boards to enable them to make these appointments. We believe that the one hundred missionaries will offer themselves, and that our people will furnish the means to support them; but to secure this last there is need of a campaign of education which will be begun at once and vigorously pushed.

Second. That the committee on nominations be instructed to name, for each State represented in the Convention, a brother who, with the Vice Presidents of the Home and Foreign Mission Boards, shall constitute a State Centennial Committee, charged with the duty of arranging and holding, at suitable points in the State, missionary meetings for the purpose of imparting information, arousing zeal, and encouraging systematic giving by the churches, Sunday-schools and missionary societies.

Third. That all District Associations be requested to provide during their next session for some presentation of the results of missions during the past one hundred years, and of the obligations which the present state of the work imposes.

Fourth. That our denominational papers be respectfully urged to keep this subject before their readers, and use their best endeavors to secure the results sought.

Fifth. That your committee be authorized, in conference with the brethren in the North and in Canada, to arrange proper centennial celebrations in 1892, providing programs, and whatever else may be needed to make the occasion all that is desired.

Sixth. That the committee to whom this work is intrusted be directed to go to Cincinnati to confer with the Northern and Canadian brethren, at the approaching anniversaries, to carry out the purposes above set forth."

The report containing these recommendations was signed by Drs. T. T. Eaton, T. H. Pritchard, H. H. Harris and F. M. Ellis. Drs. T. H. Pritchard, A. G. McManaway and Rev. R. VanDeventer constitute our State committee on the centennial of missions. This is a competent committee, and we hope that they will at once devise ways and means to carry out the recommendations of the Convention. Our people all over the State need stirring up on the great work of missions. Any service the RECORDER can render by way of aiding these brethren and furthering the interests of this great work, will be cheerfully rendered. [illegible] at your service, brethren; our columns are open to you.

[illegible] celebration the [illegible] of Modern Missions" simply [illegible] work assumed more definitely [illegible] shape under the leadership of our Baptist fathers in England one hundred years ago.

Shortly after his ordination in England, in the year 1785, Wm. Carey commenced agitating the subject of preaching the gospel to the heathen. His pleas at first received but little attention. He persevered, and the sermon preached by him at his Association May 1st, 1792, from Isaiah 54: 2, 3, produced such an impression that it was soon followed by the organization of the first Baptist Missionary Society of modern times in the parlor of the widow Wallis Oct. 2d, 1792. In April, 1793, Carey and Thomas left England for India, thus commencing the active work of modern missions. The success of Carey and his colleagues in India, and the discussion caused by his work gradually interested the British public and the American people in the foreign mission work. One by one, different denominations in England and America have taken hold of this work, until now scarcely any denomination of influence in the Old or New World can be found which is not actively engaged in it.

The fact is well established that the Baptists more than any other people are the pioneers of modern missions. It is true that there was more or less "mission work before Carey." The Moravians attempted the continuance of mission work in Greenland commenced by Hans Egede, as early as 1733. They also prosecuted the same work successfully in St. Thomas, one of the West India Group, through Leonard Dober and Tobias Leopold in 1732. Some rather desultory mission work was attempted in Brazil as early as 1555, and more successful work among the American Indians as early as 1645 by John Elliott; and fifty five years before Carey was born the same work was attempted in India by Zigenbalg. When Carey and Thomas went to India there was, after all, but a small fraction of the heathen world that had been converted to Christ. And it is not to be forgotten that much of the mission work before Carey was the outcome of the attempt on the part of those who sent the missionaries to preach to the colonists they had sent out more than to the heathen.

While we ascribe to others, then, what is due for mission work, we can thank God that he has highly honored our people by giving them such a conspicuous place in the active work of modern missions. Let us be true to our trust! And we have great cause for rejoicing in the fact that our missions are remarkably successful, considering the number of men and the amount of money we are expending in the work. The desire of the brethren comprising the Southern Baptist Convention to unite with our Northern and Canadian brethren in the celebration of the Centennial of Missions is a laudable one. Our plan to send one hundred new missionaries to the foreign field during the year is in the line of Carey's great sermon on "Expect great things from God, and attempt great things for God." We hope all committees appointed to push the work in our Associations will take hold of it with the earnestness its importance demands. It is quite important to get our people thoroughly aroused. This can only be done by faithful and energetic home and local work.

Let our churches be flooded with missionary literature. Let the Associations appoint, as most of them have done, an extra day for missions at their sessions next year. In the meantime let all of our pastors have several missionary meetings in their churches at times before the meetings of the Associations next fall. It would be well for them to "read up" on missions, and thus be prepared to instruct their people. The RECORDER has much news in this line. The Foreign Mission Journal also gives much useful information. Valuable tracts on the work can be procured by writing to Miss A. E. Armstrong, Baltimore, Md., or to the Publication Society at Philadelphia. A short biographical sketch of the life of each one of our present missionaries in book or pamphlet form would find a ready sale among our people; and a group of their photographs, properly framed, would also be in ready demand. We simply throw out these hints for what they are worth.

But above all, our people need to have a deep and abiding faith in the scripturalness of this work, and that it is not built on sentiment nor properly sustained by spasmodic appeals to our great Baptist constituency, but one that is near their hearts as it was near the heart of the Divine Master and his apostles. "We need an abiding conviction that no servant of Christ is exempt from the scope of the great command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel unto every creature."

REV. J. B. BOONE of Raleigh occupied the pulpit of the First church, Durham, and Rev. J. L. White preached for the First church, Asheville, N. C., on Sunday last.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

GREENSBORO, N. C.

I always find Bro. Wingate ready to aid me to renew old subscribers and get new ones for the RECORDER. He does it, too, so freely and cheerfully that you almost feel you have done him a real kindness. He is just completing an elegant residence on main street. When completed it will be an ornament to the town as well as a complete and comfortable home for him and his family.

I spent a night pleasantly with Bro. R. W. Brooks. He was one of Bro. Gwaltney's right-hand men, and now holds the same position for Bro. Wingate. He possesses the happy faculty of keeping in a good humor, and has no idea of expiring before his time comes. He says "hard times" is no new visitor to him; he has had that; but along with it many good things from his earliest boyhood, and among them the BIBLICAL RECORDER, which he loves and appreciates more and more as the years go by.

From Greensboro you can go almost anywhere—East, West, North or South. Or you may split the difference, as I did, between North and West, and go to Madison. You reach this town by a branch of the C. F. & Y. V. Railroad. I got there late in the afternoon, and reached the home of Bro. W. H. Wilson just in time to see him fasten the last buckle of his harness to start for his church, twelve miles in the country. Bro. Wilson built his house a mile from town on a beautiful site, and raises pigs, chickens and turkeys, in fact plenty of provisions for the support of his family. Sister Wilson was glad I came, for that kept the bishop at home till next day. This arrangement also enabled me to do my work in the town, and next day I was ready to take a place along with the preacher to his appointment at Providence church. Madison is supported by a good leaf tobacco market, and the stores seem to be doing a fair business.

I wondered after passing over a good portion of the fine farming section near Madison that it was not larger and more prosperous than it is.

Saturday morning at day-break we were on the road, which was a rough one from the first to the last. And not only was the road rough, but Bro. Wilson visits his people on his way to and from his churches, so when we reached the church we found that our start was none too early, for the brethren were already waiting for the preacher. But the brethren of a country church are not such close calculators of time, and are content to wait a few moments if the preacher happens to be a few moments behind. It is a relief sometimes to attend a church where there is no bell to be rung before preaching, and where there is no church etiquette to be observed after the congregation is dismissed.

As many as possible of our Associations ought to be held with country churches. There is always a spirit of friendliness and good humor at a dinner in a grove, and besides it affords a good opportunity to talk with brethren about the different interests of the Association.

Bro. D. F. King hearing I was at Providence, came over on Sunday and carried me to his home in Leaksville, which was my objective point. I spent two days here.

Leaksville is not very easy of access, but its a good place to stay when you do get there. I have not found better people anywhere in the State. The Baptists are growing stronger and more aggressive here year by year. The Baptist church is a beauty, a model for neatness and comfort. I wonder that they should not have a pastor.

Profs. B. W. Ray and Betts are having fine success in their school. They are both Wake Forest boys, and are good, honest, earnest workers.

Among the pleasing incidents to my visit here was the renewing of most of our old subscribers and the adding of twelve new names to the list. My nights were spent in the splendid home of Bro. D. F. King, and no one spending one night, much less two, in this elegant mansion would feel at all inclined to shake the dust from off his feet.

Getting on a buggy drawn by the highest-headed horse I have ever yet seen, I drove fourteen miles through the country. He was a gray, and not prematurely gray either. Among my first thoughts on encountering this "star gazer" was to find out which side he was on in the "late unpleasantness," for he had evidently "sniffed the battle," whither there or elsewhere. In awful contrast with the highness of the horse's head was the crookedness of his back. It was fearful, painful to look on. I asked the driver how he explained this horrible deformity. He answered very promptly, "He was rid too soon." I suppose this was in all probability true, and is if not just as true that men may impair and dwarf their usefulness by trying to do things for which they are not prepared? The young man who has it in his power to complete his education, but gets uneasy that the world will stop unless he gets on, will make a far greater mistake than was made in riding a colt too young.

I stopped in Reidsville but a short while, but long enough to learn from the brethren that they were delighted with Bro. Howard, their new pastor. I looked in upon him for a few moments. His house has been handsomely furnished by the sisters of the Baptist church. Preacher and people seem to be thoroughly in love with one another, and are looking for good work to be done in the church.

....Rev. N. S. Jones of Salisbury writes that he has been very sick for several days, but is now a little better. Bro. Jones has moved into the new parsonage, which is very comfortable and conveniently arranged.

... Rev. L. C. Brickhouse has removed from Cricket Hill, Va., to Sandy Bottom, Middlesex county, Va. He is pastor of three good churches. For three years he has been the acceptable pastor of two of these churches.

....Bro. J. C. Meekins of Columbia, Tyrrell county, N. C., and Miss E. B. Sanderson of Letohatchie, Ala., were married on January 3d. Bro. Meekins and bride spent a day in Raleigh last week on their trip home.

....Rev. Dr. J. J. Smith of London, England, sends us a copy of Rev. William Carey's celebrated pamphlet, "An Enquiry into the Obligations of Christians to use means for the Conversion of the Heathen." This is a remarkable book and will do much good this Centennial year of Foreign Missions. We thank Bro. Smith for reproducing the pamphlet as well as for sending us a copy.

....Rev. J. A. Campbell of Poe's, N. C., writes: "The Little River was asked to raise twenty-five dollars for Havana house. I send by this mail for that object from our churches, $28.50. Our churches are generally doing very well."

....Rev. F. H. Poston reached Smithfield, N. C., on the last of December and entered upon his work as pastor. He is delighted with the good brethren and sisters of Smithfield, and is specially so to get back to his native State.

....Rev. J. L. White of Durham, N. C., says: "Allow me to congratulate you upon your last year's work as editor of the RECORDER, and wish for you still greater usefulness in the years to come. Everything is pleasant with us except grippe."

....Sister N. H Blackwood removed from Chapel Hill, N. C., to Knoxville, Tenn., last fall, and in renewing her subscription, writes: "I am well pleased with my new home and the good people of Knoxville. I am delighted with our good pastor, Bro. Jones."

....Rev. W. H. H. Lawhon of Carthage was too sick to fill his appointment on the first Sunday in January, but is now better. His family have all been down with the grippe, and his father, who is now eighty-nine years old, is not expected to live many days longer.

....Rev. W. B. Morton will spend a month or two at Wake Forest. He decides that the pastorate is his life's work, and therefore declines to enter the Secretaryship of the Sunday-school and Colportage Department of the North Carolina Baptist State Convention.

....Read Bro. R. D. Carroll's letter from Louisville, Ky. The "Rev." Harrison Blankenship, the State Chronicle and other Pedobaptist papers have made such a fuss about, is, or rather was, a most unworthy and insignificant member of the Hardshell or Anti-missionary or Omissiomary denomination.

....Rev. Josiah Elliott of Hertford, the beloved disciple of his section, has been quite sick for some weeks. It is very hard for a man who is pastor of six churches, and who lives that he may preach to the people, to find time to be sick; but like Dr. Overby, Bro. Elliott, will find even sickness a blessing.

....Bev. P. S. C. Davis of Shiloh, N. C., writes: "I am glad to say that I am back in old North Carolina to stay. I am thinking of trying to build a memorial church at Shiloh, being the first Baptist church of North Carolina. What think you? A very large per cent. of the people are sick with the grippe. It is distressing."

....Rev. A. D. Hunter of Greenville, N. C, writes joyously of his work. He has baptized two or three times recently. His church gave him a liberal pounding during the holidays, and they have secured one of the most successful and accomplished lady teachers in North Carolina to manage a female school for Greenville.

....Rev. M. V. McDuffie of New Brunswick, N. J., writes: "I am kept exceedingly busy these days. La grippe has prostrated this community, and the physicians, the preachers and the undertakers are kept very busy day and night. We hope the worst is over. My work is prospering. Success to the RECORDER in the year '92."

....We owe a special vote of thanks to two Doctors—Dr. A. M. Baldwin of Wilmington, N. C., and Dr. C. Winston of Franklinton, N. C. They are among the best friends the RECORDER has in North Carolina, and keep up the largest lists of subscribers on our books. We wish there were just one such brother in each church in North Carolina.

....A Goodwin(d) in Richmond is ringing our Foreign Mission Bell. The wind is cold, blinding and withering; the Bell clear, piercing and hope-inspiring. The wind will soon spend itself, the Bell will continue ringing out to delighted ears. The final consensus, doubtless, as of old, will be, "the Lord was not in the wind," though some may sa good wi(n)l come out of this discussion.—G. Durham.

...."Our missionaries to the heathen must be men of great piety, prudence, courage and forbearance; of undoubted orthodoxy in their sentiments, and must enter with all their hearts into the spirit of their mission; they must be willing to leave all comforts of life behind them, and to encounter all the hardships of a torrid or a frigid climate, an uncomfortable manner of living, and every other inconvenience that can attend this undertaking."—William Carey, 1792.

....Rev. J. B. Harrell of Elizabeth City writes: "Please allow me to wish for you a happy new year, and for the RECORDER greater success this year than ever before. My work seems to be progressing finely. I think my churches are in better condition than when I took hold a year ago, for which I thank the Lord and take courage. I had the pleasure of hearing Bro. Thomas last Sunday night. His subject was 'Dram Drinking,' which was the first of a series he proposes to preach on social vices. It was an able discussion of this great evil, strong enough it seemed to me to convince every one who heard it."

....Rev. H. M. Croom writes: "We have just closed a meeting of several days at our church at Globe. Much interest was manifested. I thought at times that it was very nearly universal. There were nine professions; six additions, baptized yesterday. I expect to baptize at our next meeting. I have not yet had occasion to regret coming to Globe. I still think that I have one of the best fields to work in, some of the best members to work with. I see a great need of workers in this Association. Outside of my pastoral work at Globe, I am engaged in general mission work in the bounds of this Association."

.....A good sister of Lillesville, N. C., writes in reply to the notice that her subscription had expired as follows: "I am glad you wrote for the money due you, and I wish you had abused me a little for neglecting it so long. The only excuse I have to offer is that attending to business matters is a new experience to me, and I do not know how to accustom myself to it. I am glad to be able to renew my subscription, for I should feel lost without your paper. It is the most entertaining visitor I have, and I wish it an extended circulation for your sake and for the sake of those who are privileged to read it." Did you feel that way when you received the notice sent you? If not, why not?

.....Mrs. Mary Broughton died at the residence of her daughter on Friday last. She was in her 79th year. Seven children survive her, four sons (among them our brethren N. B. and J. M. Broughton of this city) and three daughters. She was one of the original ten members who first constituted the Second Baptist church of this city, now the Baptist Tabernacle. She is the first of the original ten who has been called to her reward. Hers was a sweet christian life, and her influence will long be felt in this community. A disciple of Christ sixty-five years, a widow more than thirty-eight years, indomitable in her motherly struggles, her influence survives in her children, who are all christians and useful members of society. The funeral services were conducted on Saturday afternoon by her pastor, Doctor Hall, aided by Drs. Carter and Skinner, and was largely attended.

.....The last number of the BIBLICAL RECORDER contained a manly and courteous article from Dr. Fleming in reply to Dr. Black. As my name is mentioned it is right that I should put a few facts on record: I have never asked nor approved an appropriation to an orphan house by the State. Mr. Frank Grainger and Gen. W. R. Cox, two wise and good men, desired the appropriation. Under all the circumstancies I felt it my duty to acquiesce. The first resolution appropriated $3,000; the second added $2,000, making $5,000 a year. After I left $5,000 more were added to the annual appropriation. I desire that the religious denominations should take charge of the orphans. I still think it their duty. I tried in vain to induce our largest Association to begin the work. I then tried the Masons. They can care for the bodies and minds. But the denominations can care for the souls. I belive in masonry when it helps—not when it hinders religion.—J. H. Mills, in Charity and Children.

Letter from Wake Forest College.

Swiftly and pleasantly have the weeks of the Fall Term passed away, and now we are almost at its end. Despite the reign of La Grippe, examinations are in full blast. The epidemic has caused some interruption in the work of professors and students, but there is reason to believe that it has spent its force. The sick are all better, and there are few new cases.

The Spring Term opens on Friday, Jan. 15th, and all classes will be regularly at work on that day. Young men who can enter classes already formed will find this an excellent time for beginning work in college. No new classes will be formed, but in some departments new subjects and text books will be taken up. I know of several students who expect to come this week or next week. The great scarcity of money will hinder some who are very anxious to be with us. On the other hand, I know of some who are made all the more desirous for thorough education by the great depression in agricultural and mercantile pursuits. And they are right in their reasoning. As I follow with unabated interest the careers of the hundreds of young men who have been students of the College during the last twenty years, and see the success in life and prosperity of the great majority of them, I have an object-lesson which proves in a practical and most conclusive manner the money value of collegiate training. Yet this is but the lowest value. The higher and more enduring value, also, I can see abundantly illustrated in the broadened and energized manhood and the large usefulness of many scores of our old students.

This reminds me of the General Catalogue of the College, on which I have for four or five months expended every spare moment I could obtain. Had I known beforehand the magnitude of the work, I am not sure that I should have had the courage to undertake it. Most heartily do I thank all who have aided me by filling out my widely distributed blanks. I am using every endeavor to get a record of the post student life of every man who has ever been here. Please continue, brethren, to help men in this. Many names will, after all, be left without any record. But it shall be no fault of mine.

How natural it will seem to have Bro. F. P. Hobgood again at the head of the Oxford Female Seminary! With long and successful experience as an educator of young women, in the prime of manhood and in vigorous health, he enters afresh a position in which he has already achieved an enviable reputation. Oxford now has such excellent railroad facilities, that a large patronage from southern Virginia as well as from central Carolina may be looked for.

Resolutions by Mt. Zion Baptist Church.

WHEREAS, Rev. F. H. Poston has served us faithfully as pastor for the past four years; and whereas, he deems it his duty not to accept our call, but has this day tendered his resignation; therefore,

Resolved, That we deeply regret our brother's leaving us; that the relation between pastor and church has been exceedingly pleasant, and that we commend Bro. Poston to any church or churches in want of a good pastor and preacher.

Done in conference and signed by order of the same. B. H. MYERS, Clerk.

Havana House and State Missions.

More and more are we impressed that the facts in our work being fully understood, the pastors and churches can be relied on, in evey imergency, to do the wise and liberal things in our denominational plans. Whenever the good judgment of our people approve the work undertaken, there is hearty co-operation and success in its execution.

THE HAVANA HOUSE,

as the Convention at Goldsboro saw, was to be paid for by the Southern Baptists through our Home Mission Board, as speadily as possible. Hence they unanimously said the $5,000 promised by the former Convention should be raised. We knew this meant hard work and real sacrifices on the part of many of our people. But when we saw, as we did on that occasion, so many of the pastors and brethren pledge themselves to aid in this work till the $5,000 should be secured, we felt there would be a speady success. The facts have not disappointed our expectations. The Treasurer's report in this paper shows that he has already received for this house, $2,613 93. This is $113 93 more than one half the full amount to be secured by us and yet not one-third of the churches have been heard from. Then, too, among those churches where collections have been taken, there are subscriptions which, it is hoped, will be paid and forwarded to the Treasurer soon. In some Associations nothing has been done. Other objects were being pressed on the attention of the churches, and hence the necessary delay in this work.

The Home Mission Board at Atlanta needed, and felt it ought to have, by Dec. 23rd, 1891, $3,000 of North Carolina's quota for the Havana house. The facts were all put before us by Dr. Tichenor, the wise and energetic Secretary, and our Treasurer arraged for him to have that amount at that time. Before the 23rd, of January, it is confidently believed, our Treasurer will have received the $3,000 paid to Dr. Tichenor on Dec. 23rd. On the other we can have till 20th of next March. The churches have done well wherever they have been informed about this work and have had an opportunity to contribute to it. We wish to thank, most sincerely, both pastors and churches for what they have done. The success already reached only increases our anxiety that the pastors and churches, where collections for this object have not been taken, attend to this work—do whatever can be done—as speadily as possible.

Please remember all amounts for Havana house should be in the hands of our Treasurer, J. D. Boushall, Raleigh, by the 20th of next March. Let us finish up this work by that date.

FOR MANY YEARS

the missionaries, in our State department have been paid in full on the past year's work before Jan. 1st of the new year. This year, under the circumstances, we could not do so well. Had the collections for the Havana house been placed on some other than the Corresponding Secretary by the Convention at Goldsboro, it is reasonably certain that every dollar due the missionaries in the State department would have been paid them by 1st of January. We are still due on last year's State Mission work more than one thousand dollars. There has been sent to the Treasurer, since his report to the last Convention was closed, on the $1,800 then due our missionaries, only $719.90 More than two thirds of the amount pledged in the Convention for this object has not yet been sent to the Treasurer. In the next thirty days we whish to pay every dollar due these missionaries. We shall look to those who so kindly aided us in pledges at Goldsboro, to aid us now to pay these brethren. We ask all, who can and will, to aid us at once to pay these brethren, who so much need the amounts due.

SINCE THE GOLDSBORO CONVENTION

six new churches have been organized, five new houses of worship finished, and three new houses of worship dedicated; and most commendable activity and progress in this entire department have been reported from all sections of the State. C. DURHAM

Murfreesboro Items.

At last, after many years' talk and planning, we are connected with the outside world by rail. The road is six and one half miles long to Pendleton on the Roanoke and Tar River road, which makes close connection with the Seaboard Air Line at Boykin's, Va. The first train came in December 23d to take out the girls who were going home to spend the holidays. We now have three trains a day each way, all of them making close connection with the Seaboard Air Line. Thus we have all the advantage we would have if we were on the main line, and passengers can leave Morehead City, Wilmington, Fayetteville, Charlotte, Greensboro, and Danville, Va., in the morning and reach Murfreesboro at 5:33 p. m. the same day.

The next meeting of the Bertie Union will be with St. John's church in this county. Not meaning to be boastful, we claim to have the best Union Meeting in the State. A full delegation from the churches, and nearly all the pastor in the West Chowan Association, will be present, and live interesting questions will be discussed.

Come down, Mr. Editor, and see for yourself. The West Chowan believe in the RECORDER, and you will receive a hearty welcome.

The many friends of Rev. T. G. Wood will be glad to learn that he is fast recovering from the grippe. He is one of the most useful ministers in this section and is doing a good work for the Master.

The Spring session of C. B. F. Institute opens Wednesday Jan. 20th. Several new pupils will enter then. H.

Important Letter from Judge Winston.

Mr. Editor:—A year's experience in holding the courts of North Carolina has so impressed upon my mind certain facts relating to the commission of crime, that the result of my observation, I feel, ought not to be withheld from my fellow-citizens.

Statistics will show if crime is generally increasing or decreasing. It is no purpose of this communication to enter the writer in the lists as maintaining either the former or the latter. But its purpose is to call attention to this alarming fact—"Our boys are our breeders of crime." "Our boys are filling our criminal dockets."

Under seven years of age a boy cannot commit crime. From seven to fourteen his act is criminal only if it be shown that he had intelligence enough to understand its meaning. So that from fourteen to twenty-one years is the period of legal criminal responsibility with youth. Therefore, human life averaging sixty years, about one-seventh of the crimes ought to fall to the lot of boyhood. My experience, however, leads me to assert that at least one-third of all crimes is brought home to its door—indeed, in the fourth and fifth judicial districts, during the year 1891, fully half the convicted criminals were boys. In one county seven out of nine convicted were boys. True, one must not lose sight of the fact that in our State a large proportion of the criminals are negroes. But the depravity of the young negro, as compared with the older ones, is more striking with the whites.

Two thoughts suggest themselves: (1) Why are these things so? (2) What can be done with the young criminal?

The answer to the first thought lies not far away. Lack of proper home influence and restraint casts the boy into the whirl of life with false notions, or none at all, respecting the part he is called upon to act. That mother, who, living in town, is old-fashioned enough to keep her boy off the streets, will have her reward; and the country mother, who keeps her son from the little cross-roads doggery, at the Saturday evening gatherings, is wise.

Parents, white and black, that are unable to educate their children should give them a good trade. This was the advice of Benjamin Franklin.

Let every boy be taught there is room enough at the top and encourage him to think that he is going there. Let your boy understand that no drinking man, no lying man, no sham man, is wanted. Be a companion to your boy; you are not above him, I hope! If so, observe Robert E. Lee, with his matchless dignity; Macaulay, with his universal genius; and Chatham, with his imperious self poise, in their rollocking intercourse with children, and bid your false dignity begone.

The natural hero of the boy is another boy, twelve years old, who smokes long cigars without getting sick, or the more harmful cigarette, and curses and swears till "his conscience hath perpetual vacation." Unless he cast this idol to the bats, he, too, may soon fill the dock of the criminal. Enough of old Adam remains in ninety nine boys out of a hundred to destroy, if left alone. Many parents not only leave them alone, but develop the "Adam."

Greatly to be feared is it that the fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge.

The answer to the second question puzzles us all, but it sorely grieves the poor, earth-born companion and fellow mortal who sits on the Bench and has to pronounce judgment on the boys.

Here is a boy eighteen years old. He is now on trial a third time for stealing. The humane Judge, who first tried him, discharged him. On the second trial, he was sentenced to jail and hired out. While serving his term, he stole again, and now you and I are asked, "What shall we do with Him?" We have no Reformatory. Society must be protected, and "in" goes the boy to the State's prison for three years.

So did, at almost each court, some one or more boys. Dead!! as dead to any further usefulness or honor as if sleeping the last sleep.

North Carolina needs a Reformatory for boy criminals.

True, many boys are hardened criminals at fifteen, but some are not, and to such the hand of christian benevolence and charity ought to be freely extended.

If the next Legislature, after studying the workings of such institutions in sister States, and finding that they well serve the purpose of their creation, will establish a Reformatory for boy criminals, a great load will be lifted from the shoulders of sentencing Judges, and additional lustre will be shed on the name of a people whose bowels of compassion have never been shut against the needy and the unfortunate, nor even against the penitent criminal.

Help Asked for Roper.

I had the pleasure of accompanying Rev. J. Tynch to his third Sunday appointment in December at Roper, Washington county, N. C. The brethren there are struggling hard to erect them a house of worship. The building has been raised and shut in so they can hold service in it. They need two hundred dollars to complete their house, besides what has already been promised and secured.

Bro. Tynch has worked very hard to erect a church in Roper. His little band is weak, numerically and financially, but have contributed nobly out of their poverty to erect a house of worship for the Lord.

With a little more help from the brethren, they will soon have a church building that will do credit to their little town and to the Baptist cause.

Any one feeling inclined to render aid, will please send their contributions to Rev. J. Tynch, Edenton, N. C., which will be duly acknowledged through the RECORDER.

A Dish of Hash.

The churches in our Association, so far as heard from, with one or two exceptions, have raised their quota for the Havana house. I suppose, but for the stringency in money matters, all would have responded. This writer has never heard so much complaint about hard times as at the present. In such times as these the cause of the Master always suffer first. Oh! that God's people could but realize that he takes cognizance of all this robbery of him, and so their ability to do for him is growing less all the while—all because they refuse to trust him.

Christmas, with all of its pleasures, passed off as usual through our part of the Lord's vineyard. Many of the Sunday-schools gave to their scholars some kind of entertainment, and many of their churches remembered their pastors. Altogether, it has been quite pleasant. The pastors meanwhile have been busy making the various young couples happy who called upon them to say a few words. To some homes have come sad moments, however. In the home of Bro. G. M. Shives, our Treasurer at Mt. Holly, a sad accident cast a gloom over the entire community. His son Charlie was burned to death by the explosion of a lamp.

So the local Board of Directors of the world's Columbian Exposition have decided to grant to every restaurant keeper on the ground the privilege of selling any kind of liquors. Shame on such a course! It is becoming more and more manifest that this great city was not prompted by patriotic motives in asking for this Expositior but to make money. It is agreed that division is to be made of the profits in the sale of these liquors. Will not an angry God smite this wicked city as in other days for thus prostituting so noble a cause to such an unworthy end?

Our work at Newton is in a hopeful condition. Work has been suspended on the building until spring opens, but we are making an earnest effort to collect subscriptions so as to be able to push the work as soon as winter passes. Let our brethren over the State remember that this is a crises in the work at Newton and we need these contributions more than we can tell. Send something to Bro. Geo. W. Cochrane, Newton, N. C. Don't let the "hard times" keep you from giving us something to help in this important field.

The churches at Mt. Zion and Providence have called Bro. Wyatt of Iredell county. Bro. Wyatt recently came to us from the Methodists. I have not the pleasure of his acquaintance, but he is reported as a good preacher. I hope he will come to our fifth Sunday meeting at Mt. Ruhama in this month. We would like to know him and have him know us. One of the difficulties in the way of the development of our associations is the fact that so many of our churches call pastors from outside the Association, and they can never meet with us in these general meetings. The churches should as far as possible remedy this trouble.

The new issue of the Convention Series of Sunday-school Helps is par excellent, both as to mechanical make up and subject matter. Surely no Sunday school in the South will longer think of going elsewhere for literature. The effort of other publishers to cut rates and purchase our Sunday schools by offering their literature free, only creates a contempt in my mind. Let us not be bought by a few paltry cents.

New Church Constituted.

By request, Rev. Dr. R. R. Overby and Rev. N. P. Stallings and the deacons of Shiloh and Sawyer's Creek churches, with other brethren, and a few sisters, met at Indian Town on the 23d of December, 1891, and constituted a church of twenty-four members. Dr. Overby was chosen Moderator of the presbytery, and T. B. Boushall, Secretary.

Twenty-four brethren and sisters submitted letters of dismission from Shiloh—also a covenant und rules of decorum, which were examined and approved by the presbytery, and on motion, the brethren and sisters named in the letters were constituted a regular Missionary Baptist church.

The name for the new church is not yet selected.

The newly-constituted church selected the fourth Sunday as their day of preaching, and called Dr. Overby to be pastor, who accepted the call. Bro. Wilson Forbes was elected Clerk, and brethren H. L. Gregory, I. M. Duncan and W. P. Borco were elected Deacons and ordained by Revs. Overby and Stallings. Bro. John D. Gregory was elected Treasurer, and brethren Henry Gregory, Jacob Cox and Abel Gallop were elected a building committee.

The church will build a commodious house in which to worship.

Moneys Paid Over by Little Alice Russell.

Bro. Editor:—Little Alice Russell, who made an appeal through the RECORDER for help to build or repair our church house at Mt. Vernon Springs, paid over to the church twelve dollars at our last meeting, which had been sent to her by kind friends from different parts of the State.

The church has appointed a committee to see what ought to be done, and then see what we can do ourselves. Any help will be duly acknowledge and highly appreciated.

May the Lord bless you and the RECORDER. Every family belonging to this church takes the RECORDER, except two.

A Pastor Made Happy.

The ladies and sisters of Sulphur Springs church made their pastor happy and grateful last third Sunday by presenting him with a good buggy robe, gum-coat and driving gloves; and I take this way of returning my heart felt thanks to each one that had a part in this good work, and may God's blessings rest on each one that took part in this matter.

J. W. SLEDGE.

Jan. 5, 1892.

Dear Recorder:—The Blankenship case referred to in the State Chronicle, Charity and Children, and in this week's RECORDER, may not be wholly without some foundation, as there is such a man as Harrison Blankenship who lives, or did live, near the line of Wilkes county, N. C. I have seen him and heard him preach, (such as it was.) I taught school during part of two years only a few miles from where he lived.

From the general opinion of the community it is reasonable to believe that the present report is true. But that he was not a member of any regular Baptist church or Association is true also. He and his church and Association are anti-mission from Alpha to Omega, and saturated with emisionism to the very core.

It is unjust to the Baptists of North Carolina, or any other christian people, to hold up such a scoundrel as Blankenship as their leader or representative in any sense whatever. Let no one think that a leader or a man of great influence has fallen. But the next time you want to judge religion go to some one who has it. Don't light upon the poorest specimen of humanity in all the world, and he without any religion to judge all the noble and true and good people by.

R. D. CARROLL.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 7, 1892.

Quality, not Quantity.

Quantity is good if you have the quality; quality is good whether you have quantity or not. Any pretty girl with a wrinkled looking-glass can tell you that. And we have all known it since that day of astonishment when we first learned that the little silver piece is worth more than the big copper.

But this is one of those bits of knowledge which we fail to apply as broadly as they demand. There are matters not a few in which we seem to have adopted the tramp's formula, "Anything, only so there's a plenty." The custom of rating cities by their population, for instance, has so debauched civic ambition that the only rivalry between our cities, great and small, that kindles into any intensity, is displayed in connection with the census count. And if any one should raise the question of quality in such a connection, saying, "Yes, you have a good many people, but how do they average as to character?" he would be laughed at for his exceeding freshness.

And this appears elsewhere, and in still more incongruous relations. When a religious body, whose only warrent for existing at all is that it makes for character, subordinates quality to quantity, the impropriety of it is rank. The superintendent of a large Sunday-school in a Western city was approached by the secretary of the school one day when the attendence was unusually large, with the question: "Would you like to know how many we have here to-day?" "No," he answered; "but if you can tell me how good the teaching has been to-day, I should like to know that." That was just right. As compared with the solicitude for the quality of the instruction, any special concern as to the numbers in attendance were frivolous.

Many points might be touched in this connection, but one more may suffice. It is not unusual for the young disciple to feel that his personal testimony in the church meeting is of little account, because his lack of confidence and the natural limits of his knowledge and experience compel him to be very brief in his remarks. Especially when he compares his little one-minute speech with the ten-minute fluency of the long-practiced brother does he feel the insignificance of his own words. If he could only discern, as many older ones do, how the tenderness and joy of the meeting increase when the young disciples begin to bring forward their simple offerings of praise, he would see that a special value attaches to testimonies whose very brevity is finely suggestive. Obedient love overcoming timidity and rising to witness for Christ, gives to the fewest and homeliest words a spirit and force which the longest and most eloquent discourse cannot surpass and may not equal.

Reshaping an old maxim, we may truthfully say, take care of the quality and quantity will take care of itself.—Young People's Union.

It is well for one to adapt himself to circumstancies provided good can be accomplished by it, while no moral or religious principle is satisfied in doing so. Bryant and Herring have the example of no less a missionary preacher than the Apostle Paul himself.

Justifying his course as to his missionary work among the Gentiles, he says to the Corinthians: "Unto the Jews I became as a Jew that I might gain the Jews; to them that are unnder the law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law.

To them that are without law, as without law, (being not without law to God, but under the law to Christ) that I might gain them that are without law.

To the weak, became I as weak, that I might gain the weak; I am made all things to all, that I might by all means save some."

So that Bryant and Herring are justified in making themselves Chinese in the matter of dress, that they may save some of the Chinese. It is a very encouraging [illegible] that Sec. Mabie makes of these Southern missionaries and their work.—Index.

Jan. 3d the North Carolina (Bro. Harrell's) visitors attended Trinity church in Durham

Surely, when our own Society, the American Baptist Publication Society, can furnish such helps as The Baptist Teacher, The Senior, Advanced, Intermediate, and Primary Quarterlies, there is no need to look out of the denomination for our Sunday-school supplies. It will be readily understood that the larger the subscription list, the more efficient can these publications be made. We learn that the circulation of all the Society's helps is very large and constantly increasing, the Advanced Quarterly alone having had, during the past quarter, a circulation of more than half a million copies.

The Feasibility of the Plan to Buy, &c., High Point Female College.

The minimum amount needed is $3,600 a year for six years. Of that sum the city of High Point raises one-fourth or more, which leaves $1,950 a year to be secured elsewhere. I feel sure that the rest of the Liberty Association will add enough to make a third or more, leaving only about $1,750 a year to be raised elsewhere.

I have written personal letters inclosing bonds and circulars to about three hundred ministers who ought to be (and most of them are) deeply interested in the success of this effort. Now, if they will average only five dollars a year it makes $1,500 of the $1,750.

Then, I have written personal letters to a few preachers and about one hundred lay brethren who are able to give largely—some of them $100 a year—and never miss the money. If they will average only five dollars each a year we have the amount, and $350 a year left as a margin for any failures.

But the three hundred ministers are pastors of at least nine hundred churches, and if they will try, can easily average five dollars a year from a church, which gives $4,500 a year, and each letter to the one hundred brethren contains two bonds, one for the brother to fill himself, and another to get some friend to fill. If these brethren will try they will average at least five dollars for themselves, and get friends to average five more, which will make $1,000. In the Liberty Association we raise at least $850 a year. These sums aggregate $6,350 a year, enough to allow for failures and still pay for the property, and have an improvement or endowment fund of at least $15,000 left.

This can be easily done if all will only act promptly. The money can be raised and no one will ever know he has paid anything. it will be so light, and we will have property worth much more than we pay for it, and a female college in Piedmont North Carolina belonging to the Baptist people equal to any in the State.

But the opposer, or (what is about the same thing), the objector, says, "One half of those to whom you have written will not act." Well, suppose only one half act, then I say the average amount to each has been placed so low that half the brethren can secure it without difficulty if they will try. It will be for the minimum sum only $10 to the preacher on average, and $10 to the lay brother, or for the maximum $10 to the churches of the half who act, and $20 for each brother and his friend. There are, however, many reasons why all should act with energy and promptness. All are personally interested, and all must see the great advantage to the Lord's kingdom in the success of the effort.

But says the objector, "It is bound to fail, and I will not have anything to do with it." Of course it will fail, if every one is like Mr. Objector; but all are not like him. The masses of our people, and the larger number of our ministers are favorable to it, and seeing how easily it can be accomplished will aid in the matter, especially as no money will be called for till all, or enough to buy, has been secured, the bonds being void unless fourteen thousand dollars is so secured. This being so, why should the objector, if not an opposer, hide himself behind the cry of "failure!" If failure comes, no one pays a farthing, hence is no looser. But failure need not, must not result. Even the severe hard times can not be allowed as a legitimate excuse. Only small amounts are necessary from any one. The first payment will be due in the present hard times; but the others will fall due most likely in good times when reaction has come. I earnestly appeal not only to those to whom I have written, but to all who read this article to act in this matter, and let us secure the property while it may be done. One brother in Johnson county, with whom I had no acquaintance, has written me volunteering to be one to give $10 a year for this object. How many others will do the same? Write me, and I will send bonds, &c. Or see your pastor and get him to give you bond to fill and so help the work. I hope all will do something, then success is sure. Asking the help and prayers of all, I am

Yours fraternally,

J. N. STALLINGS.

St. Louis Letter.

Dear Recorder:—As I sit at my window watching the flying snow, the first we have had, which was ushered in by the new year's mid day, I think of my promise to write the RECORDER a St. Louis letter.

St. Louis is like all great cities in many respects, and of it I need write but little. Wickedness is rife here. The "Grand Father Waters" brings us the water which slakes our thirst, and washes us, but our moral pollutions remain. Oh! that the "Fountain open in the house of David for sin and uncleanness" could be so turned upon us as to make us "whiter than snow," but this will not be soon, for we have too much religion to ask it. We see a very religious folk, though the Sabbath is broken, the people are drunken, and many religious people ate [illegible] cycle, yet we may see them early on Sabbath morn (if sober enough and have time) "to confession," and then they are all right. Our religion is largely irreligious religion.

BAPTIST AFFAIRS.

Our people are busy. Their hearts, hands and heads are full of work. We have the Sanitarium, the Orphan's Home, and our missionary work all to think about and support. This keeps us thinking, praying and working.

Rev. J. P. Greene, D. D., pastor of the Third Baptist church, has been here for eleven years, and is loved and reverenced by all.

Rev. J. W. Ford, D. D., pastor of the Second church, is a man of many ideas and charms his audiences.

Then we have Riggs of the Fourth church, Slaughter of Corondelet, Thomas of Lafayette Park, Dr. Anderson of Grand Avenue, Kirtley of Delmer Avenue, and Hoffman, pastors of the churches, all men of God and striving to build up his cause and kingdom; besides we have many good brethren who live here and do work in the country round about.

BOOKS AND PAPERS.

The Central Baptist is, by many, thought to be the best Baptist paper in the West. If it is not, it is not because of negligence by its editor; for no man in St. Louis works harder and sticks closer to his business than does Dr. W. H. Williams, editor of the Central Baptist.

Lewis E. Kline, manager of the American Baptist Publication Society's branch office here, is always in good humor and greets every one with a pleasant smile that makes him feel that "the roses have come again." He does a large business and deserves to enjoy the confidence of his brethren which he has.

The American Baptist is in the front in point of circulation according to the directories. Dr. Ray works hard and makes things succeed by his indomitable energy.

The National Baptist Book Concern is also doing a good business and a work for the Master which will be owned and blest.

DR. S. H. FORD.

This venerable man of God realizes that he is growing old. His Christian Repository is still going forth. It is no trouble for us all to be still when Dr. Ford speaks; his eloquence, good jokes, common sense and breadth of information make it worth our while to listen.

Wishing the RECORDER a happy and a prosperous year, I am

More Valuable—Lower Price.

The American Baptist Publication Society's Sunday-school literature has been greatly reduced in price, and yet its value has been greatly increased. It has been made so cheap and so attractive as to make it an object to purchase it and use it. An application for specimens of its publications will be sent most cheerfully without cost. It will be found to be sound Baptist literature.

Love to God and Man.

When a man is told that the whole of religion and morality is summed up in the two commandments, to love God and to love our neighbor, he is ready to cry, like Charaba in Gebir, at the first sight of the sea; "Is this the mighty ocean?" Is this all? Yes, all; but how small a part of it do your eyes survey! Only trust yourselves to it. You will find it has no end. It will carry you around the world.—J. C. Hare.

Camm's Emulsion of Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, combined with the Hypophosphites, is recommended on its merit alone. It is prescribed by many of the leading Physicians of every state in the Union, besides being recommended by the Doctors and teachers of Medicine in Europe. This alone goes far to establish the justice of its claim to superiority. It is beyond doubt the best remedy in the world for the cure of Consumption, and all kindred diseases. It will positively cure consumption, if used before this fearful disease has made too much headway, particularly if it is persevered in after the arrest of the disease. Wherever there is any wasting disease of any kind, Camm's Emulsion is the remedy. To derive the full benefit from this truly valuable medicine, it is recommended that it be used only by the advice of an intelligent Phy-ician. For sale by all druggists. Manufactured only by E. A. J. L. H. MISSILLIER.

MARCH 6, 1891.

For the benefit of the public, I unhesitatingly recommend Cheatham's wonderful remedy, "Pokine," to all sufferers of rheumatism. It has produced marvelous results in my case. I was a sufferer of the malady for five years, and after taking a few bottles was entirely cured.

Very respectfully,

Account of the Great Earthquake in Japan by a Presbyterian Missionary.

Nagoya, Thursday, Oct. 29th, 1891.—To-night is the first time that leisure or nerves have been propitious for writing any account of the past two days' events in this region. For yesterday at about 6:45 a. m. this city was visited by the most terrible earthquake which has been known for thirty-seven years. The oldest inhabitant only remembers one other like it.

On Sunday night a slight shock was felt, which helped to make the people regard this one lightly at its commencement. On Wednesday morning some forty christians were assembled as usual at an early prayer meeting which had been daily held for some time. The gathering place was in the large foreign building of the Methodist Protestant school here. In the midst of the meeting there suddenly came the sound of distant rumbling, and a decided quaking set in. For an instant no one moved, expecting it to be over soon; but the rumble increased to an awful roar, and the building began to creak and stagger like a drunken man. Shall we flee, or stay inside? But those heavy brick chimneys may come crashing down at any instant! Before we knew it we were moving towards the door, but we had waited too long. Just as the crowd was half out, down came a flying mass of bricks and tiles. The writer fled just ahead of the party who received the blows. One prominent believer and his wife fell side by side, and never spoke again; their child may recover. Two other Japanese have died since. Out of eight foreigners present, three were hurt, one of them quite badly, but it is believed he will come through all safe. The scene was truly awful to any one not accustomed to a battle field, to see all these dead and wounded lying motionless, or gurgling bloody fountains from every aperture.

We were busy enough with this scene, but the whole city was in an uproar. Wild shrieks, shouts, and innumerable noises filled the air, while every few moments came the terrible thunder from the angry earth. Running through the city to call the doctors, I found no jinrikisha men for any price, but many streets blocked with fallen houses, and others choked with people rushing to and fro, or standing dazed and gazing at the ruins.

The chimneys of the Normal School went crashing through the roof, and the building looks as if it had been bombarded. The second story of the postoffice is in ruins, though the first looks intact; the railway station is destroyed, the Owari Thread Factory's splendid brick buildings crashed in, killing hundreds,—we have not heard how many. The old castle stood firm, but many gateways are demolished and the brick court house for the military is a wreck. Fires started up, and threatened to add to the horrors; but were soon subdued. How many were killed we cannot yet say, but probably a thousand for Nagoya would not exaggerate. To-day we hear that Nagoya escaped lightly, compared with the region west of us. Gifu, Ogaki and Kyoto, are said to have suffered awfully. One village of five hundred houses now counts only five. The earth yawned, leaving cracks two feet wide and a foot or two deep. Railway rails were curled into waves; iron bridges were broken; river embankments sunk or crumbled, and fields flooded. How many poor people to-night lie in agony or cold in death, no one knows. Truly it has been a most awful time, nor are we ready yet to speak of it in the past tense, as all last night the distant booming and trembling continued, giving little chance for sleep. And all day to-day, at intervals the earth has quaked, or given sudden springs like a mettled horse. Thieves are abroad; so we have to guard the remainder of our goods as we sleep. Carpenters and day laborers are reaping a rich harvest at exhorbitant rates. Many freaks could be told of this earthquake, like all others, but I refrain, and here end this hasty note.

Friday, 10 a. m.—Some further facts in regard to the Nagoya disaster may prove interesting. A Kencho official has just shown me the latest bulletin of statistics up to the morning. According to this paper, the number reported killed up to the hour of issue, in the three towns which virtually make up Nagoya, is 750, but when the facts become fully known, the number will be nearer 1,000. The greatest loss of life and heaviest shocks were in Ichinomiya and vicinity. In that vicinity 700 killed are reported; and that number compared with the total population makes a much larger proportion than in Nagoya. In all Aichi-ken there are thus far reported 1,800 killed, 530 wounded, and 2,480 houses destroyed. And up to this morning there were 368 distinct shocks recorded. On the 28th instant the shocks averaged fourteen per hour; on the 29th, eight per hour, while this morning they are three per hour. How much greater figures will grow after all points are heard from, we do not know.

My informant also said that the earthquake was heaviest in Aichi-ken. In Gifu many places were destroyed from shocks and from fire, but not so many lives lost. In Kyoto the main destruction was to houses. In Osaka 800 are said to be killed, but Kobe escaped with but little injury.

The authorities here are issuing daily rations of rice to the poor. This man, who talked to me, had nearly 600 names on his list to feed. The weather has continued clear and cool since the disaster, which is a great blessing to the multitudes, who dare not sleep under their own roofs. It is a great cause of thankfulness, too, that the shock came at the hour it did, after the ondon all over the sleeping city had been extinguished. An hour earlier and the whole city would have been destroyed by fire.

Last night there were three severe shocks, and a number of small ones, but to-day, at last we begin to breathe a little easier, and go to work in earnest to repair our sadly disfigured homes. The crockery shops are truly a sight to behold—their whole stock a perfect wreck.

This morning the three christians were buried, as all the churches had been praying together when these were killed, so all the congregations assembled to witness the last solemn rites of burial. The wounded foreigners passed a somewhat comfortable night last night, and the prospect seems good for the recovery of the worst case.

The Young Reaper, The Sunlight, Our Little Ones, and The Picture Lessons, published by the American Baptist Publication Society, are most attractive and fill their places among the supplies needed in every well equipped school. Our children can never forget the lessons learned from a study of these papers, and they have been in some families for years as bright household pets. If for any reason your school has not used them all, a careful examination is asked of their quality and prices, and no doubt they will give the highest satisfaction.

Foot-Binding.

FROM A MISSIONARY TO MISSIONARIES.

Would some of your correspondents, in various parts of China, give us the benefit of their thoughts on the practice of foot-binding, and suggest remedies to put a stop to the cruel custom? Especially among members of our christian churches. I know it is not allowed in some churches; nor is it as general as it used to be among converts, for the men are educated not to think it necessary to marry a small footed woman; but this is a slow process, and hundreds of little ones are tortured in the mean time. Could there not be a rule made in all churches, to expel a man or woman guilty of the cruelty? I do not believe that any one with the love of God in the heart, that love which should make us gentle and tender to all God's creatures, and which should fill us with humility (for pride and ambition are at the root of it), could do it. A few years ago, quite half of the children attending one of our day schools had their feet bound. They were such a contrast to the others; little, pained, pinched faces and frail bodies. How my heart ached for them, and yet one felt so powerless to help them. I had foot boards put to the desks, on which they could rest their feet; but many of them would put their heads on their books and cry bitterly with the pain. I fear we all get a little indifferent on this subject after a time. Dear, good people, who would be filled with indignation at seeing a dog or a cat so treated, take it so calmly, merely saying, "The system will be done away in time." "We cannot expect the Chinese to give up their old customs readily." "It is the fault of the men; they must have a wife with small feet." "The tight lacing of European women is quite as injurious." Yes, but if a woman laces tightly it is her own doing, and she must take the consequences; but these poor, little ones of three, four and five years have no voice in the matter. Many women with bound feet suffer all ther lives. (There are none who do not—some more, some less.) Our teacher, who is fifty-seven, still suffers. A missionary lady told me of a sad case in her school, where a girl's feet mortified and fell off. She died a few hours after. Dr. Kerr told us of a case he had in his hospital at Canton: a woman came to him with her feet in her hands, asking him to put them on again. One foot is now in a museum in America, the other in England. Shall we not all try to do more to help these little ones, try to prevent their being deprived of all the bright, healthy joys of childhood? We can all make it a matter of special prayer, and use our influence to induce parents not to do it, and preachers can speak publicly in the churches against it.—M. Johnstone, Hongkong.

The Sweet Gum.

The exudation you see clinging to the sweet gum tree in the summer contains a stimulating expectorant that will loosen the phlegm in the throat. Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein cures coughs and croup.

The Hand Fund.

Several years ago the American Missionary Association received one million dollars from a Connecticut merchant, to be used as a special fund for the education of the colored people in the South. By the will of the same donor, this body was made the principal legatee, and it will receive an additional half million dollars. The amount of the gift is in itself remarkable, though not unparalleled, but the circumstances that led to the gift are so extraordinary that this fund will always have a peculiar significance.

Daniel Hand was born in Madison, Conn., in 1801, and received the usual training of a Yankee boy. When but sixteen years of age he went to Augusta, Ga., where he became a clerk in his uncle's store. In due time he succeeded to the business, and about 1845 he took, as partner, George W. Williams, a clerk of proved efficiency. Mr. Hand had become a Presbyterian, and was a firm believer in the teachings of his church, while Mr. Williams was a Methodist. Mr. Hand was a Northerner in feelings and opposed to slavery, while his partner was a representative Southerner. These differences did not affect their business relations, or lessen their respect for and confidence in each other. They prospered in their business, which was, after a time, transferred to Charleston.

At the outbreak of the war the house was menaced with ruin. Mr. Hand's life was saved once or twice with difficulty, and he finally went to Asheville, N. C., to reside during the war, practically a prisoner released on parole, leaving the conduct of his business to his partner. Mr. Williams prospered even during the war, and in the succeeding years grew rich fast. Mr. Hand, in the mean time, returned to Connecticut, where he lived quietly on some property he had outside of his business interests. He always believed that his old partner was honest and would do the right thing by him, but for years sought no settlement. When at last he did so, about eleven years ago, he found his confidence justified. His partner had kept his accounts carefully, crediting Mr. Hand with $130,000 capital, treating him as an active partner all these years, and making his share of the business and profits amount to $558,000. In the end, $648,000 was paid Mr. Hand, and this sum he more than doubled by wise investments before his death. Substantially the whole of his fortune was devoted by Daniel Hand to the education of the Southern negroes. As a writer in the New York Evening Post says:

"Even more impressive, in these days of fiscal distrust, than the magnitude of the gift, is the story that goes with it: The anti-slavery merchant returning to the South the fortune made in the slave States; that fortune preserved and increased by the ex-Confederate partner; and both, the Northman and the Southron, the Yankee Puritan and the ardent secessionist, cherishing sacredly through adverse political creeds and the wildest mutations of affairs, their common affection and their bed-rock honesties. Here, surely, is a true tale from real life more picturesque and stimulating than the fancies of idealized romance."

The Hand fund will take its place in American history alongside of the Peabody and Slater funds. Both in its actual amount, and in the circumstances of its origin, it will outrank either of the others. And yet, so accustomed have we become to large benefactions that the history we have briefly recounted, as well as the very existence of the fund, is almost unknown.—Examiner.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure, be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Sold by druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

Still Further Advance.

By those who have used The Baptist Teacher for a number of years, it was thought hat it had reached the highest excellence. But year by year it improves. The Baptist Teacher for January, 1892, is a gem. It will reach its sixty thousand readers in such an improved garb that they will scarcely recognize it. Forty pages of reading matter from the ablest pens in the Baptist ranks every month means a great deal to any reader of Baptist literature and to any teacher It has three new departments this year, "Editor's Drawer," for replies to divers questions; "Library Notes" for the help of library committees; and a third in charge of the Rev. W. Taylor Smith, B. A., of Manchester, England, explaining "Orientalisms" in the lessons. Dr. H. H. Harris of Richmond College, Dr. Wm. H. Whitsitt of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, and Dr. Charles Manly, President of Furman University, S. C., are engaged to point out the Baptist doctrines in the lessons for 1892.

Perhaps you have a great mind; perhaps you have an eloquent tongue; it may be you have a large purse, and can glorify God and bless mankind with that; but perhaps you have nothing in the world but a kind, sweet smile; then let that fall upon some poor life that has no smile in it. Remember that a dewdrop glistening in the sun is just as beautiful as a rainbow.—Rev. C. H. Parkhurst, D. D.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Itching Skin Humors

Torturing, Disfiguring Eczemas

And every species of itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, pimply, and blotchy skin and scalp diseases are relieved in the majority of cases by a single application, and speedily, permanently and economically cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES when the best physicians, hospitals, and all other remedies fail. No language can exaggerate the suffering of those afflicted with these diseases, especially of little babies, whose tender skins are literally on fire.

CUTICURA

Remedies are the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies of modern times, are absolutely pure, and agreeable to the most sensitive, and may be used on the youngest infant and most delicate invalid with gratifying and unfailing success.

CUTICURA, the great skin cure, instantly allays the most intense itching, burning, and inflammation, permits rest and sleep, heals raw and irritated surfaces, cleanses the scalp of crusts and scales, and restores the hair. CUTICURA SOAP, the only medicated toilet soap, is indispensable in cleansing diseased surfaces. CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new blood and skin purifier and greatest of humor remedies, cleanses the blood of all impurities, and thus removes the cause. Hence, the CUTICURA REMEDIES cure every humor of the skin, scalp, and blood, with loss of hair.

☞ "HOW TO CURE DISEASES OF THE SKIN AND BLOOD," mailed free to any address, 64 pages, 300 Diseases, 50 Illustrations, 100 Testimonials. A book of priceless value to every sufferer.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold throughout the world. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; CUTICURA SOAP, 25c.; CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by POTTER DRUG & CHEMICAL CORP'N, Boston, U. S. A.

Pimply Skin red, rough hands, painful finger ends and shapeless nails are prevented and cured by Cuticura Soap, incomparably the greatest of skin purifiers and beautifiers, while rivalling in delicacy and surpassing in purity the most expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. The only medicated toilet soap and the only preventive and cure of inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, rough, red, and oily skin, and simple humors of infants.

SUBJECTS FOR DISCUSSION.

1. What are the benefits of our Union Meetings, and what can be done to make them more beneficial in the future? To J. H. Beaty.

2. How many million churches and stations have we and what are their present needs? To J. W. Lowe, O. C. Horton.

3. The present Associational plan for supplying the destitution within our bounds. To N. B. Broughton, J. M. Broughton.

4. What attitude should our churches assume on the liquor question? To W. J. Ferrell, Worley Creech.

5. What are the duties of a deacon? To J. M. Broughton, O. L. Stringfield.

6. How should the church deal with members who fail to contribute according to ability for the support of the church and the spread of the gospel? To F. H. Poston, J. L. Cottingham.

Sunday schools will be the topic for Sunday morning, exercises to be arranged by the Superintendent of Lee's Chapel Sunday-school and other Sunday school workers.

Churches of the Union will carefully note the following:

Each is entitled to five delegates. It is important that each church shall send a contribution for our colportage and mission work.

Should any church of the Union fail to get the collection by delegates to the Union Meeting, please forward it as early as possible to J. M. Beaty, Smithfield, N. C., or to L. O. Lowe, Raleigh, N. C., so our work may not be hindered for lack of funds.

Literary.

Step by Step; or, The Lord's Leading. By Alice T. Pickford. 16 mo, 192 pp. Price 90 cts. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut St.

The special aim of this little work is to present clearly before the minds of young christians the truth so graciously taught in the Scriptures, and so aptly expressed in the word of the familiar hymn:

"He leadeth me! oh, blessed thought!
Oh words with heavenly comfort fraught!
Whate'er I do, where'er I be,
Still 'tis God's hand that leadeth me."

It was in the eleventh year that Agnes Rice began to comprehend the meaning of the statement that God leadeth his own people. Her mother lay ill, hopelessly ill, and the poor child was overwhelmed with grief, when she first learned that she could never be expected to get well again. Her father came to her and kindly and wisely presented to her the comforting thought that in all the events of life it is God's hand that leadeth those whom he loves, and that what is often thought to be an evidence of his forgetfulness is really a proof of his deep love, and of his far sighted wisdom. The narrative shows us Agnes passing in succeeding years through various scenes in this country and in Bermuda. These are interesting in themselves, but especially so as showing the constant and gracious leading of her everlasting Friend.

A Short History of the Baptist. By Henry C. Vidder. 12mo, 245 pp. Price, $1.00. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

The history of the Baptists has often been written, and in the main so written as to compare favorably with that of any other denomination. And yet, as Mr. Vedder says in his preface: "A history of the Baptists written in an interesting style, yet with scholary accuracy, not so voluminous as to repel readers, and cheap enough to be owned by the poorest, has long seemed to be a greatly needed book."

This history we believe Mr. Vedder has given us in the volume here considered. It is scholary, well written, and with comprehensive, is so condensed as to be easily read. Great care has been taken to have it accurate on points with respect to which there is difference of opinion. The unbroken line of Baptist history from the early church is an illustration of this. Mr. Vedder takes ground in opposition to the idea, and in a way which it seems to us must carry conviction. The chapters on the Anabaptists will be read with especial interest. They will help to set right a class of people most unjustly maligned as well as most atrociously persecuted.

The perusal of the book will make Baptists increasingly grateful that they are such; that they are members of that denomination of which history records that, though persecuted, is has never been a persecutor; which has had for its advocacy three such ideas as the supremacy of Scripture, the spiritual nature of church membership, and absolute religous liberty. The ideas are common property now, but they were not when our fathers battled for them. Surely the record of their struggles their children will make haste to peruse, especially when put forth in such an attractive form.

Fruitful Seed.

Years ago a French Testament was given to a little girl of Romanist parents, who was for four months at the school, founded by Madame Feller at Grande Ligne, Canada. She went home still a Romanist. Her father asked her if she had a Bible. She said she had. "You must give it to me or put it away, never to take it out." She put it in the bottom of her trunk, and the treasure remained hidden for ten or twelve years. Then she was married, and had more liberty. She began to read the Testament in the family; she and her husband were converted. Their zeal led them to labor for one of her brothers who was at her father's house. After many months of labor and prayer, the brother was converted. The three united in labor for a sister. She was led to Christ, and so on until the whole family of sixteen children besides the parents, were converted. A brother wrote in '86, "Through that little Testament, given to Julia at Grande Ligne thirty-five years ago, and in answer to the prayers of Madame Feller that followed it, our families, numbering eighty-five souls, are all in the light."—Christian Secretary.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.
All dealers keep it. $1 per bottle. Genuine has trade-mark and crossed red lines on wrapper.

Here is an item of interest to Southern Baptists. Speaking of his missionary tour around the world, Sec. Mabie, of the Baptist Missionary Union, said, at a gathering of Baptist ministers and laymen of New York and Brooklyn, that he "met Bryant and Herring, missionaries of the Southern Baptist Convention, in China, and he says he would like to have an opportunity to tell Southern Baptists what he thinks of them. Intelligent, consecrated, spiritual, devoted to their work, they are, he thinks, the peers of any men of their age on the field. Both of them have adopted the native Chinese costume, and their purpose in doing so is to bring themselves nearer to the people."

We should like to give a new chimney for every one that breaks in use.

We sell to the wholesale dealer; he to the retail dealer; and he to you.

It is a little awkward to guarantee our chimneys at three removes from you.

We'll give you this hint. Not one in a hundred breaks from heat; there is almost no risk in guaranteeing them. Talk with your dealer about it. It would be a good advertisement for him.

Knabe Upright Pianos at Cost.

We will sell our stock of Knabe Pianos at wholesale cost, as we desire to get our money out of them at once. Elegant style, sold for $500 at the factory, for only $400.

NOTICE.

We wish to state, in connection, that we have noticed an advertisement to the effect that a certain piano received the highest award at the Southern Exposition. This piano, so advertised, was not even on exhibit, and only one make was represented, which was not entered for the premium. Also, there were only two makes of organs exhibited, and the only one entered took the diploma.

Our Pianos have taken the Highest Awards at every North Carolina State Fair

for the last five years, and in 1890 it led ten other makes. We did not even exhibit at the "Southern Exposition."

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio

La Grippe.

The following comes all the way from Europe and may be of interest to some:

"An addres was recently delivered by Professor Nothnagel of Vienna, upon the origin and treatment of this disese, and is the talk of the hour among medical men. Professor Noth nagel in his address declared that the malady is distinctly miasthmatic in character, and that it is certainly infectious, and probably contagious. He also stated that persons having cardiac affections, and those suffering from tuberculosis, have just cause to fear fatal results. There is no specific means of cure, the professor says, but treatment by anti pyrene, and antifebrine and plenatine are advised in cases where the disease is accompanied by any form of congestion of the lungs or weakness of the heart. Such cases are better treated with stimulants like digitalis or brandy, or by subcutaneous injection of camphor."

SAN JOSE, CAL., Nov. 19th, 1891.

MESS. WATSON & CO, AGTS,

Gentlemen:—On Nov. 10th, at noon, our daughter, ten years of age, came home from school sick.

Vomited freely through the afternoon, went to bed at half past seven o'clock feeling pretty badly.

Next morning the 11th, throat began to redden and grow worse through the day. Applied the Electropoise button to the throat, low power, for half hour.

On the 12th, scarlet fever eruptions, developed rapidly, until the face, arms and body to the knees, were well covered. Before the eruptions appeared, thought it only a severe case of sore throat. Applied the Electropoise to throat and wrist in same way, twice on the 12th, and 13th; once on the 14th 15th and 16th. On 17th rash commenced to abate, and to day, 19th, we consider her nearly well.

Have had no doctor and gave her no medicine; and she has passed through the different stages of scarlet fever, as safely as she could have done, had we employed the best of physicians. Will write you further.

Very truly,
E. P. REED, 269 Market St.

SAN JOSE, CAL., Nov. 25th, 1891

Dear Sirs:—Our little daughter since the date of my last letter has daily improved.

The rash with which her body was covered has entirely disappeared. Now the cuticle is peeling on the tips of her fingers, and the whites of her eyes, which were quite bloodshot, are now clear. Yesterday she was taken out for a two hours ride. The disease commenced with sore throat, we thought it nothing more, until the rash appeared. As near as my wife can call to mind, two treatments were made the first day, and one the second. The Electropoise worked like a charm, quickly arresting the inflammation in the throat and checking the fever. No physician was called, and no medicine of any kind given. We have had the wall instrument in our sitting room for a year past; have allowed our neighbors to use it and must say that in no case has its use failed to produce very beneficial results.

Yours truely, E. P. REED.

SAINTSING—On December 22d, little Ora Lillian Saintsing, aged six months and twenty-one days. The deceased was the infant daughter of Mr. J. B. Saintsing of Wake Forest. W. R. G.

GAITHER—Milton Gaither died Dec. 25th, 1891, aged seventy-nine years, eight months and seventeen days. He had been a professing christian from early life, and a member of Society church thirty-two years before his death. He had been a citizen of Calahaln township fifty years, and a justice of the old county court of Davie. He was buried at Society church Dec. 26th, 1891, Elder C. S. Cashwell conducting the burial services. G.

AVENT—Died, in Littleton, N. C., Dec. 19th, 1891, Miss Sarah E. Avent, daughter of James W. and Mary N. Avent, in the twenty-first year of her age.

The deceased was a worthy member of the Bear Swamp Baptist church, lovely in her life, and happy in her death. The Father's call, child come home, found her ready and waiting, and with an affectionate farewell to father, mother, brothers and sisters, asking them all to meet her in heaven, she fell asleep. "And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." JOHN MITCHELL.

HAYES—Died, in Gatesville, N. C., Dec. 5th, 1891, after a brief illness of membranous croup, little Cecil S. Hayes, aged one year and eleven months. He was a very bright little boy and had made many friends. We truly sympathize with the bereaved mother, who lost her husband, Bro. T. E. Hayes, just two months before her little boy Cecil.

Gone, escaping earth's sad and bitter woes,
To live forever free from care;
Gone, where only the righteous,
To heaven, its glories to share.

A FRIEND.

BARRETT—D. C. Barrett died on the 26th of December, 1891. He first joined the Carthage Baptist church in the year 1866. When the Flint Hill church was organized, he was one of the leading members, and put all his energy in building up the church. He labored earnestly to erect the house of worship and to add to and strengthen the membership of the church. He was a true citizen, a kind husband, a faithful father, and loved his church. He has left a name and influence which will long be remembered by his brethren.

JORDAN—Mrs. Mary Jordan, wife of deacon John Jordan, died in Henderson county Sept. 25th, 1891. Sister Jordan was born and raised in Montgomery county, N. C., and was the daughter of deacon Isaac Sugg. She made a profession of religion in early life, and was baptized into the fellowship of the old Cross Roads church by William Lineberry, and was a consistant member of the church to the day of her death. She was remarkably industrious, and a good provider for her family. Near the close of her earthly pilgrimage her sufferings were untold, all of which she bore with remarkable patience and fortitude. She leaves a devoted husband and six children to mourn their irreparable loss. Her funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Elder D. A. Glenn, when her body was consigned to its final resting place in the beautiful cemetery at Hendersonville, N. C. May all her children be prepared to meet the sainted mother in heaven to spend their eternity in the presence and praises of Jesus forever, where all tears are wiped away, and sufferings are unknown. F. M. JORDAN.

HUNT—Brother D. A. Hunt passed peacefully away on the morning of the 12th of December, 1891, at his residents in Oxford, N. C.

Born in the county of Granville, N. C., not far from the town of Oxford he went in business in Oxford at an early age and continued actively engage in business until the time of his death. As a business man he was reliable, prudent, safe, in no hurry to be rich; choosing the straight paths of integrity, rather than the questionable ways so popular in these days of high speculation.

As a man he was genial, cheerful, affectionate, manly, strong in his attachments, unobtrusive, with no pretense about him—and, withal, broad and charitable in his views of others.

For many years he was a member of the Oxford Baptist church, and for the last six years or more one of its deacons. He loved his church with a sincere devotion, and made one of its most faithful members. Always in his place at Sunday service, or weekly prayer-meeting; always promptly to attend the deacon's meetings; always ready for whatever work the church gave him to do; always having the interest of the church at heart, he was indeed "a good and faithful servant."

But would you see him at his best, you would need to go into his home. There he was known and loved and reverenced as few fathers are. What a tender husband! what an affectionate father! How full of that winning freedom of love that drew all closely to him! How affable, open, demonstrative and approachable!

Death came to him after a brief illness, but it found him ready. For several years past his health has been feeble, and his mind dwelt on the nearness of his end. Often he said "I know that my days on earth are few." Ond thing especially admonished him of that truth: he was the last one of a large family of brothers and sisters—all had passed over the river but him.

When the hour of his departure arrived, only a few minutes before he died, he said with a confidence that he knew him on whom he had believed.

We shall sadly miss him in the day to come—we shall miss him in the church—we shall miss him in the home—we shall miss his words of encouragement and counsel. But we do not sorrow as they that have no hope, for we feel assured that he has entered upon his rest.

He leaves behind him a widow three daughters and four sons, besides several grand-children.

We trust that the mantel of the father may fall upon the sons, and that the influence of his life may so dwell in them, that being dead he may yet speak. J. S. H.

Tributes of Respect.

LASSITER—Departed this life, October 9th, 1891, our dear brother Wm. M. Lassiter, in his sixty eighth year, leaving an affectionate wife, eight sons and one daughter. His sons are valuable citizens, filling important positions in society, and are influential christian gentlemen, reflecting honor upon their father and mother. His feeble health for more than a year hindered him from attending his church, and still he was prompt in remitting his share of pastor's salary, &c. He was a member of the Baptist church for more than forty years, most of the time at Potecasi, but when Roanoke was organized, he, with twenty-two of the Potecasi members, came to Roanoke and assisted in the organization and constitution of Roanoke church in one of the strongest Pedobaptist communities in our country.

The cause of Christ, his family and his neighbors all sustain a great loss in his death. To know him was to love him.

Read and adopted in conference, December, 1891, and ordered to be spread on our church book, and a copy sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

LOWE—The death-roll of Winston Baptist church and Sunday-school, during the year 1891, is short, but there is much in it that well deserves attention and serious consideration, for while it contains two names only, they are names of two worthy young brethren, whose lives and characters brought them a host of friends, whose open and generous kindness gave them influence, and whose christian zeal and example made them useful members of their church and Sunday-school.

Bro. John T. Lowe died June 12th, 1891, in the twenty first year of his age. Bro. A. S. Lowe died Dec. 1st, 1891, having entered his seventeenth year. Therefore, be it Resolved 1. That it is with unfeigned sadness we bow in humble submission to the decree of him who doeth all things well.

2. That in the death of our young brethren, our church and Sunday-school have lost two pious and useful members, and their families caused to suffer great sorrow.

3. That we extend to the loved ones our warmest sympathy in their sad bereavement.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

DRY GOODS.

Winter, 1892.

Mail Order Department.

Through our Mail Order Department we offer advantages to the people of North Carolina for "Shopping by Mail" second to none in the Southern States, for by the means of this a very important department of our great business, we place almost at the very doors of our patrons our enormous stock of goods, and we do carry the largest and finest collection of Dry Goods and kindred wares, at retail, of any house in North Carolina, and equaled by very few Southern houses.

We want the patronage of our North Carolina people, not simply that ours is a North Carolina house, but because we will sell them Dry Goods at as low prices, for the same quality, as any house in the trade.

We can only mention here a few of the more important departments, but will be glad to hear from those who desire anything relative to Dry Goods or the kindred wares:—

FOREIGN AND AMERICAN DRESS WOOLENS,
BLACK DRESS GOODS,
SILKS, VELVETS,
HOUSEFURNISHING GOODS,
CARPETS, CURTAINS, &c., &c. &

Samples cheerfully sent, and letters of enquiry promptly answered.

When writing for samples, our patrons will please make their orders as definite as possible, for then we can send a suitable line, instead of a lot entirely different from what they want.

A Prayer.

Father of light, if we could only know
In surety that the little good we do
Served in its way to help some other soul,
And that our piteous habit here below
Of hoping what our aching hearts want true
Would some time bring us to the longed-for goal.
Then would our way seem hopeful, clear and sweet,
And we would journey on with willing feet.

Is it so much, this guerdon that we ask?
Now fear as heavy as new-broken wings
Hangs on us, lest we do unconscious wrong;
But if upon us groping at our tasks
Came the clear light that this assurance brings,
There would be comfort for us sweet as song.
And radiance, and the breath of peace be there,
Like soft leaf-whisperings echoing everwhere
—Francis E Sheldon.

Memories of Boyhood Days.

Glad boyhood days, you yet seem near,
Your sights and sounds, we see and hear.
Our pulses throb, and dim eyes fill
And memories tender chords yet thrill.
'Twas then we studied nature's book,
In forest, field, and babbling brook.
The impress made then, with us stays,
And oft recalls our boyhood days.

What charms the springtime had in store
For us, when winter's storms were o'er.
The piping frogs were heard again,
The robin sang his sweetest strain.
The blue bird too, was heard and seen,
The grasses wore their brightest green.
Then came the wren and noisy jays,
What friends we were in boyhood days.

The trees put forth their buds and bloom
The rhubarb whispered, give me room.
The farmer turned the sprouting sod
And violets in the breezes nod.
The oriole builds her swinging nest,
The red-winged black-bird is our guest,
O, April's bright, and sunny Mays,
Away back in our boyhood days.

An Incident.

On a railway train the writer noticed the entrance of a mother and little son who were unexpectedly greeted by the friend of the mother's. The friend was only going from one station to the next, while the others were going on a long journey. There happened to be but one vacant double seat in the car, and into this the boy slipped, taking the seat next to the window. His mother, eager to improve the ten minutes with her friend, asked her son to give up his seat and take another for that little time, so that she could sit with her friend.

"No, I won't, because I want to sit by the window, and all the other seats have people already at the windows."

"But, darling, only for ten minutes, and then you can sit by the window all day."

"No, I won't go. I want to sit by the window all day."

"But, dear, not to give mamma pleasure?"

"No!"

"Not for just ten minutes, when mamma wants so much just to talk to her friend, and you can sit by the window the whole day long!"

"No!"—with impatient emphasis. And in spite of humbled entreaty from the mother, and good natured urging from the friend, that home natured bit of selfishness kept his place, the mother never insisting on the right and courteous thing, but murmuring gently that "Bobby did so enjoy looking out of the window."

When seven-year old Bobby becomes Robert the husband, his sad little wife will wonder:

"Why is it that men have so little tenderness for their wives?"—Century.

What to Teach Boys.

A philosopher has said that true education to boys is to teach "them what they ought to know when they become men."

1. To be true, and to be genuine. No education is worth anything that does not include this. A man had better not know how to read—he had better never learn a letter in the alphabet, and be true, genuine in intention and in action—rather than be learned in all sciences and in all languages, to be at the same time false in heart and counterfeit in life. Above all things, teach boys that truth is more than riches, more than earthly power or possessions.

2. To be pure in thought, language and life—pure in mind and in body.

3. To be unselfish. To care for the feelings and comforts of others. To be polite, to be just in all dealings with others. To be generous, noble, and manly. This will include a genuine reverence for the aged and for things sacred.

4. To be self-reliant and self helpful even from childhood. To be industrious always, and self supporting at the earliest proper age. Teach them that all honest work is honorble, that an idle life of dependence on others is disgraceful.

When a boy has learned these four things, when he has made these ideas a part of his being—however poor, or however rich, he has learned the most important things he ought to know when he becomes a man.—Exchange.

My wife had been a sufferer for some time with pain in the back; Salvation Oil was freely used and I am glad to say my wife to-day suffers no pain.

I have been driven many times to my knees by the overwhelming conviction that I had no where else to go. My own wisdom, and that of all about me, seemed insufficient for the day.—Abraham Lincoln.

Teach Them to Work.

There is just one road to success, and that is the road of hard work. All sorts of short cuts have been devised and tried by people, but they have all been short cuts to failure. The long road of hard work is the only highway that leads to success; all bypaths end in the swamp. This is the great lesson that ought to be taught to our boys to-day. There is a great deal of bad teaching in our families and schools. Every kind of teaching is bad which inclines a boy to trust to something else than hard work for success. One trouble with a good deal of teaching of boys is that it fixes their minds on the reward rather than on the work. Activity is the necessity of every strong nature; a lazy boy is a sick boy or defective boy.

Boys ought to be taught to love hard work for itself, without reference to its rewards. There is no fear about the success of the man who loves hard work; if he does not achieve the one particular thing he wants, he will get happiness out of the work itself. It is useless to tell boys that this world is a place in which everybody gets what he wants. It is a world in which very few get what they want.

Frank, honest teaching is greatly needed; teaching which will make boys understand that life is full of hard work, that no one particular success can be counted on, but that the man who is willing to work, who is honest and true, is the man who will stand the best chance of becoming prosperous and influential, and is the man who will, under any circumstances, have the supreme satisfaction of having done his work like a man. —Christian Union.

Story of a Little Girl Who Built a Church.

There was a new church needed in a certain place, so a good man who loved to work for the Lord went about among the people asking them to give the money with which to buy the materials and pay the workmen. But one man said, "No!" another said, "I can not!" another said, "I am too poor." Somehow or other every one found some excuse for himself, and not one cent was raised. At last he applied to a member of the church who was poor of purse, but large of heart; possibly he might help him.

"No," said the church member, "I have my wife and children to support, and this year I can do no more."

"But, urged the good man, "if you put down your name, others may, if you refuse me, I must give up discouraged."

"Father," said a little voice by his side, and the bright eyes of his little daughter looked up into his face. "Father, if you will only put down your name I will earn the money by picking berries and selling them. Honest and true I will; please don't say 'No,' father." The bright eyes were very earnest.

The father could not resist his little girl's pleading, so he promised to pay a certain sum. The discouraged worker again took heart and went once more among the people, telling them of the love and zeal of this little girl. Many were touched by the story, and one after another put his name on the paper till there was abundance of money. Then the bricklayers came, and the carpenters, and the masons, and after a time a beautiful new church was built; and the people always said that it was all owing to one little girl.—Christian Advocate.

Self Control

We are lenient in our judgment of a child who has not yet learned to restrain himself. If he flies into a passion when denied some wish, or frets over small disappointments, or sulks when things do not go to suit his taste, we charge it to his immaturity of character and reflect that, if properly trained, time will correct these faults. But we can not so easily excuse such unpleasant manifestations in adults. A mother fusses and worries if a dish not properly cooked comes to the table, till enjoyment of the other viands is wholly spoiled. A rainy day for washing, a misfit in a garment, a disagreeable caller, a mistake in executing an errand—these are some of the trifles which excite her to petulant speech or disagreeable manner. Nor are men exempt from this weakness. Some are easily thrown off their balance by the smallest miscarriage of business plans. By dark looks and monosyllabic remarks they cast a gloom over the household or place of business. It is pitiful to see men and women thus at the mercy of their moods. But unless a person is actually diseased or the nervous system is impaired, he can gain the mastery over his words and behavior. We can all cultivate the fine art of self-control if we will.—Selected.

A Queer Volcano.

In the extreme eastern edge of Arizona, some forty miles southwest of the remote and interesting Indian pueblo of Zuni, New Mexico, is a strange natural phenomenon—a great, shallow salt lake, at the bottom of a bowl-like depression some hundreds of feet deep and about three miles across. The basin is dazzling white with a crust of salt crystals. About in the center rises a small black volcanic peak; and if one will take the trouble to ford the salt lake—which he will find a disagreeable, but not dangerous task—and climb the peak, he will find its crater half filled by a lakelet of pure, fresh water!—Charles F. Lummis, in St. Nicholas.

Self-sacrifice, not merely for our own sanctification, but for the salvation of our fellowmen, is what brings us into true fellowship with the Christ who gave himself for us.—Andrew Murray.

Electropoise (TRADE MARK)

1425 N. Y. Ave., WASHINGTON, D. C.

OFFICE OF YORK ENTERPRISE, YORKVILLE, S. C., Aug. 14, '91.

ATLANTIC ELECTROPOISE—Gentlemen: For the past five years my wife has been a sufferer from dyspepsia. So completely did the disease make a wreck of her former self that life was almost despaired of. Her nervous system was almost entirely destroyed, and the slightest noise would throw her into a nervous spasm, which would last for hours. Medical skill failed to bring any relief.

Through the recommendation of an eminent divine we were induced to try the Electropoise. After a persistent use of the instrument, the effect has been wonderful. Her nervous system has been restored to its almost normal condition; her digestion is wonderfully improved; she is rapidly gaining in flesh; and, upon the whole, is making a rapid recovery, which speaks volumes for the wonderful curative powers of the Electropoise, as her case was considered hopeless. If any are skeptical on the subject, let them try the Electropoise, and its wonderful powers will quickly dispel all doubt. Yours truly, W. M. PROPST.

COOPER'S MAMMOTH BRICK WAREHOUSE,

Henderson, N. C.

The unanimous verdict of its thousands of patrons is that the HIGHEST PRICES and BIGGEST AVERAGES are always obtained on its floors. I have just closed a most successful and satisfactory season, selling more pounds of tobacco and paying out

than in any previous year of the market's history; and enter upon the new crop year determined to labor even more industriously, if possible, for the welfare of my patrons than ever before. The Henderson market was never in better condition or its future more encouraging. The coming year promises to be the best we have ever had, and COOPER'S WAREHOUSE, which, as farmers know, has always held the best records for high prices, clever treatment and good accommodations, is strengthening itself with every sale. Ask your neighbor who has sold with us, and hear what he says.

With grateful acknowledgment I return thanks to my friends and customers who have so liberally extended to me their generous patronage for the past nineteen years, making COOPER'S not only the leading warehouse in this the leading Bright market, in number of pounds of farmers' tobacco sold and amount of money obtained therefor, but also the

LEADER IN PRICES.

I promise to show my appreciation of this confidence by ever striving to please; by renewing and increasing my best efforts to give entire satisfaction in the management, handling and selling of your tobacco.

Hoping to continue to serve my patrons, and to make many new ones during the season of 1891-'92, I remain, the farmers' friend,

D. Y. COOPER, Proprietor.

MEMOIR V—REV. LEMUEL BURKITT.

CHAPTER ONE.

The greatest of all the poets has declared that "there is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at its flood, leads on to fortune." Doubtless time and opportunity have greatly controlled the changing aspects of individual and national advancement; but on the other hand, there have been men whom it would be difficult to associate in our reflections with any possibility of mediocrity in their relations to their several environments. Where could an Alexander, a Cæsar, or a Napoleon, have been placed, or, under what circumstances existing, which would have resulted in making them either mute, inglorious Miltons or village Hampdens! Such a suggestion will be at once set down by well informed people as something impossible and beyond all range of moral sequence. The dauntless hearts and imperious minds of these mighty kings of men were as much beyond the control of law, precedent and human conventionality, as their fame exceeds the usual ratio allotted to successful adventurers. They were like the stars and dwelt apart in the solitude of their native greatness and originality. Had there been no possibility of Gallic or civil wars, Cæsar would have yet been immortal as the rival, if not the superior, of Cicero as an orator, and of Tacitus and Livy as a historian. So, too, the Code Napoleon is of itself enough to demonstrate how the mightiest of modern soldiers would have shone in the civil development of his beloved France. With all these things being admitted, there yet remains no doubt that in even their cases the man and times had met. Golden opportunity flung wide open the glowing portals each was so eager to enter; and thus in happy coincidence each made the most of what his own genius and fortune had made possible.

While it may seem a little like the logicians' reductio ad absurdum, to preface the memoir of an humble Baptist preacher with analogy between himself and such grand historic figures as have been referred to, yet to borrow an idea again from the mighty dramatist, "One touch of nature makes the whole world akin." These conquerors and scourges of the human race were far inferior as to any good they accomplished to many a man who asked for no higher honors than those won in proclaiming a crucified Saviour. History holds record of no more glorious and picturesque figure than that of him who, arising from his blindness and pharisaical enmity, went forth to lift up and instruct the people of so many different nationalities. While subsequent records contain no such an evangelist as Saul of Tarsus became, though in his genius, culture, fearlessness and devotion, he will be ever unapproachable, yet it has pleased God to raise up other men of largely similar aspects. To the life and services of such a preacher of righteousness, this memoir, with all due candor, invites the kindly attention of the reader.

In all the long catalogue of Baptist preachers who, in the last two centuries, have lived and labored for the Lord in North Carolina, no greater name appears than that of Lemuel Burkitt. He is yet indeed, in largeness and variety of his gifts, in the abundance and beneficence of his works, and the power of his influence, unequaled in all our history as a civilized people. Though born amid all the comparative poverty and disadvantages marking the condition of the great body of our people in that period, he rose superior to the trammels of birth and place, and made himself as great in knowledge as he was in true godliness. That a man-child so ushered into the world, amid humble and unlettered associates, should, by his almost unaided efforts, so overcome every obstacle to education and consideration among his countrymen, goes far toward vindicating the opening generalization of this memoir. Lemuel Burkitt neither waited for time or tide in human affairs to lead him on in that grand pathway of consecration in the service of God and his fellowmen, which, in due season, won him such glorious guerdons. Like the great Duke of Wellington, "The pathway of duty was his road to glory." He shed no human gore even in the rightful defence of his native land. He followed no glittering baubles of pride and ambition. His manhood was spent first in laborious self preparation, and then in the most ardent and ceaseless labors for the lifting up of the minds and spirits of his people.

With so noble an ideal ever leading him on, Lemuel Burkitt became in due season to the Baptist churches in eastern Virginia and North Carolina almost as potent a guide as was Martin Luther amid the Germans of his time. Not only revered as the foremost preacher amid his clerical peers, he was also a reformer to chasten and elevate both creed and practice in the churches, he found so disorganized and purposeless. He it was, above all others, that induced these congregations to give over their jealousies and fears in the preparation for a closer union in the Lord by means of a reformation of the churches. To his vast and tireless exertions as missionary in distant regions, he added another grace in his written records of his times as to their religious aspects. Thus he became thrice over entitled to undying recollection and praise.

Mr. Burkitt was born in Chowan county in the year of our Lord 1750. His parents were not blessed with wealth or much knowledge of books. They were like the great body of their countrymen, plain, hard-working people, who, in the utter want of public schools, were thus unable to afford any large advantages to their eager and intelligent boy. It is true, that the towns of Edenton, Newbern and Wilmington in the east, and the Transylvania academies of the western settlements, were in existence, but to the poverty of the Burkitt family they were as inaccessible as were Oxford and Cambridge Universities in England. No doubt, at rare intervals, little Lemuel Burkitt went along with his parents and saw in Edenton the pomp of the Colonial courts, as, amid an army of sheriffs with drawn swords, the judges, in their bag wigs and gowns, opened in the King's name their solemn proceedings. He saw a still more imposing pageant each winter, if in Edenton when the General Assembly met. The wharves, too, of that ancient capital were thronged at that day with vessels from beyond the seas and those engaged in the New England and West India trade. Edenton was the foremost port of entry and thus held a paramount importance among the sister towns of the Province.

To a boy of Lemuel Burkitt's natural acuteness such opportunities of seeing the higher aspects of human life were by no means lost. No doubt St. Paul's Episcopal church, with surpliced rector and its organ and choir, came in also for its due portion of impressions on the sensitive and imaginative soul of the lad. The grand harmonies of the chants, the pomp and beauty of the liturgy, were alike a revelation and inspiration to him, as they have been to countless others, who have listened spell bound to these noble prayers and confessions of the soul uttered by the great prelates of the past.

But with all these impressive accessories to her system of worship, the English church failed to satisfy the longings of Lemuel Burkitt's soul. He had made himself scholar enough to read King James' English version of the Holy Scriptures, and he had heard more than one Baptist evangelist giving his gloss as to the disputed points in the New Testament. The great problems which are ever suggesting themselves to the heart of man were not wanting in the early experience of this acute and profound human intelligence. He could understand how the wisest of men had come to the deep question of "wherein shall a young man cleanse his way?" In the mystery and suggestions of the right reason, these fearful self-questionings could not be evaded, however successful he might be in the companionship and pangs of the day's duties. "What shall it profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" cried the Son of God, and the words came to Lemuel Burkitt with all the sanctions they had known with the multitudes on the plains of Galilee. In such communion with his own spirit, Lemuel Burkitt fled for refuge to that divine love and compassion, in whose unfailing help so many myriads of other agonized souls have found peace and rest. In his nineteenth year he thus made an open profession of religion and became a member of the Baptist church, then known as Camden, but was really the old mother-stock, Shiloh. He was baptized by Rev. Henry Abbott. There is now no account of any other Baptist church in all the region of old Albemarle east of Chowan river and north of the sound. There was Meherrin in Hertford, Sandy Run in Bertie, and Kehukee in Halifax. It was thus only by some considerable travel that Mr. Burkitt could reach any congregation of his own faith and order.

He was not alone in his glory as a leader of men in the ancient bailiwick of Chowan. There were a score or more of gentlemen known and honored all over the Province who then had their residence in its limits. That learned jurist, Mr. Barker, who was the law tutor of Gov. Samuel Johnston, was yet the greatest name in the courts. Mr. Samuel Johnston and Mr. James Iredell, his brother-in-law, were to reach even higher honors and renown that was ever the fortune of their instructor. Besides these legal and civil luminaries Edenton numbered in its inhabitants, the Pollocks, Benburys, Swains, Brownriggs, Johnsons, Creecys, Jones's, and other families noted for wealth and culture. Reared in such a community, it was no wonder that Mr. Burkitt should have been incited to early and strenuous efforts at self-improvement in mind as well as the more solemn and important matter of escape from wrath to come in the next world. Like many more of his North Carolina compeers, this work of education and mental discipline was to be almost wholly dependent upon his own unaided exertions. Reference has already been made to the great dearth of schools in the Province. There was a parallel want of books also. Indeed the lists of the literary treasures included in the libraries of the richest and most intelligent men of that day seems pitiable to the minds of men who, in this generation, rejoice in such overflowing abundance. A few great men might add Shakespeare's and Addison's works to their English Bible, but all other British and French classics were conspicuous by their absence. It is probable that Elder Burkitt's whole literary repertory was included in the Bible, Pilgrim's Progress, Watts' Hymns and Gill's Theology. Not even the wisdom of Dr. Johnson or the wit of Pryor and Steele had as yet triumphed over the double obstacles of an intervening ocean and the stolid ignorance of the people. The sole reliance of the great mass of the North Carolinians of that day, in the matter of educating their children in the first rudiments of literary culture, was in the homeless wanderers, who passed from settlement to settlement and for brief seasons would halt long enough to teach for a brief season the children of their temporary vicinage. They thus got food and lodging by quartering on first one family and then another, and in addition won a stipend, meagre at best for his labors in the log school house. These restless peripatetics were thus too general in their favors to work much benefit at any single scene in their careers. To such instructors the great preacher of the future was indebted for all the small aid he received in fitting himself for the future that as yet seemed so hopeless to his most ardent imaginings.

We may imagine, but would be utterly unable to describe, the added anguish of soul that came to young Lemuel Burkitt when, in God's providence, he had become convinced of his duty to devote his life to a proclamation of the gospel. With all his peerless native endowments both as to mind and energy of purpose, he found at every step of his study, not only of Gill's Theology but in the sacred text itself, a thousand things that were all riddles and darkness. His ignorance of the orientalisms and figures of Hebrew speech, the confusing historical and geographical allusions, and the thousand other things which dishearten and dismay every scholar unfitted by want of previous preparation to comprehend the task before him. But the race is not always to the swift. Determination, love and prayer have unlocked all that is needed to be known in God's word to countless others far less competent to struggle with such difficulties as thus beset Mr. Burkitt in his first efforts in such a field. His want of early preparation made his way to knowledge far more difficult and protracted, but his genius, supported both by religious zeal and native resolution, in the end enabled him to become both prophet and priest to his admiring and devoted countrymen.

The House of God.

"Do you like to go to church and attend the other church services?"

"I like the services pretty well after I get there, but sometimes I do not like to go."

This answer explains what is no doubt true of many people, old and young. The worship is interesting to them when they are at it, but thinking about it, and putting itin competition with other things—reading a pleasant book, sitting by a cozy fire, talking to a congenial friend—it is not so easy to go out and seek it. In so far as such a disposition exists, the person is wanting in a good promising christian character. It presents a point at which he may begin a course of special religious culture.

Every believer ought to aim at feeling that, of all places in the world, the house of God is that in which he will have the greatest pleasure, and that to be kept away from it is his greatest pain. The services may not always be to his liking; the sermon may not please him, and even the preacher be a trial; the singing disturb his nerves, the prayers fail to meet his want, and the collections fall below what he thinks respectable. He may, literally—the supposition is an extreme one—find nothing in the exercises to which he can heartily respond. And yet, if he be true, earnest, having a longing for God's honor and a blessing upon his effort at promoting it, he will say: "This is the house of God, the place where his honor dwelleth. How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts! My soul longeth, yea fainteth for the courts of the Lord; my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God."—Selected.

They are learning in the West that a man with no belief is like the two dogs in an express packing box. "Where are they going?" was asked. "I don't know," replied the expressman, "they don't know, no one knows. They have eaten their directions."

Dr. Skinner on Mission Methods.

To one in North Carolina, where all is loyalty and co-operation with our Boards and methods, it does appear a little strange that Dr. Goodwin's letter on the "Methods of Missions" should stir up the brethren to such an extent.

We see no occasion for excitement. Our Board is certainly able to bear friendly criticism. It is an old and experienced body, justly claiming the sympathy of us all. It has done a great work, but the world moves, and so must we all move up and keep in line of the front. Baptists must not be too conservative. Some improvements in our methods must follow the spirit of the age in which we move. But upon the whole, we cannot go far wrong in following the apostolic methods. The Pauline ideas were suppressed by the Petrine conceptions until the sixteenth century. Since the Reformation every one is for Paul. Now the gospel is missionary, expansive, world wide. The methods to be employed under Paul's leadership have supplanted those of the Judaizing character. Still there is philosophy in the fifth gospel—the Acts. The history of the early christian churches must not be cast aside as effete. The truth never wears out, though its application may vary.

The gospel church is without doubt the divinely appointed instrument of spreading the kingdom of God. Education, modern civilization, commerce, science and art, are each and all helpers, but they must not be substituted for God's ordained instrument, the gospel church—the assembly of believers, with the word and the ordinances, each church a unit, independent, sovereign, spirit taught and guided, always unto the end of the world.

Look at our own history in Foreign Missions. Judson translated the Bible first of all. After seven years God gave him one convert. That one convert was big pay, because as a fact it expressed God's favor towards the labor of his servant, and that labor involved its methods as well as its spirit. It was the true gospel method.

Upon the same field, and at the same time, the Free Church of Scotland sent Dr. Duff as their missionary. He was the successor of Chalmers in Scotland. Dr. Duff made education the first and indispensable instrument in the conversion of the heathen. He erected a building, gathered a faculty, and filled his college with heathen young men whom he educated and sent out to become, contrary to his hope, powerful opponents of the gospel and its aims. They were educated but not converted. Dr. Duff's mission was for a long time a failure, if it is not now even; while Judson's work fills the highest page of Foreign Missions in the nineteenth century. The one followed the gospel method, the other did not.

Then how important are our methods in mission work.

The one began in the lowest stratum of society and like the leaven worked upward and outward. So the Pauline method worked, until the population of the Roman Empire of one hundred millions became permeated with the true spirit of the gospel. The poor saints suffered martyrdom, but as Turtullian tells us, "the blood of the christians became the seed of the church." Now, christianity is too much after the world and the things of the world—respectability, wealth and fashion. Then, the highest accomplishment of the believer was to suffer for Christ, that he might reign with him.

Times are greatly changed, but the gospel has not. Why, then, should its methods change, which are no small part of the gospel itself. The State Church theory that the polity of the churches is left to the enlightment of christians, is false, as well as being the nest egg of heresy; as for instance the change of the ordinances, and hence infant baptism, &c.

It is not the purpose of the writer to follow Dr. Goodwin's positions, nor the able replys of Dr. Bell, but a single illustration will suffice to show the importance of methods in the propagation of the gospel. And if we insist on methods, we must employ a system of methods. That system must be found in the gospel itself as contained in the Acts of the Apostles. The essence of that system may be expressed in the words that the gospel is a self-propagating power. Not that the gospel is able to propagate itself merely. Not that you can use its methods if you prefer to do so or not; but that these methods are imperative and must be used, if you would not falsify the gospel itself. The unit of the spread of the gospel, or missions as we call it, is the gospel church—one independent and sovereign body, scattered over the world in contradistinction to the centralized idea of the church, as held by Rome, ruling the world from a local center and calling itself the world-church.

Now a gospel church in China, for instance, should observe the same methods of self-sustenance and propagation as a gospel church in Virginia or North Carolina. Or to change the language, our Foreign Mission Board at Richmond should so instruct its missionaries in their preaching and teaching of the heathen converts that they would from the beginning understand it to be their duty to support and spread the gospel. The policy of our North Carolina State Mission Board (and I presume it is the policy of all of our State Boards,) is to withdraw our aid from a weak or young church within two or three years after that aid has been tendered. If it does not show a tendency to growth, self-sustenance and propagation, we leave it alone and seek newer and fresher fields for cultivation. Is not this wise? If it is a true gospel church it will have life and grow and propagate and plant other churches. The aid of the Board is continued sufficiently long to ascertain this by the development.

One more thought is, that the method of missions will be found inseparable from the spirit of missions. An earnest, humble, self-sacrificing, Christ like spirit will unconsciously and happily employ the methods at hand, and these will be invariably and naturally apostolic, or similar to the methods used by the Apostles. T. E. SKINNER.

The Spread of the Gospel.

"The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal till the whole was leavened."—Matt. 13: 33. "A little leaven leavens the whole lump."—1 Cor. 5: 6.

The idea here presented is, that the gospel is an efficient force, operating silently but effectually, and at last shall be recognized and acknowledged the mightiest force in the universe, subduing every force that hinders and opposes.

A great many people seem to think that we ought to send the gospel to those who are ready to receive it and are calling for help; but this idea is in conflict with the teachings of Scripture and all the precedents established by the practice of the apostles and early christians. Christ came into a world that hated him, scorned him, rejected him, and chose a murderer in his stead, and at last put him to death; and he warned his followers that the world would hate them and reject them. Christ came into this hateful and hating world to save it, and so he has sent his followers into it to carry out this work of saving. If the world had been reconciled to God, Christ had not come, for there would have been no occasion for his coming.

So in like manner there is less occasion for sending the gospel to those that are ready to receive it than to those who oppose and hinder. In the one case the leaven is already working; in the other it is absent altogether.

The fact of any people's inquiring after the truth is evidence that the truth has found an entrance among them—the leaven is working, and some where it will find its culmination in subduing that opposes.

The spirit of opposition to the gospel and the persecution of its teachers and devoters of to-day will not compare with the times of the apostles and early christians, and yet they carried the gospel from one country to another country, and from one people to another people, till in the course of a few years christianity was planted in the whole Roman world. Do we not depend too much on human machinery and human methods? The apostles built no churches, i. e., houses, so far as we know, they founded no schools, they preached the gospel, they put the leaven into the meal, and left the consequences with God who had committed the dispensation of the gospel unto them. God proposes to save the world through preaching. This was the apostles missions; it is ours.

The apostles established no mission stations. They established churches in every city, and these churches were God's working forces wherever planted, and the apostles pushed out into the region beyond.

Salvation is by faith. Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. How shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent?

God puts emphasis on preaching, and we ought to give good heed to our orders. In the prosecution of our work at home and abroad we need three things: First, money; second, the spirit of consecration; third, to stand fast by the simplicity of gospel methods. And to my mind the last is by no means the least.

When we work in God's way, we shall more and more make manifest the life of Christ, and this shall develop the spirit of consecration, or rather produce it, and then our people will give for the spread of the gospel; give as God has prospered them. Let us stick to our marching orders.

JOHN AMMONS.

Cheerfulness.

How contagious it is! "I cannot meet Mr. ——— without getting a gleam of sunshine into my own life," said a friend recently. How we all need it! How one cheerful face lights up and brightens a company, and changes in the thought of a disheartened pastor the whole aspect of a congregation! What right has one to look like a thunder-cloud and to generate darkness and gloom wherever he goes? Be cheerful. Cultivate a pleasant look, and a pleasant way of speaking to every one. Never take a doleful view of things; then no one will cross the street to avoid meeting you or feel that his peace of mind is destroyed by a brief interview. The clear sky and bright sunshine after days of rain and fog are no more grateful than the cheering face and presence of those who reflect the most of the image of God.—Christian Inquirer.

Let youth, the morning of your days, be cheered with the light and joy of religion; and though life may be somewhat a cloudy day, its progress will be pleasant, and its close delightful as a summer evening.—Cushing.

"Let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home; for it is a shame for women to speak in the church. Let the women learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence. For Adam was first formed, then Eve. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being decived was in the transgression. MISAPPROPRIATION OF PUBLIC MONEY.

The Baptists have always been a "peculiar people;" peculiar in their strict adherence to scriptural baptism, peculiar in contending for a converted church membership; for the independence of the churches; for voluntary giving for religious purposes, &c., &c. Their views about a converted church membership, voluntary giving for religious work, and their inveterate opposition to the union of Church and State, have put them on record as strongly opposed to being taxed by the State for the support of private enterprises or sectarian schools, churches or benevolent institutions of any kind.

Since Henry VIII. the Church Establishment has prevailed in England. Before Henry VIII. the Catholic church was supported in many parts of the world by State money, as it has always been the policy of the Catholics to unite Church and State. Henry VIII. only copied from Rome in introducing the Establishment in England. The grinding system of taxation for the support of the Establishment of England was not fully perfected until the reigns of Elizabeth and some of her Protestant successors. The Germans, Austrians, Russians, all have State churches. France, though a republic, has as yet rid herself only partially of this incubus. As Americans, we should give our sister republic our hearty sympathy in her heroice struggle, in the face of the frowning monarchies of Europe, for civil and religious liberty. It is passing strange, however, that France should form an alliance with Russia, one of the most despotic governments on the face of the earth. The Czar's persecution of the helpless Jews and Baptists has almost placed him beyond the pale of even a quasi christendom.

In England all are taxed to support the Establishment, and it was to be expected that the same order of things would be attempted in America whilst the colonies were under British rule. Nor was the tendency toward the Establishment eradicated by the success of the thirteen colonies in throwing off the British yoke. Though our forefathers obtained, after much suffering and loss of blood, civil independence, they had rather loose views, in some States especially, about religious liberty. This fact was more noticeable in States where the Church of England, or the Episcopal church, had obtained a firm footing. Virginia, North Carolina, and other States, had a long and bitter struggle before their people were finally rid of the Establishment. In this struggle it is an undeniable fact that the Baptists led all others. We have a perfect right to claim this as a part of Baptist history. With the going of the Establishment went the right of the Federal or State Governments to tax the people of America to support private or sectarian schools, benevolent institutions, and, of course, churches.

Tyranny dies hard, however, and the legislation of the country, notwithstanding the plain prohibition of the Federal Constitution, and the equally express prohibition of many State Constitutions abounds in direct, or indirect, efforts on the part of scheming politicians, or plausible churchmen, to support sectarian institutions by drawing on the Federal or State treasury. The recent large amounts appropriated by Congress for the education of the Indians in the Indian Territory, which passes through Catholic hands, is a proof that the legislation of enligthened America is not proof against abuses. The manner in which the public school money of New York is spent smacks strongly of predominant Catholic influence.

One of the most common ways in which the public money is obtained to support private or sectarian work is for a church or society to attempt work that is plainly benevolent, and which it is plainly the duty of the church or State to attempt, and failing to find among their people an adequate support, they appeal to the State for aid, on the ground that they are doing a work of pure benevolence, which would otherwise fall on the hands of the State, and hence the State onght to help. For instance, there are many helpless poor in the land, and it is usually considered the duty of the State to provide for them rather than that they should starve. As a matter of fact, the State does attempt to do so. Some scheming christian (?) sects that wish to build themselves up at the expense of the State may, however, take quite a number of the poor into institutions they prepare for them, and then when supplies fail (this is part of the program) they earnestly appeal to the State for an appropriation, on the ground that they are doing State work, and as they have ample accommodations, &c., it would be cheaper for the State to give the needed financial help, or supplement their income by such an appropriation.

Again, there are a large number of helpless orphans in this and other States. It is a disputed question whether these should be provided for by the State or the churches. Some are, we suppose, quite satisfied that the State should provide for them by gathing them into homes, learning them useful trades, avocations, etc. Others are just as sure that the churches of Christ should provide for them; so there is difference of opinion about this thing. Now it is quite an easy thing for some benevolent society or religious denomination to gather many of these little waifs into elegant homes, and then sufficient supplies not being forthcoming, piteous appeals may be made to the State for aid, with the plea that they are bearing some State burdens, and the State would save money by aiding them to continue doing so. All this appears very nice, and some legislators have so much maudlin charity, or so little sense, as to fail to see the real design.

There are some secret organizations among our people whose works of charity, as such, are commendable, and they cannot be questioned as to manliness or sincerity. Against these, when working in their usual way, and in their legitimate sphere, we are offering here no protest. Many of our honored brethren are members of such organizations. But Jesuitism is not dead, and it is an unquestioned fact that churchmen (this word is here used in the broad sense of referring to any or all denominations) may find their way into such societies in such large numbers as to virtually capture them, and thus control the appointment of the officers that preside over the benevolent institutions under their control. The Jesuit principle, "Everything for Holy Mother Church," may be utterly ignored by many who denounce in unmeasured terms that crafty order; but in a more genteel form, and by almost as objectionable cunning, they may be guilty of the same thing.

We are prepared to say that no society, no church, no organization of a private kind, has a right to appeal to the State for State money to run institutions under their control; it matters not though such institutions be filled with orphan children or the poor of the land. Yet in this State, Baptists are being taxed to support one or more such institutions. If State money is used to support an orphanage, a college or what not, said institutions should be under the direct control of the State, and all the officers or directors of such institutions should hold office only by the authority and at the pleasure of the State. There are no people on the face of the earth more willing to bear their part of State burdens than the Baptists. They will cheerfully consent to be taxed for the support of insane asylums, institutes for the deaf, dumb or blind, for agricultural colleges, &c., when it is evident that they are State institutions. But they offer a perpetual protest against being taxed to support any institution, however benevolent its work, that is manipulated in the interest of any benevolent society, church, &c.

REV. C. S. FARRIS, editor of the Florida Baptist Witness, issued a Convention number of the Witness last week—a large and valuable paper filled with articles of decided merit.

THE State Chronicle of January 17th prints a communication from T. W. Patton of Asheville, N. C., in reference to the conviction and execution of John Wilson, which gravely reflects upon the ministers of the gospel of Asheville, N. C. We do not believe a word of what is said about the preachers, and are surprised that a paper claiming to be respectable, however violently sectarian it might be, should give publicity to such a slanderous publication. We reproduce here for the benefit of our Asheville brethren what Mr. Patton says about a Baptist preacher. After representing other ministers as being indifferent to the fate of the murderer Wilson, &c., &c., he says, as Wilson was on his way to the gallows:—

"A Baptist clergyman met him. 'Ah! Wilson, have you been baptized?' 'Yes, by an Episcopal clergyman.' 'Stop, stop that will never do! Sheriff take him out. I will break the ice in this river and immerse him.' Oh, poor feeble body, who can tell the agonies you endured for the residue of that freezing ride?"

This carries falsehood on its face. Baptist preachers do not baptize persons who have not professed faith in Christ, nor even then till they voluntarily apply for membership into a Baptist church and baptism. There is not a Baptist preacher in the world who would do as Mr. Patton and the State Chronicle represents. Will our Asheville brethren please write us about this reported baptism?

....Rev. George W. Gardner of Oxford, Miss., becomes associate editor of the Baptist Record. We congratulate our Mississippi brethren. Bro. Gardner is a vigorous, well equipped writer, as his letters in the RECORDER, some years ago, signed "Uncle Cris," proves. We shall read the Record with more than usual interest.

....Rev. S. F. Conrad of Winston has done a great work at Walnut Cove and Ruffin, the two mission points, in building two nice houses or worship. He still owes about sixteen hundred dollars on these houses and deserves the help of all his brethren. The debt ought to be paid. Let us all help him a little, hard as the times are.

....Rev. M. A. Adams of Wake Forest College accepts the call to Jonesboro, Tenn. Bro. Adams is one of our most promising young ministers, and his removal to Tennessee will be truly regretted by all who know him. We commend Brother and Sister Adams to the Baptists of Tennessee. They are worthy of a large place in the affections of all the Lord's people.

....Rev. Dr. D. B. Nelson of Asheville, brethren H. W. Scott of Belcross, Rich of Winston, George Cook of Northampton, W. H. Riddick of Gates, R. Pool of Granville, C. R. Scott of Chatham, A. L. Gouch of Granville, J. P. Rickman of Hendersonville, Rev. J. L. Cottingham of Wilson's Mills, with quite a number of other good brethren, called to see us last week, bad as the weather was for visiting.

....Rev. W. A. Pool, pastor of the Baptist church, has resumed his ministerial work which was interrupted last fall by trouble with his throat. Treatment has in large measure relieved him and last Sunday week, the first Sunday after the expiration of his vacation, he preaching a strikingly able sermon—one of the finest he has ever preached since he has been here.—Statesville Landmark.

....The marriage of Mr. Geo. B. Carter, representative of A. Hoen & Co., lithographers, Baltimore, and formerly well known in North Carolina, to Miss Sue Funk, an attractive and popular young lady of Hagarstown, Md., was happily performed at the latter place on January 12th, 1892. Mr. Carter is now managing the business of his firm at Pittsburg, Pa., for which place the happy couple left immediately after the ceremony.

....Cardinal Simeoni, once Papal Secretary of State and Prefect General of the Romish Propaganda, died in Rome, Italy, on January 14th, and Samuel Peronica, the poor Italian who walked the streets of Raleigh for weeks crying, "Peanut candy, cocoanut candy, five cents only," died about the same time. Our interest in and sympathy for Mr. Peronica were all absorbing, when compared to that for Mr. Simeoni. Both died of the same disease.

....Rev. T. B. Creath of Jarratt's Va., is now nearly ninety years old. He is the only one of the brethren now alive who attended the First General Association of Virginia in Fredericksburg. Bro. Creath has suffered much recently from sickness, but is now improving. Though blind and almost helpless, his faith is strong, and he anticipates with pleasure the coming day of his deliverance from earth and his entrance on his eternal rest.

... Rev. J. R. Jones of Milton, N. C., writes: "That communication in the RECORDER from Judge Winston ought to be copied by every paper in the State. I have been made to feel sad and ashamed by seeing little boys chained together with grown men and on the way to the penitentiary. It seems to me that to whip them soundly and send them back home would be wiser than to send them to the penitentiary where the association will certainly not improve their character."

....E. Frost, Esq., of Cana, Davie county, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Thomasville Orphanage, passed through Winston last night en route for Thomasville. He was accompanied by Miss Lucy Jones of Farmington, who goes to take charge of a department in the institution. Mr. Frost said that he had received information from Superintendent Mills that nearly every one of the 130 inmates in the Orphanage was confined with the grippe. The Executive Committee will hold its annual meeting at the Orphanage on the 27th inst.—Winston Daily Sentinel, 14.

....Prof. J. Rufus Hunter of Osh Kosh, Wisconsin, subscribes for the RECORDER, and says: "I want to hear from the Baptist brotherhood in North Carolina occasionally, and so want their common medium of expression. I am very pleasantly located here in this far Northern State, where the temperature reaches thirty-five or forty degrees below zero. I am enjoying my work very much. I find warm-hearted people here, and an active Baptist church in this city, which is now without a pastor, by the way. Would like for some of North Carolina's gifted ministers to be called here on my own account, at least."

Turned Over to Rev. C. Durham.

The Board of Missions and Sunday-schools, at the meeting held in Raleigh on evening of January 12th, 1892, unanimously voted to turn over the Sunday-school and Colportage work, with the Supply Store and its management, to Rev. C. Durham, Corresponding Secretary of the Convention, and authorized him to employ such additional clerical assistance as may be necessary for the efficient prosecution of the work. I make this statement that the pastors of our churches and the Sunday-school workers may be informed of our action. The Board desires the hearty co-operation of all our Sunday-schools, and thinks with the present arrangements, it can promise promptness in filling all orders for Sunday-school and Colportage supplies at the lowest prices possible.

JOHN C. SCARBOROUGH,
President of the Board.

Letter from Rev. C. B. Justice.

Dear Recorder:—I am reading a number of papers, both secular and religious, but regard the BIBLICAL RECORDER as being by far the best of them all.

On Saturday, Dec. 26th, I was the recipient of a nice gold-headed cane, and my wife of a nice silver butter dish, both presents by the members of the Rutherfordton Baptist church. This event was both a surprise and a pleasure, as it was on the anniversary of my twentieth year as pastor of this church. How helpful it is to be thus reminded of the esteem and sympathy of our brethren. The presentation speech was made by Deacon J. S. Cannady, who, by the way, is quite sick, but we are praying the Lord to make him well.

I am glad to learn of the success and peace of the brethren over the State. The longer I live the more I love my brethren and pray God's blessings on them.

I enjoyed Bro. Stradley's article in the last RECORDER.

My father, aged seventy-eight years, has been quite sick for the last ten days with pneumonia. At times we have almost despaired of his life, and at present he is not out of danger.

Your brother, C. B. JUSTICE.
Rutherfordton, Jan. 11, 1892.

Second Meeting of the Centennial Committee.

The Committee met at the Hamilton Hotel, Washington, D. C., Drs. T. T. Eaton, F. M. Ellis, H. H. Harris, I. T. Tichenor and the writer being present. Dr. H. C. Mabie, the Home Secretary of the Missionary Union of Boston, met with the Committee, and expressed his regret that Deacon Hibbard of Boston and Dr. Geo. D. Boardman of Philadelphia, who had been appointed to confer with us, were prevented from doing so, the one by sickness, and the other by providential hindrances.

Upon invitation, Dr. Mabie made a statement of the progress the Northern Baptists have made in preparing for the Centennial work, and expressed for those he represented the most cordial willingness to co-operate with the Southern Baptists in commemorating the hundredth anniversary of the modern missionary enterprise, and invited the Southern brethren to unite with them in their Centennial meeting to be held in Philadelphia, May 24th, 25th and 26th next.

On motion of Dr. F. M. Ellis, it was agreed to accept the invitation of our Northern brethren to meet with them in their anniversaries in May next, and that Dr. T. T. Eaton, the chairman of this Committee, be appointed, on the part of this Committee, to represent Southern Baptists on that occasion, and that the brethren of the Missionary Union be invited to send representatives to our Centennial meeting to be held in Atlanta, Ga., also, in May next.

It was also concluded to regard the meeting to be held in Louisville, Ky., in October next, as a general one, in which all the Baptists of America be invited to participate.

Drs. Eaton, Tichenor and Harris were appointed a programme committee for both of these meetings, and a programme was agreed upon as to the Atlanta meeting, subject to such changes as the Committee may see fit hereafter to make. I am not at liberty to make known the speakers selected for this occasion, but it is gratifying to know that North Carolina will not be without an honorable representative.

The Committee approved of the idea of preparing a map showing the stations of the Home Mission Board.

A resolution was heartily passed, earnestly requesting the Eutaw Place church, Baltimore, to release their pastor, Dr. F. M. Ellis, from pastoral work for service to the denomination and the cause of missions during the Missionary Centennial, and if this could not be done, the Committee then asked the church to allow Dr. Ellis to be absent at least one Sunday each month with intervening days, that he may visit as many States of the South as he possibly can and stir up the people by his mighty eloquence in this great and sublime subject.

We hope to have him speak in half a dozen or more places in North Carolina during the year, and it may be that he will visit us in February or March, though nothing definite was agreed on as to that.

A very elaborate communication was received from the Women's Missionary Union Rooms, No. 10 East Fayette St., Baltimore, setting forth the plans they have adopted to enlist the women and children of the South in this grand enterprise, and expressing their great desire to have the names of all the Baptist Sunday-school superintendents in the whole South. They state that they have written the Sunday-school Board in Nashville, the State Mission Boards and Sunday-school Boards of each State, the Baptist Publication Society of Philadelphia, and that the results of all their labors are most unsatisfactory. It is of the utmost importance to the success of this work that they shall be brought into communication with every Sunday-school superintendent, and I hereby make an earnest appeal to every superintendent and every pastor to furnish Miss Annie Armstrong, by postal card and at once, with his name and address.

Other matters of detail were considered, which would not interest the public, and which I omit, but this I must not omit, that the meeting was an inspiring and deeply spiritual one, and we hope will be eminently helpful to the cause we have in hand.

T. H. PRITCHARD.

What are we Going to Do for the Enlargement of the Work during the Centennial Year for Missions?

From what I can gather, we are not as active in this work as brethren in other places. Does not the Centennial movement impress us favorably? North Carolina Baptists have not been indifferent to the work of spreading the gospel. I do not believe she will hear this call without heeding. From other States news comes of enthusiastic meetings, but quiet reigns in our borders. I hope we are getting ready for a vigorous campaign. The English Baptists have already secured eighty thousand of the one hundred thousand crowns from the young people of the churches. How much will the young people of the churches of North Carolina give this year to this work? If we hope to secure results at all commensurate with the occasion, several things are necessary:

1. Unity of purpose. Jesus told his disciples that symphony was essential to successful praying. May it not also be as essential to successful work. To have good music there must be harmony. One discordant note will mar the melody of the orchestra. I must confess the articles on "Methods of Work" sound like a discordant note in the harmony of effort. We do not need criticism so much as increased receipts, and anything that will decrease gifts at this time seems most untimely and out of place. It seems to me it would be better to have such things said, if they must be said, if there is a demand for them, at our Conventions where the many in our churches won't hear them, and where they won't do so much harm.

There is much anti-missionary spirit still in existence. Nothing should be said at this time certainly to increase it. Many of our people are not too liberal. We don't want anything uttered now to affect their liberality, except to increase it. Many love money well enough; don't let us do anything to intensify that love. To complain of small results seem to be finding fault with the Lord of the harvest. "The Lord giveth the increase."

2. Gifts from the rich. Men whom God has blest with large fortunes can now exercise the noble grace and find that it "is more blessed to give than to receive." We are glad to see that in some places generous donations are being received from the wealthy.

3. Gifts from the many in our churches who will have to sacrifice to do it, but to whom the giving will be a precious grace. Gifts, the price of self-denial and toil, but a free-will offering, acceptable to the Lord.

4. Pastor's part. He must lead, as well as feed the flock. His conduct will be the key note to which this song of giving and living for God and the heathen will be sung. The people will wait for him, and many will do as he does. Brethren, let us do our duty as we have the opportunity. Let us see the possibility there is in this opportunity. Let us hold meetings at convenient points where we can get the people together. Wherever there shall be a Union Meeting this month, let some one see that this work has an important place, and in the midst of much speaking don't forget the gifts.

Since the meeting of the last Southern Baptist Convention, I have visited a number of churches in the interest attended several Associations, and have appointments for six other meetings in near future.

"Let us do with our might what our hands find to do." R. VANDEVENTER.

Henderson, Jan. 15, 1892.

From Scotland Neck to Aulander.

For three years I lived among the people of Scotland Neck and its vicinity. These years were toilsome, but three more pleasant years I never spent among any people. As I think over this period, the years were marked with uniform kindness and substantial tokens of regard and appreciation. It was with real sadness I severed the most pleasant relation with this true and noble band of christian workers.

During my labors among this people, the field developed some little, I hope, and withal we were enabled to perceive that slight headway had been made. And I esteem my successor a fortunate man, and heartily commend the field with the good people of Scotland Neck and vicinity to his best efforts and his highest and warmest confidence.

With brethren Vann and Ballard as the successors of Dr. Hufham and myself, and the heroic band of Sunday-school workers, I see nothing but the most gratifying success awaiting their united efforts. I hereby acknowledge myself debtor to them for their kindness to the last hour of our sojourn among them, and shall ever cherish the most kindly feelings for the people of the southern part of Halifax county.

AULANDER.

I have been debating the question with myself as to which were the better, the brethren of Aulander or those of Scotland Neck. The brethren here are just as good and kind as those of Scotland Neck, only there are not so many of them. They are just as good as far as they go.

January 7th we reached our new home, and found that brethren had anticipated all our necessities by filling the pantry of the "Parsonage" with a handsome variety of the necessities and some of the luxuries of life, besides other articles, all of which would too tedious to itemize. I will say this, we have more hams and flour in our house than we have had for quite a while. It is literally true that we have much provisions laid up many days. We find ourselves snugly and comfortably housed, feeling much at home and ready for work.

My field consists of Aulander, Bethlehem and Republican churches.

Though I am the first preacher that has had the good fortune to settle among this kind people, yet they know better than some older churches how to administer to his necessities and make him feel at home in their midst.

WEATHER AND LA GRIPPE.

We are passing through some unprecedented weather—rain, snow and mud, which keep one confined rather too close to the house for health and comfort.

There is quite an epidemic of la grippe in this section. Though it is very prevalent, no cases have proved fatal, so far as I have heard. Myself and family have escaped thus far.

Finally, when we become adjusted to our new surroundings, I think we shall feel very much at home.

My correspondents will address me at Aulander, N. C.

With best wishes for a prosperous year to the RECORDER, I am

Yours fraternally and sincerely,

L. M. CURTIS.

Was the Advice Good?

Recently a good brother said to me: "I am thinking of joining a certain benevolent organization. Would you advise me to join or not?" My reply was, think carefully about it, and then do what you think is best. If the time and money you will have to give to that organization will be better spent than if given to God's organization, the church, then join it. As for myself, after a long and careful investigation of the subject, I find that the church, God's organization, which is divine not human in its origin and aim, is the only institution I need through which to do all the benevolent and christian work God requires me to do.

Human organizations are becoming so numerous and imperative in their demands on the time, attention and purses of the people, that God's institution, the church, is being pushed into the back-ground, as not above, but hardly equal to many other organizations.

Thousands of church-members to day are giving more time, attention and money to these human organizations than they do to the church of God.

The existence of so many of these human organizations, and the strong support they get from church-members, shows that the church, God's institution, is regarded as at least a partial failure, and that these institutions are needed to help out where God has failed.

I honestly believe that the same amount of time and money used by human organizations, if used by the church, the Divine institution, would do vastly more good.

The future of genuine christianity would be far brighter, if God's people would turn away from all human organizations, and learn to love the church of God with that ardent devotion expressed by the Psalmist, "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy."

I thank God that when a child, my dear mother taught me a beautiful hymn that so loyally and lovingly breathes the sentiments of the inspired Psalmist. I shall love it as long as I live. In these days when the church is being overshadowed by other institutions, it would be a blessing for all christians to commit this hymn to memory:

"I love thy kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine abode,
The church our blest Redeemer saved
With his own precious blood.

I love thy church, O God,
Her walls before thee stand,
Dear as the apple of thine eye,
And graven on thy hand.

For her my tears shall fall,
For her my prayers ascend;
To her my toils and cares be given,
Till toils and cares shall end.

Beyond my highest joys
I prize her heavenly ways,
Her sweet communion, solemn vows,
Her hymns of love and praise.

Sure as thy truth shall last,
To Zion shall be given
The brightest glories earth can yield,
And brighter bliss of heaven."

J. A. STRADLEY.

The Latest from Cuba.—Letter from Dr. Tichenor.

My trip to Cuba, though brief, was full of interest. The object of my visit was to pay the second installment due on the house of worship purchased in Havana. I reached Havana on Wednesday morning, the 30th, and immediately put myself in communication with the parties to whom the payment was to be made. The next day the matter was consummated, and the full amount due at this time paid to the parties. There remains one more payment which falls due next December.

It may not be immodest for me to say that I am a greater man in Cuba than anywhere else on the face of the globe. When the steamer arrived in Havana on Wednesday morning, brother Diaz and a number of other brethren came out to meet me. As we were nearing the wharf in the little boat which carried us, he told me that quite a number of the congregation were on the shore awaiting my arrival. When we landed I found more than a hundred Baptists drawn up in a solid column ready to greet me. In the front rank was the girls' school, recently established, in their uniform made sailor style, with sailor hats, with bands of blue ribbon, on which in conspicuous gilt letters were the Spanish words signifying "Baptist School." Of course I shook hands with everybody, especially with the young ladies of the school. I need not say that it was exceedingly gratifying to have the Cuban Christians greet me so cordially.

My stay in the city was brief, and the business on which I went engaged my attention so fully, that I got but little opportunity of seeing the brethren in their meetings. I attended the prayer meeting at brother Diaz's church on the night of the thirty-first, when the topic of the evening was: "Taking account of the blessings of the past year, and laying plans for the future." Nearly a dozen brethren made brief speeches in Spanish, which I did not understand. Brother Porta made one which Diaz was kind enough to translate for me into English. He said; "Brethren, a few years ago I was a bankrupt, a poor beggar who had nothing; but a friend, the Lord Jesus Christ, took me into partnership with him, and now I do not know how rich I am. He owns all the resources of the Universe, and as he counts me as one of his children and heirs, I think I am worth several millions in riches that never perish."

The meeting was a very pleasant one. Before its close I talked to the brethren, brother Diaz interpreting for me, commending them for their faith and patience in the past, and exhorting them to continue in their same unfaltering devotion.

On the night of the first of January, brother Cove's Sunday-school had its Christmas tree. This year several of the Sunday-schools had adopted the plan of each having its Christmas festival, instead of holding one at the Central church with brother Diaz's Sunday-school.

When we reached the place, though the hour was early, the room was full to overflowing. I had to wedge my way along through a mass of children in order to secure a position from which I could look upon the Christmas tree loaded with its presents. People continued to arrive, and the doors of the rooms in the rear, opening into the church, were opened for the admission of ladies; the men coming late were excluded. How many were present, I will not undertake to say, but all the standing room inside, and a considerable part of the sidewalk outside, was occupied by those eager to see and hear. Exercise consisting of singing and prayer, and brief recitations by the children preceded the distribution of the gifts. As these were all in Spanish, of course I could not enter into the spirit of the occasion, but the grown people as well as the children seemed to enjoy them immensely.

The recitation of one little tot, which produced more than ordinary amusement, was translated for me by Diaz, and was about as follows:

"Thank the Lord for Christmas. Thank the Lord that Christmas has come. Thank the Lord for the Christmas tree; and thank the Lord that there is a present on it for me!"

It was gratifying to see how many intelligent cultivated looking men and women were present on this occasion. Most of these no doubt were members of the church, and others were parents of the children of the Sunday school.

These schools are a great power in Havana.

Brother Diaz exercises a wise precaution in the selection of the girls for the high school recently established there. He is only receiving such as he can be assured will remain long enough to receive an education that will fit them for the duties of life and great usefulness in the Master's cause. To guarentee this, certain legal steps are taken in the case of every one who comes into the school, in which parents enter into a contract which secures this end.

One day I asked brother Diaz whether his people were manifesting the same spirit of zeal and consecration as heretofore? His face lighted up with an expression such as I fancy Gen. Lee's would have worn when somebody asked him about the fighting qualities of his soldiers, and he replied with emotion, "Oh, yes; just as well as ever, and I believe a little better than ever before."

In reply to my question as to how many had been baptized since the last meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention, he replied that he did not know exactly, but he supposed about one hundred and twenty-five. As far as I could see there was no abatement of interest, no flagging of zeal, no reaction among our people in Havana. Of one thing I am sure, among the multitudes of that great city outside of our churches, sympathy with our people and interest in the cause which they represent is broadening and deepening year by year.

Yours truly, I. T. TICHENOR.

Atlanta, Jan. 11, 1892.

The Teacher.

The first number of this journal issued by the Sunday school Board of the Southern Baptist Convention is now in the hands of many Sunday school teachers. I believe they are delighted with it. Its make-up is excellent, the cover is a thing of beauty, and the entire mechanical work is all that could be desired. The journal presents its readers with a feast of good things. The lesson treatment deserves our first attention, as this is, and must necessarily be, its most important feature. Here we find scholarship in letters and soundness of faith combined, clearness and brevity. The primary teacher is not overlooked, and the aid for such interesting and suggestive. The editorials and contributed articles are of a high order, each one worthy to be read frequently, and of being retained for reference by the christian worker. The article by Dr. Ellis on "Christ for China and China for Christ," might well supply a topic for the prayer meeting and the pulpit. Take it altogether, I think this issue equal, if not superior, to any Sunday-school journal for teachers published, and no one can read it thoughtfully and prayerfully without being mentally and spiritually enriched thereby.

J. J. HALL.

Richmond Union.

This Union will be held with the Cartlege Creek church, six miles from Rockingham, on Saturday before the fifth Sunday in this month.

The following is suggested for discussion:

1. How can the churches best observe, or utilize, this Centennial year of Foreign Missions?

2. How can our members be induced to give, so that their spirituality can be developed thereby?

Inasmuch as the question, "How can the older members of the church be induced to attend the Sunday school?" has been discussed ad nauseam without any visible results, resolved that they are no under no obligation to attend. COMMITTEE.

Program of the Montgomery County Union.

This Union meets with the church at Mt. Carmel on Friday, Jan. 29th, 1892.

Introductory sermon, Friday, 11 o'clock, by Rev. W. M. Bostick.

SUBJECTS FOR DISCUSSION.

1. The duty of church members toward the support of the gospel ministay. Speakers—F. J. Haywood and John F. Crowder.

2. Church-members in the ball-room. R. C. Ogburn and W. B. Owen.

3. What is the great hindrances to the progress of the gospel of Christ? Rev. W. M. Bostick and Haywood Morris.

4. Why so many idle members in the church? J. M. Wright and A. B. Moore.

5. The BIBLICAL RECORDER. Rev. W. M. Bostick and S. N. Fuquay.

All delegates and visitors will be expected to take part in the discussions.

Come out, brethren, and let us have a good meeting. J. L. MCMILLIAN, J. W. DIXON,
Committee.

Rev. Sam Jones will lecture in Raleigh, Feb. 4th and 5th; at Henderson, Feb. 6th; and at Goldsboro at an early date.

The Dangers to be Guarded Against.

I have examined with much care the proposed form of the Sixteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. The dangers to civil and religious liberty, against which the proposed amendment is designed to protect us, are real and great. The amendment has certainly been drawn with much care and wisdom. Every word has doubtless been the subject of careful consideration; and it seems to be complete alike in its conception and expression. The time has come for us as a people to strike a vigorous blow at the root of the entire system of State and national aid to sectarian schools and other uses of public moneys. We should affirm with the utmost emphasis that not one dollar of public money shall be given to any sectarian object. The people have no right to be taxed for denominational purposes. The denominational object may have strong claims upon individual benevolence; but we must not for a moment support them out of the public purse. We are menaced at this moment with the danger of so appropriating public funds. It cannot be denied that a great organization is striving to secure support for parochial schools from public funds. Such as a use of money is contrary to the fundamental idea of our Government. It is an utterly pernicious system. No sectarian body should become a beneficiary of the State or of the General Government. It would seem as if the most effectual method of accomplishing this result is to secure the passage of this Sixteenth Amendment. It ought to receive the support of all good citizens without distinction of party or creed; it ought to appeal to the intelligent and patriotic instincts of the whole nation. Our free institutions, and especially our common school system, are at this moment in danger. The time has come when we must emphasize every distinct American principle. We must lift up our voices as one man against the diversion of public money for sectarian ends. The separation between church and State must be made clear and distinct. This is among the fundamental principles of our Government, and was one of the cherished aims of its founders. Several of our States have already wisely introduced provisions against endangering religous freedom by sectarian appropriations of public moneys; but it is fitting now that a national provision should be made against this dangerous menace.

In making this effort we are much encouraged by remembering that a similar amendment was proposed by President Grant, and was introduced by Mr. Blaine in December, 1875; it is encouraging, also, that this proposed amendment received in the House of Representatives 180 ayes to 7 noes, and in the Senate 28 ayes to 16 noes. Both political parties have also given their indorsement to this principle. The Democratic National Platform, at St. Louis, June 28th, 1876, practically indorsed the position of the Republican National Convention in Cincinnati, June 15th, 1876. Both gave their unqualified approval to the public school system of the United States at the bulwark of the American Republic; both forbade the application of public funds or property to schools or other institutions under sectarian control; and both insisted on the total separation of church and State, alike in the interest of civil and religious freedom. I feel well assured that all intelligent citizens of alien birth will give their hearty indorsement to this movement. When this writer renounced his "allegiance to every foreign prince or potentate," he thereby solemnly pledged himself to uphold American institutions, and to oppose foreign interference with the civil and religious liberties of American citizens. The entire separation of church and State must be maintained, or the enjoyment of liberty among naturalized citizens of various countries and creeds is an utter impossibility. I give this movement my unqualified indorsement. Indeed, I cannot conceive how any citizen, whether of native or foreign birth, can be loyal to this Republic and oppose this amendment. No foreigner, whether he be a civil ruler or a religious teacher, ought to come between a free American citizen and his duties to his native, or his adopted country. The time certainly has come when every American must insist upon the absolute separation between church and State, or the days of the American Republic will soon be numbered. God help us to prize the liberties which were secured at so great cost for the citizens of this favored land! We give to all men of all creeds their rights; but we would be unworthy of our name and honor as American citizens if we permitted them to rob us of our rights.—R. S. MacArthur, D. D., in Independent.

Sundry Items and Comments.

The Southern correspondent of the National Baptist thus describes the region in which he lives:—

"James Parton, in his very interesting 'Life of Andrew Jackson,' defines the South as a country in which everything is a long way off. It is, indeed, the country of magnificent distances. For large bodies of our people, the nearest 'store' is from five to fifteen miles away. The postoffice is from four to twenty miles; the court house from six to thirty; the voting precinct from three to twenty. When we remember that, within an hour's ride of the City Hall in New York, there is crowded together a population nearly as large as that of three Southern States—say Virginia, North and South Carolina, the scattered population in the sparsely settled districts of the South presents some curious phenomena. Let us note

SOME OF THE RESULTS.

When this scribe settled as pastor in Eufaula, Ala., some two years ago, he found that the mails which came by the way of Macon, Ga., were very uncertain as to the time of their arrival. Upon conferring with the postmaster, I learned that the train from Macon had reached Eufaula on time just once in thirty-one successive days; and yet I am not sure that I heard any human being complain of the irregularity.

In some five successive trips to and from Montgomery, about eighty miles, my train was on time once."

And his own neighborhood he writes up thus:

"A very 'black belt' surrounds and includes Eufaula, and on the day of the circus exhibition, I found it difficult, and sometimes impossible, to make my way along the sidewalks, on account of the throngs of negroes. They were perfectly well behaved, however; and though the oldest inhabitant had hardly ever seen so many negroes in town, not a single case of disorder was discovered by the vigilant police. The relations between the races seem to be kindly, and ever cordial. You may visit the postoffice and see the negro employees of large business houses taking the mail from the lock boxes of their employers, and if now and then the negro cannot read the number on the box, he asks some white man to show him the number on the key, and the favor is promptly and kindly granted. I never knew a case in which it was refused."

And why, indeed, should such a favor ever be refused? There are in the whole South hardly half a dozen negroes who would not do as much for almost any human being, black or white, if it were in their power to do it. The negroes are, upon the whole, a very polite and accommodating people.

is noted in many ways; but scarcely anything about its past history is more striking than its pronounced loyalty to the mother country during the colonial days of the 'Old Dominion.' The very names of its rivers attest this loyalty. In accordance with popular custom, I just now spelled the name of one of its rivers 'Rapidan,' but this is a corruption of the Rapid Anne. The stream was named for Queen Anne. The county along whose border it flows is named Orange, for William, Prince of Orange. Queen Anne seems to have been popular here in colonial days, for in this region we have not only the Rapid Anne River, but the North Anna, the South Anna, the Rivanna, and one of the counties is named Fluvanna. Why so many rivers should have been named 'Anna,' or 'Ann,' for a queen who was notoriously not fond of water, but decidedly preferred something stronger, is a question with which my antiquarian lore is not extensive enough to grapple, and I must leave it to the study of those who are curious and expert in such matters."

Well, in the days of Queen Anne, temperance had not been invented. Nearly every one of the biographers of that excellent man, Addison, mentions the fact that this great writer was fond of his glass, and now and then drank too much. But, as Macaulay very properly observes, this was in that day, and even among serious people, regarded as one of the smallest of peccadilloes; and he adds that it was almost as common to drink too much as it was to wear a wig and a sword. Really, it does seem that the world has "reformed that indifferently," nor do we think it wild to hope that we shall "reform it altogether." Certainly it is now no part of the character of a "fine gentleman" to get drunk. To any American statesman it is now a decided disadvantage to be known as a hard drinker. Forty or fifty years ago, quite a considerable number of the ablest party leaders, Whigs and Democrats, were notoriously and shamelessly intemperate in their habits, and several of them were known to appear as speakers in the Senate, in the "House," and on the "stump," so far gone in drink as to be scarcely able to stand. We seldom hear of these melancholy exhibitions in public nowadays. There is reason to believe that public sentiment on this subject is growing healthier; and it is now very generally desired that our legislators, judges and other public officials should be sober men.

From the same correspondent we clip this:

"Within the lasty thirty or forty years

'THE BAPTIST MINISTRY OF THE SOUTH'

has made vast strides in matters of education and general cultivation. A very large proportion of our pastors, even in the more retired rural districts, are educated men, and a great many of our country preachers are men of marked ability and wide influence. A large proportion of our ablest city pastors were reared in the country, and their style of preaching was formed in pastorates of country churches. Many of our most cultivated and vigorous laymen in the city churches were once members of country churches, and have never lost their fondness for the old-fashioned and simple style of work and of worship which nurtured their youth and early manhood.

The influence of our ministry is very largely due to the work of our

which began its work about forty-two years ago in Greenville, S. C., but was afterwards removed to Louisville, Ky., where it now has probably the largest number of students of any similar institution in the world. From the time of its organization, in 1859, to the present day, I have been well acquainted with the work of this seminary; I do not hesitate to say that the course of study, the character of the professors, the high standard of graduation, and the general results in the shape of the alumni, all mark it as one of the very best theological schools that I have ever known. The genius of work pervades the whole place. 'Dawdling' is at a discount; and showy superficialty is severely discountenanced by the professors. The examinations for degrees are singularly thorough and even severe; and a full graduate of the seminary must be a man of broad theological culture. This session has opened very prosperously; and it is confidently believed that the day is not far distant when the students will number five hundred."

And it is not easy to pay a higher compliment to such an institution than is paid when the school is characterized as the residence of "the genius of hard work." And this recalls a story told by the eminent Professor Geo. Frederick Holmes of the University of Virginia. A youth who had for some time been studying law in the office of a famous lawyer, notified his instructor that he (the student) was about to set up as a practitioner. "William," said the old lawyer, "they tell me that you are a genius." The youth blushingly replied, "Well, sir, some of my friends have been partial enough to hint as much." "But, William, it is very unfortunate for a young man to be a genius. Indeed, I know but one misfortune that is greater, and that is for his friends to think him a genius when he is not. But, William, let me tell you that so far as genius means anything that is of any account, genius means hard work." Sir Isaac Newton said that he saw in himself little difference from other men, except in the power of patient thought. OBSERVER.

THE POSITIVELY CURED. THE

THE BEST Camm's Emulsion of Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, combined with the Hypophosphites, is recommended on its merit alone. It is prescribed by many of the leading Physicians of every state in the Union, besides being recommended by the Doctors and teachers of Medicine in Europe. This alone goes far to establish the justice of its claim to superiority. It is beyond doubt the best remedy in the world for the cure of Consumption, and all kindred diseases. It will positively cure consumption, if used before this fearful disease has made too much headway, particularly if it is persevered in after the arrest of the disease. Wherever there is any wasting disease of any kind, Camm's Emulsion is the remedy. To derive the full benefit from this truly valuable medicine, it is recommended that it be used only by the advice of an intelligent Physician. For sale by all druggists. Manufactured only by E. A. I have used the within remedy (Pokine) with great success. JAMES H. LASSITER.

I have used the Pokine Remedy (prepared by W. T. Cheatham, Jr.) in case of Sciatica with the result of positive relief in a few hours, and believe if used as directed is will effect a permanent cure.
J. L. H. MISSILLIER.

MARCH 6, 1891.

For the benefit of the public, I unhesitatingly recommend Cheatham's wonderful remedy, "Pokine," to all sufferers of rheumatism. It has produced marvelous results in my case. I was a sufferer of the malady for five years, and after taking a few bottles was entirely cured.
Very respectfully,
W. W. DOWTIN.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM:
Dear Sir—My wife was down in bed with rheumatism, and the Pokine I bought of you gave her relief after taking four doses. She has not been troubled since. It is the best medicine she ever took for rheumatism. Respectfully,
ZACK DAVIS.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM, JR:
Dear Sir—I have been afflicted with rheumatism time and again, for the past thirteen years. I have received more relief from Pokine than any medicine I ever took, and therefore take great pleasure in recommending it to all sufferers of rheumatism. Very respectfully,
F. G. MITCHELL.

JANUARY 19, 1891.

W. T. CHEATHAM, JR.:
Dear Sir—I desire to say that in January last I was down with rheumatism; my suffering was great, and I was completely prostrated. One bottle of your Pokine completely relieved me, and I have not had any rheumatism since. My son also was relieved of rheumatism by Pokine.
Yours truly,
CHARLES G. BURROUGHS.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM, JR., Henderson, N. C.:
Dear Sir—Being asked my opinion of your rheumatic remedy, Pokine, will gladly state I deem it the only medicine of its kind on the market that will accomplish that which is exclusively claimed for it. Being a sufferer of rheumatism, I consequently tried many remedies, until finally relieved by Pokine. Very respectfully,
J. A. KELLY.

MISS FANNIE E. HECK, Pres. C. C.
MRS. J. A. BRIGGS, Sec. C. C.

Sometime in June, 1891, a few miles from Hwang Hein, China, a team of mules ran away with a missionary party. A Chinese cook, employed by Bro. and Sister League, was in the cart carrying the missionaries, and attempted to catch the reins of the forward mules, but missed his aim and fell under the cart, the wheel running over his leg just above the ankle, breaking both bones. Mrs. League writes to the Foreign Mission Journal states as follows how a Chinese physician treated the wounded cook:

"His family sent for a native doctor before the one from Tungchow arrived. The accident happened about 4 p. m. This doctor arrived at ten, and before he would even go and look at the leg, he had to have a meal prepared for him. That is the Chinese way, and like the laws of the Medes and Persians, 'could not be altered.' Even the poor, suffering man thought of the meal and requested it to be a good one. After eating, he next went in to see the patient, and after an hour said it was set. He merely shoved the protruding bone back in the flesh using a fork and pair of chop sticks to do it, filled up the wound with a mixture of flour and vinegar, bound up the leg and retired. I can't begin to tell you how the poor fellow suffered. His cries were pitiful to hear. Towards day, the doctor from Tungchow arrived. Ho was a native, but trained by the Presbyterian doctor in Tungchow. He set the bone properly and took the patient to Tungchow, where is slowly recovering. * * * You see how we need a doctor. * * * You will probably think I've been appointed a committee of one to secure two doctors for North China, but if I am a 'committee,' I've made myself one. I am quite a lover of home, especially in times of sickness, and don't like the trouble of taking a journey to get medical aid, and troubling our good friends in Tungchow with sick people every summer, and aside from that, so much time is wasted by leaving one's station."

It is stated by Dr. Joseph Simms, who has lately returned from China, that at least 200,000 girl babies are brutally killed in various ways every year in that empire, to get them out of the way.

A Profit to the Denomination.

The Book Department of the American Baptist Publication Society is not a stock company, dividing its profits among its members, as has been sometimes said, but it is the property of the denomination. It is in such shape as to be self-supporting. It pays the salaries of the officers and assistants of the Bible and Missionary Departments out of its profits, and the balance is used in enlarging its great work. As its books and periodicals are bought the colportage work grows.

The Reading of the Word.

A few striking incidents have come to our knowledge from over the sea, of how simple reading of the New Testament, without a word of comment, has been blessed to the conversion of individuals of God's ancient people, the Jews.

A young Israelite in the Crimea, a highly cultivated man, and thoroughly instructed in his own faith, became acquainted with several christian families, and conceived the idea of writing a novel in which the families of the Jews and christians should be contrasted. The better to understand the latter, he bought a New Testament, and had not long studied it before he became convinced that Jesus was the promised Messiah of his people.

In Berlin, a Hebrew artist, desiring to find new subjects for his pictures, began to search for them in the New Testament. As he read, the moral beauty of the Saviour made a deep impression upon him. The more he read the deeper was the impression, until he came to the profound conviction that Jesus was the Son of God.

Such, when once they begin to study it, is the influence of the New Testament upon those who have never known it. And yet how many of us christians, who fancy we know it well, fail to find any decided evidence in our lives that we are gaining anything from it. We read it, but we do not grow by it. Is the reason that we are looking in it rather for doctrines, for truth, perhaps we may call it, than for Jesus Christ, who is the Truth? To know him, this is life eternal.—Christian Observer.

Rev. L. A. Bosworth, 36 Bromfield street, Boston, Mass., writes of a case of pneumonia in a child sixteen months age. The doctor pronounced one lung badly congested, the child very sick, with no reason to hope for an improvement in "less than four or five days." The Electropoise was applied one hour, removed one hour, then reapplied, when in five minutes the child was in a profuse perspiration and sleeping as sweetly as ever in its life. The sleep continued till morning, and the patient awoke and sat up in bed, teasing to be taken up and dressed. The doctor came at 10 a. m. and his surprise was great to find the child sitting and playing with its toys, pale, but as cheerful as ever. Laying him down, the lungs were critically examined, and with the expression, "I cannot understand this, Mrs. F., but I cannot find a trace of pneumonia about the little boy." He tested his temperature, and finding it a trifle below normal on account of the reaction from the intense fever, he became alarmed and declared there was something mysterious about the case, and demanded that the patient have brandy to raise his temperature again. The brandy was not given, and the child was well from the moment when the instrument was reapplied in the process of treatment.

Educating a Preacher.

It is related of Dr. John A. Broadus that after he had made one of his best speeches in favor of endowing Richmond College, a plain Virginia planter rose and said: "Brother Moderator, I am a plain, uneducated man. I've heard a great deal said about the scholar who spoke just now, and I listened carefully to what he had to say, and I did not hear him say a single word that I did not understand. Now, sir, if educating a preacher makes him talk that way, I want to help, and so I'll give $50 to help endow Richmond College." If the story is true, Dr. Broadus never received a higher compliment than that; and all who have ever heard him, on platform or in pulpit, know that it was not mere compliment, but unvarnished truth.

Unfortunately, educating a preacher does not always make him talk that way, because not every man is a Broadus. A theological seminary can do no more than make the best out of such material as the churches send to it. One cannot expect good flour unless good wheat is put into the hopper. A lapidary can polish a diamond, or a ruby, or even an ordinary quartz pebble, but the most skilled lapidary in the world cannot put a polish on a lump of putty. We must not expect impossibilities of our educational institutions. There must be something to educate, something worth educating, in the first instance.

And even granting the existence of a mind worth educating, we must not expect impossibilities. The luminous simplicity that marks the sermons and addresses of Dr. Broadus is the highest product of culture, and is found only in the exceptional few who have the industry, and good taste, and mental power necessary for the attainment of the highest excellence. One may be pardoned, perhaps, for guessing that even Dr. Broadus, in his salad days, was not so simply natural in diction as he is after the practice of years as a public speaker. It would be paying him no compliment to assume that he has learned nothing in a long and useful career. We must not ask our seminaries to turn us out Broaduses. It is enough if they start young men on the right path, and leave them to do the rest for themselves. More than this it would be unreasonable to demand.

Nevertheless, we are persuaded that many young preachers make a mistake in not setting for themselves a sufficiently lofty ideal. Education, genuine education, makes a man simple in diction, clear in style. It is only the half-educated man whose speech is muddy and inflated. Profundity is not obscurity. The deepest and most solemn truths are capable of statement in simple words. It is because Dr. Broadus is a scholar, profoundly versed in religious truths, that he is able to speak so that a plain man can understand every word he says. It is the man that only half knows what he is talking about, who conceals his ignorance in a cloud of verbiage and confuses his hearers. With some this may pass for profundity, as a mud-puddle seems bottomless because nobody can see any bottom; but the puddle is not shallower than the preacher who uses big words to conceal his ignorance. He may do it consciously, to conceal his ignorance from others, or he may do it unconsciously to conceal his ignorance from himself; in either case he is a shallow pretender.

Let us have simpler, more direct, preaching and speaking. The average plain man can comprehend ideas both subtle and profound, if the speaker is one of enough learning to state deep things in simple words. But to do this he must be a man widely read; a scholar, one who has pondered long on divine truth.—Examiner.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure, be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

A Mission for the Age.

The sick and aged are inclined to think that their work is accomplished and that instead of helps they are hindrances. But it is those who are patient and joyful in tribulation may encourage others who are activels at work for the Master. Those who are "strengthened with all might according to his glorious power unto all patience and longsuffering with joyfulness" may strengthen the faith and courage of those who are permitted to labor more directly for the advancement of our Lord's Kingdom.—Christian Inquirer.

Everything for Sunday-school work is now being published by the Publication Society at Philadelphia. Their array of Sunday-school helps is truly wonderful and attractive. Nothing could be more complete than their four quarterlies: The Primary, Intermediate, Advanced and Senior, which, together with their Baptist Teacher, fit every class in our schools. The new features of the Baptist Teacher for 1892 are most commendable. The advances this Society is making are really wonderful. Their publications are sound and strong and in every way safe and serviceable to our Sunday-schools. We recommend them all most heartily.

No two words, perhaps, are more common in thought and speech than reputation and character. Their exact difference, however, is not always borne in mind. They are used interchangeably, as though they were the same. They may be substituted the one for the other at times, but they are very different. Reputation is external, character is within; reputation may be factitious, character is real; reputation is what men think of us, character is what we are; reputation may pass as the bubble or the cloud, character is external. It is well to seek a fair reputation. It is absolutely essential to build up the true character.—Young People's Union.

1864 SADLER'S BRYANT & STRATTON COLLEGE BALTO

FOUNDED IN 1864 by the present executive—27 YEARS of continuous and successful management—Increased annual attendance—Now occupying four buildings—Stands unrivaled in facilities for educating YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN for success in life. In deciding upon a school for their children, PARENTS should send them to THE BEST, because it pays. It may require the expenditure of a few dollars more at first, but it will prove the cheapest in the end. CHEAP tuition is very dear, because it means cheap teachers, cheap surroundings, inferior facilities, and offers NO opportunities for securing POSITIONS for its pupils and graduates. This Institution, owing to its HIGH standard of excellence, has placed in desirable positions more young men and women from Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, than all similar institutions combined. Centennial, Dec. 15, 1791—1891.

CENTENNIAL OF THE TRIUMPH OF BAPTIST PRINCIPLES IN THE INDEPENDENCE OF CHURCH AND STATE IN THIS NATION.

In Philadelphia, during the first session of the second Congress, Oct. 24th, 1791—May 8th, 1792, George Washington, President of the United States, announced Dec. 30th, 1791, the ratification of the ten amendments to the Constitution, Dec. 15th, 1891, by the last State necessary to make them operative as part of the supreme law of the land. The first clause of the first Article declares that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." This was a notable triumph, on a national scale, of a cardinal principle for which American Baptists had contended a hundred and fifty years. With that great event in modern Christendom the churches of Christ in the United States were assured of a career untrammelled by government patronage or penalties; and so in the new world began a new era for the gospel.

The Executive Board of the American Baptist Home Mission Society consider it pre-eminently fitting that the Centennial of the Separation of Church and State in this nation should be appropriately celebrated by American Baptists. Accordingly arrangements are in progress to make this a marked feature of the Society's anniversary in Philadelphia next May. Suggestions will be welcomed by the Board.

In connection therewith will be considered the new opportunities, demands and work of American Baptists on this continent during the first century of this new era. Thus, side by side with the achievements of Baptists in Foreign Missions will be presented the companion piece of their work in Home Missions; hence, a rounded view of the whole "field which is the world," and the conditions under which the work at home and abroad has been prosecuted during this marvelous century.

Furthermore on this four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America, with its exhibit of the material progress of this country, it becomes our christian duty to recount what God hath wrought in the advancement of his kingdom here and to remind men afresh that truth and righteousness are the essential conditions of all good government and real prosperity.

On behalf of the Board,

H. L. MORehouse, Cor. Sec.

New York, Jan. 11, 1892.

Danger Line.

If our judgement is not in fault, there has never been in the history of the Southern Baptist Convention, interest in the cause of the world's evangelization so wide-spread and increasing. This judgment if formed from the spirit and statements of correspondents, the missionary news, and publications of our denominational papers, the demand of religious literature, and a kind of glowing missionary atmosphere among the churches and in the Associations and Conventions wherever one goes in our Southern States. The reason for this state of things is not hard to find. The Centennial year is upon us. Grand and arousing speeches have been made by earnest, eloquent men. Our consecrated women have never been more enthusiastically and sagaciously engaged in kindling and increasing interest. Our pastors have revived the monthly concert for prayer, and more frequently refer to the subject of foreign missions in their sermons and lectures, and more generally and heartily bring the cause, in their public prayers, before a throne of grace. The Centennial Committee is also at work with its plans and efforts. And there can be no doubt that in the Sunday-school, and in the home, and in the marts of business, there is more than usual prayer and conversation on the subject. A gifted correspondent inquires whether satan is not more active also just about this time, in devices to defeat the purposes of God's people, which, though giving no credit to his satanic majesty, may be, on the whole, a good sign of the growth of the work. But, the are two other main causes. One is the multitude of missionary documents that have been scattered among our churches. Since May last, there must have gone out of the mission rooms, at Richmond, no less than a hundred thousand tracts, various in the treatment of the subject of missions, and not a few of them powerful in argument and persuasive in appeal. But the main cause is the manifest presence and power of the God of our missions in the midst of our people. Who does not feel the presence, and partake in some measure, of the power? There are many indications that the movement, plainly started, is to go forward to a grand consummation aimed at by the Southern Baptist Convention.

But, there is danger of a serious mistake being made. There is even now a near approach to the danger line. Excitement of generous emotion not unfrequently dims conviction with regard to practical duty. There is often the unconscious deception that obligation is performed when we feel nobly on a good subject. Sympathy not uncommonly takes the place of beneficence. Here a note of warning must be given. It is a great thing to have our people educating and arousing themselves for great deeds in the near future. But there are great deeds to be performed, at once, for the success of the cause. Never has the expenses of our rapidly growing work in foreign lands approached what they are at this moment. The appointment and sending out of forty new missionaries during the past year or two is suggestive of the cause of this great increase of our obligations. But, while these monetary obligations have accumulated on the Board, the churches do not send us—in the language—enough money. To date, the churches are in arrears to the Board [illegible]. This is a serious matter—this is a note of discord amid the general and harmonious Centennial movement and praises that it is painful to introduce, but there is no law to necessity. We would not have one enthusiastic speech less enthusiastic; one emotion of glowing sentiment less glowing; one hope of the future less hopeful. But, the Board must have money now, and a large amount of it, to meet drafts from their missionaries and to pay notes in bank. And the suggestion is ventured and addressed to the good sense and justice and piety of our people, whether it would not give strength and healthfulness and propriety to the educational process for the Centennial work if a part of that preparatory training should be training in the money-giving itself? At any rate, this is needful. And the further suggestion—though intensely practical—is made: that no missionary meeting should be allowed to close without, at least, giving the people an opportunity of making a free-will offering to the Lord for the support of his servants in the ends of the earth. Should there be a magnificent awakening throughout our Southern Zion with regard to sending out one hundred missionaries in the Centennial year of 1892, and no money to send them with, and not money enough to sustain those already in the field, would the awakening be so magnificent after all? Fidelity constrains us to call attention to the stroke of the alarm clock. We are running fast towards the danger line.

Rev. S. J. McLeod.

Dear Bro, Bailey:—Last summer, Rev. J. A. Smith baptized Rev. S. J. McLeod into the fellowship of Pleasant Grove church, and as your readers will remember, Bro. Royal, through your columns, commended Bro. McLeod to the love and esteem of the Baptists of the State.

Since that time, so many and such serious charges derogatory to the character of Bro. McLeod have been circulated, that Pleasant Grove thought it prudent to call a presbytery to examine into these charges.

Without consuming time and space with details of the investigation, suffice it to say, we found Bro. McLeod's christian character above reproach. The reports against him we regard as persecution. And we are sorry to say that some good brethren in high standing among us have been so far mislead as to aid in the circulation of these slanders. A letter accompanying this, which you will please publish, shows his standing among his neighbors.

You are respectfully requested to give this a place in your columns.

FROM PROVIDENCE BAPTIST CHURCH TO ELDER J. J. SCOTT.

WHEREAS, The Pleasant Grove Baptist church did some time last summer receive into its membership Bro, Sam. J. McLeod from this section of country, he having been a Methodist minister for some eighteen or twenty years.

Resolved 1st. That the Pleasant Grove church did right in receiving him as a member thereof and in granting him license to preach the "gospel of the Son of God."

Resolved 2nd. That we heartily recommend him to the churches of the Robeson Association or any other Association wherever God may cast his lot.

Resolved 3rd. That we can also endorse the action of the council which met at Pleasant Grove on the 17th inst.

All of which was done in conference this the 20th day of December, 1891.

Good teachers are rare. To obtain excellence in this useful and and important calling, there must be a fitness for it and a genuine love of the work. Both of these qualifications are found in President F. P. Hobgood, and the State is to be congratulated on his return to his chosen life-work, and in the place where he made an enviable reputation years ago. T. H. PRITCHARD.

Macbeth's "pearl top" and "pearl glass" lamp-chimneys are made of tough glass that costs four times as much as common glass; and the work on them costs a good deal more than the work on common chimneys, just as the work on a dress is proportioned to cost of stuff.

The dealer is right in saying he can't afford to sell them at the prices of common glass chimneys.

And what will become of his chimney trade if his chimneys never break? He is apt to be wrong there. He can afford to charge a fair price and give new chimneys for all that break in use.

Have a talk with him.

YOU CAN MAKE SEVEN CENT COTTON
—BY USING—
"HOME FERTILIZER."

BESTON, Wayne County, September 29th, 1885.

Messrs. Boykin, Carmer & Co., Baltimore, Md.—Dear Sirs: Within the past eight years I have made careful experiments with as many as twenty different sorts of guanos, fertilizers, &c., already prepared, or compounded and prepared by myself, with a view to ascertaining the one which should combine the two ideas of being the best and at the same time the cheapest for promoting the largest yields of cotton, corn, rice and peanuts; and I give it as my deliberate judgment that the "HOME FERTILIZER" most completely fills the bill of any and all in the long list of fertilizers tested by me. I have tried it under cotton for the past eight years, and it has always more than equalled my expectation, proving itself quite as good as the guanos costing $40 per ton. I have tried it repeatedly under corn, and it has increased the yield out of all proportion to the cost of the fertilizer. I have tried it under rice in competition with seven other kinds of fertilizers, and it has proved itself equal to the best. And this year I am (besides using it under cotton, corn and rice) also trying it under 26 acres of peanuts, using nothing else, and to my surprise and gratification, after a careful examination made three days since, I find the whole crop filling out splendidly, and this too, after a very dry August, which is generally fatal to the peanut crop. Taking it every way, I should pronounce the "HOME" the best all-purpose fertilizer of any within the range of my observation or experience, while it is certainly by long odds the cheapest. I will not use the stereotyped phrase: "I expect to use it another year," for that goes without saying. I expect to use more of it and use it more exclusively every year I may be engaged in farming.

Yours truly, G. W. SANDERLIN.

GREAT CUT SALE.
Knabe Upright Pianos at Cost.
We will sell our stock of Knabe Pianos at wholesale cost, as we desire to get our money out of them at once. Elegant style, sold for $500 at the factory, for only $400.

NOTICE.
We wish to state, in connection, that we have noticed an advertisement to the effect that a certain piano received the highest award at the Southern Exposition. This piano, so advertised, was not even on exhibit, and only one make was represented, which was not entered for the premium. Also, there were only two makes of organs exhibited, and the only one entered took the diploma.
Our Pianos have taken the Highest Awards at every North Carolina State Fair
for the last five years, and in 1890 it led ten other makes. We did not even exhibit at the "Southern Exposition."

From Hibriton, N. C.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Having settled down in my new home, and the Christmas holidays being passed, I will write a few notes for the dear old RECORDER.

It has been nearly three months since we pulled up and left the good people of Boone and Watanga county. It was no easy task to leave a people, among whom I had lived so pleasantly for eight years, and who had been so good and kind to me and mine; but the Lord seemed to direct me to this field, and we ought to be willing to follow where he leads. We like our new home very much, and the people are good, kind and helpful.

I am trying to serve four churches,—Lenoir, Lower Creek, Yadkin and King's Creek. They are all convenient to me, and I am relieved of the great amount of travel I was subjected to, when I lived beyond the Blue Ridge. I am sorry to say my churches are not enjoying that spiritual health that I could wish for them. The members are regular in their attendence, but are too cold. Most of my churches contribute monthly to the objects of our Convention, but the contributions are small. Money is really scarce in this section, and then, some are wanting in the grace of liberality. All the churches have Sunday-schools, but are not as well attended as they ought to be by the members. Then, it is so hard to get all the members to read. Comparatively few take the RECORDER, and yet I have urged this duty upon them. They complain they are too poor, and, in fact, many of them are not rich. But I an hoping and praying for a better state of things.

Brethren H. M. Croom, J. S. Gwaltney and J. H. Nelson conducted a meeting of days for me with the Yadkin church first of December, in which some professed faith in Christ, and some of whom, I trust, will unite with the church.

About the middle of December, brethren H. M. Croom and J. N. Shaver aided me in a meeting at Lower Creek, in which there was a good interest manifested, but no conversions so far as we could ascertain.

I was with Bro. W. J. Bumgarner, the outgoing pastor, at King's Creek a few days first of December, in a meeting, in which three or four persons obtained a hope, and three united with the church.

The week after Christmas, Bro. J. H. Nelson aided me in a meeting at Hibriton Academy. Is was well attended, and some half dozen persons professed faith in Christ, most of whom, I think, will unite with Lower Creek.

I hope in the spring to hold a meeting with the church in Lenoir, and I take occasion here to express the hope that Bro. C. Durham will be enabled to find us a suitable brother to conduct the meeting, under the proposition of the Convention to the churches to give up their pastors for a week to hold meetings with mission churches.

As I conclude I will say that we are having a good school at Hibriton Accademy, which is located within one quarter of a mile of my house. Prof. E. B. Phillips is principal and a fine teacher. The spring session opened Jan. 4th with an enrollment of seventy-two, which now numbers about eighty. At the earnest solicitation of Mr. Phillips and others, I am assisting in the school at present, but possibly will not be needed for the fall term. It is a great blessing to be situated so near a good school. I am patronizing it with one boy and four girls. Fraternally, I. W. THOMAS.

January, 1892.

Letter from Rev. H. D. Lequeux.

Dear Recorder:—After two weeks' confinement to my room with "la grippe," coupled with pleurisy, I am at my post again, but still suffer from hoarseness. God tries us by subjecting us to the crucible of affliction, that we may feel how frail we are, and, with David, say from David, Our "times are in thy hand."

Rev. R. L. Patton has built a dwelling and school-house, and intends locating permanently here. His school opened last Monday with good prospects, as we look for a prosperous session. He is a splendid teacher, thoroughly prepared for the important work which he has chosen, and will be quite an acquisition to the town of Morganton and the Baptist church.

Our cause is looking up in some respects. The other churches have services every Sunday, which interferes with our congregations. However, our audiences are as large as could be expected under the circumstances, and we have a very interesting Sunday-school and a good prayer-meeting.

Success to the RECORDER.

Fraternally, H. D. LEQUEUX.

Union Meeting.

The Union Meeting of Sandy Creek Association will meet at Love's Creek, Friday, Saturday and fifth Sunday in January, 1892.

Friday, introductory sermon by Rev. W. G. King.

Sunday, missionary sermon by Rev. S. Gilmore.

QUERIES.

1. Does a person become sinless during this life?
2. Is the remark, "I would rather be a good christian than a good Baptist," true?
3. Explain parable of the talents.
4. Does the Sunday-school advance the young in Scripture knowledge as it should?

Each church should send at least one delegate. It is important that all of the Executive Board be present.

DIED.

LILES—Died, at her home in Lilesville, on Dec. 23d, 1891, Miss Janie Liles, in her sixty-ninth year. She had been a member of the Lilesville Baptist church for many years. She leaves an only brother, who has the sympathy of the entire community in this his sore bereavement. PASTOR.

WARD—Bro. Townsend E. Ward died at his home in Chowan county January 8th, 1892, in the sixty-fifth year of his age. He had been an excellent member of Ballard's Bridge church for a number of years. He was gentle and kind in disposition, always finding encouraging words to speak to those discouraged. He leaves a large family and a host of friends to mourn. He was a firm friend to the poor, and loved the RECORDER. The Lord bless the bereaved ones. A. W. B.

SANDERLIN—Sister Sarah Sanderlin, the beloved wife of Bro. Enoch Sanderlin, departed this life, near Shiloh, Camden county, N. C., January 6th, 1892, in her fifty-fifth year. She connected herself with Shiloh church when she was young. She lived and died a consistent christian. She was all that could be found in a christian wife, mother and neighbor. She will be missed by many, but by none more than her pastor. Her remains were taken to Shiloh church, and her funeral preached by her pastor to many relatives and friends, after which she was laid beside her father, by her request, to await the call of the resurrection. May grace be given to the sorrowing ones. P. S. C. DAVIS.

WARD—On the fifth day of December, in her forty-first year, Mrs. Kittie Ward bade a final adieu to her husband and seven little children to take up her abode with her Heavenly Father, whom she had loved and served so well while in the flesh.

Sister Ward was the faithful wife of our beloved pastor, Rev. Benjamin Ward of Onslow county. She had been a consistent member of the Babtist church many years, was a true christian, a devoted wife, a tender and loving mother, and a kind friend. Her loss is deplored by all who knew her, and inexpressably so to her grief stricken companion and his seven little motherless children. But our God knows best, and does all things well. Grieve not, dear brother, as do those who have no hope; she is only asleep in Jesus.

A FRIEND.

McGLAUGHN—Bro. W. F. McGlaughn died at his home in Bertie county, N. C., near Capeheart's church, on January 7th, 1892. Bro. McGlaughn only lacked a few days of being seventy-six years old when the Master called him home. He had been a member of Capeheart's church for forty-five years, and he died in the triumph of faith, and has gone to rest with loved ones on the other shore. Bro. McGlaughn had been a deacon in his church for a number of years. He loved his church, and his delight was to see it prosper. He leaves three children, one brother, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. When we meet at the old church for worship surely we shall miss him. His funeral was preached at his home by his pastor from Philippians 1: 23, a text he had selected himself. Sleep on, dear brother, until the resurrection morn, and then we shall meet to part no more.

W. P. JORDAN.

HUMPHRIES—The subject of this sketch, sister Parthenia Humphries, was born in Granville county, N. C., Dec. 19th, 1811; was married by Elder James King to W. W. Humphries January 14th, 1836, and died at her home in Person county, N. C., Jan. 3d, 1892, being in her eightieth year. They both professed faith in Christ about 1842, and were baptized into the fellowship of Olive Branch Baptist church by Elder James King. Sister Humphries was a faithful and highly esteemed church member for nearly fifty years. She was always found at her place in the house of the Lord, ready and willing to speak a kind, cheering word to all, and do what she could for the Master. She was never more happier than when ministering to the comfort of God's servants in the ministry, with many of whom she often shared her hospitality. She was truly a good mother, and the greatest anxiety of her heart was that her children should become christians. The first lessons she taught her children were of God, and even by example as well as precept she tried to instill in them that love for God that made her own life happy. It may truly be said she lived the life of the righteous and died their death. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. A. Beam of Bethel Hill Institute, at her home, and her remains, in the presence of a large crowd of relatives and friends, were laid to rest in the family burying ground near Collier, to await the resurrection.

Mail Order Department.

Through our Mail Order Department we offer advantages to the people of North Carolina for "Shopping by Mail" second to none in the Southern States, for by the means of this, a very important department of our great business, we place almost at the very doors of our patrons our enormous stock of goods, and we do carry the largest and finest collection of Dry Goods and kindred wares, at retail, of any house in North Carolina, and equaled by very few Southern houses.

We want the patronage of our North Carolina people, not simply that ours is a North Carolina house, but because we will sell them Dry Goods at as low prices, for the same quality, as any house in the trade.

We can only mention here a few of the more important departments, but will be glad to hear from those who desire anything relative to Dry Goods or the kindred wares:—

FOREIGN AND AMERICAN DRESS WOOLENS,
BLACK DRESS GOODS,
SILKS, VELVETS,
HOUSEFURNISHING GOODS,
CARPETS, CURTAINS, &c., &c.

Samples cheerfully sent, and letters of enquiry promptly answered.

When writing for samples, our patrons will please make their orders as definite as possible, for then we can send a suitable line, instead of a lot entirely different from what they want.

GOODS DELIVERED FREE.

(Except Furniture and Crockery.)

On all cash orders of $5 and over we will deliver goods free to nearest Express office or railroad station.

His Yoke.

The yoke of Christ means saving strength
To all whose hearts are worn and spent;
No hard or weary weight impressed
On necks already bowed and bent.

The world's rude yoke must fret and gall,—
Life has so many pains and cares!
Only beneath Christ's easy yoke
Our load is lightened unawares.

His yoke! O pattern close and true,
Fitted to each,—the strong, the weak,
Yielding our wills to its control,
His joy will not be far to seek!

His yoke means burdens lightly drawn
In lowly patience, less we fall,
Yea, "quietness and confidence,"
With love divine to sweeten all.

O meek and lowly Christ! we crave
This blessed servitude to know;
In us thy joy be now fulfilled,—
Will thou not make it yet to grow!

Only a Bunch of Roses.

The roses were fresh with dew and sweet with fragrance as Madge Burton gathered them hastily that fair summer morning. Pinning them quickly to her girdle, she entered the carriage that was waiting for her, and was driven to the station where she took the train for a city fifty miles distant.

Money was not plentiful with the Burtons, so the young girl contented herself with riding in the ordinary car. She made a very sweet picture in the dusty car, and I do not think there was one person present who did not admire it. Her bright, sunny face, her dignified yet gentle bearing, her winsome smile upon tired and fretful children, who had traveled many a weary mile, her tasteful, neat attire, with the bunch of roses in her girdle, were all noticed in a quiet way.

In the seat in front of her was a crippled child,—a sad-looking, thin girl, whose earthly life was destined to be very short. She looked over her shoulder a number of times at Madge, and finally she said wistfully, with some hesitation:

"Would you mind if I should sit by you just a little while?"

"Not at all. I should be happy to have you do so," was the ready answer, given as courteously as if speaking to a young princess.

The child, leaning upon her crutches, took her place beside Madge.

"You don't look a bit tired," was her first observation. Madge smiled into the questioning face.

"I am not tired," she said. I have just begun my day."

"I am tired. I've come a long way—'way from Denver. I could not sleep last night, my knees pained me so. What beautiful roses you've got! We used to have roses in our garden before we went to Denver. We're going to the town where we used to live—pa and I. Pa's in the smoking car?"

"Isn't your mother with you?"

"Ma's dead," was the reply; and the thin lips quivered. "We had to bury her away out in Colorado.

"You poor, dear child!" said Madge, not wondering that the lonely little girl had begged to sit beside her.

She unfastened the rosebuds from her girdle, and taking out half of them, gave them to the child, whose pale face grew jubilant with surprise. She held them to her cheek, and pressed them to her lips; and very soon, with the flowers held close to her breast, she fell asleep.

Madge put an arm about her gently, and drew her head to her shoulder. The child slept peacefully for half an hour; then as the cars stoped at a small town, a man came in hurriedly. It was the cripple's father. A mist crept over his eyes at sight of the sleeping child; and as he stooped and gathered her in his strong arms, he said in a low voice, full of feeling:

"I'm not a prayin' mon, miss, but may the Lord's blessin' rest on ya forever for your kindness to me poor motherless bairn!"

The travelers from Colorado had reached their destination. The sleeping child, who had suffered all through the previous night did not thoroughly awaken, only arousing a little as she was carried through the car, murmuring:

"I've—been—in—heaven,—pa;—I've—got—some—roses."

The mist in the father's eyes seemed to spread through the car. No word was spoken aloud concerning the little scene just over, but in many a heart there was heard the Voice divine whispering: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me."—Sunday school Times.

A Selfish Boy.

Jamie took the largest banana on the dish the other day when the fruit was passed to him. He did this before his grandmamma had been helped. He looked ashamed when he saw her take the small one, but he was glad that his was so big.

But when he took off the skin, the fruit was black, and unfit to eat. The smaller one was good. His papa's eyes twinkled, and he said:

"The largest isn't always the best, is it, Jamie?"

And his mamma said, "Selfish boys often lose what they want to get."—Selected.

Ned's Lesson.

"Polly wants a cracker! Polly wants sugar! Hurry up! hurry up! Polly is hungry!" screamed the parrot from the top of her perch. Mabel and May fed her with bread and fruit, and filled her cup with fresh water; and while Poll chatterer her thanks the little girls turned to watch Ned at his play. He was building a fort out of sticks and stones. "Now, girls, this is the way to make the roof. You lay the sticks so!" —but the pieces of wood dropped, and the fort fell into ruins before his eyes. Then Ned stamped upon the ground in his anger, and a word, a dreadful word, fell from his lips. It was the first time in his life he had ever spoken such a word, and Mable and May cried out, "Oh, Ned! how could you." Quick as a flash Poll caught the word, and and in her loud, harsh voice sent it ringing out through the garden. It was a dreadful sound when it fell from Ned's lips, but when Poll screamed it out the girls covered their ears, and Ned, full of grief and shame, run to the bird. "Oh, Polly! hush, do hush! I'll never say it again! Mabel, give her some candy, cake, anything, to make her forget that dreadful word!"

Ned is a big boy now, but he never forgot Polly's lesson. It was the last time he ever soiled his lips with an unclean word.—Ex.

In the Training of Boys.

It is my belief that, as a rule, boys are abused, and it is small wonder that so many of them grow up to be so thoughtless and useless. I want to make all due allowance for the nervous, overworked mothers (for I have been one myself), who can not long endure the noisy clatter of little boots, or the restless romping of "those boys!" But O, who often a little planning and loving forethought would save our "nerves" and also our boys.

Give the boys a room of their own, where they may be allowed to work, play, read or whatever the boyish fancy may dictate. If he be fond of reading, let him have plenty of good, suitable books and paperes, and an easy chair in which to sit in while he reads them.

A boy loves comfort as well as a girl does, and money spent in making him comfortable at home goes a long way towards keeping him off the street. Some boys can be satisfied to spend a whole evening in reading; these must be provided for in some other way. Let them have games—there are many innocent ones—and let them invite their friends into the house, and feel that they have a share in the home. I used to let my boys pop corn, make taffy candy, whittle and ran a scroll saw in the evening, in spite of the litter it made, and I never regretted it.

If the boy wants to make money—that is, speculate in a small way—and can do it without interfering with his school duties, let him do so. It will teach him to be industrious and will cultivate business habits. I knew a mother, who went into partnership with her boys, she furnishing the capital and the boys doing the work. In this way she taught them to keep accounts, and if the money made did not amount to much, the lessons learned were invaluable.

Boys like to be trusted, it makes them manly. If a boy deserves praise give it to him freely. I know there are boys and boys, but I have never yet found one who not susceptible to kindness, and who could not be managed if the right course was pursued.—Selected.

ATLANTIC ELECTROPOISE—Gentlemen: For the past five years my wife has been a sufferer from dyspepsia. So completely did the disease make a wreck of her former self that life was almost despaired of. Her nervous system was almost entirely destroyed, and the slightest noise would throw her into a nervous spasm, which would last for hours. Medical skill failed to bring any relief.

Through the recommendation of an eminent divine we were induced to try the Electropoise. After a persistent use of the instrument, the effect has been wonderful. Her nervous system has been restored to its almost normal condition; her digestion is wonderfully improved; she is rapidly gaining in flesh; and, upon the whole, is making a rapid recovery, which speaks volumes for the wonderful curative powers of the Electropoise, as her case was considered hopeless. If any are skeptical on the subject, let them try the Electropoise, and its wonderful powers will quickly dispel all doubt. Yours truly, W. M. PROPST.

HAIR ON THE FACE, NECK, ARMS OR ANY PART OF THE PERSON QUICKLY DISSOLVED AND REMOVED WITH THE NEW SOLUTION
MODENE

AND THE GROWTH FOREVER DESTROYED WITHOUT THE SLIGHTEST INJURY OR DISCOLORATION OF THE MOST DELICATE SKIN.—DISCOVERED BY ACCIDENT.

IN COMPOUNDING, an incomplete mixture was accidentally spilled on the back of the hand, and on washing afterward it was discovered that the hair was completely removed. We purchased the new discovery and named it MODENE. It is perfectly pure, free from all injurious substances, and so simple any one can use it. It acts mildly but surely, and you will be surprised and delighted with the results. Apply for a few minutes and the hair disappears as if by magic. It has no resemblance whatever to any other preparation ever used for a like purpose, and no scientific discovery ever attained such wonderful results. IT CANNOT FAIL. If the growth be light, one application will remove it permanently; the heavy growth such as the beard or hair on moles may require two or more applications before all the roots are destroyed, although all hair will be removed at each application, and without the slightest injury or unpleasant feeling when applied or ever afterward. ——MODENE SUPERCEDES ELECTROLYSIS.——

——Recommended by all who have tested its merits—Used by people of refinement.——

Gentlemen who do not appreciate nature's gift of a beard, will find a priceless boon in Modene, which does away with shaving. It dissolves and destroys the life principle of the hair, thereby rendering its future growth an utter impossibility, and is guaranteed to be as harmless as water to the skin. Young persons who find an embarrassing growth of hair coming, should use Modene to destroy its growth. Modene sent by mail, in safety mailing cases, postage paid, (securely sealed from observation) on receipt of price, $1.00 per bottle. Send money by letter, with your full address written plainly. than in any previous year of the market's history; and enter upon the new crop year determined to labor even more industriously, if possible, for the welfare of my patrons than ever before. The Henderson market was never in better condition or its future more encouraging. The coming year promises to be the best we have ever had, and COOPER'S WAREHOUSE, which, as farmers know, has always held the best records for high prices, clever treatment and good accommodations, is strengthening itself with every sale. Ask your neighbor who has sold with us, and hear what he says.

With grateful acknowledgment I return thanks to my friends and customers who have so liberally extended to me their generous patronage for the past nineteen years, making COOPER'S not only the leading warehouse in this the leading Bright market, in number of pounds of farmers' tobacco sold and amount of money obtained therefor, but also the

LEADER IN PRICES.

I promise to show my appreciation of this confidence by ever striving to please; by renewing and increasing my best efforts to give entire satisfaction in the management, handling and selling of your tobacco.

Hoping to continue to serve my patrons, and to make many new ones during the season of 1891-'92, I remain, the farmers' friend,

Sketches of Pioneer Baptist Preachers in North Carolina.

BY JOHN W. MOORE, STATE HISTORIAN.

MEMOIR V—REV. LEMUEL BURKITT.

CHAPTER TWO.

Our last chapter left the subject of this memoir in the midst of his first trials and difficulties encountered in his work of fitting himself for the gospel ministry. He was neither so ignorant as to be blind to his many needs, nor yet so conceited as to dream that any facility of speech and elocution would atone for his want of knowledge. Unlettered as he was, his natural acuteness and logical turn of mind enabled him to see how utterly some of the good old preachers of that day failed in their efforts at expounding things beyond their apprehension. He saw that in most of them that beyond their rhapsodies over the love and grace of God and the final perseverance of the saints, there was little left as topics of discourse. Of course, they never forgot or failed to remind their hearers of the paramount doctrine touching immersion, but this could be only done in a very brief and perfunctory manner. Few of them knew anything of the matter beyond the statements of the New Testament evangelists. The irrefutable and fixed truth of history, showing how the Romish popes and councils had changed and perverted the ordinance was beyond their studies on the subject. While it was very true that the Bible statements were of themselves enough to settle the matter for all reasonable minds, there were still many men and women who were staggered by the questions of Rev. Mr. Charles Earle, when he asked his Baptist neighbors how it could be that so many millions of other christians had for centuries been sprinkling their babies instead of immersing their adult converts to a new style of life. The whole mystery of the Romish iniquity, in its high-handed perversions of the early christian ordinances, were so little known that the Episcopal clergyman could thus darken counsel and distress his unlettered competitors; but at best how could so able and just a man think that such fencing with the truth was a part of his great duty in "justifying the ways of God with men"? Mr. Earle knew even better than Lemuel Burkitt, or any other Baptist of Albemarle, in that early day, that they were practicing the precise rite used by John the Baptist and the apostles, yet he accepted as authoritative and rightful a change in Bible practice on no better grounds than the decrees of a sect his church had been for centuries denouncing as the brood of the scarlet woman, and had put to death as traitors and heretics thousands who had dared avow faith in Rome on English soil.

But let us ever be thankful to God that while her man-leavening is invaluable in its sphere, and always a mighty helper to the man who undertakes to expound the mysteries of godliness, yet at the same time the divine goodness has so ordered that those things really necessary to be understood in the Bible plan of salvation are so plainly set forth that even the wayfaring man may not err therein. Popes, prelates and councils on the one hand, and synods and conferences on the other, may set forth their interpretations of what they hold as truth, but the ultimate appeal of every true enquirer as to the way which leads to life eternal must ever remain in the imperishable chart God has given us as a lamp for our feet. It was on such safe and traditional courses that young Lemuel Burkitt turned from human glosses and gathered for himself from the fountain head of truth the rules of his own faith and practice. How with such meager aids to higher attainments he managed so soon to shine as a star among his humbler brethren in the Baptist ministry was no doubt astounding to himself as it was grateful to the thousands who hung enthralled on his thrilling utterances. Converted in 1760 in his nineteenth year, we find two years later, when Gov. Tryon was ravaging the country of the conquered Regulators, a new preacher appeared down in ancient Albemarle. It was only two years later when he was called to the pastorate of Bertie or Sandy Run church. This was then the most influential body of Baptists in eastern Carolina, and for so young a man to become their guide in religion was no small tribute to the unusual gifts of the young pastor. But this was only a foretaste of what the power and influence of Mr. Burkitt would soon be.

In order that the average reader may understand Mr. Burkitt's relations to the Baptists of Albemarle in that great era of change and reformation in religious and political affairs, it will be necessary to recur to the condition of the churches of his faith in the eastern and western settlements. When in 1773 Lemuel Burkitt became the pastor of Sandy Run church, there had never been exchanged the slightest token of fraternal recognition between the reformed churches of Sandy Creek Association and their Baptist brethren in the low country. Eight years of marvelous growth and expansion had been vouchsafed of heaven to the little group of the New Lights who formed the first congregation planted in 1755 by Messrs Stearns and Marshall. But a strange and unreasoning jealousy had been manifested by the older Baptist preachers and congregations toward these apostles of a purer faith. The same aversion to all change which is yet so largely characteristic of North Carolinians had condemned unheard every overture from the New Light missionaries. These old Baptists of the remote past were as unreasoning and deaf to the truth as have been the misguided Kehukees of a later period. The truth is, that the people were misguided by weak and uninformed preachers, who had failed to comprehend the logic of the situation and the force of the truth through the fact that they were unprepared to part with their prejudices.

Bishop Burkitt, young as he was, had suffered from no such unchristian disability. He loved the truth wherever he found it, and the truth had made him free. In the might of his victorious zeal and eloquence, he traversed the broad territory then holding the eastern Baptist churches and as one inspired he laid bare all the ruinous inconsistencies of the faith and practice which was keeping his beloved people in error and disunited from their wiser brethren. He told them that Baptists for centuries had warred upon infant baptism because Christ had required faith and repentance as prerequisites to such an ordinance. Here were Baptist churches not only baptizing men and women into membership, but in more instances than was at all creditable, they were ordaining ministers to the work of the full gospel ministry who made no pretence that they had any experience of the new birth in Christ. Was the Saviour's declarations to Nicodemus to be set down as meaning nothing, or were the Baptists claiming the old papal power of changing the Master's teaching? Was it no longer true that the Bible was the great Baptist rule of faith? Had the churches set up some higher standard of construction as to the plainest teachings of the Scriptures? The young apostle of the truth, with all his superiority of eloquence and equipment, was also consummate in his bearing and treatment of his less gifted brethren. Nothing more clearly demonstrated his greatness of soul than the fact that while thus exposing the ignorance and mistakes of his clerical peers, he was still enabled to retain their love and admiration for himself personally. A weaker and vainer reformer would have only succeeded in arraying every one of them in stubborn and unheeding opposition to the proposed purification of the churches. So far from this being the case when the ablest man among them, the Rev. Henry Abbott, pastor of the Camden church, had heard all the glowing and unanswerable appeal, he set the needed example of resigning his place as pastor until he could be again baptized. He had gone into the church, like a host of others, with no pretence of being converted. Being the son of the canon of Westminster in London, he had taken as true the teachings of his childhood touching baptismal regeneration.

Thus, like another Peter the Hermit, preaching a fresh crusade, Mr. Burkitt fixed and prepared the minds and hearts of the Albemarle Baptists for his next step in the program of reformation. The Sandy Run church in 1774 was the instrument for its consummation. It resolved in conference that in the future that body would hold fellowship with no congregation that would admit or continue in membership any person who had not claimed to have experienced such a change of heart as is implied in the Saviour's words touching the new birth. This apparently bold and high-handed position as to her relations to the other churches of the Kehukee Association was the occasion of, as Mr. Burkitt had foreseen, a no small outcry and stir among the dry bones in some of the churches in the region which, in later years, were to revolt from Bible teaching as to missions. There was little or no discord and disunion in the churches which later formed the Chowan Association, but beyond the Roanoke there were heard rumors of discontent and remonstrance over the course pursued at Sandy Run.

Not only had the visit of the Rev. Messrs. Vanhorn and Miller failed to affect these churches, it was feared by a multitude of anxious brethren that the action of Mr. Burkitt's church would be no more successful. They feared that so far from any general reform being thus brought about, that the only result would be a lasting and hopeless schism in the churches so lately unified in their formation of the Kehukee Association. That organization effected at the cost of so much labor, prayer and tears, they said was now doomed to certain division and moral wreck. It really seemed that these prophets of evil were right in their horoscope of the future. Tidings from the upper counties were full of the resolutions of divers Baptist churches, who were instructing their delegations to the approaching session of the Kehukee Association at the Falls of Tar river, and nearly all of these were in the plainest sort of way condemnatory of Sandy Run's action.

But the patient and trusting soul of Lemuel Burkitt was all unmoved at the prospect of his brethren's inanity. He was at work for God and his people, and no human displeasure could reach or dismay a soul thus doubly armed in the course of duty. As the clerk of this same great Baptist Association, he had won so much love and admiration from all his brethren, it was sad to think that any part of the loving communion of the past should be lost by his efforts for the Lord. His sensitive and poetic soul instinctively shrank from everything like feud and bitterness, but he recalled the fact of how his Lord and Master, with all his gentleness and beneficence, had yet found life so little a bed of roses; so let the worst come that was possible to the promptings of prejudice and unreasoning preposaessions, the pathway of his duty was still left as plain and undisturbed as the light of the stars.

On the other hand, there were many things to sustain the young reformer and his faithful Sandy Run congregation in their high and devoted course. Elder John Meglamre, the moderator of the Kehukee Association, was the first to come to his rescue. His Sussex church in Virginia passed resolutions in conference precisely similar to those of the Bertie people. Then came news of similar action of the churches both in Virginia and North Carolina, but the great majority had as yet been averse or silent on the issue. Before the month of October could come and witness the marshalling of the Baptist hosts in the discussion of their differences, the shots had been fired by the British soldiers at Lexington, whose echoes rolled around the world. Loving hearts already sore at the prospect of discord with brethren, saw with added dismay their native land forced into conflict with their King, who was preparing great fleets and armies for their subjugation to his wishes. It can, then, be easily imagined how anxious and prayerful the soul of Lemuel Burkitt must have grown as discord and danger, both in Church and State, projected their ominous shadows around him. Like his dauntless and patriotic countrymen, he only drew nearer to God as the night of death and uncertainty deepened around him. To follow on in the road of duty and right might bring him sorrow and the loss of all things worldly, but there yet remained, like hope in Pandora's box, the consolation and support of his soul at ease with God and himself.

A Severe Rebuke.

The following anecdote is one among a multitude which prove that the very doctrines which, by many professed christians, are overlooked or denied or even ridiculed, many avowed infidels, more especially the sagacious and candid, confess to be clearly stamped on the sacred pages:

Lord Bolingbroke, the infidel friend of Pope, and a man of genius and learning, was accustomed to peruse writings of almost all kinds of authors, and on almost all kinds of subjects. Receiving a visit one morning in his study from an English clergyman, he happened to be reading the works of Calvin.

"You find me singularly employed," said he, and named the author he was perusing.

The clergyman replied in a manner which intimated a total disbelief, with some degree of contempt, of the writings in question.

"You surprise me very much," said Bolingbroke. "If I believe the Bible, I should certainly believe the writings of Calvin; for Calvin speaks with the Bible." He added: "I know I am accounted an infidel, but I confess there occurs to me at this moment one argument which half convinces me that the christian religion is true."

"What is that?" said the clergyman.

"Why," replied Bolingbroke, "that christianity should have continued in the world so long when committed to the care of such gentlemen as you."

How much of this world are you going to take with you into the next? Will you have two pockets—one on each side of your shroud? Will you cushion your casket with bonds and mortgages and certificates of stock? Ah! no. The ferry boat that crosses this Jordan takes no baggage—nothing heavier than an immaterial spirit. You may, perhaps, take five hundred dollars with you two or three miles, in the shape of funeral trappings, to Greenwood cemetery, but you will have to leave them there. It would not be safe for you to lie down there with a gold watch or a diamond ring; it would be a temptation to the pillagers. If we have made this world our God, we shall see our idol, when we die, ground to pieces by our pillow, and we shall have to drink it in bitter regrets for the wasted opportunities of a life time.—T. De Witt Talmage.

Let grace and goodness be the principal loadstone of thy affections. For love which hath ends, will have an end; whereas that which is founded on true virtue, will always continue.—Dryden.

Appeal for Foreign Missions to the Woman's Missionary Union and to Sunday-schools.

The Southern Baptist Convention, through its Centennial Committee, recommends that our people, in harmony with the plans of their brethren all over the world, celebrate the Centenary of Modern Missions, 1892, by an advance movement along every line of work and by raising a special fund for the Boards of the Convention.

For Foreign Missions it is proposed to increase the regular contributions sufficiently to enable the Board to send out and support one hundred new missionaries in addition to the present working force of devoted men and women, and to raise a fund of at least $125,000, to be used as occasion may from time to time require, in buying or erecting buildings at mission stations, in preparing and publishing translations of the Bible and other books, and in any other work of permanent character. It has seemed eminently appropriate to enlist in this effort the cooperation of two classes, the women and the children of our Southern country. Woman in America owes an immeasurable debt both to her Saviour and to her degraded sisters in heathendom; her profound sympathy and active hands will seize the opportunity to make some payment. The young people of to-day will in a few years have to support and guide all our christian enterprises; their fresh enthusiasm and vast numbers will make them potent in this work for the future. We therefore earnestly ask the assistance of the Woman's Missionary Union, with its State committees and local societies, and of superintendents and other officers of Sunday-schools, in giving information, making suggestions and organizing the collection in their several communities.

Centennial Chapel Building Fund.

USES FOR THE FUND.

At Zacatecas, Mexico, Bro. McCormick has secured an eligible lot, his work is hindered for lack of a convenient house of worship. Exactly the same is true of Bro. Bagby at Rio Janeiro. There is need of chapels at Parras, Guadalajara, and other stations in Mexico; at Juiz de Fora in Brazil; at several Yorubau towns in Africa; at half a dozen places in China; in Japan, as soon as our missionaries there have mastered the language. Other chapels and residences will be needed as our force is increased. Hitherto these have been provided for by special appeal; it will be much better to raise now a fund sufficient for a number of years and be in condition to take advantage of opportunities as they occur.

It is not the policy of the Board to erect expensive buildings or to supercede the necessity for strenuous efforts on the part of native converts. We propose to provide comfortable residences for our missionaries, and let the natives build their own chapels wherever they are able, as has been done in our oldest fields, Southern and Central China, elsewhere to supplement their contributions only so far as will stimulate them toward self-support. Even this, however, a little help at many places, amounts to a considerable sum. Thousands of churches at home call on others to help them build; on whom shall the feeble bands of converts from heathenism or Romanism call in their much sorer need?

Our wants in the matter of publication have been generously anticipated for several years past by donations from the American Baptist Publication Society. This we hope will continue, and yet we should like to be in condition at any time to undertake our full share in the work of giving to the world the word of God.

METHOD OF COLLECTING.

Plans have been devised and are heartily approved by the Boards of the Convention to interest Mission Societies and Sunday-schools in collecting this money. Two principal features (1) Chapel Cards, to be used for the collection of sums from 10 cents up to $5; and (2) Centennial Certificates, to be issued in receipt for collections of $5 and over. The Card represents a neat little chapel, supported on fifty bricks. When one of these is returned with 10 cents for each brick, a Certificate will be given in exchange. The Certificates are handsomely gotten up, illustrated with a fine portrait of William Carey, and will be a suitable memorial of valuable service rendered during the Centennial of Modern Missions. Supplies of Cards and Certificates, with full directions for their use, can be obtained by Mission Societies and Bands from the State Central Committees; by Sunday-school superintendents, from the Maryland Baptist Mission Rooms, No. 10 E. Fayette St., Baltimore, in accordance with special arrangement made by the Boards of the Convention. In ordering please remember that they are issued by both Home and Foreign Boards, and ask for one or the other, or for both, in such proportions as may seem best for your community.

Send the money collected with statement of its special designation through the regular channels to the Treasurers of the Boards. And by all means try to arrange so that this special collection shall not hurt, but if possible shall help, the regular collections of your church for the cause of Missions.

CLAIMS OF FOREIGN WORK.

In behalf of Foreign Missions we may confidently appeal (1) to the express command of the risen Lord, who said, "Go, teach all nations" (Matt. 28: 19) "that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations," (Luke 24: 47), "and ye shall be my witnesses—unto the uttermost part of the earth," (Acts 1: 8). (2) To the vast extent of the field, including the votaries of heathen and Mohammedan religions and of the more corrupt forms of christianity, embracing more than four fifths of the people now living on the globe. (3) To the great and terrible need of the nations that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, while on their shores the beacon lights that mark the way of salvation are few and far between. (4) To the wonderful success with which God has crowned the feeble efforts of his people, in their weakness and want of faith, during the hundred years of missionary labor now about to close. (5) To the bright prospect, the open doors, the inviting fields, now in view, and the special opportunity afforded by this Centennial. No other such will occur during the life time of any to whom this appeal is addressed.

The cause is worthy, the need is great, the demand is pressing, the promise is bright, the time is favorable. A large number of small amounts will make up the sum asked for, and it will accomplish its purpose by God's blessing in answer to the united prayers of many givers. Let it not fall short for want of your mite.

H. H. HARRIS,
President F. M. Board S. B. C.

The Century of Modern Missions.

As a member of the Centennial Committee, I desire to thank Dr. Bailey, cordially, for his editorial on "Centennial of Missions," in the last issue (Jan. 13th) of the BIBLICAL RECORDER. "It is important to get our people thoroughly aroused," you say; and in that terse sentence the center of this movement results is squarely struck. Information is necessary to enthusiasm, at least to such enthusiasm as should be aroused if the best results of this memorial movement are garnered and made permanent forces in the life and activity of our churches.

The harvests gathered from the world-wide field for Christ during this first century of modern missionary activities are certainly sufficient to cause all who are praying "thy kingdom come," to "thank God and take courage." For the first two centuries succeeding the Reformation the establishment at home of a liberated faith occupied the time and demanded the strength of all christians. It was only at the beginning of the century now ending that God began to arouse his people to the duty of bearing this established faith to the ends of the earth. God in his providence called William Carey to lead as the standard bearer of this great work of saving the heathen by means of the preaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

To day as we close this century the doors of the last hermit nation, (but one, Thibet), stands wide open. The prayers of God's church to "open the doors of the world" have been answered, and the results that have followed in answer to the prayers of God's people are so blessed, aye, so stupendous, that to day God's people need as never before to pray God to enable them to accept the responsibilities which their answered prayers now impose upon them. REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

BRO. DUNCAN MCNEIL, of Richmond county, will represent the BIBLICAL RECORDER in the counties of Richmond, Anson, Montgomery, Robeson, Columbus, Brunswick and Bladen.

"Let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home; for it is a shame for women to speak in the church. Let the women learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence. For Adam was first formed, then Eve. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being decived was in the transgression. If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord."—New Testament.

WAKE FOREST COLLEGE.

In August, 1833, Dr. Wm. Hooper presented to the Baptist State Convention, (organized at Greenville, Pitt county, N. C., in 1830), a report recommending "the establishment of a Baptist Literary Institution in this State." Shortly after a farm of six hundred and fifteen acres, lying in what was known as "The Forest," in Wake county, was purchased for a site. The Legislature, only by a majority of one vote, that of the Speaker, grudingly granted a charter for the Institution in 1833. Rev. Samuel Wait, D. D., was elected President in 1832, and the Institution was opened in 1834. In 1846 Dr. Waitt resigned after much arduous toil for the school.

He was succeeded by the following Presidents, in the order of their names: Dr. Wm. Hooper, 1846-'48; Dr. John B. White, 1849-'52; Prof. W. H. Owen, (Pres. pro tem.,) 1852-'54; Dr. Wm. Wingate, 1854-'79; Dr. T. H. Pritchard, 1879-'82. Dr. Pritchard was followed by Dr. Wm. B. Royall, as chairman of the Faculty, from June, 1882, to November, 1883, when the present incumbent, Dr. Chas. E. Taylor, was elected President. It will thus be seen that the College has been particularly fortunate in being presided over by able and efficient Presidents. Dr. Taylor has already demonstrated the fact that he is not a whit behind the most distinguished of his honored predecessors. In its earlier years the College was beset by ceaseless financial embarrassment. In tiding over financial difficulties, and in teaching our people to see the need of an endowment, the name of Rev. Jas. S. Purefoy is to be held in grateful remembrance.

Little was done in the way of an endowment, however, until the meeting of the Baptist State Convention in Raleigh in 1856, when by the earnest efforts of leading brethren of this State, and the assistance of the eloquent A. M. Poindexter of Virginia, $25,000 were pledged for this purpose. By the efforts of Dr. Wingate, and others, this fund was increased to $46,000 by the commencement of the late civil war. At the close of the war only a little over $11,000 remained. Between 1866 and 1883 about $40,000 were secured through the labors of some of our most efficient ministers, such as Jones, Overby, Mitchell, Hufham and Purefoy. In 1883 the endowment reached $100,000. For this the Baptists of the State and country at large are greatly indebted to Mr. J. A. Bostwick of New York. Under the stimulating influence of another generous offer by Mr. Bostwick, an active canvass of the State was attempted by the present energetic President, and $40,000 were added to the endowment. Other gifts have run the amount up to about $200,000.

Through the liberality of such men as Col. J. M. Heck, J. G. Williams, Sidney S. Lee, Rev. J. S. Purefoy, and others, whose names are gratefully remembered, other college buildings, besides those in earlier use, have been added, until there is now ample room to meet the present necessities of the College. The College is the property of the Baptists of North Carolina. The Board of Trustees make an annual report to the Baptist State Convention, and sustains such a relation to that representative body of our people as to enable them to realize their obligation to feel toward the institution that perpetual interest that ought to spring from such relationship.

There are some things true of our loved College, which are so marked, as compared with some others, as to be called peculiar. This, perhaps, is not strange, as the people, of whom it is the literary center in North Carolina, are a peculiar people. We may, as we understand them, mention a few of these:—

1. Wake Forest College sustains such a relation to our great Baptist brotherhood in the State, in fact is so much under their control, that there are not now, nor is there much probability of there being in the future, men holding the important places of President or Professors who are untrue to the doctrines and principles of our Baptist people. A Prof. Briggs would not be tolerated at Wake Forest. Thank God that the noble men who are now at the head of our College are as far removed from Briggism, or any other dangerous ism of the day, as the most conservative Baptist laymen could wish. Our people can rest assured that only such religious traiping is given at our central College as is true to the Bible, as held and interpreted by our Baptist people.

2. The Wake Forest College curriculum is first class in its arrangement, and its teaching is not frothy, but solid, and its course of instruction is not so handicapped by priestly lore and superstition as to force the institution into the attitude of a mere adjunct for the propagation of a peculiar faith, or the defense of denominational tenets. We know of some institutions, especially female colleges, that we could call by name, whose course of instruction is so exceedingly pliable, and frothy withal, that graduates from such colleges are more suited to shine in the ball-room, or fashionable soiree, than in the paths of useful attainment, success in which reflects credit on their Alma Mater. It has come to be believed by some thoughtless people that the school which is most fashionable, the pupils of which spend most money and who can ape most successfully the Oscar Wildes of modern society; that can spout pages of Lucille, or Emerson, without understanding what they say, are ahead of all others. One never-failing characteristic of such schools is, they are good proselyting agencies. They excel in that line, if in nothing else. All such froth as this Wake Forest ignores. The frothy student that attends Wake Forest is not there long before he has to "come down to business."

Of course, by the very force of circumstances, and the power of christian belief and example, Wake Forest is a decided factor in propagating our denominational views. The great aim of the institution is to train the minds and the hearts of the young men who occupy her halls, still there is manhood enough among her professors, and faith enough in the perpetuity and scripturalness of our doctrines to enable them to rise above the weakness of some who make their leading schools only a part of a huge system for the propagation of denominational tenets. We verily believe that there are some graduates of Catholic colleges that could tell one more about the "Calendar Saints," the temporal power of the Popes, the duties of the Confessional, &c., than they could about some of the plainest problems of science or mathematics. The secret of the popularity of many Roman Catholic institutions, and of many who imitate Rome in her methods, is that students are fed on the sugar-plums of knowledge, and studies that require real application and effort, and that fit men or women for future usefulness, are more or less ignored. The diploma is granted as a gratification of the vanity of the student, and to satisfy friends at home. The diploma of some modern graduates is only a waste of valuable sheep skin, and considering the fact that they turn out graduates that are nearer bigoted sectaries than mature scholars, one is forcibly reminded when noticing these diplomas in the hands of such graduates of the sheepishness and duplicity of those who grant them. Well, we need not wonder, when we remember that some faiths cannot be well propagated in the light of the nineteenth century without some of the mysticism, tradition and monkishness of the ages, when priestcraft and Jesuitism held high carnival, while the masses were kept in gross darkness.

3. Wake Forest does not attempt to create a reputation by doctoring men of small calibre; nor does she give diplomas for anything but real merit, and as a reward and commendation of real scholarship. This thing of every little village school calling itself a college, and proceeding by college airs to acquire a reputation as such, has been carried to a ludicrous extent in America, especially within the last three decades of years. Thank God there is a reaction against this at present. We rejoice to know that a D. D. or LL. D. from our College means something. Would that we could say as much about such titles of other schools we might mention.

We will add, by way of concluding this paper, that we should ever be grateful to God who has led our noble institution through all its vicissitudes, and saved it from its friends and its foes within and without, so that it has finally come to the front the peer of any institution of like grade in the land. Let us remember, however, that Wake Forest is not a "finished" institution. It has not reached its full growth. It will grow with the years that come and go. Her 230 students should increase to 500, then a thousand, &c. It was the intention of her founders, and those who have shaped the legislation and history of her charter, to keep the College near the great Baptist heart of this commonwealth, and, we may say, of the country at large. The endowment will have to be increased to meet the demands of her rapidly increasing reputation and patronage. The building facilities will have to be increased. The facilities for philosophical and scientific investigation will have to be enlarged according to the progress and discoveries of the age. Wake Forest, then, has never seen the day when she could dispense with the sympathy, the help and the prayers of our people. So mote it be. Let us stand by our College! If you are a Baptist, and have a son to whom you wish to give a college education, send him to Wake Forest.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. Dr. Leonidas Rosser of Virginia is dead.

....The Oxford Female Seminary has opened under favorable auspices. The outlook is very cheering.—F. P. Hobgood.

....Rev. G. M. Webb of Shelby will enter upon his new field at Randleman, Worthville and Ashboro the first of next month.

....Bro. P. A. Dunn of Wake Forest called to see us on Friday last to cheer us in our work. He is one of the truest and best of our brethren.

....Mrs. Martha Olive, widow of the late Rev. Johnson Olive, died suddenly in Holly Springs on Jan. 25th, at the home of her son-in-law, Bro. G. B. Alford.

....Rev. Walter Splawn of Louisville, Ky., and Miss Annie Francis Bacon will be married in the Broadway Baptist church at five o'clock p. m. Tuesday, Feb. 9th.

....President John B. Brewer of the Chowan Baptist Female Institute was presented with a handsome gold headed cane on Christmas day by the Faculty of the Institute.

....Bro. W. C. Petty of Manly was in Raleigh on Tuesday of last week on his way to Oxford for the purpose of entering his daughters as students in the Oxford Female Seminary.

....Rev. J. L. White of Durham has been called to the pastorate of the First church, Asheville, and has accepted the call and will enter upon his work in Asheville at an early day.

....Rev. J. Walter Kenney of Antioch, S. C., has removed to Southport, N. C. We welcome Bro. Kenney back to North Carolina. His correspondents will note the change in his address.

....Prof. J. B. Carlyle of Wake Forest College was in Raleigh on Saturday. He reports Prof. Lanneau and Prof. Sledd as having suffered much from grippe recently, but both now on the high road to recovery.

....Rev. T. C. Buchanan of Globe, N. C., was married last week to a young lady who had just entered Globe Academy. She preferred taking charge of the Principal and helping him manage the school to being a pupil.

....Rev. A. T. Howell has resigned his position of Principal of the Yadkin Valley Institute in order to devote his entire time to the ministry. Churches wishing to correspond with him will address him at Southport, N. C.

....Rev. A. W. Price of Wadesboro is having a pleasant time of it with his work. He has suffered some loss by removals, but will make up the loss by accessions. Bro. Price is a working pastor as well as an able preacher of the word.

....The "Fife" meeting at Martinsville, Va., continued from Jan. 3rd to 11th, with the following results: Names returned for church membership—Methodist, 69; Christian, 47; Presbyterian, 48; Baptist, 48; Episcopal, 13.—J. Thos. McLean.

....We learn that it is probable Rev. G. P. Hamrick of this place will be called to the pastorate of the church at Boiling Springs. If this church secures the services of this earnest and devoted minister it will be fortunate.—Shelby Review.

....Rev. J. G. Barkley of Rocky Mount, N. C., is now in his eighty-third year. He goes about his farm and seemingly enjoys life as well as ever. He has for more than half a century lived a most consistent and active life as a christian and a minister.

....Rev. H. M. Wharton of Baltimore spent last week aiding Rev. Dr. A. C. Dixon in a series of meetings with the Hanson Place Baptist church, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Dr. Dixon occupied the pulpit of the Brantley church, Baltimore, Md., on Sunday, 24th.

....Rev. E. W. Wooten of Wooten, N. C., and his family have read the RECORDER from its first issue. He has a poor opinion of the piety and interest of the man in Baptist affairs and Christ's kingdom who refuses to pay his subscription to the RECORDER.

....Bro. F. S. Biggs of Baltimore has settled in Raleigh as General Agent of the Ætna Life Insurance Company, one of the strongest and best of what is termed the "Old Line" Companies. We wish Brother Biggs a happy and successful life in North Carolina.

....Rev. W. E. Crocker of the Seminary writes: "I learn to-day that Rev. J. L. Sproles, who is now a student of the Seminary and pastor of the Southgate St. church in this city, has been called to the church in Shelby, N. C., and will take charge February 1st."

....Rev. W. J. Sholar of Hamilton, N. Y., was in Oxford on Wednesday of last week, and assisted by Rev. J. S. Hardaway, united in marriage Mr. Edward H. Sholar of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Miss L. Annie Powell, daughter of Capt. E. P. Powell, of Oxford, N. C.

....A number of our wisest and best brethren have thanked us for our article on "Misappropriation of Public Money." We appreciate the hearty approval of our brethren, and assure them that we shall continue to oppose all such use of money collected by taxation.

....Rev. A. T. Hord, of "Hamburgh High School," Jackson county, has a good school and likes that section, but is twenty miles from a railroad and misses his brethren of this section. He takes and enjoys the RECORDER, and keeps posted in matters of the Lord's kingdom.

....Please announce that the Union Meeting of the Mecklenburg and Cabarrus Association will meet with the church at Matthews on Friday before the fifth Sunday in this month. Introductory sermon by Rev. Dr. A. G. McManaway. Hope all the churches will send messengers.—Com.

....We regret to learn that Rev. Dr. Hufham of Tarboro is quite sick. If his thousand of friends could prevent his ever having a day or even an hour of sickness or sorrow, they would gladly take his portion of all such ills upon themselves. The dear brother has waded through a three weeks' grippé, however, and is now improving.

....Rev. A. D. Hunter of Greenville, N. C., is a wide awake, energetic pastor, and looks after all the Master's interest on his field. From what he says in a private letter containing a list of subscribers, we infer that he is of the opinion that Rev. W. B. Morton needs a wife to look after him. A number of us agree with Bro. Hunter in this.

....Dr. J. M. Frost, Corresponding Secretary of our Sunday-school Board, Nashville, Tenn., says: "Your Board, it seems to me, acted very wisely in placing the Sunday school work in North Carolina under the management of Rev. C. Durham, the Corresponding Secretary, and may God bless him in it, and crown him with a glorious success."

....If any of our male readers, who are well qualified, would like to have a good position as teacher, we advise them to write to Rev. P. S. C. Davis of Shiloh, N. C. Bro. Davis writes: "Had good meeting at Shiloh church, third Sunday. The hand of fellowship was given to three, and one was received for baptism. People are better of the grippe."

....Bro. Jacob S. Allen, who was one of the constituent members of the Second church in Raleigh, is now a much loved and useful member of the Grace St. church in Richmond. He seems happy in Old Virginia, but when he gets a chance to go to North Carolina, he is very particular to say that he is going to God's country.—Dr. W. E. Hatcher in Baltimore Baptist.

....Bro. Benjamin Lanier of Level Plains, N. C., in renewing his subscription, says: "My father, Rev. Benjamin Lanier, is still living and in good health, though almost blind. He still retains his faculties and can tell much of the times when the Baptists in our State were few, and it was not regarded as a popular thing to be connected with them; but ours are brighter days."

....Rev. Dr. F. M. Ellis of Baltimore sends us an able and timely article, which appears on another page, and says: "I send you an article inspired, or at least prompted, by your excellent editorial in your issue of January 13th. If not too long, or too otherwise, you may use it as you like. I would be glad to preach from your BIBLICAL RECORDER pulpit, if you can let me in."

....On January 1st, 1891, Rev. D. M. Austin accepted the pastorate of the Second church in Charlotte, a small mission church just organized, and with the aid of his united little band he has succeeded in one year's work in placing his church at the head of the list in the Mecklenburg and Cabarrus Association in contributions and pledges to our denominational work.

....Rev. W. B. Morton of Wake Forest was in Raleigh on Thursday last to replenish his wardrobe, and, as far as possible just now, to replace the loss he sustained by thieves in Weldon some weeks ago. Bro. Morton has invitations to settle as pastor from a number of churches in other States. We hope some church in North Carolina will yet induce him to remain in this State.

....Rev. J. D. Harris of Sparta, N. C., has been called to mourn the death of his beloved wife. She was a good woman, and found great pleasure in aiding her husband in his labors. Sister Harris was in her forty-second year. She professed conversion and united with the church when sixteen years old, and lived a consistent, earnest christian life, and died in the triumphs of faith. Bro. Harris is one of the missionaries of our Board, and with a sad heart he presses on to do his work. On the third Sunday in this month he received into Liberty church Wm. Cheek, one of the most substantial and prominent citizens in Alleghany county. He has also just given out the contract for a good house of worship at Piny Creek, and the Lord is greatly blessing his work.

....A well organized and properly conducted Baptist church needs no manner of society in it. It is of itself a society of christian endeavor, a man and womans mission society, a man and womans temperance society, a young man's and an old man's christian association, &c., &c., even to the last of the one hundred societies, associations, unions, etc., invented for the purpose of taking up collections.

....If a church would begin with its organization to live according to the Bible, its members would expect nothing else but to do their full share of church work, just as the tax-payer his full tax, and never look for nor expect anything else. But, alas! the churches have ruined their members by their miserable looseness in church discipline; have rendered a large per cent. of church members unfit for church work or membership.—R. Q. A. T.

....Fulton Ave. has suffered some severe losses of late by the removal to other States of some of its most active members. Now another follows. Bro. Frank S. Biggs has been ordered by the Ætna Life Insurance Co., of which he is an agent, to locate at Raleigh, N. C., and take charge of its Southern work. Bro. Biggs is a deacon in Fulton Ave. church, superintendent of their Hollins St. mission and one of the most active and liberal of its members. He will be sadly missed.—Baltimore Baptist.

....We ask all our pastors to read Hon. H. K. Carroll's article on the Census in this issue. There are a number of Associations in North Carolina from which no report has been sent in. The statistics of the Baptists of North Carolina are the only ones that are incomplete. At least 15,000 of our colored members have not reported. If you know anything about these Associations, please send Dr. Carroll a copy of the Minutes, or send them to the BIBLICAL RECORDER, Raleigh, N. C., and we will forward them to Dr. Carroll.

....Rev. C. A. Woodson of Durham, Corresponding Secretary of the Ministers' Relief Board, makes an earnest appeal to all the pastors and churches in the Convention for immediate help for the aged and dependent brethren the Board now have on their hands. Some of these aged brethren have spent as much as thirty five years in preaching the gospel in North Carolina. They are now aged, poor and dependent on their brethren for support. Every church in North Carolina ought to take a collection for this Board at an early day.

....Bro. O. T. Moore of Eufaula, Ala., in sending us a subscription, says: "I congratulate you upon your splendid success in placing the RECORDER at the head of Baptist papers of our fair Southland. Its weekly visits to me are in the nature of a letter from the home of my childhood in dear old Carolina. Long may the RECORDER live and be blessed of God in its fight against sin and unrighteousness and for the upbuilding of Christ's kingdom." We hardly think the RECORDER has reached the position indicated by Bro. Moore, but if giving cranks, isms and side issues the cold shoulder will enable us to reach the first place, we are on the road that leads there.

....Rev. J. L. White of Durham is expected in Rocky Mount, N. C., this week, and will aid Pastor Love in a series of meetings. Bro. Love issued the following card to his people on the 21st: "You are invited to attend revival services which are to begin at the Baptist church next Sunday, January 24th, and continue ten days. Rev. J. L. White, pastor First Baptist church, Durham, N. C., will arrive on Monday and will do the preaching throughout the meeting. Friend, sickness and death are among us hurrying many into the spirit world. What is your hope for eternity? Are you a christian? If so, what are you doing to lead your unsaved friends to Christ? See Daniel 12:3, and James 5:20."

Letter from Rev. C. C. Haymore.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I love the RECORDER because it stands by and defends the truth of the Bible in the midst of the strongest opposition. May it grow stronger and stronger, that the hundreds of brethren throughout the State who are weak in faith may be made strong and active workers for the Lord.

For years I have had to put in all my spare time begging money to build church-houses in the most destitute sections in this part of the State. I have one house yet unfinished, which I hope will be completed by the middle of this year.

I hope this year to be able to raise more money for the RECORDER and give it a larger circulation in my field of work.

Last year my work seemed hard, but the Lord greatly blessed my feeble efforts. Over two hundred made a public profession of their faith in Christ during the time I spent in protracted meeting work, of which number I had the pleasure of baptizing about fifty.

This year I greatly desire to do a better work than I did last year. I enter the field with renewed energy, determined to try to preach the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

UNION MEETING.

The next Union Meeting of the Pilot Mountain Association will be held with the Red Bank church, two miles south of Germanton, Stokes county, beginning on Friday before the fifth Sunday in this month. Those coming on train Thursday evening will be met and cared for by brethren and friends living in Germanton. The brethren attending the meeting will all be met Friday morning in Germanton at Styer's Store, and conveyed out to church in time for the opening sermon. We earnestly request that all the churches be represented. This is the first meeting of the year, and let us come together, determined to start the work aright. Yours,

C. C. H.

Mount Airy, Jan. 15, 1892.

Placed in the Hands of Rev. C. Durham

At the meeting of the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools, held in the Mission Rooms in Raleigh, on Jan 12th, 1892, the Board was formally notified that Rev. W. B. Morton declined the Secretaryship of Sunday-schools and Colportage.

The Board informally discussed the situation and the condition of the Sunday-school work and of the business of the Supply Store, and concluded that it could not afford to have the Sunday-school-work of the Convention remain longer without an authoritative head, whereupon a motion was made and unanimously passed to place the work in charge of Rev. C. Durham and to authorize him to employ such clerical help as he might find necessary for a vigorous and successful prosecution of this work.

This fixed the matter for the present Conventional year, and the members of the Board present so understood it.

JOHN C. SCARBOROUGH,
President of Board.

Raleigh, Jan. 25, 1892.

Our Roll of Honor.

One of the most encouraging signs of the times as regards our work is the fact that a number of individuals and churches, in various parts of the country, are undertaking the support of missionaries. The number of such has been so increasing of late that we have decided to keep a list of them standing in the Journal. May the list grow constantly, as one after another, our churches and wealthier christians realize the obligation and privilege of having their own representative in the foreign field. If one hundred such shall be found in the coming year, the hope of many lovers of missions will be realized, and our board will be able to send out one hundred new missionaries during the Centennial year—one for each year of this Century of Missions. Here is the list of the churches or individuals, missionaries and fields:

Hon. J. A. Brown, Geo. – J. A. Brunson, Japan.

Fifth church, Washington, D. C.—W. D. King, North China.

First church, Asheville, N. C.—Mrs. G. W. Greene, Canton.

Mr. E. L. Wilkins, S. C.—Miss Lula Whilden, Canton.

First church, Augusta, Ga.—W. H. Sears, North China.

A layd, First church, Baltimore, Md.—C. E. Smith, Africa.

It might be well to add a few words concerning the items given above, that others may perchance be moved to go and do likewise.

Hon. J. A. Brown supports brother Brunson as a memorial to a loved daughter whom God took to himself some years ago. Likewise a lady in the Fifth church, Baltimore, supported brother Smith, as a memorial to her father. The First church, Washington, and the First of Augusta, are only giving practical expression to a growing missionary spirit, fostered and developed under the leadership of pastors whose hearts are full of the zeal for the work.

The First church, Asheville, N. C., had been giving about $200 a year to Foreign missions, but a year or so ago decided to build a large and costly house of worship. Instead of cutting down their gifts to this cause during this strain of building they decided to enlarge abroad as well as at home. Hence an increase to $600 a year for a missionary's support.

Last spring Deacon E. L. Wilkins and his wife, of Charleston, S. C., celebrated their silver wedding, and as a thank-offering to God, decided to support a missionary, hoping if blessed of God, to continue it in the future.—Foreign Mission Journal, January.

Are there not churches in our Convention that could be put on this "roll of honor"? With a little judicious thought and business-like determination, it seems to me, that the churches in Raleigh, Wilmington, Durham, Goldsboro, Henderson, Oxford, Reidsville, Winston, Charlotte, with others in the towns and country, might be placed on this roll of honor. What will brethren Carter, Hall, Pritchard, White, Edwards, VanDeventer, Hardaway, Howard, Brown and McManaway say about it? Why not start the Missionary Centennial in North Carolina in this way? Who will be the first to speak to his people about it? Let us try it. Why not? This would start us on a new life in missions. Now is the time for this work. What say you, pastors?

CENTENNIAL MEETINGS.

The Convention at Goldsboro passed unanimously the following, viz:

"Resolved, That the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools arrange for such special addresses to be delivered before the next annual session of this body on the Centennial of Modern Missions, and for such Missionary Centennial Meetings, during the year, as it may think best; and, also, provide and put into the homes of our people, by sale and gratuitous distribution, such literature as may be helpful to the cause of missions."

Let it be remembered that the Centennial year begins with the Southern Baptist Convention in May, 1892, and closes with the Convention in 1893. These dates, of one hundred years ago, include the great facts that are to be commemorated by us. And while our Board will hold strictly to these dates, in holding Missionary Centennial meetings, it has already gone vigorously to work with arangements for such meetings. At the last meeting of the Board, Drs. P. S. Henson of Chicago, A. J. Gordon of Boston, A. C. Dixon of Brooklyn, and F. M. Ellis of Baltimore, were unanimously and most heartily invited to be the guests of the Board at the next meeting of the Baptist State Convention, to be held in this city Dec. 8–13, and to speak to the people on Missions. These brethren have been written to, and it is hoped they will be with us.

Correspondence will be entered into soon with committees in the associations, with the view of arranging for Centennial meetings at their next sessions. The Board, into whose hands the Convention has committed these arrangements, is awake to the importance of the work, and will, we think, meet the highest expectations of the denomination.

C. DURHAM.

Help Needed.

Let me again call the attention of my fellow-pastors, and the dear brethren and sisters composing our churches all the State, to the resolution unanimously adopted by our last Baptist State Convention at Goldsboro, requesting our churches "to contribute regularly for the work of the Ministers' Relief Board, as for any other denominational work," &c. Our churches that held service on Christmas day were requested to "utilize these meetings, by contributing for this object."

As a matter of fact, very few of our churches, so far as I have been able to learn, held service on Christmas day, and hence the contributions for our work have been light. Brethren, will you not let us hear from you? Can we not have a general response from our pastors, somewhat like the recent response, (not yet ended), for the Havana house? That was a beautiful and graceful thing. My people and yours have shared in the blessed privilege of responding to this appeal from Cuba. Can we not then, dear brethren, listen to the feeble but eloquent voice of our aged brethren at home, as they call to us for help? I am sure that I violate no confidence by giving here an exact reproduction of a letter recently received from one of Christ's aged and faithful veterans. Early in December last we sent him and others a remittance of ten dollars each. The dear old brother has had to wait so long for another, that he is under the necessity of writing the following:

"I received a check from the Treasurer of the Relief Board, on Dec. 14th, 1891, and it is gone, and I am now in great need, as I had to get some little on its credit before I got it, and I paid what was due, and the remainder is gone. I hate very much to have to send to you for money, when I know the contributions are small; but if I could get the eight dollars per month regularly, perhaps I could get along. I have no way of making money now, as you know when a man gets old, he is laid upon the shelf to do the best he can, it don't matter how hard he has labored heretofore; but so it is, that is the way of the world; but it is the hardest time with me now, nearly, of my life.

"I have done as much hard work for the last thirty-five years, and traveled as many miles, and baptized as many persons, as almost any other minister in the State; but I am now getting old, and my service is not in such demand as it used to be; but I will try to be resigned to the will of the good Lord, and not murmur nor complain. I can't get out much this cold winter, as I can't stand cold weather as I once could. I trust the Lord will bless you and your family abountdantly, in your work of love.

Your brother in Christ, ———."

There it is brethren verbatim I have others like it. Shall we not hasten to the help of this dear old saint, and others like him? My sisters, how about those widows we have on our list? Will you not help us in our efforts to "cause the widow's heart to sing for joy?" Will not each church in the State send us a contribution and thus enable us to make monthly remittances to our beneficiaries? Send contribution direct to our Treasurer, T. E. Cheek, Durham, N. C., or to J. D. Boushall, Raleigh, N. C.

Your Brother in Christ,
C. A. WOODSON, Cor. Sec. Board.

"May"—"Shall."

In the North Carolina law, legalizing the sale of liquors, it used to read: The town or county commissioners "may" grant license, &c. But the last Legislature struck out the word "may" and inserted "shall." It appears that the change was made to compel commissioners to grant license. The word "may" left it discretionary with the commissioners to grant license or not. Sometimes there were commissioners brave and good enough not to grant license. This was very objectionable to the Devil and his great host of liquor sellers and drinkers. So the old fellow determined to make a dead effort to have "may" struck out and "shall" inserted. For this purpose he attended the last Legislature and became a lobby member. Nor body in or at the Legislature worked harder than he did. He soon found he had friends. It was not hard to find one ready to offer the amendment. And now the debate begins. The old fellow is busy suggesting argument. The discussion waxes warm. But it ends, and the vote is taken. "May" is struck out and "shall" is inserted.

And now the Devil rises to a question of privilege. He wants to return thanks. The privilege is granted. He arises with a smile on his hideous face, and says: "Gentlemen, dear and loyal friends, most heartily do I thank you, who have voted in the majority, for the valuable aid you have given me. One of my names is Apollyon, the destroyer. Nothing helps me so much in my work of destruction as the liquor traffic. And now you have so changed the law that all the town and county commissioners 'shall' help me. Thank you, gentlemen, thank you." And as he takes his seat, he waives his hand, and all the hosts of hell send up a mighty shout of applause. All the liquor men of the State join in the thundering shout, and from seacoast to mountain tops the mighty wave of applause rolls and swells.

But the Devil is in trouble again. In many parts of the State commissioners are refusing license on the ground of character. He will have to go to the courts, or to the next Legislature, and have the law made definite, that is, that a "good moral character" means any one who will obligate himself to serve the Devil, according to law, in selling liquors. J. A. BRADLEY.

Baptist Female University.

We desire to call the attention of the readers of the RECORDER to the Baptist Female University of North Carolina. We have had little to say of it in the papers of late, for the reason that we have had very many and some formidable obstacles to contend with. Some of them have been overcome and some vital questions have been settled. The Trustees, at their last meeting, determined that the enterprise should not be abandoned. They decided to stand by their decision to locate it in Raleigh on the site first chosen by them, that is, on the Pullen, Grissom and Adams property. They, also, concluded to press the collections in and outside of Raleigh as rapidly as possible. The time has come to direct attention of our people who live outside of Raleigh to the importance of this institution. The greatest need of the Baptist denomination in this State to-day is a Central College of superior grade for the education of women. We need such an institution to afford facilities to all of our girls, who can avail themselves of the best educational advantages. It is far better that these privileges be in our midst than to have to be sought in an inhospitable climate and with unsuitable environments. Besides, with an institution located among us, ten times as many will be educated as there would be if they had to go off. We need it to furnish teachers to the other schools, and to thoroughly equip those who are called to labor in foreign fields. But above all we need it to elevate the standard of education for women.

We greatly need better educated women and a hundred times more educated women. Whatever we do to increase the intellectual and moral power of woman results in the betterment of humanity and the advancement of christianity. In all christendom women have been the best supporters of the christian religion. A greater number of them embrace religion, and they are more inclined to be pious. It is generally admitted that children inherit more from their maternal parent, and the mother is the sole teacher at the most plastic age. She is the guide to sentiment and thought and the moulder of character, hence her sphere gives her the most important post in the religious domain.

My dear reader, carefully and prayerfully consider this interest, and if you are able to do so, contribute liberally. Remember that those help best who help first. The hardest time in all enterprises is in the start. I shall be glad to confer with any who want to help in the matter. My address is Box 156, Raleigh, N. C. J. B. BOONE.

The Union Meetings and High Point Female College.

I beg the brethren to whom I have written, to bring to the attention of their Union Meetings the effort I am making to get our people to buy this institution. I earnestly hope that the brethren in all these Unions will endorse the matter, and that all will help a little. I ask only a little from each—nothing for myself—but a little from each for our Baptist girls. Help, brethren. It is for yourselves and for your girls and for the good of the Lord's cause.

I request the clerks of these associations, or some brother, to send me a copy of the minutes of the last session of their associations.

ONCE MORE.

I desire to say to all who feel an interest in the plan for buying, improving and endowing High Point Female College that supplemental to that plan our friends here and I have agreed that all bonds for from ten to fifty dollars a year shall be conditioned that upon the payment of any installment the payees in the bond (the trustees) shall issue to the party a certificate which shall be received, at the rate of one tenth for each month sent, from the party, his representative, or assignee in part payment of expenses for any pupil or pupils sent to the institution.

The amount advanced will thus be repaid, but will, at the same time, be a contribution to the institution and entitle the giver to a vote as per the charter thereof.

All amounts less than ten dollars a year will be donations merely, and will not be repaid.

By this means contributors only advance a small amount each year for a few months and the principal is fully repaid whenever in the future (time not limited) they may send a pupil or pupils themselves or get others to send by assigning their certificates and, at the same time, secure the institution to the denomination—without loss to any one.

But, it will be asked—how can the institution do this and still go on? The reply is: Thirty paying boading pupils will keep the school alive and pay expenses at catalogue rates. Sixty will do the same and leave a margin at a deduction of fifty dollars each from catalogue prices. This is so, because in a college it requires as many teachers for thirty as for sixty—nearly as many servants and as much fuel.

If the bonds and pupils are secured there will be no rents no interest to pay—only a small amount for repairs and insurance.

It is sure that the success of the plan will insure sixty paying boarding pupils—probably more.

By adopting this we will materially increase the amount of bonds given in this city and it is hoped else where.

Begging every one to use every effort to get as many of these bonds filled as possible, also bonds for smaller amounts as donations, and requiring all to pay for success, I am,

Fraternally, J. H. STALLINGS.

Walter M. Gilmore of Tempting, N. C., has been teaching the high school branches in Pocket High School for Prof. Allen Jones. Bro. Gilmore hopes to go to the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary next fall.

Sunday-school Thoughts.

Reading the excellent article of Rev. A. W. Price on the "S. S. Problem," and just before its perusal, the admirable editorial on the "Centennial of Missions," I thought a clear, shining path out of the "problem," into the better way, was made manifest. We have been signally blest in our missionary work in the dark corners, continents, and islands of the sea in our Lord's great field, the world. We see clearly enough that these vast regions, lying in outer darkness, are ready for the reapers and that these laborers should be sent. All who desire the spread of the gospel, see and feel the need of this great work, and know that a mighty effort all along the line should be made in this direction, which all our other great interests—Education Orphanage, Home and State Missions, Sunday schools, Colportage, Aged Ministers, and Periodicals—should, with added emphasis on some, and no falling off on any, go forward in the good old way so greatly blest and so successful before the innovation of "Sec. of Sunday-schools and Colportage" with large salary, was designed, offered or declined, which latter can be said to the credit of so many of our noble North Carolina brotherhood.

What better way for the sustenation and building up of Sunday-schools could be devised than that in the schools themselves and the pastors of the churches to which they belong? The preacher shows the need an I prospective good. The superintendent and every teacher exert every power, the first to fill the school and the latter to fill their classes from hovel and palace, from highway and hedge, and how easily the young minds, under pure Bible teaching, learn to give gladly, to save the perishing, their hard earned pennies, provided they know that it is to that class, and not salaried folks, it is going.

What a power, too, these pious young teachers exert in leading out into gospel truth the young immortals under their care, and for equipping them for "life's stern bivouac of battle," and to become shining lights in Church and State! Well, then, we want our Secretary (and we have him) to look closely after them—see that they get full consideration at our Associations and Union Meetings, and he is amply sufficient along this line as aforetime. Dr. Durham can cover a good deal of space if he spreads himself, for he is broad, though short.

We no more need a Secretary for Sunday-school and Colportage work than we do for any other two of our great interests. Too many officers and too much government often do more harm than good. Notice the legion of warm, well paid, useless offices in our government, provided apparently for cabinet officers, presidents' and senators' sons. Let us, then, in our household of faith avoid all such empty pomp and bend our energies more to the salvation of souls and the spread of the gospel to our own destitute regions and to the benighted rights of the world. To this end, "not a cent for tribute" to pomp or show, "but millions" to the spread of the life giving word.

I do hope—and I feel sure it is the hope of a large majority of our membership—that since Bro. W. B. Morton, so eminently fitted for any mission for good, has declined the Secretaryship, no new one be elected, lest peradventure, for the money, he accept—where so many noble brethren have declined, for less salaries to do greater work.

I yield precedence to no one in good wishes for Sunday-schools, having many years served as teacher and superintendent, and know well what Bro. Price so graphically describes. The evils he describes in assemblies, all can see and understand.

Then let us avoid the appearance of evil, and do what we can, at the command of our Great Captain, to "go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

D. MCNEILL.

Letter from Rockyhock, N. C.

Dear Recorder:—Our community has been severely afflicted with the "grip." Very few of us have escaped its dreadful effects. In many instances whole families have been stricken down at a time.

Our church, Rockyhock, has lost one of its most efficient and useful members in the death of Bro. John T. Webb. He departed this life on the 4th inst. in the forty-third year of his age. He had been a consistent member for twenty-seven years. He leaves a large family of little children, besides a wife, a mother-in-law, and a host of friends and relatives to mourn his loss. We shall miss him in the church, in the Sunday school and in the community. He was a good neighbor, a kind husband, and an affectionate father. We mourn not as those who have no hope, believing that he has gone to receive the reward prepared for the finally faithful.

Another one of our members has passed over the river. Sister Priscilla Boyce was called to exchange worlds on the 8th inst. in the sixty-third year of her age. She has been a consistent member of our church for a number of years. She had been in delicate health for a long while, but when la grippe fastened its hold upon her, she soon passed away.

I have just returned with my wife from Bertie county, where we went to attend the burial of her uncle, S. J. Perry, who died on the 14th inst. in the sixty-seventh year of his age. Bro. Perry was a very useful member of Bethany church; in his death she sustains an irreparable loss. By his industry and frugality he had acquired a handsome competence of this world's goods. He was not inclined to be penurious—was ever ready to help the poor and needy. He did not forget his church nor Sunday-school, nor did he have anything too good for his pastor, but acted as a father to him. In his declining years his mind did not seem to be absorbed with earthly cares, but was studiously preparing to exchange a world of trouble and sorrow for a world of bliss. During the month of December he attended services in five different churches in his county, thus rounding up his long, useful life in the service of his Master. When disease fastened its clutches upon him a short while ago, and his final end was approaching, he expressed himself as being ready and willing to obey the last summons. His funeral was preached by his pastor, Elder Bristoe, from Psalm 37: 37—"Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace." Quite a number of sorrowing friends and relatives were present, to pay the last tribute of respect to his departed remains. Two sisters, one brother, and a host of relatives are left behind to battle with the cares and sorrows of life. W. B. FELTON.

Rockyhock, Jan. 19, 1892.

Letter from Rev. Dr. T. T. Eaton of Kentucky.

Dear Editor:—At the recent meeting of the Centennial Committee of the Southern Convention in Washington, D. C., it was decided to ask the editors of our denominational papers to write special editorials on the importance of using the centennial movement for increasing the number of contributions to missions.

Our Committee believe there is no more important matter in connection with our work than this, and that every means for reaching the people to accomplis this result should be used. There is no better means for getting hold of the people than the religious press.

The Committee are glad to have already had the assurance of your hearty co operation in our work; and, therefore we call upon you with the greater confidence.

We hope it will meet views to speak forth editorially with great emphasis and vigor upon this subject. To send a hundred missionaries to the foreign field during the year, and to correspondingly increase our home forces; and then through lack of contributions, to be obliged to dismiss many of these missionaries, would be a calamity; and such an issue of the Centennial would make the movement do more harm than good. In behalf of the Committee, I am, Fraternally yours, T. T. EATON.

Literary.

The Missionary Review of the World for February devotes a large portion of its space to a most timely consideration of the work in China. In the department of Literature of Missions are two articles, the first by the Rev. John R. Hykes of Kinkiang, on "The Importance of Winning China for Christ;" the other, by the Rev. John Ross of Moukden, North China, on "How the Gospel Spreads in China;" both of which present a most hopeful view for the future of missionary enterprise there. The Monthly Concert of Missions is also devoted chiefly to China, reviewing the causes and significance of the present troubles there. The various departments of the magazine as usual cover the broad field and present an excellent summary of mission work in all parts of the globe. Published by the Funk & Wagnalls Company, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York. $2 per year; 25 cents for single numbers; clubs of ten, $1.50.

The Baptist Teacher, issued by the American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia, is regarded by Sunday-school workers and teachers most highly, not merely for its valuable aid in the study of the Sunday-school lessons, but also for its excellent articles on other Sunday-school subjects. It has become a real Baptist magazine of a high order of merit both from a denominational and literary standpoint. The table of contents for February shows variety and increased attractiveness. Some practical and pertinent questions are handled editorially without gloves. The Rev. H. A. Delano gives an excellent character-sketch of Isaiah, and Dr. Hobart matches it with an article on Jeremiah. The discussion on the Scribes, by the Rev. J. H. Mason, introduced by reference to Baruch, is timely and informing. A voice from across the ocean calls attention to Bible reading and the work of a useful organization of which Mr. Waters is honorary secretary. The Editor's Drawer is crowded with notes and queries. Library Notes will be found helpful. The lesson department is full and complete, as usual, with the addition of a new feature—"Bible Lesson Dictionary." It is said that the circulation of this paper has increased to several thousands during the past month.

In order to introduce The Baptist Teacher very generally into schools where it has not heretofore been in use, the American Baptist Publication Society made the very liberal offer to furnish it as a trial to such schools at ten cents per copy for the first six months of 1892, provided a sufficient number was subscribed for to supply every teacher.

The result has fully justified the offer, the demand having exceeded the most sanguine expectations. Although the January edition was largely increased to meet the extra demand, the supply is exhausted and subscriptions received now must begin with the February numbers.

The Society continues the offer for five months beginning February, at ten cents per copy until the February numbers have been used when the rate will be ten cents for four months beginning with March and so on. Send in your orders at once and thus assure yourself of February issues.

is an occasion for a profounder gratitude than any of us can render, also that he who has flung wide open the doors of a world to the gospel of his Son, is also arousing his children to realize the responsibility of this tremendous work of evangelizing the nations. Bless God the churches are becoming missionary churches, and we are beginning to read out of the "great commission" the mighty meanings with which the Holy Spirit packed it. True much remains to be done before we can claim this for the majority of our churches or of our people. Never was christian apathy in christian missions so noticable as now. It seems simply amazing that any true disciple of our Lord can be indifferent in this matter. Alas, that so many are!

Missions, Foreign and Home, must sound out oftener from our pulpits. Too often they are confined to set days as the preface of collections. Missions crystalize the very essence of the gospel of Christ. What theme, handled in pulpits, is more important or so pregnant with the meanings of the gospel, or so gives faith, as the statue of Memnon, the music of the divine heart; or to change the figure, the spirit of missions falling upon the church of God, as the sunrise touched Memnon's statue, is making the church vocal with the meaning of our Lord's mission.

What lessons the past century has illustrated as to the beneficent influence of missions. How our churches at home have been up-lifted into a higher spiritual life by the demands of these foreign fields, white for harvest and pleading for laborers! Sir Wm. Hunter did not overstate the case when he linked a falling off in missionary effort with national decay. For what are such nations as England and our own preserved by God for if it be not that they shall give the gospel, that has made them all they are, to the world. God's glory is the moral basis of missions. Let that thought be first in all our conceptions and efforts for missions. The church's conception of the meaning and purpose of Christ's commission constitutes the missionary idea. Modern missions has taught the churches that however minute the germinal points of God's providences may be, that, after all, they only marked for us the place to set the compass of our faith, whose widening circles enclosed results that are wide as eternity and permanent as the eternal throne. Comparatively young as modern missions may be, let us remember that the missionary idea is as old as the commission, and that it dominated the men and measures of the apostolic church.

God's spirit in his church, through the ages, has been the interpreter of the commission. Its meanings have opened just as the church has responded to the Spirit's leadings. When at the close of a century of missionary activity, the church began to depend less upon the arm of God in missions, and more upon the arm of Cæsar in the State, the power of the church began to wane. Any church that grieves God's spirit is a declining church. It must be. Come down a step (further as the church of the father's sought to spread ecclesiasticism, the church lost her evangelical power. The missionary idea of Paul and his co-workers was the exhaltation of Christ's supreme headship. The missionary idea that succeeded the apostles aimed to magnify the body of Christ, i. e., the church. The missionary movement that cries, behold the church, is not of him whose cry was "behold the Lamb." Missions must exalt Christ if they have the countenance of the Holy Spirit, whose mission is to glorify him. During the ages that the missionary idea lay in the hands of a dead church "like seed corn in a mummies hand," spiritual darkness enfolded the people. The Holy Spirit has no place in an anti-mission, secularized church, and when, after two hundred years of a reformed faith, the long entombed missionary idea was quickened, as the spirit of life quickens the seed that has slept through the long nights of winter, it came forth as the bud sometimes appears amid the chill and ice of a delayed spring. For modern missions found itself face to face with the ridicule of high place, the chilling apathy of the churches, and the formidable front presented by a world-wide heathendom; and like the eleven obscure Galilean fishermen who stood on Olivet, orphaned of their Lord, with a rebellious world at their feet, to which they were commissioned to bear the gospel, a helpless handful of poor men—so when the modern mission movement, born in Carey's shoe-shop, and named in the cottage of widow Wallis, it seemed a poor weak thing—too frail for the winds and chill that encircled it. But, bless God, a century has shown that the promise and power of the commission, "Lo, I am with you," that made those Galileans victors, was in that modern missionary idea; and to-day it is the inspiration of church benevolence and activity, and is honored by the homage of the world.

What a revealer and interpreter of forgotten truths by the church this modern movement to evangelize the nations has been! How it demonstrates God's endorsement of our loans! "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord." It costs our government $100,000 to kill one of our poor Indians. How much does it cost the churches to bring one of them to Christ?

England has spent millions of pounds to compel the people of India to accept her terms. But what have modern missions accomplished for India at an immensely less cost of life and treasure?

This movement is putting things in their right relations. It is not civilization first and christianity afterwards; this has been tried and has failed. The true order is christianity, then civilization; this modern missions have abundantly demonstrated as God's method of procedure. A preached gospel is the divine plan to meet the needs of men and to provide for the best results in all.

This movement has not only pushed back the horizon of the church's vision, but it has directed the church to larger views of God, and to a deeper, more quickening conception of responsibility. "Can the heathen be saved without the gospel?" has been supplanted in the minds of all evangelical christians by the far more personal practical question, Can we be saved if we withhold the gospel from them? The light of the long delayed morning of a glorious day is breaking upon us, for the success of modern missions has shown the churches that they have already committed to them the money and the men for the world's evangelization if only used. But alas, these forces are to such an alarming extent latent, undeveloped and unconsecrated! Can this apathy and worldliness in our home churches be supplanted by a spirit of devotion to Christ, set ablaze by a holy enthusiasm for the world's evangelization? There are hopeful signs of this being done. More than four thousand of the choice young men and women of our schools and seminaries have devoted themselves to the foreign field. The annual offering for foreign missions by the christians of the world exceeds $10,000,000, and yet two cents a week from each of our 1,300,000 white Baptists of the South would amounnt to $1,374,000 more than the $10,000,000 now given by all christendom!

The church has been fortifying at home and now and then throwing out a skirmisher here and there in foreign fields. What is waited for is the order from the Captain of our Salvation, "Let the whole line advance." Some of us think this is the command of the Great Head of the church to us in this grand centennial movement. The call from the Foreign Board is for one hundred additional missionaries. The Home Board asks for a corresponding number for the home field. This will be a grand advance of our standard, but unless the churches follow this advancing standard with prayer, men and money, that standard will have to be brought back! Pastors, for Christ's sake, and your own honor, bring up your churches. Our advancing standards must be brought back. Speak, Lord, the word, "Let the whole line advance." Then give us the spirit of prompt and united obedience. And let our battle cry be as we go forward, "For God and for souls."

Can't be found—the equal of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. If other medicines of its class were like it, they'd be guaranteed. This is. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case for which it's recommended, you get your money back. It isn't a "cure-all," but it does cure all diseases arising from a torpid or deranged liver, or from impure blood. For all Scrofulous, Skin and Scalp Diseases, it's a positive remedy. Even Consumption, or Lung-scrofula, is cured by it, if taken in time and given a fair trial. That's all that's asked for it—a fair trial. Then, if it doesn't help you, there's no pay.

We claim it to be an unequaled remedy to purify the blood and invigorate the liver. We claim it to be lasting in its effects, creating an appetite, purifying the blood, and preventing Bilious, Typhoid and Malarial fevers, if taken in time. The time to take it is when you first feel the signs of weariness and weakness. By druggists.

Camm's Emulsion of Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, combined with the Hypophosphites, is recommended on its merit alone. It is prescribed by many of the leading Physicians of every state in the Union, besides being recommended by the Doctors and teachers of Medicine in Europe. This alone goes far to establish the justice of its claim to superiority. It is beyond doubt the best remedy in the world for the cure of Consumption, and all kindred diseases. It will positively cure consumption, if used before this fearful disease has made too much headway, particularly if it is persevered in after the arrest of the disease. Wherever there is any wasting disease of any kind, Camm's Emulsion is the remedy. To derive the full benefit from this truly valuable medicine, it is recommended that it be used only by the advice of an intelligent Physician. For sale by all druggists. Manufactured only by E. A. I have used the within remedy (Pokine) with great success. JAMES H. LASSITER.

I have used the Pokine Remedy (prepared by W. T. Cheatham, Jr.) in case of Sciatica with the result of positive relief in a few hours, and believe if used as directed is will effect a permanent cure.
J. L. H. MISSILLIER.

MARCH 6, 1891.

For the benefit of the public, I unhesitatingly recommend Cheatham's wonderful remedy, "Pokine," to all sufferers of rheumatism. It has produced marvelous results in my case. I was a sufferer of the malady for five years, and after taking a few bottles was entirely cured.
Very respectfully,
W. W. DOWTIN.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM:
Dear Sir—My wife was down in bed with rheumatism, and the Pokine I bought of you gave her relief after taking four doses. She has not been troubled since. It is the best medicine she ever took for rheumatism. Respectfully,
ZACK DAVIS.

MR W. T. CHEATHAM, JR:
Dear Sir—I have been afflicted with rheumatism time and again, for the past thirteen years. I have received more relief from Pokine than any medicine I ever took, and therefore take great pleasure in recommending it to all sufferers of rheumatism. Very respectfully,
F. G. MITCHELL.

JANUARY 19, 1891.

W. T. CHEATHAM, JR.:
Dear Sir—I desire to say that in January last I was down with rheumatism; my suffering was great, and I was completely prostrated. One bottle of your Pokine completely relieved me, and I have not had any rheumatism since. My son also was relieved of rheumatism by Pokine.
Yours truly,

Recent Audience with the Emperor of China.

A most interesting episode took place in connection with the foreign relations of China on March 5th, this year. It was the interview granted by the "Son of Heaven" to the foreign ministers living in Peking, and representing their various countries. For years past this question of the right personally to present credentials to the Emperor has been the subject of great discussions between the legations and the foreign office. In 1874 Tung Chih, the uncle of the present ruler, after much pressure was brought to bear, granted an audience. Since then, however, the question, although agitated, has never been seriously insisted upon until the present young ruler himself took control of the government. Unexpectedly to many, three months ago an Imperial edict was issued, stating that the Emperor was willing to receive the ministers and charges d'affaires. No matter what may have been the reasons for this step on the part of the Chinese government, reasons perhaps chiefly political, in order to cultivate more close relations with other governments, one thing is certain, that the express wish of the Emperor himself was also a powerful factor in bringing about the wished-for event. Those living outside of China can scarcely realize how many were the preliminaries which had to be arranged before the interview could take place. Long conferences were held between the legations and the Chinese ministers. On the one side, were a set of men anxious to surround their ruler with all the ceremonies which they consider to be his due as the representative of heaven upon earth; on the other hand, were the foreigners, willing to accord any etiquette customary at a European court, but determined not to do anything implying in any sense that their countries were in vassalage to China. The principal difficulties were the right of separate audience and the place of meeting. Mutual concessions smoothed over these points, the former being granted by the Chinese, and the foreigners waving their preferences in the latter. The place agreed upon was the "Hall of Shining Purple," where the usual receptions are accorded to the tributary States, such as Mongolia and Corea, with the understanding that on future occasions another place within the palace grounds must be prepared. The ministers with their suites started about 10 a. m. All the foreigners, thirty-one in number, sat in green sedan chairs, each carried by four men. Passing through the "Gate of Flowing Prosperity," they arrived at the point where the officials of the foreign office stood ready to receive. Descending from their chairs they entered, through long lines of soldiers, a temple, where some time was spent in chatting and eating various delicacies. Then the entire party advanced to the Hall of Audience. It is a picturesque building, with yellow tiles and painted in many colors. Three flights of steps lead up to a terrace in front of the hall doors. The central set are reserved for his Majesty; others use those on the sides. On the terrace were four tents comfortably furnished with stoves and carpets. When the summons into the Imperial presence came, each minister, with accompanying interpreter, was conducted by two officials to a point where two columns, the "Dragon Pillars," marked a distance of about six feet from the raised platform on which the Emperor was sitting. First, the German minister was received; then followed the representatives of America, England, Japan, Italy, and the Netherlands. The large room presented an imposing spectacle, being lined with military officers. Back of the Emperor, who was sitting cross-legged on the dais raised about three feet, were some dark stone tablets carved with Manchu and Chinese inscriptions. In front was a small table, and at the side a naked sword on a stand. On the way to the "Dragon Pillars" each minister made the obeisance given at any court to the Sovereign. He then read an address which was rendered into Chinese by the interpreter and handed to Prince Chung, who, on his knees, translated it into Manchu. The minister than advanced to the platform with his letter of credence, which was received by Prince Chung, who, with a low bow, laid it on the table. According to custom, the Prince should have knelt when presenting the letter. This, however, the foreigners would not allow, since, for the moment he represented them, thus kneeling would imply a concession of inferiority. Afterward a general reception was held, and the entire company, with their secretaries, were presented. The German minister, as doyen of the corps diplomatique, read an address; the Emperor replied in Manchu, which was turned into Chinese by Prince Chung, the head of the Foreign Office. A grand banquet the following day ended the audience. Of course, the Emperor was the central figure. He has an intelligent face and large dark eyes. He looks even younger than he is—eighteen years old. His physique is not strong, but his bearing is manly and self-possessed. His dress was a purple robe embroidered with gold dragons. He wore a large official felt hat, on the top of which was a plain red button. All hope that the outcome of this interview will be a still greater desire on the part of the Chinese to break down the isolation with which they have surrounded themselves.—Dr. Boudinot C. Atterbury, Peking, China.

Thoughts on the Baptist Covenant.

Dear Recorder:—I am a Baptist, or at least I want to be one. Now the question in connection with such desire is, what things are necessary in order to be a good Baptist? Well, as I haven't time nor space to speak of Baptist doctrine at length, nor to offer quotations from the Bible in support of the doctrine held by them, I will simply refer the reader to the Baptist Covenant, which is in short a summary of Baptist duty founded upon Bible authority. And while I think I understand the Baptist Covenant, I am constantly reminded of the fact that there are many Baptists, or at least many claiming to be such, who either know nothing of their covenant. Or if they know it, ignore its teaching. For illustration, some Baptist churches come into council, call the roll and note absentees, proceed to appoint committees, to cite the delinquents, &c. They also make reports against such as may have been found guilty of disorder. This is all well, to be sure, because the Covenant makes it the bounden duty of every member "not to forsake the assembling of themselves together," &c.; and also, "to walk uprightly and circumspectly before the world." But here comes in the insolvable enigma, the problem unanswered, the labyrinth from which Baptists up to this time have failed to find their way out, viz: what shall be done to, or how shall the member be dealt with, who does little or nothing for the pastor, evangelist, mission cause, education, or even for the poor of the church?

The Covenant is as plain, its language is as full and explicit on this point of duty, as it is upon negligence or immorality. Here it is: "That we will cheerfully contribute of our property according as God has prospered us for the maintenance of a faithful and evangelical ministry among us, for the support of the poor, and to spread the gospel over the earth."

Now, in the name of him, whose you claim to be, I ask you how you can get around and neglect this? Many of you who claim to be Baptists, and will vote to cite your absentees, and to withdraw from the immoral, have never paid anything, or but little, for the causes stipulated in your Covenant obligation, you would get offended if I were to say that you are Hardshell Baptists, you would oppose a motion to raise a committee in the church in order to say how much you should pay. But yet you will contend that members, no matter how poor, or regardless of how far they may live from the church, ought to attend. Then please apply the same rule to your covetous members, and see that they do their duty in benevolence and beneficence as well as in other duties.

Yours in the love of Christ,

D. N. GORE.

Loris P. O., Horry county, S. C.

Editor Recorder:—Will you kindly allow me through your columns to make an earnest appeal to officers of the following Baptist Associations in North Carolina, or to any others who are in a position to give statistical information concerning them? I have received full returns for all the Associations in the State excepting the following: Kenansville, New Association, Senter District, Western Shiloh.

I have made every effort to secure returns of these Associations, and have thus far failed. I need not say that the census report of the Baptist churches will be very incomplete unless I can obtain the statistics of these Associations. The facts I need are the following: Location, city, town or village, and county; whether there is an edifice; if so, its seating capacity and value, and the number of communicants. If the congregation meets in a hall or school-house, I should like to have the fact stated, and the seating capacity given as near as possible.

If any of the officers of these Associations cannot furnish the necessary information, I should be glad if the pastors or clerks of the various congregations would send me the returns for their particular congregations, stating plainly the name of the Association with which they are connected, and the name of the county in which they are situated. If the information cannot readily be obtained, I should like very much to have a copy of the latest Minutes of each of these Associations.

I may say that the returns of all other denominations in the United States are practically complete, and it depends on those who have official connection with the number of Baptist Associations whether the statistics of that denomination shall also be complete or imperfect.

The work of this division must be closed up within a very short time, and I hope there may be an immediate response.

If those who have copies of Minutes to forward will kindly give me their address on a postal card I will send a government envelope by which they can forward the Minutes without cost of postage.

Very respectfully,

H. K. CARROLL,
Special Agent Eleventh Census.

Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 9, 1892.

The law requires a "good character" in this State to sell liquor, but not to sell meats.

Without Their Equal.

The Sunday school Helps, published by the American Baptist Publication Society, are always inviting "comparison with other Sunday-school Helps." We are halfway tired and thoroughly sick of this aggravating boast and brag. Sometimes we almost wish that somebody, somewhere, could get up a graded series of Helps that would wholly eclipse the Society's, just to stop its "vain glorying." But the truth is, we get further and further from the gratification of such wish. Here before us are the Society's Helps for the first quarter of 1892, and, as we carefully look through them, we have to confess that they are, in every particular, very much better than ever before. And then (just think of it!) they are much cheaper than they ever were.

Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day which must be done whether you like it or not. Being forced to work, and forced to do your best, will breed in you temperance and self-control, diligence and strength of will, cheerfulness and content, and a hundred virtues which the idle never know.—Charley Kingsley.

Our Congressman.

Our Congressman in his patriotic argument on the tariff question often becomes hoarse and his voice husky. Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein will relieve him and cure coughs, croup and consumption.

REV. C. G. JONES, pastor of the College Hill church, Lynchburg, Va., sends us the following sensible letter. We wish to print it as a sample to our brethren that they may see how to answer an appeal from an editor:

Dear Bro. Bailey:—How forgetful we are! I let the time for renewing my subscription run by, and behold! I have not paid for a whole year! Now it is time to pay for the second year! But you can dun a man in such a way that he will love you for it. I send you check for four dollars. If at the end of this year I should overlook renewing, I will count it a favor if you will remind me of it. Yes, dun me. I know that it takes money to run a paper, and I am willing to pay my part. I never get offended at a request to please remit.

Baptist affairs in our city are on the high tide of prosperity. Dr. Felix at the First church is doing a grand work. He has one of the finest churches in the South, with nearly eleven hundred members. His house is by far the most magnificent of all in the city. He is not only holding his own, but gaining every day in the hearts of his own people and in the estimation of our citizens.

The Baptists in Madison have a beautiful chapel, which will seat about three hundred people. Madison is a town with about twenty-five hundred people just across the James river from our city.

Rev. F. P. Robertson, late of Martinsburg, W. Va., has been on that field for about a month. The people are delighted with him, and in the near future we expect to see a good church in that town.

In my church, the College Hill, things move on nicely. I can truthfully say that there is not a crank in the church. There seems to be a rivalry as to who can be most agreeable. We have a continuous revival. It is a rare thing not to have several join every Sunday. I try to preach Bible sermons, and then expect Bible results. Conversions at our Sunday night services have ranged from one up to thirteen. During the past month, at our Sunday night services, there have been twenty professions, thirteen having been baptized. On Sunday night in Christmas, a time generally given over to frivolity and dissipation, there were seven professions and four baptized. We hope to make this year the best in our lives.

Success to you and the RECORDER.

Yours truly, C. G. JONES.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure, be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Sold by druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

Let us leave to virtue all her difficulties, and at the same time let us redouble our efforts to conquer them. There are many brambles on the road to heaven; the path which leads thither is not strewn with flowers.—Guizot.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

HOW BABIES SUFFER

From Torturing Humors

When their tender SKINS are literally ON FIRE with ITCHING AND BURNING ECZEMAS and other Itching, Scaly, and Blotchy Skin and Scalp Diseases, none but mothers realize.

To know that a single application of the Cuticura Remedies will, in the great majority of cases, afford instant and complete relief, permit rest and sleep, and point to a permanent and economical (because so speedy) cure, and not to use them without a moment's delay, is to be guilty of positive inhumanity. No greater legacy can be bestowed upon a child than a skin without blemish and a body nourished with pure blood.

CUTICURA

Remedies are the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies, are absolutely pure, and may be used from pimples to scrofula, from infancy to age, with the most gratifying and unfailing success.

TREATMENT.—CUTICURA, the great skin cure, and CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite skin purifier and beautifier, externally, instantly allay the most intense itching, burning, and inflammation, soothe and heal raw and irritated surfaces, clear the skin and scalp of crusts and scales, and restore the hair, while CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new blood and skin purifier and greatest of humor remedies, cleanses the blood of all impurities and poisonous elements, and thus removes the cause.

"ALL ABOUT THE BLOOD, SKIN, SCALP, AND HAIR," mailed free to any address, 64 pages, 300 Diseases, 50 Illustrations, 100 Testimonials. A book of priceless value to mothers, affording information not obtainable elsewhere.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold throughout the world. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; CUTICURA SOAP, 25c.; CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by POTTER DRUG & CHEMICAL CORP'N, Boston, U. S. A.

Pimples, Blackheads, red, rough, and oily skin and hands, and simple humors and skin blemishes of infancy and childhood are prevented and cured by that most effective of all Skin Purifiers and Beautifiers, the celebrated Cuticura Soap. Incomparably superior to all other skin and complexion soaps, while rivalling in delicacy and purity the most expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. The only preventive of inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of most facial blemishes. Price, 25c.

1864 SADLER'S BRYANT & STRATTON COLLEGE BALTO

FOUNDED IN 1864 by the present executive—27 YEARS of continuous and successful management—Increased annual attendance—Now occupying four buildings—Stands unrivaled in facilities for educating YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN for success in life. In deciding upon a school for their children, PARENTS should send them to THE BEST, because it pays. It may require the expenditure of a few dollars more at first, but it will prove the cheapest in the end. CHEAP tuition is very dear, because it means cheap teachers, cheap surroundings, inferior facilities, and offers NO opportunities for securing POSITIONS for its pupils and graduates. This Institution, owing to its HIGH standard of excellence, has placed in desirable positions more young men and women from Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, than all similar institutions combined. Catalogue and particulars mailed on application.

Without a Peer.

Dr. Sylvanius Landrum once said before the Southern Baptist Convention that Mrs. M. J. Kennedy was without a peer in the preparation of Bible lessons for the little ones. She edits the Intermediate Quarterly of the American Baptist Publication Society. From July, 1892, this quarterly is to be enlarged.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Raleigh Affairs.

The State Democratic Executive Committee has been called to meet here March 2nd, to fix date and place, and issue call for State convention, &c.

The directors of the Raleigh Water Company met Friday and elected officers for the ensuing year. The company proposes, during the spring, to increase the filtering capacity.

Mr. T. R. Fentress, in his seventy-seventh year, died at his home last Friday morning. He was a native of Virginia, and located in Raleigh sometime in the forties. He died a member of the Edenton Street M. E. church, and was buried from that church on Sunday with masonic honors, by Hiram Lodge, No. 40, of which body he was a member.

Mrs. Perrin Busbee died at the home of her son, Mr. C. M. Busbee, on Saturday last, in her sixty seventh year. She was the daughter of the late Chief Justice Taylor, and her entire life from infancy to death was spent in the Taylor home, corner of Salisbury and Hargett streets. She was a most excellent christian lady, and a member of the First Presbyterian church, from which the funeral took place on Sunday afternoon last.

DRY GOODS.

Winter, 1892.

Mail Order Department.

Through our Mail Order Department we offer advantages to the people of North Carolina for "Shopping by Mail" second to none in the Southern States, for by the means of this, a very important department of our great business, we place almost at the very doors of our patrons our enormous stock of goods, and we do carry the largest and finest collection of Dry Goods and kindred wares, at retail, of any house in North Carolina, and equaled by very few Southern houses.

We want the patronage of our North Carolina people, not simply that ours is a North Carolina house, but because we will sell them Dry Goods at as low prices, for the same quality, as any house in the trade.

We can only mention here a few of the more important departments, but will be glad to hear from those who desire anything relative to Dry Goods or the kindred wares:—

FOREIGN AND AMERICAN DRESS WOOLENS,
BLACK DRESS GOODS,
SILKS, VELVETS,
HOUSEFURNISHING GOODS,

BESTON, Wayne County, September 29th, 1885.

Messrs. Boykin, Carmer & Co., Baltimore, Md.—Dear Sirs: Within the past eight years I have made careful experiments with as many as twenty different sorts of guanos, fertilizers, &c., already prepared, or compounded and prepared by myself, with a view to ascertaining the one which should combine the two ideas of being the best and at the same time the cheapest for promoting the largest yields of cotton, corn, rice and peanuts; and I give it as my deliberate judgment that the "HOME FERTILIZER" most completely fills the bill of any and all in the long list of fertilizers tested by me. I have tried it under cotton for the past eight years, and it has always more than equalled my expectation, proving itself quite as good as the guanos costing $40 per ton. I have tried it repeatedly under corn, and it has increased the yield out of all proportion to the cost of the fertilizer. I have tried it under rice in competition with seven other kinds of fertilizers, and it has proved itself equal to the best. And this year I am (besides using it under cotton, corn and rice) also trying it under 26 acres of peanuts, using nothing else, and to my surprise and gratification, after a careful examination made three days since, I find the whole crop filling out splendidly, and this too, after a very dry August, which is generally fatal to the peanut crop. Taking it every way, I should pronounce the "HOME," the best all purpose fertilizer of any within the range of my observation or experience, while it is certainly by long odds the cheapest. I will not use the stereotyped phrase: "I expect to use it another year," for that goes without saying. I expect to use more of it and use it more exclusively every year I may be engaged in farming.

Yours truly, G. W. SANDERLIN.

GREAT CUT SALE.

Knabe Upright Pianos at Cost.

We will sell our stock of Knabe Pianos at wholesale cost, as we desire to get our money out of them at once. Elegant style, sold for $500 at the factory, for only $400.

NOTICE.

We wish to state, in connection, that we have noticed an advertisement to the effect that a certain piano received the highest award at the Southern Exposition. This piano, so advertised, was not even on exhibit, and only one make was represented, which was not entered for the premium. Also, there were only two makes of organs exhibited, and the only one entered took the diploma.

Our Pianos have taken the Highest Awards at every North Carolina State Fair

for the last five years, and in 1890 it led ten other makes. We did not even exhibit at the "Southern Exposition."

A Superior Help.

For mechanical finish, attractive Bible maps and striking cuts, the Senior Quarterly, of the American Baptist Publication Society, leads any other similar journal prepared for adult Bible classes. We are familiar with many similar Sunday-school helps, but this excells them all. Its greatest marvel is its cheapness.

Missionary Maps.

Many brethren are asking for good, yet cheap maps for use in missionary lectures. We have been inquiring into the matter and can hear of nothing which strikes me as more satisfactory than the following:

The American Board (Congregational) publishes a map of "The World on Mercator's Projection. Size, 8 ft. 6 in. by 4 ft. 6 in. Paper, $1.50; cloth, $2.50." This map has on it the stations of the American Board, of course.

Whether any others I do not know. But that makes no difference. Any one, with a little red ink or paint, can easily mark on it the stations of our Board or any other he wishes, and have a first-class map at a less price than we could prepare one at.

Last year the Foreign Mission Journal contained some small maps of our mission fields, with the stations marked. Dr. Tupper's "Decade of Missions" also contains them, and they are printed on fine paper, and sold at three cents apiece by the Maryland Baptist Mission Rooms, 10 E. Fayette St., Baltimore.

With these and the foregoing mentioned maps, any one can prepare a map to suit himself and can add to it from time to time our new stations and outstations.

For maps, address Charles E. Swett, No. 1 Somerset St., Boston, Mass.

Prices given above include postage.

DIED.

ELLIOTT—Died, near Pollocksville, Jones county, Nov. 9th, 1891, Mrs. S. J. Elliott, in her sixty-second year. I was at her home a few times and found her to be a devout and heavenly-minded woman. She was a great sufferer fom that incurable malady, consumption. She leaves a husband and five children to mourn their loss. J. N. V.

AVERITT—Of pneumonia, Dec. 29th, 1891, in her twenty-third year, sister Kittie L. Averitt, daughter of J. E. and H. J. Averitt. The deceased was a member of the Cedar Creek Baptist church, Cumberland county, N. C. Father, mother, brothers and sisters mourn their loss. But we sorrow not as those that have no hope. BROTHER.

LENNON—Mary Lena Lennon was born Dec. 20th, 1886, and died Dec. 21st, 1891. Seldom is there found a child so sprightly, winsome and generally loved as was this little girl whom God called from earth to heaven so soon. Dear parents, weep not for the deceased, remembering while she cannot come to you, you can go to her. Oh, Mary, lovely flower, thou art gone. W. S. BALLARD.

BRIGHT—Mrs. Virginia C. Bright (nee Mansfield) was born in Currituck county, N. C., 1843, and died at Blackwater bridge, Princess Anne county, Va., Jan. 10, 1892, aged forty-nine years. She had been a member of Blackwater Baptist church for thirty-five years. She was a christian. She has gone to the christian's home—"sweet home above, where all is joy, peace and love." M.

SINGLETARY—Bro. Jonathan Singletary died suddenly at his home in Bladenboro township, Bladen county, N. C., Dec. 24th, 1891, in the seventy-fifth year of his age. He was a faithful member of Hickory Grove Baptist church. The pastor seldom missed his familiar face in his accustomed seat He was a true citizen and will be greatly missed in his neighborhood. Many relatives and friends mourn his demise, but sorrow not as those who have no hope. The fuueral services were conducted by Rev. R. M Sessoms.

EWEN JOHNSON.

Richardson, N. C., Jan. 1892.

CASHWELL—David Cashwell died in Wilmington Dec. 23d, in the seventy-ninth year of his age. He was born in Bladen county, N. C., removed at an early age to Tennessee, but returned to his native State after a few years absence, and for the past fifty years has been a resident of Wilmington. He was very tall, very thin, very erect, wore a very long and full beard, had a rather distinguished looking head and face, and walked with a measured, military tread that was remarkable, so that altogether he was a striking figure in society here. He was a staunch and well-informed Baptist; was a member of the extinct Orange street church of Wilmington, and died a member of the First church He was fond of writing, and used the pen with grace and skill, as many articles which appeared in the RECORDER will show. He had filled many stations of usefulness, merchant, naval-store dealer, secretary of insurance companies, and when he died was deputy marshal of the U. S. District Court.

His sickness was protracted and most painful, but he died in peaceful trust in the merits of his Saviour. T. H. PRITCHARD.

MARTIN—Fannie E. Martin died at her residence, 86 North Fifth Avenue, Knoxville, Tenn., on January 12th, 1892, at 4 p. m., in the twenty-fifth year of her age. She was the wife and companion of our friend and brother Julius E. Martin, to whom she was married Dec. 7th, 1887, in Rutherford county, N. C., at her father's, Matt. Lynch. After remaining in Shelby a short time, Mr. and Mrs. Martin removed to Knoxville, where they have resided for nearly three years. She was a member of the Second Baptist church of Knoxville. She was a devoted christian, ever ready to assist in the work of the Master. She leaves a devoted husband and a little girl seven days old, named Fannie E. Martin, after its mother, fond parents, several brothers and sisters, together with a host of friends to mourn her loss. But we bow in humble submission to him who has said that "all things work together for good to them that love God," feeling that our loss is her eternal gain. May the blessings of God rest on the bereaved husband, and may the God of all grace take care of her babe and lead her that she may be enabled in the end to meet her sainted mother in paradise. W. A. WRAY.

PICOT—Mr. Peter Bayard Picot, Solicitor of the Hertford County Criminal Court, died at his residence in Winton last Saturday night of pneumonia, aged about thirty-one years. He was taken with la grippe about two weeks ago, turning into pneumonia. Mr. Picot was a son of Capt. J. H. Picot of Como, and a brother of Dr. L. J. Picot, of Littleton. He obtained law licence in 1884 and located at Winton. For awhile he was associated with Mr. Geo. Cowper, but for the past few years was alone. In June he was elected Solicitor of the Criminal Court of Hertford county, and was a worthy and faithful officer of the Court. He was married about two years ago to Miss Bettie Jordan, of Winton, who, with one child, survives him. Mr. Picot was a man of studious habits, pleasant manners, and an earnest worker in his profession. He was fair in all his dealings and it was a pleasure to have business with him. We had known him for nearly ten years and the longer we knew him the better we liked him. He was a member of the Baptist church and a consecrated christian man.—Murfresboro Index.

Pittsburg. GEO. A. MACBETH & CO.

HUNT—Brother D. A. Hunt passed peacefully away on the morning of the 12th of December, 1891, at his residence in Oxford, N. C.

Born in the county of Granville, N. C., not far from the town of Oxford he went in business in Oxford at an early age and continued actively engaged in business until the time of his death. As a business man he was reliable, prudent, safe, in no hurry to be rich; choosing the straight paths of integrity, rather than the questionable ways so popular in these days of high speculation.

As a man he was genial, cheerful, affectionate, manly, strong in his attachments, unobtrusive, with no pretence about him—and, withal, broad and charitable in his views of others.

For many years he was a member of the Oxford Baptist church, and for the last six years or more one of its deacons. He loved his church with a sincere devotion, and made one of its most faithful members. Always in his place at Sunday service, or weekly prayer-meeting; always prompt to attend the deacon's meetings; always ready for whatever work the church gave him to do; always having the interest of the church at heart, he was indeed "a good and faithful servant."

But would you see him at his best, you would need to go into his home. There he was known and loved and reverenced as few fathers are. What a tender husband! what and affectibnate father! How full of that winning freedom of love that drew all closely to him! How affable, open, demonstrative and approachable!

Death came to him after a brief illness, but it found him ready. For several years past his health has been feeble, and his mind dwelt on the nearness of his end Often he said "I know that my days on earth are few." One thing especially admonished him of that truth: he was the last one of a large family of brothers and sisters—all had passed over the river but him.

When the hour of his departure arrived, only a few minutes before he died, he said with confidence that he knew him on whom he had believed.

We shall sadly miss him in the days to come—we shall miss him in the church—we shall miss him in the home—we shall miss his words of encouragement and counsel. But we do not sorrow as they that have no hope, for we feel assured that he has entered upon his rest.

He leaves behind him a widow, three daughters, and four sons, besides several grand-children.

We trust that the mantle of the father may fall upon the sons, and that the influence of his life may so dwell in them, that being dead he may yet speak. J. S. H.

Tributes of Respect.

Deep River Temperance Society again mourns the loss of one of its noble members in the death of Mrs. H. R. Barrow, who departed this life Dec. 21, 1891. The writer has personally known her from early schooldays down to the time of her death, and therefore testifies to her genial disposition and integrity of character; consequently her influence as a member of the Society was very strong.

Not living in the immediate neighborhood of the Society her influence was wrought in her own community of Sandy Ridge where temperance sentiment has wonderfully advanced recently, doubtless owing to her example and influence with that of others. Therefore be it Resolved 1st, That we as a Society realize a great loss in the death of Mrs. Marrow, yet bow in humble submission to Divine Providence. We herein express our hearty appreciation of her example and influence, regarding her membership as a high honor to the cause of the Society.

Resolved 2nd, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved husband and family, and comfort them with the noble thought that they have, as do the Society, so bright a representative in the world above.

Resolved 3rd, That a copy of these resolutions be published in the BIBLICAL RECORDER.

The lamented Henry W. Grady, said of GERMETUER—"I believe it to be the Ultima Thule of Medicines."

We could fill this paper with names of people who have been cured of diseases by the use of KING'S ROYAL GERMETUER, but consider the above sufficient.

We are having with us, and all over the country, the dreadful scourge LaGrippe. Hundreds are being cured right here at our doors in a few hours by taking two teaspoonfuls of Germetuer in one-half glass hot water every hour for six or eight hours. It is as pleasant to take as a glass of lemonade. For sale at $1 per bottle by all druggists. Manufactured by KING'S ROYAL GERMETUER CO., Atlanta, Ga.

Waiting.

Learn to wait—life's hardest lesson,
Conned, perchance, through blinding tears,
While the heart throbs sadly echo
To the tread of passing years.

Learn to wait—hope's slow fruition;
Faint not, though the way seems long;
There is joy in each condition,
Hearts through suffering may be strong.

Constant sunshine, howe'er welcome,
Ne'er would ripen fruit or flower;
Giant oaks owe half their greatness
To the scathing tempest's power.

Thus a soul untouched by sorrow
Aims not at a higher state;
Joy seems not a brighter morrow—
Only sad hearts learn to wait.

Human strength and human greatness
Spring not from life's sunny side;
Heroes must be more than driftwood
Floating on a waveless tide

An Appeal to Mothers.

America's great need to-day is what France's was in Napoleon's time—mothers. Mothers to form, and mold, and guide, and teach with unremitting vigilance, and while all this is being done, to watch as carefully lest thorns appear with the beautiful blossoms; lest evil thoughts, false principles, imperfect views, creep in as insidiously as the serpent approaches.

O ye mothers of our land, if everything else is neglected, if all other duties are slighted, I beseech you, in the name of all that is high and holy, do not neglect the character of your child. Consider what life means to us, what is before the young; and consider also what lack of mental and spiritual culture implies. I think that nothing in the way of culture and aspiration in after years can compensate for the loss of this during the formative period. Teach the boys and girls what life means; that this existence from the cradle to the grave is but the segment of a circle that shall encompass the eternities—that their characters here and their destinies hereafter have an infinite correlation; that their achievements must be commensurate with their principles and purposes. Teach that if they sow "wild oats" they must expect to reap the same, and nothing else; golden fruitage never comes from seeds of thistles.

God may sometimes work miracles in character transformation, but he oftener works by means of fixed laws and through human agencies. And mothers are his special agents.

When we see a boy just verging into young manhood, with powers untrained, principles latent, faculties slumbering, his entire growth false, we do not reasonably expect that he will ever distinguish himself by brilliancy of intellect or deed, or marked nobility of character. Such a sequence would be a miracle; but while I do not deny that such have been and may be, I repeat that we have no right to expect it.

For the right formation of character there must be some centre of attention around which the soul may describe its infinite circle, and this central power should be God.

Religion is a life, not a garment to be put on or off. It must be interwoven with the very fibres of the soul, and must be developed as the muscles of the body are developed by exercise. It must flow out to bless our own, and the child heart should be taught the beauty of such a life. This should be the atmosphere through which all else should be viewed; all else should be subservient to its demands.

O mothers, if you would but teach your children thus what a world of misery might be saved, what a flood of crime stayed—Christian at Work.

The Boy who Stopped the Fight.

A boy may prove to be of considerable importance in circumstances where he is supposed to be of very little value. An interesting illustration of this occurred in an action between the British and Dutch fleets off the English coast, described by Mr. MacGregor.

A runaway boy, Thomas Hopson, an apprentice to a tailor in the Isle of Wight, had just before come on board the admiral's ship as a volunteer. In the midst of the action, he asked a sailor how long the fight would continue, and was told that it would only cease when the flag of the Dutch admiral was hauled down. The boy did not understand about the striking of colors, but the thought that if the hauling down of the flag would stop the fight, it might not be difficult to do. As the ships were engaged yard arm and yard arm, and veiled in smoke, Hopson at once ran up the shrouds, crept out on the mizzen-yard of his own ship, and, having gained that of the Dutch admiral, he speedily reached the top-gallant mast-head, and possessed himself of the Dutch flag, with which he succeeded in returning to his own deck. Perceiving the flag to be stuck, the British sailors raised a shout of victory; and the Dutch crew, also deceived, ran from their guns. While the astonished admiral and his officers were trying in vain to rally their crew, the English boarded the ship and carried her. For this daring service the boy was promoted to the quarter-deck; and he rose to be a distinguished admiral under Queen Anne.

For burns and wounds we would recommend Salvation Oil. All dealers sell it at 25 cents.

Many cases have come under our notice where a single bottle of Dr. Bell's Cough Syrup relieved a sufferer from a severe cough, that had been treated for months by competent physicians. 25c.

How to Make Mother Happy.

Why, mother, how bright and cheerful you look to-night! What has happened?"

"I feel very happy, my dear, because my little boy has really tried to be good all day. Once when his sister teased him, and he spoke quick and cross to her, he turned around a moment after of his own accord, and said he was wrong, and asked her to forgive him. I believe I should grow young, and never look tired or unhappy again, if, every day, my little boy and girl were as thoughtful, unselfish, and loving as they have been to-day."

Here's a grand secret for you, little one. And now that you know how to make mother happy, may you keep her face always full of sunshine!—Exchange.

"By Hook or Crook."

There have been many attempts made to explain the origin of the phrase "By Hook or Crook." The Boston News-Letter of January, 1776, explains the expression thus: "Hook and Crook were the names of two English judges at the beginning of the last century. They were both of eminence in their profession, but not more remarkable for anything than for their perpetual diversity of opinion that prevailed between them on matters of legal jurisprudence. Be the case what it would, every suitor was sure to have either Hook or Crook on his side."

Wilson's "Origin of Familiar Words and Phrases" says that it probably means "foully like a thief or holily like a bishop," the hook being used by burglars, the crook being the bishop's crozier.

"The Hand Book of Fact and Fancy" gives the following story under the heading of "By Hook or Crook:" "The great fire at London in 1666 destroyed 13,200 houses, and in many cases obliterated all the boundary marks requisite to determine the sites occupied by buildings previous to the fire. When the rubbish was removed disputes arose among the people as to the position and extent of their landed estate. These contentions promised not only interminable lawsuits, but also delayed the rebuilding of the city until they could be settled. Accordingly, two of the most experienced surveyors of the day—Mr. Charles Hook and George Crook—were called upon to act as arbitrators in the matter, land owners entered into a compact to take the decision of Hook and Crook as final and binding. From this fact arose the now famous phrase which heads this article."

As a fourth and last solution of the mystery, an old London legend tells us that the numerous families of Hook and Crook formerly did the ferry business for the whole of the British metropolis. No odds on what boat you crossed the Thames, you were sure to ride with Hook or Crook.—Boston Herald.

A Woman on Women.

Kate Field, in a letter to the Boston Herald, says:

The marvel is, that, considering their miserably superficial education, which fits them for nothing in this world or the next, women stand on as high a plane as they now do. It only shows what mother wit has done for them. Only a short time ago an enthusiastic Boston journalist wrote to me in great glee because Matthew Arnold had declared American women to be superior to men. I begged her not to quote a male foreigner on such a subject, as all that most men required of women in society was receptivity. Finding women more sympathetic and adulating than men, even clever Matthew Arnold would prefer our women to our men, and hence consider what he prefers superior to what he does not perfer; but facts are stubborn, and can't be put away. So long as housekeeping remains in its present chaotic condition; so long as "servantgalism" is the chief topic of conversation; so long as the woman who toils is considered inferior to the woman who dresses and does nothing; so long as two codes of morals are tolerated, one damning the woman and the other upholding the man; so long as emotion is cultivated at the expense of reason, women will, as a rule, be practically inferior to men. No great, noble womanhood can come from the present order of society. There can be found no grand men without grand mothers. Therefore, this Republic had better look to its women. Beauty and style and veneered accomplishments do not make a woman.

What Boys Should Learn.

There are a great many things that boys, while boys, should learn. And if they learn these lessons so well as never to forget them during life they will prove of incalculable help to them oftentimes when they need help.

Among other things that a boy should learn, an exchange classes the following, to wit:

Not to tease boys or girls smaller than themselves.

Not to take the easiest chair in the room, put it in the pleasantest place, and forget to offer it to the mother when she comes in to sit down.

To treat the mother as politely as if she was a strange lady who did not spend her life in their service.

To be as kind and helpful to their sisters as they expect their sisters to be to them.

To make their friends among good boys.

To take pride in being a gentleman at home.

To take their mother into their confidence if they do anything wrong; and above all, never lie about anything they have done.

To make up their minds not to learn to smoke, chew, or drink, remembering that these things cannot be unlearned, and that they are terrible drawbacks to good man and necessities to bad ones.—Selected.

COOPER'S MAMMOTH BRICK WAREHOUSE,
Henderson, N. C.
The unanimous verdict of its thousands of patrons is that the HIGHEST PRICES and BIGGEST AVERAGES are always obtained on its floors. I have just closed a most successful and satisfactory season, selling more pounds of tobacco and paying out
than in any previous year of the market's history; and enter upon the new crop year determined to labor even more industriously, if possible, for the welfare of my patrons than ever before. The Henderson market was never in better condition or its future more encouraging. The coming year promises to be the best we have ever had, and COOPER'S WAREHOUSE, which, as farmers know, has always held the best records for high prices, clever treatment and good accommodations, is strengthening itself with every sale. Ask your neighbor who has sold with us, and hear what he says.
With grateful acknowledgment I return thanks to my friends and customers who have so liberally extended to me their generous patronage for the past nineteen years, making COOPER'S not only the leading warehouse in this the leading Bright market, in number of pounds of farmers' tobacco sold and amount of money obtained therefor, but also the
LEADER IN PRICES.
I promise to show my appreciation of this confidence by ever striving to please; by renewing and increasing my best efforts to give entire satisfaction in the management, handling and selling of your tobacco.
Hoping to continue to serve my patrons, and to make many new ones during the season of 1891-'92, I remain, the farmers' friend,

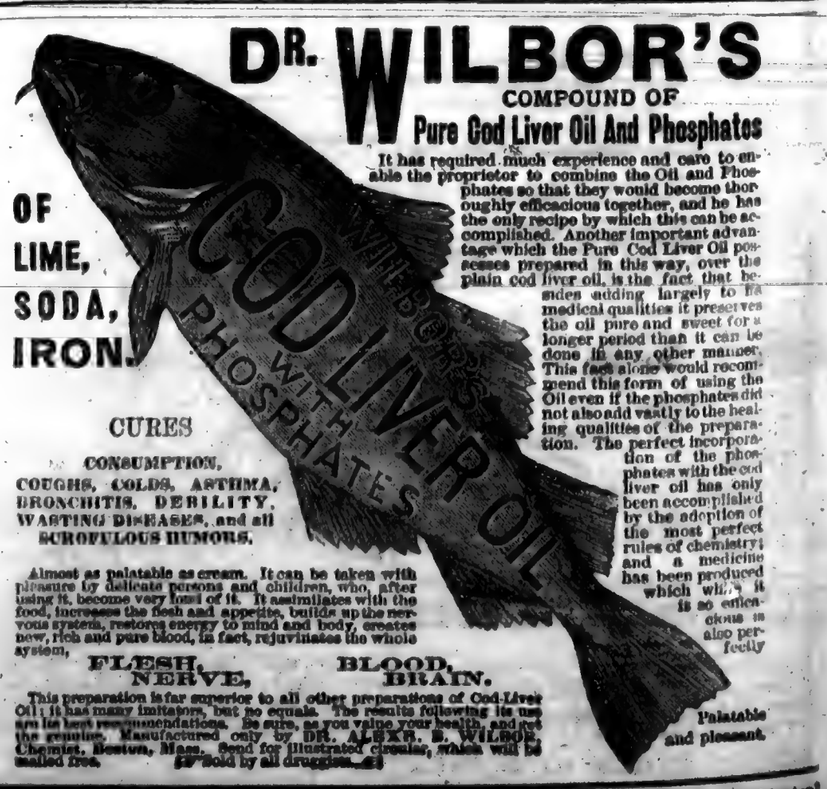
DR. WILBOR'S
COMPOUND OF
Pure Cod Liver Oil And Phosphates
OF LIME, SODA, IRON.



It has required much experience and care to enable the proprietor to combine the Oil and Phosphates so that they would become thoroughly efficacious together, and he has the only recipe by which this can be accomplished. Another important advantage which the Pure Cod Liver Oil possesses prepared in this way, over the plain cod liver oil, is the fact that besides adding largely to its medical qualities it preserves the oil pure and sweet for a longer period than it can be done in any other manner. This fact alone would recommend this form of using the Oil even if the phosphates did not also add vastly to the healing qualities of the preparation. The perfect incorporation of the phosphates with the cod liver oil has only been accomplished by the adoption of the most perfect rules of chemistry and a medicine has been produced which while it is so efficacious is also perfectly Palatable and pleasant.
CURES
CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, DEBILITY, WASTING DISEASES, and all SCROFULOUS HUMORS.
Almost as palatable as cream. It can be taken with pleasure by delicate persons and children, who, after using it, become very fond of it. It assimilates with the food, increases the flesh and appetite, builds up the nervous system, restores energy to mind and body, creates new, rich and pure blood, in fact, rejuvinates the whole system, FLESH, NERVE, BLOOD, BRAIN.
This preparation is far superior to all other preparations of Cod-Liver Oil; it has many imitators, but no equals. The results following its use are its best recommendations. Be sure, as you value your health, and get the genuine. Manufactured only by DR. ALEX. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston, Mass. Send for illustrated circular, which will be mailed free. BY JOHN W. MOORE, STATE HISTORIAN.

MEMOIR V—REV. LEMUEL BURKITT.

CHAPTER THREE.

The man who by the grace of God, his own native greatness and the accidents of fortune, is enabled to play successively in the role of a reformer, is one of the noblest and most beneficent of human creatures. Though a thousand spurious pretenders and cranks have arisen in every age to bring obloquy and contempt on the nobler types, still the world will never cease to remember and reverence the wise and heroic spirits that have shown them the way to higher planes of thought and action. Suppose it were possible to strike off from the catalogue of mankind's social and religious privileges, those that resulted from the teaching and labors of Wickliffe, Luther, Jefferson and Gladstone, what a fearful outcry would ascend to heaven at the loss of so many things that make life worth living in this world! The miracles of human advancement wrought under the leadership of Moses were almost in every instance as directly the work of God as were those of our divine Lord and Saviour. To such complete revolutions in the affairs of mankind we would be impious to offer contrasts with those effected by the exertions of the greatest of our race. As heaven is high above earth, so far did they surpass the most comprehensive of merely human triumphs over the errors and abuses of preceding ages. While this is true, yet we should never forget or cease to reverence the great men who have so largely contributed toward making civilization what it now is. The church militant also has been in every age largely indebted to such holy and heroic spirits. While remembering our Lord's promise that the Holy Spirit should be ever present to aid and sustain his people, we at the same time know that chosen vessels in human form have been the means through which such protecting power has been exerted.

When in October of the ever memorable year of our Lord 1775, Elder Burkitt reached the scene of religious conflict, amid the delegations who had come to the Falls of Tar river were some noble coadjutors in the cause of reform. Chief among these in the matter of personal influence was the venerable moderator, Rev. John McGlamre. This nobleman of nature as well as of grace was of Huguenot blood, and in the purity and beneficence of his life atoned for any want on his part of the larger mental gifts of his younger brother in the Lord, Mr. Burkitt. So loving and faithful had he been in his walk, that he had become more influential with many people than others of higher gifts as an orator and theologian. His position also as presiding officer in so numerous a body, through the last ten years, had given him not only weight in their councils as a trusted leader, but the added advantage that always can be afforded from the chair in matters it may please the presiding officer to favor.

But Mr. Burkitt's greatest assistant on this important occasion was found in the person of a layman, Col. William Horne then of Edgecombe, who was the grandfather of the late Hon. William Horne Battle, one of the Justices of our Supreme Court, and displayed great eloquence and no little skill in biblical criticism in his impassioned appeals for reform and unity in the creed and practice of the Baptist people. Col. Horne does not seem to have lingered long in the vicinity of the Falls of Tar river after this episode in his life, for we find him representing Bertie county in the lower house of the State Legislature in 1780, and for twenty years thereafter he was intrusted with the representation of that ancient and renowned constituency, sometimes in the Senate and then again in the House of Commons. It may have been that this very controversy in the Association inclined him to seek more congenial brethren further east. Elder Burkitt was further assisted in the debate by the Rev. David Barrow. He was a successor in holy orders to the late Mr. Sojourner in care of Baptist interests in Isle of Wight county in the State of Virginia. Mr. Barrow was, in some respects, a very considerable man in his day. Fluent and impassioned, he was ever impressive in his addresses to the multitude; but he lacked the power of analysis and arrangement, which were so manifest in Messrs. Burkitt and Martin Ross.

The church with which the Kehukee Association was then in session, was under the pastoral guidance of the Rev. John Moore. This rugged and indomitable, old conservation was a type and representative of the people, who so much admired and trusted him both in things spiritual and temporal. His age, experience and strong will made him the most formidable of all the spirits that were then arrayed against the movement for greater spirituality in the Baptist churches. It was all in vain that Scripture and argument demonstrated the falsity of his premises. It was enough for him and the men he influenced, that the churches had managed to live in time past with their mixed herd of saints and sinners; and he was content, he said, to let well enough alone. He despised innovations. He denounced them as dangerous and sure of bringing on discord and schism. He was supported in such objections by Elders William Burgess of Toisnot and Charles Daniel of Kehukee and John Thomas. The debate between Messrs. Horne and Daniel was said to have been especially warm and exciting.

It was all in vain that Elder Burkitt and his allies called the attention of the body to the fact that in the confessions of faith adopted by all Baptist churches and the Kehukee Association, it was held that only upon a profession of faith in the Lord Jesus, could baptism be lawfully administered to any candidate—that any other baptism of unconverted men and women was opposed not only to Christ's commandments, but to the plain letter of our confessed creed on the subject. The result of the debate was a secession of the malcontents from the house where they had been in session and the institution of a rival body, which still laid claim to being the Kehukee Association. Reference has already been made to the fact that the Baptist churches which thus in those ancient days so obstinately clung to error were the same which just half a century later, after their surrender of this lunacy were to again go in eclipse far more hopeless and enduring, when in 1827 they revolted again against the truth and the light in their sinful and inexcusable warfare on missions. This singular instance of the power of heredity in transmitting spiritual and mental traits from one generation to others far removed in the line of descent has had its counterpart in the political history of our State. In the bloody troubles known in our history as the War of the Regulation, the very same counties that were singled out and scourged with fire and sword by Gov. Tryon were, exactly a century later, the very head centre and chief arena of the Ku Klux Klan's operations. It would thus seem that certain races of men have as natural a bias to error and schism, as others toward a dauntless and irrepressible spirit of resistance to any interference with their civil rights and liberties.

Thus in his twenty-fifth year Lemuel Burkitt, by the help of God and his own great exertions at last had succeeded in breaking down the false barriers of pride and obstinacy which, for twenty years past, had arisen, as a great Chinese wall, dividing the hosts of Baptists in the Kehukee Association from all fellowship with those of other similar American organizations. He must have been saddened beyond measure when so many men he loved arose and went off from the great christian fold that he and they had so much delighted in building into grander dimensions. Like all men of high, natural genius, he was thereby more capable of grief and depression. He had succeeded in committing the Kehukee Association to what he knew in his soul was truth and true Baptist usage; but the grand organization was left wounded and maimed by the heroic treatment it was necessary to administer for its salvation. The dejected and defeated partizans of error had acknowledged that the reformers were the true representatives of the Kehukee Association by their revolt and secession. The residue of the faithful left with the old historic body were all the more valiant and effective from the fact that all discordant elements had thus voluntarily gone off to themselves. Men like Col. William Horne were seen leaving their homes to find congenial spirits in the reformed churches. Peace reigned in all the Baptist circles of old Albemarle; but a far different order of things arose in the seceding churches. The wiser preachers and laymen made their conferences stormy with their well founded complaints of the fatal mistake made by their delegates at the late Association. The peace that had been dearer to Rev. John Moore than even the truth as it is in Jesus, utterly failed of its realization in the miserable issue he had done so much to bring about. Instead of peace flowing like a river around him, like the infatuated and mistaken Greek of old, he had but sown a crop of dragon's teeth to spring up and divide every church that followed his devices, until, ten years later, like repentant prodigals, they were to return to the fold of love and abundance.

Elder Burkitt had, like all his clerical brethren in the Kehukee Association, confined his duties as pastor to the single congregation in Bertie. The unfortunate habit of frittering away their usefulness on four or more different churches had not obtained foothold in North Carolina or indeed anywhere else. This system, which the later eminent divine, the Rev. Dr. J. B. Jeter, used to denounce as "ecclesiastical polygamy," is one of those unscriptural innovations of later days. But while thus confining his relations to a single change, he was not the less abundant in labors. He made excursions in many fields that the light of the gospel had not yet illumined, and thus not even the Cumberland settlements of the future State of Tennessee and Kentucky were too distant for the missionary whose home was so close down by the waters of the Atlantic ocean. No railways were then in existence to bear along the Lord's messenger as with the rush of the cyclone. Not even a lumbering stage coach had yet been utilized to connect the men of the western frontiers with the civilization of the east. By means of the Watauga trail, first blazed out by Daniel Boone, he could reach the "dark and bloody ground," just south of the Ohio river, but so rugged was this highway of the early settlers, men generally made the journey on horseback. Such a journey undertaken by a traveller was as full of bodily perils as it was of the loneliness and hardship in locomotion. Prowling bands of Indians from the great prairies between the Mississippi and Ohio rivers were ever and anon gliding like phantoms through their former hunting grounds, to bear off to captivity and death every pale faced intruder they could find beyond the reach of the log-forts of the white settlements. Nor were the Indians of that day the only source of danger to such men as were unwary in their selection of lodging places, when the shades of coming night warned them to seek shelter for the wayfarer and his steed. Cutthroats and villains of the blackest dye not unfrequently erected cabins on the trail for the special purpose of murder and robbery of the misguided guests who listened to their treacherous offers of hospitality. Mr. Burkitt, no doubt, gave such terrors as this last but small consideration, for he well knew that men of his calling bore charmed lives in all such dens of guilt and blood. No murderer was so ignorant and stolid as to dream of finding money on the body of a peripatetic preacher. And besides this, there was some mysterious awe and consideration in the hearts of the vilest of the human race for such a man toiling on and being spent on his mission of love and mercy. Strange and almost miraculous tales were told of how some unseen influence would stay the uplifted hand or ward off the best directed rifle-shots from the persons of the heroic heralds of the Cross. One such was said to have deliberately ventured into deadly peril to carry consolation to a dying sinner who asked for his presence. He thought he was alone in the stillness of the night, but assassins lying in wait for his return reported that a horseman rode on either side of their intended victim and thus frustrated their purpose.

Shall we Crown the Centennial Year with a Contribution of $125,000 for a Home Mission Chapel Fund?

There is upon us an imperative necessity, and we have, in this Centennial year, a golden opportunity of doing this grand thing for the cause of the Master.

THE NECESSITY.

It is estimated that there are now in the South more than one thousand organized white Baptist churches that have no houses of worship. Add to this the many churches whose houses are utterly inadequate to their wants, and the thousand or more places where Baptist churches could and would be organized if there was any provision for building a suitable house of worship, and it will be seen that there is laid upon us an imperative necessity to make some provision for this crying need on all of our mission fields, and especially on our frontiers and in Cuba. There is scarcely a week during the year that the Board does not receive several piteous appeals for help in this direction, and every year we have been helping to the extent of our limited means. But if we had a fund which was specially set apart for this purpose, so that we could always be ready to help deserving cases by a gift, or a loan, or by paying interest on money that might be advanced in special localities, we might encourage, strengthen, and help in securing houses of worship at many points where, without such help, it would be years before they could build, and then under very great disadvantages.

The workings of the "Church Edifice Fund" of the American Baptist Home Mission Society of our Methodist brethren, North and South, and of other similar organizations, have proven beyond all question the value, the utility, the absolute necessity of such a fund.

In many of these new towns, which spring up like magic, in our mining regions, at railway centers, or amid the teeming immigration that pour into the new settlements stretching along about 2,500 miles of frontier, an eligible lot can be secured free, or at very small cost; and with a judicious use of such a fund as this, vantage ground can be gained at the start which several years later the expenditure of much larger sums and years of toil could never secure. And then in Cuba, as our work progresses, we shall need chapels all over the island. The Baptists there have shown a desire to help themselves, a disposition to work toward self-support, which we shall encourage and develop, and we expect them to do much toward building their own chapels; but the best way to secure this is to be able to render them timely and judicious aid. No church can succeed without a house of worship of its own; and a nice, comfortable, commodious temple of the living God in which his people can gather, attracting the outside world, and by its very presence in the community, serving as a constant and eloquent sermon, is not a luxury, but an absolute and pressing necessity.

OUR OPPORTUNITY.

Southern Baptists have not, to much extent, undertaken to provide a "Church Building Fund," not because they have not appreciated the necessity, but chiefly because they have seemed to lack the opportunity during the past thirty years. But now the day and the hour seem to have come—the golden opportunity has arrived. The Centennial Committee has suggested as one of the most appropriate means of celebrating the Centennial of Modern Missions that the Baptists of the South raise One Hundred and Twenty-five Thousand Dollars to be used as a "permanent fund" by the Home Mission Board in building chapels on its mission fields, especially on its frontier and in the island of Cuba.

The Woman's Missionary Union, auxiliary to the S. B. C., at the request of the Board, will seek to interest woman's mission societies and bands in this effort. A wise plan has been devised, the details of which will be fully explained from time to time, and we are confidently expecting that with the co-operation of the pastors, the intelligent zeal, consecrated efforts, and self-sacrificing liberality of our noble women, will, by the blessing of the Lord of the harvest, result in a grand success.

The Board also calls upon Sunday-schools through their superintendents to aid in this great work. Arrangements have been made with the Maryland Baptist Mission Rooms, 10 E. Fayette St., Baltimore, to supply Sunday-schools with "Chapel Brick Cards" and "Certificates of Stock." Samples of each of these will be sent every superintendent throughout the South whose address can be secured, and full supplies will be forwarded free of charge as they may be ordered. Should any superintendent fail to receive a sample package, a postal card to the Maryland Baptist Mission Rooms stating his address and the name of his District Association will secure the desired package.

And now we earnestly appeal to our pastors, our Sunday-schools, our womens' societies, our childrens' bands, our churches, and to our people generally, to help us in this great enterprise by their influence, their words of encouragement, their contributions and their prayers. Let men of means, looking out for "safe and profitable investments," take stock in this scheme, whose securities are "gilt edge," and put into it $5,000, $1,000, or $100, whose dividends will never fail, but will go on yielding them a large income through ages yet unborn.

Let the poor, the children—all who love the Lord—rejoice in meeting this opportunity, where small gifts from the many will aggregate a large sum, and establish on a firm basis this grand enterprise for building up the cause of our Master.

Let all accompany their gifts by fervent prayers that God's richest blessing may rest upon this plan, and may put it into the hearts and hands of the people to make this part of the Centennial of Missions so grand a success that future generations shall rise up and call them blessed who shall have in any way promoted it.

NOTE.—It was the wish of those having the matter in charge, that the above article should have been accompanied by a fac simile of the Centennial Certificate; but, in attempting to reduce the Certificate for the newspaper column, it was found that the cut of Wm. Carey which adorns the centre of the Certificate would be next to unrecognizable and the impression unfavorable.

Centennial of Missions.

At the beginning of modern missions, a century ago, a mighty prayer went up to God that he would open the doors of the nations and give missionaries access to the heathen world. In fact, the whole scheme of modern missions was born in prayer and humble reliance on the strong arm of God for success. Those who were moved by the Spirit of God to go far hence to preach the gospel to the heathen nations, well knew that it would be useless to try to do mission work unless directed by divine providence, led by the Holy Spirit and strengthened by the grace of God for the trials and conflicts which they were to encounter. Hence the burden of their prayer was that God would remove obstacles, open doors, lead the way, and protect them on the foreign field, that they might preach the unsearchable riches of Christ to those who knew nothing of him.

To those whose faith was weak, the prospects were dark on all sides; but to the consecrated Carey there was a "gold mine in India" full of lively stones, that needed to be polished for the Master's glory; and to the courageous Judson there were precious jewels in Burmah that needed to be gathered for the garner on high.

These servants of God not only prayed that the way might be opened, but they themselves went where it appeared to many that there was no way. Meantime God not only stirred the hearts of the few who went as missionaries, but kindled a like interest in the hearts of the people at home until they began to feel that it was their duty to preach or send the gospel to the heathens. Still the prayer was that the way might be opened, barriers broken down, and admission given to the nations of the earth that the gospel might be preached where it was not known. The Lord hearing the prayers of his servants, prepared the way for the missionaries until the greatness of the field that was then unoccupied, and the plenteous harvest that was already ripe for the sickle, revealed the fact that the number of men who would go as missionaries was altogether inadequate to do the work and supply the demand.

The way was being opened, and God was beginning to manifest himself most gloriously to his servants, but there were none to go and tell the "story of Jesus and his love."

Now another prayer goes up to God that he will send forth more into his harvest. And as the people would pray for an increased number of missionaries the hearts of both men and women would be moved by the Spirit of God until they would hear a voice saying, "This is the way, walk therein." Others more willingly and joyfully gave themselves to the Lord's work—some even saying, "Here am I, send me."

The interest was growing all along the line while God was opening the way, blessing those who had gone, and raising up a greater number to go.

But these prayers seem never to have been so fully answered as now. And yet God continues to answer them. He is still opening the way, removing barriers and obstacles, and making our duty more clear and plain, and raising up a greater number of laborers who desire and feel it their duty to go as foreign missionaries.

The number of men who are ready and willing to go has increased until there is need of another mighty prayer, and this time it is not so much that the doors of the nations shall be opened and the number of men increased as that our purses and their contents be consecrated to the Lord, our pockets opened, and we go down into them and make liberal heartily as unto the Lord for the support of foreign missions. Surely this must be done if the Southern Baptist Convention is to put one hundred new missionaries in the field as a memorial of the centennial of modern missions.

But we are told that times are hard and money scarce. Yes, but the Lord will have plenty of money if we but give him the interest of what he has intrusted to us. However, it is in our hands, and we by our actions say that we are not willing to let him have his own. When the time comes that the glory of God, the salvation of souls, and the triumphs of the Redeemer's kingdom are more precious to us than our silver and gold, contributions will be sufficient to support all true men who will go as foreign missionaries. Loyalty to Christ, devotion to his cause, and love for souls, forbids that North Carolina shall be behind in this matter. Whatever we may have done along this line, I am sure we have not done all we can do. Our people need instruction. If they know the facts, and what foreign missions mean, they will give. And I dare say that the gifts of the humble poor are more precious in the sight of the Lord than the contributions of the rich. The reason is, if if the poor give they must make a sacrifice to do so, while the rich can give large sums without real sacrifice. I am not finding fault with those who give, but only trying to encourage those who do not give. I am sure if more of our poor country churches would take regular collections and let all the people give that they would enjoy greater prosperity. If more of our ministers would lay the matter before their people in its true light, the collections would be larger, and more people would give. It is the numerous contributions of the many, and not the large gifts of the few, that the Lord wants. Christ was as much interested in the collection as he was in the sermon which he had preached in the temple.

"And sitting over against the treasury, he was beholding how the people cast money into the treasury." He was there to see how the people cast money into the treasury. Our Lord had just preached his last sermon in the temple, and would not leave until he saw that the collection was taken. But there are Baptist churches in North Carolina in which Christ has never had the pleasure of seeing a collection taken for foreign missions. The poor of those churches will never receive the commendation from the Master which the poor widow at Jerusalem received that day when she cast in all her living.

For all we know the "farthing" which she (the widow) gave her has been the key in God's hands with which he has unlocked the way for the gospel to be preached to many souls.

It is a fact of history that those who are not interested in foreign missions, and who have not tried to preach the gospel to the heathens, are not doing any good, and are not meeting with any real success at home.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1892.

Rev. C. T. BAILEY, Editor and Proprietor.
J. C. CADDELL, Agent and Correspondent.

Bro. Duncan McNeill, of Richmond county, will represent the Biblical Recorder in the counties of Richmond, Anson, Montgomery, Robeson, Columbus, Brunswick and Bladen.

"Let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home; for it is a shame for women to speak in the church. Let the women learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence. For Adam was first formed, then Eve. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being decived was in the transgression. If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord."—New Testament.

"For what if some did not believe, ('the oracles of God'), shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect? God forbid; yea, let God be true, but every man a liar."—Romans 3.

"Let the women preach, no matter what Paul says."—Sam Jones, Methodist.

"Women might, could, would, and should preach the gospel if they want to."—J. P. Landis, Methodist Ecumenical Council.

We reproduce from the Raleigh Christian Advocate of January 27th the following foolish and misleading editorial in order to say a few words in reply, and to let our brethren see the spirit and style of the editor of the Advocate:—

"The editor of the Biblical Recorder gives two editorial columns of his last issue to a strained effort against State appropriations to charitable institutions controlled by benevolent orders, &c. Those of us who can read between the lines see that it is all aimed at the State appropriation to that noble charity—the Oxford Orphan Asylum. It is a remarkable fact that no opposition was ever made to the appropriation by the Recorder while a Baptist was superintendent of the Asylum. The first appropriation was made while a Baptist was superintendent—not a word against it then. Until a year ago the editor of the Recorder was a director of the Asylum, and it is rumored made two prodigious efforts to get a Baptist brother in as superintendent, and failing to accomplish this, he resigned as director, and has been spitting his spite at the Asylum ever and anon since. This is not very pretty in a preacher. We would advise him to take his green-eyed, sectarian spectacles off of the little orphans at Oxford. Surely there is enough evil and sin in the world for a great denominational paper to fight. It is too small a thing for it to be spitting spite at a few little helpless orphans simply because a Baptist didn't get the superintendency. There is a higher and better work for the Recorder to do—that excellent paper cannot afford to indulge, and the great denomination which it represents cannot afford to endorse such narrowness."

"The remarkable fact is that our Methodist brethren did not either specially notice or care for the Oxford Orphan Asylum or the "little orphans" at Oxford until Mr. Granger and Gen. W. R. Cox, without the endorsement of Mr. J. H. Mills, who organized the institution as a Masonic Orphan Asylum, secured from the Legislature of North Carolina an appropriation of public money. Then they sought representation in its management, and materially aided in ousting Mr. Mills as general manager. About this time we were pursuaded by the then Governor of North Carolina to accept a position as director of the institution. This duty we discharged to the best of our ability during the term of Rev. Dr. B. F. Dixon's superintendency, notwithstanding the fact that the chairman of the Board was a Methodist and managed matters as he and the superintendent saw fit. The condition of the Asylum and the methods of management led Gen. Kenan, one of the directors, to resign. We were persuaded to continue our connection with the Asylum. When Dr. Dixon resigned, the Board met and elected Rev. Dr. Harris, a Presiding Elder of the Methodist Conference, his successor. Dr. Harris soon died. On his death the directors met and elected Rev. Dr. Black, another Presiding Elder of the Methodist church, superintendent. Before this election we had, hoping to save the Oxford Orphan Asylum to the Masons, and from becoming a more sectarian institution supported by public money, diligently sought [illegible] a worthy Mason of some other [illegible] to apply for the superintendency. [illegible] suggest to elect any other than a [illegible], but we felt it due the people of [illegible] that we should do all in our power [illegible] Oxford Orphan Asylum from [illegible]. When the brethren met, we [illegible] stand for a good worthy Ma-son and Baptist. All the other candidates were Methodists. The other directors voted for Rev. Dr. Black, and we, seeing that the institution virtually belonged to the Methodists, retired from the Board of Directors. As a Mason we had no objection to the appropriation from the public treasury to a Masonic, non-sectarian, charitable institution. But as a Baptist we are opposed to the appropriation of ten thousand dollars to a sectarian orphanage. We don't want the Oxford Orphan Asylum, and never have wished to pervert it from its original character, but from the management during the past few years it is quite evident that our Methodist brethren have had "their green eyed sectarian spectacles" turned in that direction. The Baptists have an orphanage at Thomasville, N. C.; the Episcopalians have an orphanage at Charlotte, N. C.; the Presbyterians have an orphanage at Statesville, N. C. Neither of these denominations ask or seek appropriations from the State's treasury. They are supported out of the hearts and pockets of these christian denominations. There is no reason why our Methodist brethren should not support the Methodist Masonic Orphan Asylum at Oxford. But the State should withdraw its appropriation or be represented by trustees.

CHARLES H. SPURGEON IS DEAD.

The sad news comes from across the waters that Charles H. Spurgeon, the great Baptist preacher of London, died at Mentone, France, shortly after eleven o'clock on Sunday night, Jan. 31st, 1892. His end was painless. He remained unconscious to the last. His wife, Dr. Fitz Henry and Miss Thorne were present when he died.

This announcement will fill with sorrow the hearts of all christendom. No preacher in the history of the world has filled so large a place in the affections of God's people. He was born June 19th, 1834, and was therefore fifty-seven years, seven months and twelve days old. It is wonderful that one such brief life time should accomplish so much. Over 2,000 of his printed sermons have in various languages been circulated throughout the world. Then there are lectures to students, speeches, expositions, books of devotion, popular books, shilling series, &c., which have been given to mankind from the famous pastor. His "Reading" for the family or closet, "The Treasury of David," and "John Ploughman's Talk," have each met with tremendous sale. Then the erection of the splendid Tabernacle building in which he preached, the orphanage he established, the pastor's college he founded, are among the many works he was enabled to do for the betterment of humanity and the glory of God. But his chief work was that of a preacher. Said he once, "I am a preacher, and I try to do good by my preaching; that is all there is of my ministry." Herein was the secret of his success. Surely when looking at the results of the labors of this remarkable man, may it be said, "What hath God wrought!"

REV. DR. MANLY IS DEAD.

The telegraph announces the death of Rev. Dr. Manly of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., after an illness of some days. He was one of the founders of the Seminary, and was Professor of Biblical Interpretation in the institution. He was a learned and able preacher and teacher, and will be sadly missed. He was born in Edgefield, S. C., Dec. 19th, 1825, and died at his home in Louisville, Ky., Sunday, Jan. 31st, 1892.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. Geo. A. Sowell of Wake Forest College has taken charge of a small church near Franklinton, N. C.

.....In order to make room for the valuable articles sent us by our brethren, we have omitted our leading editorial.

....Rev. Dr. L. G. Broughton of Reidsville has received a call to the pastorate of the Baptist church in Concord, N. C.

....Rev. Jonathan Wood, pastor of the Fayetteville Street Baptist church of this city, has been quite sick for some days.

....Rev. John N. Hoggard of Murfreesboro, N. C., has been quite sick for some days, but now hopes to be himself again soon.

....Rev. J. M. McManaway of Big Stone Gap, Va., has had to decline the call to Darlington, S. C., on account of his wife's ill health.

....Dr. W. A. Nelson is preaching at the Baptist church at Aiken, S. C., while the pastor, Rev. Mr. Cuthbert, is taking a rest of a few months.

....The prospects are good for a large attendance on the Baptist Workers' Convention to be held in Nashville, Tenn., February 7th to 12th.

....Rev. Dr. A. E. Owen of the Court St. church, Portsmouth, Va., has been called to mourn the death of his aged father, Capt. Owen of Powhatan county, Va.

....Rev. J. G. Pulliam, who has for some years labored as missionary in Montana, has returned to North Carolina to spend some months. His postoffice is Boone, N. C.

....Prof. W. L. Poteat of Wake Forest College presents our readers this week with a valuable article. It will be carefully read.

....Miss Mary Ivey, daughter of Rev. F. H. Ivey, who was Baptist pastor at Goldsboro, will be married to Mr. Chas. T. Humphries, at Lexington, Ga., February 4th.

....We are glad to give our readers in this issue an article from Col. Worthington of Rocky Mount, one of the wisest men in North Carolina, endorsing Judge Winston's position.

....Rev. C. J. Jones of the O'Kellyite or Christian church, Norfolk, Va., has joined the Barkley Avenue Baptist church, and will soon be ordained to the full work of the ministry.

....Brethren Geo. W. Ward of Elizabeth City and Henry M. Shaw of Henderson, N. C., received license from the Supreme Court to practice law in North Carolina on Saturday last.

....Rev. S. J. McLeod of Lumber Bridge, N. C., would like to aid pastors in special meetings. If you wish some minister to help you in a protracted meeting, write to Bro. S. J. McLeod.

....Rev. J. D. Clark of St. Paul, N. C., in renewing his subscription says: "I read several papers, but I consider the Recorder the best paper I ever read." Bro. Clark has suffered much from grippe recently.

....Rev. T. B. Newberry of Fayetteville, publisher of the North Carolina Baptist, has been very sick. The good brother had a bad case of grippe which continued some weeks, but is now about well again.

....Prof. C. E. Brewer of Wake Forest College requests Mr. Ramseur, who addressed him a note of inquiry some time ago, to write to him again as Mr. Ramseur's note was misplaced before he could answer it.

....Rev. J. B. Boone of Raleigh attended the Warren Union. Rev. Dr. C. Durham attended the South Yadkin Union at Salisbury, and Rev. J. L. Cottingham of Wilson's Mills attended the Western Union at Cary.

....Miss M. E. Wright of Augusta, Ga., sends us a sample of the Missionary Calendar of Prayer for 1892. This calendar contains a list of our missionaries and much valuable matter pertaining to missions. Price, 25 cents per copy; 25 copies for $5, and 100 copies for $15

....Rev. W. R. Gwaltney of Wake Forest, Rev. Dr. J. N. Stallings of High Point Female College, President F. P. Hobgood of the Oxford Female Seminary, Rev. W. G. Coppedge of Wakefield, and Bro. J. B. Brewer of the C. B. F. Institute, called to see us on Tuesday last.

....Bro. George W. Scarborough, a leading member and deacon of Hephzibah church, Wake county, died on January 26th. For many years he had devoted his time to the Sunday school work. Bro. Scarborough was in his eighty-fourth year. A good and true man has entered into rest.

....Rev. J. L. White, of Durham, has resigned his charge and accepted a call to the First Baptist church at Asheville, N. C. He goes to a royal field, and the church gets a prince for a pastor, but all the same and more beside we hankered much to have White on the sacred soil.—The Baptist.

....A preacher in Texas tells in the Southern Christian Advocate why his people should pay his salary: "He says: 'If I ain't a big preacher, I can get just as hungry and cold as Sam Jones or Talmage. Some think that a preacher can live on wind. He can if he has meat and bread to go with it.'"

....Dr. J. B. H. Knight of Eagle Rock, Wake county, has removed to Williamston, N. C., and will continue the practic of medicine. We know Dr. Knight well, and congratulate Rev. George J. Dowell and the Baptists of Williamston on having such an active christian worker and skilful physician to settle with them.

....The Union Meeting at Salisbury was not largely attended, but most of the pastors were present, and there was a most delightful and profitable meeting. The pastor and church are hopeful and energetic, the congregations and Sunday school large, and very commendable progress is being made along all the lines of church work.—C. Durham.

....The Tabernacle Baptist church at Raleigh, N. C., has been busy for months in making important changes in their house of worship. Dr. Hall, the eloquent pastor, is pleased to ask us for our services at the re-opening in March, and we are equally pleased to consent to go if everything can be suitably arranged.—Rev. Dr. W. E. Hatcher, in The Baptist.

....Rev. Dr. J. B. Gambrill of Mississippi has gone over to the side of the Northern womens' rights party, and speaks in the Baltimore Baptist of January 27th of George Elliott as "that peerless personality," notwithstanding the fact that George Elliott lived and died in open adultry and brazenly violated every moral law, human and divine. There is no telling where an extreme man will land.

....Will some one please explain to us how it is that many of the most glaring frauds, nonsensical and crazy publications are issued from what is termed the Bible House, New York? Are the rooms in the Bible House rented to cranks and frauds in order that they may the more easily and successfully ply their trades on the pious and unsuspecting?

....Rev. Thomas Carrick of Lexington, N. C., is a good business man as well as a preacher and pastor, and carries his business sense into his work for the Master. All the departments of the Convention's work are looked after, and each has its place. When the Recorder's time comes he sees our subscribers and sends in the renewals. What a blessing such a pastor is to the Corresponding Secretary of the Convention and the editor.

....Rev. S. F. Bristow of Coleraine writes: "Bro. S. J. Perry is dead—one of the strongest members of one of my churches. He is a great loss to the church and the community. I have taken collections at three of my churches for the Havana house, and sent it to Bro. J. D. Boushall. I think the Recorder gets better. I have been preaching it in the pulpit."

....Rev. R. VanDeventer, Vice President of the Foreign Mission Board for North Carolina, gave us a splendid lecture at Knap of Reeds last Saturday morning on our mission work in China, and lectured at Concord church Saturday afternoon on our obligation to give the world the gospel. Bro. VanDeventer is willing to visit any church in the interest of Foreign Missions from which he can get back to his own work in Henderson for Sunday, and he is doing some good work for the Board in this way.—W. R. Cullom.

....Rev. Dr. J. S. Watkins, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city, will at an early day remove to Spartanburg, S. C. We wish to commend Dr. Watkins to the Baptists of Spartanburg, and indeed to the christian people of South Carolina. For years we have been close neighbors. We never knew a more sweet-spirited, consecrated christian gentleman. As a preacher he is learned and gifted; as a man, amiable and gentle. He and his splendid family will be sadly missed by the good people of Raleigh. His removal to another State is to us a personal loss.

....Rev. R. T. Bryan and wife have removed from Chinkiang, China, to Yangchow, China, for the purpose of a ding Rev. Mr. Prince and Miss Minor, the new missionaries, in establishing a mission in that city. The Board has granted Brother and Sister Bryan permission to return to North Carolina next year. Possibly Mrs. Bryan may have to come home sooner as her health has failed. When they return to China they will again settle at Chinkiang. Bro. Bryan pleads earnestly for a medical missionary and another single lady to help him in his work. We hope the Board will grant his request.

....Dr. Pritchard in your issue of yesterday, in his admirable report of the second meeting of the Centennial Committee, says that, in a very elaborate communication from the Womens' Missionary Union Rooms, Baltimore, Md., "they state that they have written to the * * * Sunday-school Boards of each State, &c., and that the results of all their labors are most unsatisfactory." There is a mistake somewhere. I have received no such communication. Since I have learned the desires of the devoted sisters, I shall take pleasure in sending to them a list of the Sunday-school superintendents of this State, which I caused to be published in the minutes of our General Association.—J. M. Pilcher, Gen. Superintendent, Petersburg, Va., Jan. 21, 1892.

....The fifty-seventh anniversary of the Philomathesian and Euzelian literary societies of Wake Forest College will be celebrated February 12. The Durham orchestra will furnish the music. There will be at 2 p. m., a public debate of the question "Should the United States annex Canada?" E. T. Barnes is president and E. F. Rice secretary. The speakers in the affirmative are C. D. Graves and J. C. Kittrell; and in the negative D. A. Bridges and E. Y. Webb. In the evening John A. Wray of the Euzelian society and J. W. Millard of the Philomathesian will deliver orations. The marshalls are C. T. Ball, A. M. Yates and G. H. Ross of the Phi: S. McIntyre, C. B. Edwards, Jr., and C. P. Sapp of the Eu.

....Dr. R. D. Fleming of Warrenton, N. C., called to see us on Thursday last on his way home from Thomasville, N. C. Dr. Fleming attended the session of the Executive Committee of the Baptist Orphanage, and reports a most pleasant session of the committee. The 136 children in the Orphanage were well and happy. These hard times it must be a difficult task for Bro. Mills to feed and clothe all these little ones, and all our churches should bear this in mind, and send him a collection. He is not permitted to do as others do, draw a check on the State Treasurer every three months for $2,500. Nor does he or any right minded Baptist in North Carolina wish to do so. Taxation for charity is a sham, if not a fraud.

....We present the following private letter from one of our best brethren as a sample to all who expect to write to us in the next week or two: "I send enclosed two dollars and ten cents to renew my subscription to the Recorder and for one copy of your Baptist Almanac for 1892. I have let the Recorder run over nearly a month. I cannot do without it, and hope if at any time during my life I should fail to renew in a reasonable time, you will not stop the paper. I have taken and read it so long my family can't get along without it. The only fuss that amounts to anything between myself and wife is who shall read it first. Sometimes I have to set back. The grippe has had both my wife and self. We are now improving."

....Last week the Rev. Mr. Clark of Maine, founder of one of the modern religious societies, lectured in the First Baptist church, Raleigh. We heard Dr. Clark's talk, and afterward tried to learn something of the financial plans of his great society, but failed. During the services, the hymn called "The Endeavor Band" was sung. The Psalmist, on a joyous occasion, said, "I will sing unto the Lord a new song." We hardly think the "Endeavor Band" song can be considered a song unto the Lord. It was new, however, and runs as follows:—

"This blest Endeavor band,
All o'er this broad, bright land,
Is gathered in His name,
To grasp the friendly hand;
Our thoughts are one in Thee,
Our prayers will ever be,
That God may bless and keep
The Y. P. S. C. E."

....Rev. J. F. McDuffie of East Durham in enclosing a list of subscribers, says: "We are still trying to jog along the old gospel road, occasionally finding some 'bad places,' but we are not growing despondent. When we come to them we look up and try to press forward." This is the only way to heaven, my brother. The hundreds of "short cuts" and "by paths" invented by men who are wise above what is written, lead into the wilderness, if not to hell.

The General Catalogue.

From 1834 to the present time about 2,700 young men have been students at Wake Forest College. Among the motives which have induced me to prepare a General Catalogue of these, has been a desire to show how large a contribution Wake Forest has made to the educated and educating forces of the country, and an earnest hope that it may aid in developing among the widely scattered alumni—some on the threshold and others nearing the verge of active life—a warmer glow of family feeling and a renewed devotion to their Alma Mater.

In the execution of my task, I have sought to secure the full name—not merely initials—of every old student; a record of his occupations, removals, honors, and service in the army; a statement of the time and place of graduation in professional schools, of ordination, if a minister, and of death, if no longer living.

Concerning at least two thirds of our alumni, I have secured more or less full information. It may be some years before another General Catalogue shall be printed, and I am exceedingly anxious to secure any information which may be possible in regard to the remaining third. Wherever I have known or have been able to find out the address of old students or their near kindred, I have mailed to them blanks to be filled out and returned. To the large numbers who have promptly returned these blanks to me, I am very grateful. Some have rendered most valuable aid by securing the records of old students from a whole neighborhood or county. To these I feel under peculiar obligations.

The Catalogue will go to press within two or three weeks. If any old student who reads this has a blank and has not returned it, I beg him to do so immediately. If he has not received one, let him send me his address by postal card at once. If any reader of this can give information concerning any old student whose record I am not likely to have already secured, he will confer a favor by mentioning the fact on a postal card.

I hope to make such arrangements with the printer as will enable us to put copies of the Catalogue at a low price in the hands of all who may wish them.

Judge Winston Endorsed.

Mr. Editor:—The letter of Judge Winston which appeared in a recent issue of your paper, should be read and re-read by every boy in the State. It supplies food for thought and reflection that is of inestimable value. And I believe there was much in it well calculated to reform our youths who have already become unguarded and reckless and are half-way victims to appetites that are depraved and habits that are vicious and degrading. I have not been unobservant of that train of evils that has debauched intellects and destroyed characters that were fitted for higher and more honorable development.

In an experience of many years as Solicitor of one of our Judicial Districts, I have been deeply pained to see boys led to the bar to be punished for crime, when I knew they had rebelled against the most wholesome dictation,—not that they were naturally more wicked than other boys, but because they did not manfully withstand those corrupting influences that beset them upon every side. It is unnecessary to say that many of them were drunkards before they became criminals.

I do not know that I should go beyond the "verge of the court," to speak of other matters, but I do not believe it will be very long before other motives will be added to the "wicked mind" with which crimes are supposed to be done.

I believe it has become the christian duty of every man who values civilization, who loves and cherishes his own household, to speak against and to work against the alarmingly-prevalent practice of smoking cigarettes by our boys. The boy who habitually smokes cigarettes is mentally inefficient, and I do not believe he is intellectually capacitated for higher education. I believe that when he is narcotized by tobacco that the impression made upon his mind from reading books is as transitory and flighty as the impression he would retain of his own countenance after he had gone away from the mirror. How can our sons be saved from this almost universal debasement? The men who place these pitfalls in the way of the unsuspecting and simple, who multiply their transgressions by uncounted repetitions every hour, avoid the consequences of discovery and conviction, whilst the poor, misguided victims are perpetually lashed by a self-accusing spirit sufficiently vital and active to warn them against the certainty of premature decay, but too much debilitated to conquer the habit. If this tendency towards intellectual depletion is to go on, where is the guaranty that we shall be succeeded by a race of men sufficiently courageous and wise to master the vexatious questions of government, finance, theology, and to master the details of the instruction given by the Stoic—"Finish what I have begun."

I would be glad to have some one to point out a remedy for this that is momentarily sapping the energy, capacity and virtue of our youths. Can it be done by corrective legislation?

Letter from the Seminary.

Dear Recorder:—We are grieved that several of our brethren are forced to return home before the close of the session. Bro. Warren leaves us to-day. Bro. Alderman left us before Christmas and Bro. Hedgpeth about a week ago. These brethren did good work while they were, and we hope the few months' study here will not be valueless to them as they go forth into the Master's vineyard to work.

The brethren become very dear to us here as we mingle in the halls and lecture rooms, and often ties of brotherly love are formed which last through life and are a constant source of pleasure. After all, is not one of the best, highest joys of our life the fellowship we have with congenial spirits? Will not the sweetest joy of heaven be the communion we shall have with "him who loved us and gave himself for us?" He desires that "where I am there ye may be also." What more could we wish?

I want to give you some of my impressions as to the Seminary. Every one knows that it occupies an important place among the Baptists of the South and West. It is probable that to a large extent the Seminary will have, during the next generation or two, a stronger influence in shaping the religious thought of the great body of Southern Baptists than any other one thing. Like the spring that bubbles from the rocks, sending its stream ever increasing to the sea, so this school should send out a stream of doctrine ever widening in its influence till all must eventually feel its power.

Some people have thought that this is a "theological bullet mould," and perhaps some have thought like the teacher told the young man who was seeking advice about going to college, that "it is simply a place where you may become polished and finished." Well, a diamond is not so valuable till it has been polished, but it is a diamond. I can assure any one who may be in doubt about it, that the work here is anything else than surface work.

I observe that there is a spirit of profound reverence for God and his revealed Will pervading the entire institution. This is not a place where cold Philosophy stalks through the halls of the dead and, with dissecting knife, cuts remorselessly, just to see what's there.

Some one has said that "it takes a heart in sympathy with the Bible to understand its teachings." Can the cold, loveless heart understand the indefinable yearnings of love? Thine are heights to which cold Reason cannot climb—a world where spirits dwell, and soul comprehends its kind.

I believe that the spirit of this Seminary is in touch with the Spirit of the Sacred Word, and that reason holds her proper place.

The great text-book is the Bible, and I have been made to feel as never before in my life how rich and full this dear old Book is. I am made to love the Book more, to study it more, to make it the guide in all things to my life. Oh! that all christians would lovingly study and meditate on the Bible itself without going out after "helps" and "stories about the Bible" and so many other books which are written mainly to try to make the Bible narrative more attractive! Stick close to the Book. It will lift your soul, cheer you, help you, save you.

There is another thing which has impressed me. It is the importance of being able clearly to define one's thought, and of distinguishing the difference between what one knows and what he don't know. Josh Billings says, "Better not know so much than know so much what aint so." It is difficult sometimes for a young student to find out what subjects he may study with a hope of understanding them, therefore it is a great help to have those who have made the Bible a life-study to tell us what the questions are which can never be settled, and also those which can. Frequently men undertake to teach in the Bible what they do not understand and never can understand, because it cannot be understood by man. How much better it would be if we would all try to tell only what we know, and let the rest alone, or frankly confess we don't know. Let the Bible mean what it wants to, and accept on faith what we cannot know, and there is a chance for us to arrive at real truth,—so much as is intended for us to know. It does seem to me that what will do more to advance christianity than anything else is a thorough, and sympathetic study of the Bible by all.

Let me say that I learn to-day that Bro. J. L. Sproles, who is now a student of the Seminary and pastor of Southgate Street church in the city, has been called to the church at Shelby, N. C., and will take charge the first of February.

Yours, W. E. CROCKER.

Letter from Bro. W. F. Watson.

Dear Recorder:—I arrived here with my family the 1st of January, and entered regularly upon my work with the beginning of the new year. It cost me a struggle to leave the work in Moore county, where I had been laboring since my graduation; but the enlarged field of usefulness opening up for me in this section, together with the impression that the Holy Spirit was leading, decided me to sunder the ties of the old pastorate and enter heartily upon the work of the new. Carthage and Manly are good churches, worthy of good pastors, and I sincerely trust may be able to locate one in their midst to continue the work.

The church here is undertaking to do more for the Master this year than in any previous year of her history. Our doors are open every Sunday for divine service—three Sunday morning and four Sunday night services in the month. This enlargement of our work is due to the liberal and, in some instances, self-sacrificing spirit of our members, and as a consequence we are looking for a great blessing from the Lord on our efforts to honor him.

Our church-building is a model and has recently been painted and carpeted. It was erected by the Baptists of the town and immediate vicinity; it cost many sacrifices, yet they were cheerfully made for the Master. I believe that the way to build houses for the Lord is through the enlarged and well-developed liberality of those contemplating worshiping in them. When the Lord wanted Israel to erect a tabernacle for him in the wilderness, he did not send special agents to all the tribes and nations asking for help, but commanded that the people, who were to be benefited by the erection of the tabernacle, should, even of their poverty, make liberal contributions for it until there was a sufficiency of materials of all kinds for the undertaking.

The too prevalent custom of sending out subscription papers, authorizing any one, far or near, to collect funds for the erection of a certain church, and forward to treasurer of building committee, before the field has been thoroughly canvassed where the church has been erected, or is to be erected, has been so sadly abused that many of our best brethren treat such communications much as they would a circular advertisement, consigning it to the waste basket, and sometimes, I fear, turn a deaf ear to a worthy and righteous appeal.

I was very much pleased with the ring of your editorial on "Misappropriation of Public Money." It will be a sad day for soul-liberty for which our forefathers bled and died, when our legislators shall, whether constitutionally or unconstitutionally, decide to make an appropriation of State funds to any benevolent organization or institution presided over by any religious sect. The State has no right to dictate to me as to where, how much, and when, I shall bestow my charities. One of the first principles of soul-liberty is, that I shall have the unrestrained power to direct my beneficence, as one who must give an account to God and not to the State. Of course, every christian in the State is made, by our system of taxation, to bear his proportional part of these misdirected appropriations, whether he wills or not so to do. The whole thing savors of a union of Church and State, and as an advocate of soul-freedom, I desire to enter my most solemn protest against it.

It seems that it is a hard matter for the State Chronicle to get right on the whiskey question and Baptist preachers. The editor seems to be reckless about the matter entering the columns of his paper. His advice to conscientious christians, who cannot decide that a man who has determined to engage in the whiskey traffic has a good, moral character, to resign and make way for men who can come to such a decision, is rotten to the core and worthy of the censure of all sound moralists as well as christians.

I am glad that you printed your thoughts with reference to that part of Mr. Patton's article relating to the immersion of the poor criminal by a Baptist minister. The editor of a newspaper, such as the Chronicle purports to be, ought to be too well informed to be imposed upon by the fabrication of a fevered imagination such as Mr. Patton clearly had when he penned his article, and ought to be held strictly responsible for all slanderous articles which he allows to enter the columns of his paper. Mr. Daniels ought, in simple justice to the hosts of Baptists in North Carolina who support his paper, and in simple justice to the truth, make an explanation of the matter.

God bless you and prosper you greatly in your work this year.

Fraternally, W. F. WATSON.

Notes on Books.

GOD IN HIS WORLD.*

Perhaps no book in the department of religious literature for the past year or two has made so modest an entry into public notice and yet fixed itself so quickly and deeply there as God in his world. Containing scarcely three hundred pages, with an exterior severely simple, and published anonymously, its unobtrusive message was heard at once for its own sake and made a profound impression. A few months after its publication it transpired that Mr. Henry M. Alden of New York City was its author. His name was probably withheld from the title-page because, being unknown in the field of theological criticism, it would have contributed nothing to the favorable reception of the book. Our author is a layman, and it may be to the absence of a distinctively theological culture that we owe the subordination of dialectics, the directness and penetration of vision, and the boldness and originality of treatment which characterize his work.

The orthodox reader must make up his mind beforehand to submit to a shock here and there. It may be doubted, indeed, whether that estimable person ever occurred to the writer's thought. He speaks the present content of his mind without regard to the opinions which it may traverse. A certain dogmatic accent is discoverable on every page, but it is the dogmatism of the seer, never of the apologist or the polemic. The book is an interpretation of Nature in its higher relations, of human life, and of Christianity. An interpretation which, the author assures us, was not arrived at as the result of any striving after truth. It was without previous design in its origin or its shape; nor was there any provision of its issue. It is not a speculation, but "a vision of living reality."

The spirit of Love, warm and tender, animates and beautifies every sentence. It is the light by which we walk in these high contemplations. And only as the reader yields himself to its sway and forgets the critic in the reverent passivity of the disciple, may he gather the harvest of suggestion and spiritual invigoration spreading through these rich pages. From their perusal in this spirit one rises subdued by the near vision of the inner realities of the divine life and tearfully grateful that, in spite of manifold perversions and long wandering, one may yet attain to its beauty and strength.

Later when the displaced critical attitude supervenes, certain positive statements will be recalled and set down as "hard sayings." The style, habitually limpid and warm and often rising into a noble eloquence, may appear a trifle stiff here and overwrought there. Its sudden assumption of the "sacred" character—for example, "Listen, then, Beloved, and open your hearts to the Spirit which striveth with you"—is apt to give one a sort of æsthetic crick dangerously akin to that which follows its cold-blooded perpetration by a minister from his desk. Again, it may be inquired whether it is not a bit of Platonic idealism that our author has been indulging himself in. If he meant to be helpful, might he not have taken note more studiously of the actual conditions and necessities of the present stage of culture and religion? May one not go a little too far in the divorce of spirit from form? Is not the "spiritual body," which Amiel calls the visibility of the soul, the indispensable condition of the soul's communication with its environment?

But in the presence of so much that is excellent and inspiring and true, these suggestions wear a somewhat captious look, and I hasten to refer the reader to the book as a whole as the best answer to each several complaint.

The thirty pages of the Introduction present the influence of the appeal to Nature upon Christian teaching; the relation sustained to Nature by the Christ, who removes the veil from her mysteries and fulfils her prophecies; the loss to Christianity in the theological revolt against Nature; the practicability of the Gospel life in spite of the difficulties imposed by a complex and artificial system of civilization, and so forth. The remainder of the little volume is divided into three Books. The first Book is entitled "From the Beginning." I can not do better than quote a part of the author's own summary of it. It is a sketch of man's spiritual development before the coming of our Lord.

"In this cycle of ancient faith man's response to the divine leading of the Word in Nature was the measure of his divinely quickened life, and his departure therefrom through waywardness and self will was the measure of his spiritual death. We have traced the ever widening steps of this departure, from the naive sensibility of the earliest Aryan faith to the immediately divine suggestions of Nature; through the complexities of institutional life, * * * including the development of a priestly order, a system of polytheism, and a dramatic ritual associated with fixed symbols; until, in the completion of this worldly scheme, through the perfection of that civilization which under the Cæsars possessed and policed the habitable globe, we reach the ultimate illustration of spiritual death—a death which not only is the paralysis of Paganism, but, reaching forward with its spectral gloom, lays its icy hand upon the warm heart of nascent Christendom, muffling its divine voices, and suppressing its spiritual impulses. We have seen also that whither soever the wayward children of men wandered, thither closely followed the loving Spirit of God; * * * and finally, in this close pursuit, overtaking them in their last extremity—in the helplessness of death, in that vast prison-house and sepulchre known as Roman civilization—taking their very flesh and appearing unto them as the Son of Man."

"The Incarnation" is the subject of the second Book. We meet first a bold statement of the limitations of the incarnate Word. As to the meaning and object of the Incarnation, our author holds that, as we can suppose no new or altered divine disposition, the appearance of the Savior was only "the intense reinforcement of divine activities that had been operative from the beginning," the new element being this, that the revelation became a human revelation that it might be humanly comprehended. The Son of Man discloses and illustrates the original human type, and "as our leader he can be and show forth only that which he calls upon us to be and show forth." On the other hand, his veiled divinity is self manifest. It is apprehended as an intuition, rather than as the issue of an argument. A most suggestive, as it is a large portion of this second Book is the treatment of the Christ's correspondence with Nature. Hardly less so is that of the Kingdom of Heaven and the characteristics and high privileges of its members.

The last Book treats of the "The Divine Human Fellowship," that is, our Lord's second and larger incarnation in humanity. To many our author will seem at his best in this section, but space will not allow me to indicate further its line of thought. I may now only quote two or three illustrative passages from different parts of the volume. This from the Introduction:

"The position of the Christian theologian is too apt to be that of a belief in Christ so independent of Nature and dissociated from her that he must translate the truths of the Gospel into a supposititious realm of the Supernatural, and, identifying this realm with the spiritual world, must deny to Nature any spiritual significance. He thereby takes common ground with the skeptic against the Gospel, which declares the manifestation of the Eternal Word in Nature, and which nowhere supposes any spiritual kingdom divorced from the natural. The skeptic will not have Christianity in his Nature, and the theologian will not admit Nature into his Christianity. What a limitation, on the one side, of Nature, and, on the other, what a devitalization of Christianity! Both Nature and Christianity are thus reduced to mechanical systems, excluding and antagonizing each other; so that skeptical science is distinguished by its contempt of Christianity and theology by its contempt of Nature. The ultimate goal of this flight from Nature is the Nirvana of Buddhism."

And what a suggestive and dignifying view of childhood have we in these sentences likewise from the Introduction:

"The newness of life which comes with every generation is a divinely ordained force for our social regeneration. Forever the Master places the child in our midst, as a symbol of his kingdom—the power to renew and remould our life. Every child is a fresh manifestation of the Christ, divinely born, sent even as he was sent, for our inspiration and leadership; and, received in this way, a single generation of children would renovate the world."

One meets very much the same conception in two other fine spirits,—in the Genevese critic and philosopher Amiel, who is quoted above, and in Nathaniel Hawthorne in "Little Annie's Ramble" of the Twice-Told Tales. I cannot forbear adding, from the third Book, this striking delineation of an unvital and mechanical faith:

"Men are disposed to accept rules of life rather than its principles. They prize a system of penances and indulgences, as one determined to be sick stores up medical prescriptions. They would have life limited and measured out to them, and they expect through formal prayers to receive its fruits, which, in the divine method, are the results of growth only. They would substitute strenuous effort for growth, looking unto a reward rather than unto grace. They love casuistry, and dote upon virtuous economies, thinking, like Judas, of alms-giving whenever love wasteth her precious ointment. They prefer a life which they can regulate with precision, and exact definitions of faith itself, lest in a divine confusion it should overflow their mental limitations. They nourish the belief in a God who keeps his place while they keep theirs—in a suspended judgment and a postponed heaven—jealous lest in some way the well-defined boundaries between the human and the divine, between this world and some better one, should be broken up, and the unbalanced abundance of grace should flow in and sweep away all their landmarks and nice adjustments, precipitating the millennium."

It can scarcely be doubted that we have in the book which we have been glancing through a valuable and permanent addition to the literature of religion. It is especially valuable as a check and corrective in a perod when the senses and the reason exalt themselves so imperiously over consciousness and the evidece of experience, and when the integrity and vigor of the social and the religious life are so seriously menaced by increasing complexities and artificialities. Its suggestiveness, like that of Prof. Drummond's writings, lies in the author's point of view. He speaks from amid the new knowledge of Nature which has grown so rapidly during the last thirty years and so deeply and beneficently modified every department of human thought. But Mr. Alden goes beyond the stirring Scotchman to declare that "the natural law is the spiritual law." Drummond is more scientific, Alden more profound and spiritual. Drummond is Paul, Alden is John.

The Mission Question.

HOW ARE WE TO REACH OUR CHURCHES?

The editor of the Western Recorder, very truthfully says:

"The most important thing in connection with the Missionary Centennial is to increase the number of contributors to missions. Though there has, in the last decade, been a gratifying increase in this respect as well as in the amount contributed, it is still true that the great majority of the Baptists give absolutely nothing to missions."

He states that a man who had given much thought to the subject after careful observation had said to him recently that there were nearly a million Baptists in the South who did not give a cent to missions and urges upon the denomination to look after this million during the present year and stir them up by informing them of the perishing world around them.

Now there are in North Carolina over 12,000 white churches with an aggregate membership of over 170,000 (170.335, according to the figures in the Baptist Almanac). How many of this vast army of professed disciples give anything at all to the cause of missions?

For years I have been a careful observer of the statistics of giving among our North Carolina churches. I have had country and village pastorates, in all sections of the State from the mountains to the seaboard, and from counties bordering on Virginia, to those on the South Carolina line. I have also traveled much in agency work and taken up collections from all sorts of Baptist churches in town and country and I have counted the givers.

It is my deleberate conviction that not more than one in every nine of our church members can be counted on for an annual contribution for any object outside of his own community. If this estimate be correct there are one hundred and fifty thousand nominal Missionary Baptists in North Carolina who are giving nothing for missions.

The problem of the present year is how to reach this vast army of delinquents. They do not attend the Conventions. They do not attend their own Associations and Union Meetings and the majority of them belong to churches that have once a month preaching and do not avail themselves of the opportunities they have for instruction in the Sunday-school.

What they need mostly is information about missions. How is this information to be imparted? How are they to be instructed in this duty, when most of them have an opportunity of hearing but twenty-four sermons a year if their monthly preaching is not interfered with during the whole year by sickness or inclement weather? Making allowance for rainy Sundays, the average country Baptist does not hear on an average as many as twelve sermons a year from his pastor except during the protracted meetings. How is the preacher under this system of monthly preaching to find opportunity to instruct his people, say in twelve or fifteen hours a year? Yes; but you say "he ought to visit his members and instruct them from house to house." That is more easily said than done. What time has the poor country pastor to visit several hundred members scattered over several townships and frequently over several different counties when his own home is not infrequently, fifteen or twenty miles from his churches. He can give only three or four days a month at each of his four charges, and these three or four days often fall on rainy or snowy weather? If he calls at a farm house, in good weather, he finds the men and boys off in the field and the women and girls busy about the domestic duties and, in nine case out of ten, all wishing in their hearts he had not called that day. These one hundred and fifty thousand delinquents can not be reached in that way. You can not reach them through the religious paper because the pastor can not get them to subscribe to it. I never knew but one church whose every member took the denominational organ. That was the church in Scotland Neck when it was first organized in 1864, and the members paid for their paper in Confederate money which was far more plentiful then than meat and bread, or hickory nuts and persimmons.

It would be a wonderful help and stimulus to all our religious enterprises, if we could get the BIBLICAL RECORDER into half or even one tenth of the families of our delinquents; but we can not do it. Then what are we to do? Some of my churches have standing committees to make collections privately during the year; but some of these committees never see the members except on their preaching days and those who need most information on these several subjects for which contributions are asked are conspicuously absent on Saturday.

Dr. John A. Broadus says, there are three sides to every question; your side, my side and the inside.

Now we have had your side and my side about this matter of pastoral visiting and pulpit and newspaper instruction as affecting missions, what is the inside of the question? How are we to reach this vast army of delinquents? Not by monthly preaching; for they don't and can't hear enough of it. Not through the religious newspaper; for they will not take it. Not by pastoral visiting; for that is plainly impracticable.

Then how? Would not tract distribution and judicious Colportage work do much in that direction?

If every pastor and church clerk were supplied with mission tracts to distribute gratuitously, and every church had within itself a live tract committee to work among its own members, would not this help on the cause? If we could secure and put to work a live Colporter in every Union Meeting and supply him with cheap but instructive works on missions, covetousness, duties of christians &c., to sell and to give away; let him visit and instruct and pray with families during the week and visit the churches and report his work to them and take up collections on Sunday, would not this help to solve the problem?

I verily believe that the greatest need in our denominational work to-day is a judicious and efficient work of Colportage.

What the Asheville Baptist Says.

In the Chronicle of the 17th inst. was a letter from Capt. T. W. Patton, of this city, relative to the conduct of certain Baptist and a Baptist preacher or preachers relative to the execution of John Wilson. The BIBLICAL RECORDER takes just exceptions to it and properly rebukes the Chronicle for publishing it, while Dr. J. L. Carroll in the Citizen of this city administers to Capt. Patton a rebuke so just that no right-minded man should rest under it. We have waited for Capt. Patton to speak but as he prefers to say nothing, he thus accepts the situation and hopes to let it die by silence.

The RECORDER calls for facts from this section relative to the truthfulness of the letter. We have taken pains to get all the facts we could and the best informed persons that we met, told us to say that the whole thing was false. As a falsehood it does the Baptists great harm; is a reflection upon Sheriff Woody of Yancey county, who executed the man and does Capt. Patton untold injury if he has any desire, whatever to maintain a name for rectitude and candor.

If the author of the letter has any more tales to adorn or wishes to become famous for misrepresentation we would suggest that he spare Sheriff Woody, and pass silently by our Baptist people who never meddle with those who have to execute the law and so far as we know have never given the author of that letter any just cause to refer to them in a manner so manifestly unkind and unreliable.—The Asheville Baptist.

Bro. C. S. Hayes, Clerk and Treasurer First Baptist church, Monroe, N. C., will receive contributions.

wave does not expand and become large it is because the pebble is not large enough to produce such an effect. If we are not greatly interested, and do not have great power in foreign missions, it is because our interest and power at home are inadequate to produce such results abroad. As we take the heathens for Christ we will be able to take our own people for him. If we bring other nations to a knowledge of salvation, our own people will become more consecrated as they plead with God for more power to do the work.

Indifference to foreign mission begets indifference at home and along other lines of our work. But as our churches advance in the other graces let us see to it that they advance in the grace of liberality as the church at Corinth was urged to do in Paul's day.

Let us during this centennial year rally to our marching orders, remembering that it is more blessed to give than to receive, and fill the Lord's treasury with our gifts until there shall be no need, if indeed we do not give until we are urged to leave off giving.

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." R. D. CARROLL.

Louisville, Ky.

Letter from Farnham, Va.

Many changes have taken place since I last wrote for your columns. Some of these have been causes of joy and gratitude to the Alwise Bestower of blessing and mercies, and others sources of grief and sorrow. Some of the strong men in Israel have fallen at the post of duty, battling to the last with armor on for the King in Zion. In the death of the later Dr. Cornelius Tyree of Salem, Va., the Baptist denomination of the old commonwealth has sustained an irreparable loss. It may soon be asked, "The fathers, where are they? And echo answers, where?" Sydnor and Tyree were among the last. Hume, Taylor, Poindexter, W. F. Broaddus, Cumberland George, Bagby, Hall, Jones, Jeter and others who led the Baptist hosts of Virginia when I first entered the ministry, have passed over the river and now rest from their labors, but "their works do follow them." When a prominent minister of our denomination heard of the death of the distinguished Richard Fuller of Baltimore, after he recovered from his shock of surprise and grief, he exclaimed, "Thank God, though man falls, Jesus Christ still lives." This is the comfort and consolation we have in the death of such men as the godly and consecrated Tyree. His mantle, it is to be hoped, will fall on younger shoulders.

We number among the Baptist ministers of Virginia to day a host of strong, vigorous, able, consecrated young and rising men who are rapidly advancing to the front, and in whose hands Baptist interests in the State are not likely to suffer. Our denominational enterprises were possibly never in a more healthy and prosperous condition than at present. Work is being pushed along all the lines. Our institutions of learning, both male and female, were never more successful and prosperous than at this date. There is a disposition to build wisely and on a solid basis. Hence the agitation in the columns of the Herald of the true status and relation of our educational and benevolent enterprises to the denomination proper. I have long thought that if there were any organic relation between the Baptist denomination of the State and these institutions, it was of a mystified and shadowy nature. Baptists will soon be chary of contributing their money to institutions whose control may be a matter of dispute and litigation, or may pass into other hands. Now that the subject is being discussed, it is to be wished that the discussion will continue until there is a thorough ventilation of the whole matter and some tangible and satisfactory solution obtained. Let us know how and where we stand—be sure we are right, and then go ahead.

The Baptist Orphanage movement is exciting much interesting and enlisting the sympathy of our brethren in every part of the State. Under the wise and energetic management of Rev. J. G. Hobday, the movement will be crowned with success, for Bro. Hobday is the synonym of success. Fertile in resources, practical, conservative and wise, he can almost achieve success out of chaos.

One thing truly gratifying in this age of frequent changes in the pastoral relation is, to see a number of our pastors who possess the quality of sticking to their fields. Notably among these may be mentioned Drs. Lake, Dunaway and Owen. All these men are pre eminently useful in their pastorates and never had a stronger hold upon their people and churches than now. Dr. Dunaway of Fredericksburg has been pastor of one flock a quarter of a century, and was never more beloved by his people. Dr. Owen has been pastor of the Court Street in Portsmouth for a score of years. He has been eminently useful and popular, and is greatly beloved by his people. As much may be said of Dr. Lake, who is the peer of both the other brethren.

The celebrated Andrew Fuller, alluding to the frequent changes made by some of his younger brethren in the ministry of his times, said they seem to have been stung by a gad-fly. I presume many of our young preachers think they must move forward and up while young, for when they get old the opportunity may be gone. The dead line in the ministry, of which so much is said in some quarters, may be reached, and then it may be said, "Thus far shalt thou go and no farther."

Another noticeable feature of the times is, that so many of our preachers (and some of them the best) are going into the schoolroom, filling positions in our academies and colleges as principals, professors and presidents. Well, we need good and true men in their positions, and it would be difficult to get them if we did not take them from the pulpit, for the pew prefers other callings to the school room. R. W.

Preach the Word.

We count it a sad feature of the church to-day that, instead of this healthy preaching, we have so much pulpit oratory, lyceum lectures on moral subjects, presentation of schemes of social improvement, laudation of men and events; all of which might find their appropriate places, but which are wholly out of place when brought into the christian pulpit, which should be consecrated to one purpose only, the holding forth the word of life. Our Timothys need to have it sounded constantly in their ears: "Preach the word" (2 Tim. 4: 2). They who think God's word is but a narrow field to operate in have very little apprehension of its infinite scope and unfathomable depths. They who think that any moral or useful subject is "God's word," have very little apprehension of the immense gulf between truth and opinion, between inspiration and human wisdom. The Bible is dishonored by abandoning it for something more "taking" with an ear-itching crowd. But we hold that, although this crowd will not relish Bible exegesis and exposition, thoughtful souls will gather about the exegetical preacher and take a far higher delight in his preaching. It will not be the delight of a momentary ecstacy, but the delight of a sense of spiritual growth, a permanent and heavenly delight.—Dr. Crosby.

He Would Find Must Seek.

Nature never provides for man's wants in any direction—bodily, mental, or spiritual, in such a form as that he can simply accept her gifts automatically. She puts all the mechanical powers at his disposal, but he must make his lever. She gives him corn, but he must grind it. She elaborates coal, but he must dig for it. All the products of nature are perfect, but he has everything to do to them before he can use them. So with truth; it is perfect, infallible. But he cannot use it as it stands. He must work, think, separate, dissolve, absorb, digest; and most of these he must do for himself and within himself. An "idle life is death anticipated." —Henry Drummond.

Do You Know?

Oftentimes the superintendent of the Sunday-school would do better if he only knew how. The Baptist Superintendent of the American Baptist Publication Society is intended to tell him how, as well as to tell him many other excellent things. Knowing its value we cheerfully commend this periodical to our Sunday-school superintendents.

Vick's Floral Guide for 1892, as true and tried friends always are, is sure of a warm reception, especially when dressed as daintily as this year. The "Nellie Lewis" Carnation on the front of cover, and "Brilliant Poppies" on the back, are unusually attractive, and the numerous colored plates of flowers and vegetables are certainly works of art. The first twenty-four pages, printed in violet ink, describe Novelties and Specialties. Send ten cents to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., and procure a copy of this attractive and useful catalogue. It costs nothing, as the ten cents can be deducted from the first order.

The great battle field of the world are in the hearts of men. The great struggles are within. A soul once committed to God and his cause finds in its fierce fights a field of glory, where grand victories may be won and sweet peace be found.—H. W. Thomas.

Nothing sets a person so much out of the devil's reach as humility, and nothing puts him so well within reach of heaven's grace and graces.

The room's in disorder,

The flower-stand upset, and the mischief to pay:
And Johnny is screaming
As loud as he's able,
For nothing goes right when mamma's away.

What a scene of discomfort and confusion home would be if mamma did not return. If your wife is slowly breaking down, from a combination of domestic cares and female disorders, make it your first business to restore her health. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is without a peer as a remedy for feeble and debilitated women, and is the only medicine for the class of maladies known as "female diseases" which is sold, by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers that it will give satisfaction, in every case, or the money will be refunded. It is a positive cure for the most complicated cases. It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, and a soothing and strengthening nervine, imparting tone and vigor to the whole system. It's a legitimate medicine, too—carefully compounded by an experienced physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization.

CONSUMPTION

THE BEST POSITIVELY CURED. THE BEST

Camm's Emulsion of Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, combined with the Hypophosphites, is recommended on its merit alone. It is prescribed by many of the leading Physicians of every state in the Union, besides being recommended by the Doctors and teachers of Medicine in Europe. This alone goes far to establish the justice of its claim to superiority. It is beyond doubt the best remedy in the world for the cure of Consumption, and all kindred diseases. It will positively cure consumption, if used before this fearful disease has made too much headway, particularly if it is persevered in after the arrest of the disease. Wherever there is any wasting disease of any kind, Camm's Emulsion is the remedy. To derive the full benefit from this truly valuable medicine, it is recommended that it be used only by the advice of an intelligent Physician. For sale by all druggists. Manufactured only by E. A. MARCH 6, 1891.
For the benefit of the public, I unhesitatingly recommend Cheatham's wonderful remedy, "Pokine," to all sufferers of rheumatism. It has produced marvelous results in my case. I was a sufferer of the malady for five years, and after taking a few bottles was entirely cured.
Very respectfully,

Dear Sir—My wife was down in bed with rheumatism, and the Pokine I bought of you gave her relief after taking four doses. She has not been troubled since. It is the best medicine she ever took for rheumatism. Respectfully,
ZACK DAVIS.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM, JR.:
Dear Sir—I have been afflicted with rheumatism time and again, for the past thirteen years. I have received more relief from Pokine than any medicine I ever took, and therefore take great pleasure in recommending it to all sufferers of rheumatism. Very respectfully,
F. G. MITCHELL.

JANUARY 19, 1891.
W. T. CHEATHAM, JR.:
Dear Sir—I desire to say that in January last I was down with rheumatism; my suffering was great, and I was completely prostrated. One bottle of your Pokine completely relieved me, and I have not had any rheumatism since. My son also was relieved of rheumatism by Pokine.
Yours truly,
CHARLES G. BURROUGHS.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM, JR., Henderson, N. C.:
Dear Sir—Being asked my opinion of your rheumatic remedy, Pokine, will gladly state I deem it the only medicine of its kind on the market that will accomplish that which is exclusively claimed for it. Being a sufferer of rheumatism, I consequently tried many remedies, until finally relieved by Pokine. Very respectfully, Woman's Work in China.

One cannot help thinking that the ladies of our church, faithful as they generally are, do not yet fully realize their great responsibility and privilege in spreading the gospel in China. It may truthfully be said, in general terms, that the salvation of the women of China, and indeed of all oriental countries, depends on the women of christian lands. This arises from the peculiar ideas of propriety and modesty prevalent among the Chinese, as among other eastern nations, which forbid women from appearing in public assemblies, and from holding any social intercourse with men who are not members of their own immediate families. Our people, accustomed to free American usages, do not realize how strict these ideas are. In China you may be intimate with the male members of a family, and visit the home frequently, but you will never see the women of the family. Perhaps you are invited to dine; there will be an elaborate feast, but only the gentlemen sit down to dinner. On one occasion, Dr. Woods of Tsing Kiangpu was called, in case of extreme need, to see a woman with disease of the foot. The first visit he paid, in order that he might make an intelligent diagnosis, he was allowed to see his patient, feel her pulse and ask questions, in presence of the family. But on a second visit what was his surprise and amusement to see a foot thrust through a doorway, with a curtain hanging down in front. That was all he saw of his patient. According to Chinese ideas of propriety, no woman of good character, as a rule, would sit in a mixed meeting of men and women, nor receive a visit from a christian minister who came to talk with her on the subject of religion. Our male missionaries cannot reach the homes; so that if the ignorant, misused women of China are to have help our christian women must go to teach them.

It is impossible to speak too highly of the work of our lady missionaries in China. They are a devoted, earnest body of women, who are doing an immense amount of good. Whether a lady wishes to engage in school-work or in visiting the families and healing the sick, the field of usefulness is alike wide and inviting.

The recollection of the writer's visit to our girls' school in Hangchow last year is vividly before me. The sweet, homelike place, the fifty or more girls, tidy and cheerful, showing the careful, intelligent training given them. And the mention of visiting and healing brings up at once the figure of a little woman, with kindly Scotch face, a bundle of consecrated energy, whom to know was to love, as she went all day among the hovels, healing the sick and speaking words of love and salvation; and whom some grateful patients thought to compliment by assuring her that they would worship her as a Buddha when she died. Nor are these ladies the only ones. They are spoken of but as representatives of our female force, who all deserve words of commendation. Let us encourage the ladies to undertake this great work of carrying the gospel to their heathen sisters. Theirs is a branch of the service which will yield and is yielding rich results. The hope of China, as of any other country, is in reaching the homes of the people. Unless there are christian homes we cannot hope that the church will be permanently established; and this can be accomplished only with the help of the women. —The Missionary.

Christian Women at Winchow.

Last January, during the week of prayer, the Chinese women held a meeting to pray for their friends who are still unconverted, and for their whole people. Then a missionary lady read some extracts from the autobiography of James Paton, missionary to the New Hebrides, which she had translated, and suggested that prayer be offered for the degraded people of those islands.

Afterwards the women came bringing a contribution, which they had taken up of their own accord for Mr. Paton's work, saying, "We must think not onty of those near, but also of those afar off, for they also are our brethren."

Here is the true missionary spirit—a powerful sermon in a nutshell. Remember those who are "afar off," that they may be "brought nigh by the blood of Christ." They are not strangers nor brutes, but our brethren—we should love them for Christ's sake; and we are responsible for their salvation, for we are our "brother's keeper." —Ibid.

Deceiving the Gods.

The Chinese constantly use the expressions, "Deceive the gods," "Flatter the gods," "Pull the wool over their eyes," (may shun), they say. Here is an instance of it, lately reported by a native paper:

The Cantonese seem to have been frightened by a rumor that a terrible and deadly sickness would produce great havoc in the 9th and 10th moons (months), and that to avoid the calamity, it was necessary to alter the moons in the 1st and 2nd moons. With one accord the people made out the last day of the 8th moon to be the last day of the year, and the 1st day of the 8th moon to be the 1st day of the new year. Congratulations were heard on every side, fire-crackers were exploded at every door, and butchers did a brisk business. The delusion was certainly carried far enough to deceive even the most astute of the gods of sickness. —Ex.

Japan is said to have 191,168 Shinto temples, with 14,480 priests; and 72,089 Buddhist temples, with 56,966 priests, or a grand (that is, lamentable) total of 263,207 buildings for the worship of false gods, and 71,713 men to lead and inspire.

The Baptist Superintendent.

The Baptist Superintendent, published by our American Baptist Publication Society for only twenty-five cents per year ought to be in the hands of every Baptist superintendent in the South. It is bright, breezy and brimful of good and helpful suggestions. How many toiling, struggling and bewildered superintendents would be helped by it! We commend it most heartily. We think we know its value. Such topics as "The Ideal School," "Models," and "How to Kill a Sunday-school," presented in a recent issue ought to be pondered well by every Southern Sunday-school superintendent; for the superintendent can "make or break" the school.

Slow and Rapid Growth.

A little reflection will show that there is a marked analogy between the operations of nature and the operations of social order. In the kingdom of nature that which is most enduring and useful is of slow growth, while on the other hand that which is of less utility and endurance is of rapid growth.

Let us apply these principles to our denominational schools. The first is Wake Forest, with whose history I am not familiar, but I know enough to be able to affirm that it sprung from a very small beginning. Its growth was slow—so slow that its friends and supporters were sometimes so much discouraged that they were almost ready to give it up in despair. But from such small beginnings, like the oak in the acorn, it has grown to be a stately tree, extending its branches, laden with blessings, in every direction. It is not a thing of a summer's growth; it has felt the storms of many winters, but these have only stimulated its growth so that it has stuck its roots deeper into the soil, asserting its right to be and to prosper.

Mars Hill College, if I am not mistaken, was the third denominational educational enterprise undertaken by the Baptists of North Carolina, and the first west of the Blue Ridge. The original school building cost something over three thousand dollars, and this was raised and paid by the friends of education within a radius of fifteen or twenty miles. The first session opened about the first of September, 1856, under the management of Prof. W. A. G. Brown of Mossey Creek College, Tenn., assisted by Prof. P. W. Anderson from the same school. Prof. Brown remained but one year. Prof. J. B. Marsh was then called to take charge of the school, and he conducted one of the best schools with which the State was ever blest.

Prof. Marsh left in the beginning of 1861, just at the opening up of the war. During the war the school was suspended, and a great part of the property was destroyed. In April, 1866, Rev. John Ammons was elected principal, who had charge for two years. The school under his management was a great success, the pupils being principally young men and young ladies, representing three different States.

After Prof. Ammons resigned, the school was carried on under the management of Profs. Lewis, J. R. Sams, Jas. Lunsford, J. F. Tilson and W. P. Jervis, up to the time that the present incumbents were elected. This covered a period from 1868 to 1890. The status of the school has varied at different times and with different management; but its general course has been that of growth. The school under the guiding hand of President T. M. Hufham and his able assistants, J. S. White and Miss Effie Guess, has been a marvel of success. During the present term there has been enrolled more than 130 pupils, and still they come.

Mars Hill has had none to blow its horn, and being too modest to blow its own horn, it has not been blowed.

First, then, Mars Hill has stood on its own legs and carried its own burden. It has never gone before the public begging. When it needed help the friends immediately around helped it, and if it did not get what it needed it was content with what it did get, and it was so wisely used that no murmur of complaint has ever been whispered that the people's donations have been squandered.

Mars Hill has created no enormous debt to be a source of continual vexation to its Board of Trustees and a continual worry to the public. There is now in course of construction an additional building, which will double its capacity, and the Trustees and friends of the school are bearing this burden. Mars Hill is out of debt.

Again, as to the good already done, the writer speaks from personal knowledge. No school in the State, with its equipments, has made a better record. Its students are scattered over the South and West, occupying positions of honor and trust, such as to make any teacher proud of his work. Mars Hill has never had a beneficiary department, yet at Mars Hill several of our most able and successful ministers have received their intellectual training, and its record in ministerial education will compare favorably with many schools of higher grade and greater pretensions.

There is springing up a beautiful village, affording facilities for board superior to any place I know, and on better terms. Students coming here will have two advantages combined, viz: home life and literary training. The moral of the place is superexcellent with good religious facilities. It is the purpose of the Board to make Mars Hill a first class college, and all the help we ask from the outside world, especially the Baptist world, just now, is to give us your patronage. Send your sons and daughters, for the school is a mixed school, to Mars Hill, where you can get better returns for your money than anywhere else.

JOHN AMMONS.

Stop the Leaks.

Last fall a family by hard work made a barrel of good molasses. The barrel sprang a leak, which was not discovered until the molasses had nearly all run out and wasted. The neighbors all said, "What a pity." But there are worse leaks than this in nearly every family.

The other day a man said: "I have worked hard all my life, and yet I am poor; and if any change, I am getting poorer. New years day I determined to see if I could find what was the cause of my poverty. I soon thought of cigars. I smoke six a day. At five cents a piece they cost per year $109.50. I chew $20 or $25 worth of tobacco a year. So the first day of the year I quit both." Here, then, are two leaks stopped. This man at the end of the year will be better off in health and purse.

But here is a man who smokes, chews, and drinks whisky. These three leaks cause a waste of about $225 a year.

A church member was asked for $15 a year for church expenses. He replied with a mixture of astonishment and anger: "What, ask as poor a man as I am for $15 for church expenses. It is out of all reason." "My brother," said the collector, "what is your cigar bill a year?" "Well, I suppose not less than $60 a year." A leak of $60 a year for cigars, and not $15 left for God's blessed cause! Ought not such leaks to be stopped?

Laboring men can earn from fifty cents to two dollars a day. Vast numbers of these spend about one-half of their wages for whisky, tobacco, and other unnecessary things. And then they cry out, "We can't live; we are ground down and oppressed." Stop these leaks, and you can live; and by strict economy you can soon become independent of your employers.

Every benevolent enterprise is suffering for lack of money to push them forward. If all the money the Baptists of North Carolina spend for smoking, chewing and whisky were given to God's cause, our contributions to all christian enterprises would be more than doubled.

It is a burning shame on professed christians that they spend more money for unnecessary, injurious luxuries, than they do for God's cause. Stop these leaks in the beginning of 1892. J. A. STRADLEY.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure, be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Better a star than a meteor; better a beacon that is steady than a marsh fire that is flickering and changeful. Life is more potent than words. By life, "without a word," things will be accomplished which could not be secured even by the most glowing words without the life.—W. M. Taylor, D. D.

In reason and understanding man is alone. The ox surpasses him in strength, the antelope in speed, the hound in keenness of nostril, the eagle in far reaching sight, the rabbit in quickness of hearing, the honey bee in delicacy of tongue, the spider in fineness of touch. Man's power, therefore, consisteth not in what he can lift, or how fast he can run, or how strong a wrestler he can throw—for in these respects the ox, the ostrich and the hyena are his superiors—but by his reason he comes forth to rule all; through his ingenious contrivance to outrun, outlift, outwrestle, outsee, outhear, outdo. —Talmage.

SADLER'S BRYANT & STRATTON COLLEGE 1864 BALTO

FOUNDED IN 1864 by the present executive—27 YEARS of continuous and successful management—Increased annual attendance—Now occupying four buildings—Grands unrivaled in facilities for educating YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN for success in life. In deciding upon a school for their children, PARENTS should send them to THE BEST, because it pays. It may require the expenditure of a few dollars more at first, but it will prove the cheapest in the end. CHEAP tuition is very dear, because it means cheap teachers, cheap surroundings, inferior facilities, and offers NO opportunities for securing POSITIONS for its pupils and graduates. This Institution, owing to its HIGH standard of excellence, has placed in desirable positions more young men and women from Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, than all similar institutions combined. Catalogue and particulars mailed on application.

If Darwin's theory is to be accepted, then the fact that I am the sole survivor in the trade of those who began with me the same line of business, gives significance to the fact that my sales of seed to market gardeners, well known to be the most critical of all buyers, has increased year by year until it has now reached vast proportions. That I have many varieties on my five seed farms, make your roots immune to vitality, and is a necessity, that no one may be imposed on, will explain much to the thoughtful reader. I invite you to write for my FREE Vegetable and Flower Seed Catalogue.

Letter from Rev. R. T. Bryan in China.

A PHYSICIAN AND A SINGLE LADY NEEDED.

Dear Recorder:—I have been trying to find time to write you, but have failed until now. I have been very busy for three months renting and repairing homes in Yangchow. God has crowned my efforts with success. We have secured very suitable homes and hope to move to them this week. Myself and family go with Bro. Pierce and Sister Miner to Yangchow to open the new station. We dread breaking up and moving away from Chinkiang, but as no one else can go with the new comers, we feel that duty calls, and we must obey.

If we cannot return to Chinkiang before going home for a vacation, we hope to go back to our old home on our return from home.

Notwithstanding the riots and general unsettled state of the country, our new neighbors in Yangchow seem very friendly. Our audiences in our street chapel are good, and I am often asked to preach Jesus. The people are anxious to get my tracts. I am very much encouraged in my work and in the work generally. Mrs. Bryan has quite a number of women to attend her weekly meetings and Sunday-school class in Chinkiang. She hates to leave her work there, but will perhaps have even greater opportunities of doing good in Yangchow.

We are very much pleased with the newcomers, Bro. Pierce and Miss Miner. They are working away at the language and are making good progress. We were very much disappointed in Miss White's changing her mind and going to Canton.

We ought by all means to have at once another single lady to be associated with Miss Miner, and a physician for this new station. We are only twenty miles from Chinkiang, but that is at the least a day's travel, and if the wind is very high may be a week's travel.

The physician in Chinkiang charges us five dollars a visit to walk a few steps, and would perhaps charge fifty dollars a visit to go to Yangchow. Even if he would go, we could not afford to send for him. The missionaries, then, must have a physician, and the work needs one even more. Cannot North Carolina send us the single lady and physician? Put in a strong plea for us.

May God bless you in your difficult and important work and give you both financial and spiritual success.

The riots in our part of China seem to be over. Sincerely, R. T. BRYAN.

Yangchow, China, Dec. 18, 1891.

Certain Hands Should be Kept out of the Public Treasury.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Your editorial in the RECORDER of Jan. 20th on "Misappropriation of Public Money" is about the best you ever wrote. If the Masons, the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, or any other secret society, wish to provide for the orphans, the way is open for them. And if any church organization wish to engage in that work, let them do so. But let all such organizations of whatever character, whether secret, moral or religious, keep their hands out of the public treasury. All that any of them have any right to ask of the State, according to the principles of republican institutions, is protection. I am glad that this subject is being agitated.

The Oxford Orphan Asylum is the property of the Masons. While it was under the management of Bro. J. H. Mills, a small appropriation from the State ($5,000 annually) was asked and secured, to which he was opposed on true Baptist principle. But he was gotten out and a Methodist put in. The Methodists captured the Grand Lodge, and then in turn, through the Grand Lodge, captured the Asylum. In proof of this, since the ouster of Mills, every superintendent of the Asylum has been a Methodist preacher. And now it comes to pass that in the list of the Methodist appointments at their Annual Conference, one of their number is appointed as Superintendent of the Oxford Orphan Asylum. Under this union of Masonry and Methodism, the State is asked for $10,000 annually for the Asylum, and it is given.

If this is not union of Church and State, I would like to know why it is not. The Superintendent acts under a two-fold appointment, that of the Masons and that of the Methodist Bishop, and under this arrangement he receives from the State annually $10,000 of the people's money collected by taxation to assist in the support of a charitable institution.

This is a subject that the politicians are afraid to tackle. All Pedobaptists have ill-defined views of entire severance of Church and State. If Baptists do not come to the front and throttle this encroachment on the public treasury, it will not be done at all.

I am not opposed to the Oxford Orphan Asylum, but I am opposed to its being run by money taken from the State treasury.

I have written plainly so as to be understood, because I want to be understood.

Rev. Sam Jones lectures here Thursday and Friday nights of this week.

The old veterans at the Soldiers' Home are rapidly recovering from la grippe.

The bondsmen of ex Sheriff Rowan Rogers have made good all his shortage, which approximated $10,000.

It is said that more old bonds for exchange were sent in to the State Treasury during the past month than in 1891.

The Republican State Executive Committee meets in Raleigh February 3d, to take steps in regard to calling the State Convention.

It is stated that Col. Eugene G. Harrell, Secretary of the North Carolina Teachers Assembly, has arranged for several excursions from this State to the Worlds' Fair at Chicago next year.

The committee on the collection of exhibits from this State for the Worlds' Fair, held its first meeting last Wednesday in this city. Preliminary arrangements were made for the educational exhibit. Arrangements were also made for collecting exhibits in the departments of agriculture, horticulture, forestry, mines and mining, fish and fisheries, &c.

John Boyd, the wrecker of the train at Bostain's Bridge early last fall, has been caught, and is now in jail at Charlotte. He has confessed the crime. A reward of $10,000 was offered for his arrest by the Richmond & Danville railroad. Tom Haney, the Georgia detective, worked the case up.

At a meeting of the citizens of Wilmington recently a committee was appointed to solicit subscriptions to the capital stock of a proposed new National Bank for Wilmington. About $100,000 was raised in one day. The committee will continue soliciting subscriptions until the capital of $150,000 or $200,000 is raised.

Who rules in this town?
Depends on the question up.
The lamp-chimney question—what sort do you break?
Whatever sort your dealer deals in.
How, do you think, he selects his chimneys?
He buys those that cost him least; he can get the regular price for them; and the faster they break the more he sells. That's how he reasons.
Tell him you want Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass," tough glass, transparent, clear, not foggy, fine, of right shape and uniform. Tell him you'll pay him a nickel more a piece, and that will cover his extra costs twice over. Tell him you don't propose to break any more. Try your hand at ruling.

SWEET GUM AND MULLEIN is Nature's great remedy for coughs, colds, croup, consumption, and all throat and lung troubles.

Hon. W. C. Sibley Interviewed.

Some years ago the Evening News in discussing healing agents, referred to the wonderful discovery called the Electropoise. Since then the cures made by this little appliance, have been so wonderful and phenomenal that its reputation is now echoing all over the country.

The Electropoise, when applied cures a cold or fever, as the case may be, by supplying the electric, magnetic or vital force where it is lacking; thus assisting nature, and reversing the means whereby the sickness was caused. Instances are on record in this city, where a regular hard chill was instantly arrested and the patient promptly cured. Grippe has been mastered in the same way, and rheumatism, dyspepsia and internal disorders, are eradicated in a remarkably short time. The universality of the cure, would lead one to doubt the little instrument, were it not for the principle or natural agency employed.

The most remarkable cures recorded, are of sciatica, that acute knife cutting sensation, which has given so much trouble to mankind. A well known case in Augusta, has been completely cured by the Electropoise, and the following interview from such a well-known, reliable and prominent man, as President Wm. C. Sibley of the Sibley Cotton Mill, must deeply impress, if not entirely convince all who read it.

When called upon, Mr. Sibley was perfectly willing to give his testimony to the Evening News. He said he had been a great sufferer from sciatica for five years, before he began using the Electropoise. For two whole years he had not been free from pain, and at times the sciatic pains were so severe that he would jump out of bed in his sleep, and awake to find himself on the floor in great agony. He spent much money at the North for special medical treatment, and was sixty-seven times cauterized with a white hot iron on different parts of his body. This treatment was almost as terrible as the sciatica itself, and when he read that a partner of General Alger, the great Republican politician of Detroit, had paid $5,000 and a physicians expenses to California as his joyful reward for cure from sciatica, he determined to try the Electropoise. Finding that Maj. Jackson was agent in Augusta he obtained one, and after three months use he experienced the most marked benefit.

At the end of eleven months his sciatica had left him entirely, and he has never felt a touch of it since.

"How long ago has that been Mr. Sibley?"

"A year ago, and you know yourself my condition before that time. I could not walk to my office, or even cross the street. I was helpless and had to go in my buggy everywhere. I still keep the Electropoise in the house and handy" continued Mr. Sibley, "and I don't hesitate to say, if I could not get another, $5,000 could not by it from me. When I walk too much and feel a little sore, I attach the wire to my ankle on retiring, which does not interfere with my sleep in any way, and the next morning I am fresh and all right. My case is wonderful, and I can not say too much for the Electropoise, but others in my family and among my friends have secured quite as satisfactory results, in curing chills, fever and rheumatism."

Mr. Sibley's statements are remarkable, but there is no doubt of their correctness, and the cures made by the Electropoise are endorsed by physicians who examined them. The machine is very simple, does not affect a patient disagreeably or severely; the application is very simple, being usually worn during sleep, and in no way interferes with sleep or work. They are quite inexpensive and can be bought at the different agencies all over the South.—Augusta, Ga., Evening News Jan. 20.

Dr. Boykin's Worm Killer.

"The Best Selling Vermifuge in the Market."

The Most Reliable Worm Destroyer in Use.

☞ Recipe furnished to any regular physician when requested. ☜

LA GRANGE, N. C., July 1887.

Mr. J. P. Joyner:—I gave my child one dose of Boykin's "Worm Killer," purchased of you. It brought 366 worms. I consider it the best worm medicine made.
Respectfully, J. W. THOMAS.

Messrs. I. M. & B. F. Powell, prominent merchants in Columbus county, N. C., wrote us in July, 1887, that "Rev. T. C. Floyd gave his child one dose of Boykin's 'Worm Killer,' and the result was 367 worms. He wishes all interested to know it."

RIDGEWAY, S. C.

Messrs. Boykin, Carmer & Co.—Gents: I have quite a demand for your "Worm Killer." It is the best Vermifuge I can get. A farmer bought a bottle of me a few weeks ago, gave one dose to his child; came in next day with a 'chow chow' jar filled with worms, the result of one dose. Since then all want it. W. J. DAVIS.

DUCK CREEK, N. C., May 8, 1884.

Boykin, Carmer & Co., Baltimore, Md.—Dear Sirs: Mr. A. Rudd, a very responsible customer of mine, gave a half teaspoonful "Worm Killer" to a child last week, and the result was 35 worms. Mr. Daniel Pines used it with still better results: 75 worms from one child. Of course my sales will be large. Yours truly, E. S. SMITH.

Read the following from one of the most prominent and best known physicians and farmers in South Carolina. He writes, "That a negro girl 10 years old near him took two or three doses of the 'Worm Killer,' and passed 366 worms."

Dated, Ridgeway, S. C., May 26th, 1884. R. H. EDMUNDS, M. D.

Mr. H. M. McDonald, of LaGrange, N. C., says Dr. Boykin's "Worm Killer" brought over 100 worms from one child in his neighborhood; and that it gives universal satisfaction. He sells more of it than all other worm medicine.

Price only 25 cents per bottle. Do not let your druggist or general dealer put you off with some other. Ask for "Boykin's Worm Killer," and get it. Any M. D. can prescribe it, and many do.

Mail Order Department

Through our Mail Order Department we offer advantages to the people of North Carolina and "Shopping by Mail" second to none in the Southern States, for by the means of this, a very important department of our great business, we place almost at the very doors of our patrons our enormous stock of goods, and we do carry the largest and finest collection of Dry Goods and kindred wares, at retail, of any house in North Carolina and equaled by very few Southern houses.

We want the patronage of our North Carolina people, not simply that ours is a North Carolina house, but because we will sell them Dry Goods as low prices, for the same quality, as any house in the trade.

We can only mention here a few of the more important departments, but will be glad to hear from those who desire anything relative to Dry Goods or the kindred wares:—

FOREIGN AND AMERICAN DRESS WOOLENS,
BLACK DRESS GOODS,
SILKS, VELVETS,
HOUSEFURNISHING GOODS,
CARPETS, CURTAINS, &c., &c.

Samples cheerfully sent, and letters of enquiry promptly answered.

When writing for samples, our patrons will please make their orders as definite as possible, that then we can send a suitable line, instead of a line entirely different from what they want.

GOODS DELIVERED FREE

(Except Furniture and Crockery.)

On all cash orders of $5 and over we will deliver goods free to nearest Express office or railroad station.

A Bright Paper.

In order that every class of people may be reached and influenced for good, the American Baptist Publication Society has so enlarged its papers as to attain that end. Our Young People is a wonderfully bright and interesting paper for our young people. Like all the other periodicals, it is perfectly clean, and sound to the core.

If every suffering lady who reads the BIBLICAL RECORDER knew how easily and pleasantly she can be relieved she would suffer no longer. Send 2c. stamp to Mrs. Chas W. Ashby, Mt. Airy, N. C., for free sample, or $1.00 for one month's treatment sent in plain wrapper. Six months treatment for $5.00.

MARRIED.

ELLIS—BROWN—On December 29th, 1891, at Gatesville, N. C., by Rev. C. J. Woodson, Mr. Chas. G. Ellis and Miss Mollie Brown.

PARKER—HOFLER—On January 20th, 1892, in Gatesville, N. C., by Rev. C. J. Woodson, Mr. William Parker and Miss Annie E. Hofler.

BRIDGES—BRIDGES—On January 17th, 1892, at the residence of the bride's father, near Lockville, Chatham county, N. C., by Rev. L. R. Dixon, Mr. Sandy W. Bridges and Miss Maggie J. Bridges, all of Chatham county.

DIED.

HUDGINS—Sister Martha B. Hudgins died on Wednesday morning, Dec. 16th, 1891. She was a devoted christian, wife and mother. She leaves a husband and several children, who miss her cheerful face and sweet influence. But we give her up to be with Jesus, whom she loved with all her heart.

J. H. L.

HENDRICKS—Died, in Davie county, N. C., January 9th, 1892, Katie, daughter of F. M. and M. A. Hendricks, aged sixteen years. The deceased was a worthy member of Cross Roads Baptist church, Yadkin county. She made a profession in early life, exhorting all to seek Jesus. She was obedient to her parents and kind to all. Our loss is her eternal gain.

J. W. D. BAITY.

HAWKS—The closing hours of 1891 closed the earthly life of one of our most devoted sisters at Warren Plains, Mrs. S. G. Hawks, nee Coleman. She died Dec. 31st, 1891. For about eleven years she was a faithful member of the Baptist church at Warren Plains, and I am sure there is no one, outside of her own people, who feels the loss sustained in her death more keenly than her pastor. Aside from her personal friendship, she really helped a man preach by the way she listened. Those who knew her best loved her most. She leaves a husband and six children, to whom she leaves the heritage of an exemplary christian life. May God comfort them and help them follow her as she followed her Saviour.

W. R. CULLOM.

EVANS—Bro. F. H. Evans died at his home near Harrellsville, N. C., on December 18th, 1891, in his seventy-fourth year. He joined the Coleraine Baptist church at an early age. His membership was afterwards transferred to Harrellsville. Bro. Evans had from his youth been an honorable christian gentleman. It is said by his neighbors that he never lost his temper under any provocation, thereby setting an example worthy of emulation. By his death the church has lost one of her most serious members, the neighborhood its best exemplar, his family a kind and devoted husband and father. His funeral was preached by Rev. C. N. Donaldson, and was largely attended. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

"Servant of Christ well done,
Rest from thy loved employ,
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

WILDER—A great and good man has passed away. On Sunday evening, January 17th, 1892, the spirit of Bryant Wilder took its everlasting flight and now dwells in that land where the spirits of just men are made perfect. He lived out the time allotted to man and was on borrowed time, as he claimed, for he was in his seventy-second year. He was sick about two weeks with la grippe, the disease that is taking so many from time to eternity. But why should he be called great? He was no statesman, no pulpit orator, nor politician, and moved in a contracted sphere; yet he was great in the sight of the Lord, for he was a christian, a "living epistle known and read of all men." For several years he was so blind that he could not get about by himself, but now his eyes are open to behold the beauties of that mansion prepared for the people of God. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

WEATHERS—Mrs. K. W. Weathers died in Raleigh, N. C., at the home of her son-in-law, Bro. T. A. Jones, on Thursday morning, Jan. 28th, 1892. On Jan. 20th, 1892, she reached her seventy-ninth year, and her death day was her husband's birth-day. On this anniversary he lost his faithful companion with whom he had spent fifty-six years of a happy wedded life. Fifty-eight years ago she became a disciple of Christ and was baptized by Rev. John Purefoy. Her subsequent life attested that she was a true servant of the Redeemer. She died surrounded by her affectionate husband and loving children, who ministered to her every want. She was the mother of Sisters J. L. Martin and T. A. Jones and Bro. K. W. Weathers, Jr., of Raleigh, Sister W. A. Sutton of Durham and Mr. Columbus Weathers of Georgia. The deceased was a member of the First Baptist church of Raleigh, from which the funeral took place on Friday, the 29th, and was conducted by Rev. Drs. J. W. Carter and T. E. Skinner. A.

If you feel weak and all worn out take BROWN'S IRON BITTERS

KEATON—Bro. Robard R. Keaton died January 11th, 1892, aged forty-eight years and eleven months. He professed faith in Christ thirty years ago. He joined Woodville church by letter three years ago, and served as deacon faithfully up to the last, so far as he was able. His health has been very bad for more than a year. For eight months he was confined to his room, but patiently endured his sufferings. Often looking up in the face of a christian wife, and as the tear of gratitude ran down his face he would say, "All things work together for good to them that love God," &c. He loved to talk with his brethren about Jesus, his love, mercy and goodness to him and to the world. All who knew him, so far as I know, spoke well of him as a citizen or as a devout christian. He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn their loss, also two sisters and one brother.

Bro. Keaton was a devoted husband and father. His home was truly a christian's home, one of prayer. The writer has spent many happy nights with him and the family. The Bible, praise and prayer occupied the most of the time. He will not be missed only in his home, but in his church. His humble prayers will be heard no more in church, but thank God his influence will live while time lasts. God bless Sister Keaton and the dear orphans, and at last may they all be able to enter in through the gate and join with the redeemed to part no more.

A FRIEND.

OLIVE—Mrs. Martha Olive died at Holly Springs, N. C., January 25th, 1892, in her seventy-third year. She had been sick for months at the home of her son-in-law, G. B. Alford. A mother's love and sacrifices for her children challenges the admiration of all. 'Tis nearest like a Saviour's love. Scarcely less beautiful is a daughter's love, manifested to an old, afflicted parent. Such was the devotion of Sister Alford for many weeks and months. Sister Olive had been a member of Olive's Chapel church over fifty years. Her funeral was preached by Revs. W. S. Olive and J. M. White at Apex, where she lies by the side of her honored husband, Rev. Johnson Olive. He had been at rest just exactly seven years. She had a quiet, retiring nature. Nor would she impress a stranger with her excellencies, yet she was the embodiment of many virtues—patient under trials, resigned in affliction, and faithful in every relation. In her earlier life she had had deep affliction in two children, one of whom was a sufferer for years before his death. Then came "that dark period" to her husband—a strange unhinging of his whole being, mental and moral. This was the fire that developed the golden character of the wife.

A preacher's wife needs to be a superior woman, to shoulder the responsibilities of a family in the absence of the husband.

A "God bless you" was the parting salutation of her heart as he left home for his churches, and a cheery smile greeted his return. Happy preacher with such a wife. Her four living children and many grandchildren will never forget the beautiful lesson of her life. "She is not dead, but sleepeth."

W.

BRIGGS—Died on 17th of January, 1892, in the town of Wilson, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Briggs, "Charlie," the cherished object of tenderest affection and unwearying solicitude. Death is ever sad, but to some are given sacred reflections which take away much of its bitterness, and weave a bow of blessed promise in the falling tears. Charlie was loved with infinite tenderness by his christian parents and devoted brother, who left nothing for his comfort undone which affection could suggest or medical science attain. He was naturally precocious, and, until disease in early life threw its shadow upon the intellect, gave promise of a brilliant future. He was instinctively a gentleman, and his nature was so attuned to the finer proprieties of life that the slightest departure from them would give him pain and sometime arouse indignation. But, better than this high and delicate sense of honor, which seemed innate, was his humble trust in God as his Father through Jesus Christ his Savior. He welcomed the messenger as a signal of relief from protracted and painful bodily affliction, sweetly entered into rest,

"Calm as to a night's repose,
Like flowers at set of sun."

The thread, broken on earth, has been woven into God's beautiful design, yet hidden from mortal sight; the heart stilled here has waked to glory up yonder.

While we are dying, life is on increase,
The sun is rising on sepulchral gloom.
Our death is nothing but our life begun;
The hour of birth is when God's child expires."

H. W. BATTLE.

RIDDICK—Mary H. Riddick died January 14th, 1892. She was born October 28th, 1819. The life of Sister Riddick was very remarkable in many respects. She was married to Willis D. Riddick while quite young, studied to make her husband happy and home pleasant. God gave to her seven children, which received careful training in that christian home until each of these were grown. He then removed five of these, one by one—the fifth one a few months ago. Many tears were shed, but not a murmur of complaint. Eight months ago, after living a married life for fifty years, her husband was removed from home to his reward. A few days before her death, a very old lady who had been in the family forty years, was carried out of the home to the grave. Patiently she endured it. For years she enjoyed but little health; but thank God, though feeble and weak, her faith wavered not. Owing to poor health she was deprived of church priviledges; but she said that she had one kind visitor that came to her home every week. That friend preached to her and kept her in sympathy with the church and the great Baptist host. Oftentimes when prostrate and lonely, this friend, the BIBLICAL RECORDER, would come freighted with news, and then her faith would be increased. But alas, the battle of life is over. Her work is complete. She died quietly and peacefully as she lived. She belonged to the church for more than forty years. We shall miss her. Two children and several grandchildren are left to mourn their loss. God bless and comfort them with many friends, is the prayer of the preacher.

TAYLOE—David E. Tayloe was born on Oct. 18th, 1826, and died on Jan. 23rd, 1892. His parents were Jonathan S. Tayloe and Prudence Collins Watson. The people of Bertie county have lost a valuable public servant, society a man, the home circle a pure and perfect husband, and the Baptist denomination a zealous member and a christian. Mr. Tayloe was prepared for college by the late Hon. P. H. Winston at the well-known "Oak Grove Academy," and his education was completed at Wake Forest College. He chose the law for his profession and was licensed, but ill health caused him to abandon that calling. He devoted himself to mercantile pursuits, and was a generous and fair dealer. The war swept away that support. For twenty years he has been interested in public school work, and in 1886 he was elected county superintendent. In 1869 he represented Bertie county in the State Senate. These are the main points in the life of a man devoted to his fellowman and consecrated to his God. Mr. Tayloe was a man of large information and the best posted man in our county in the history and its people. Mr. Tayloe was a fit representative of his well-known ancestry. Jonathan S. Tayloe was the best-known Baptist in eastern Carolina for many years, and his mother was sister of Rev. Wm. Hill Jordan, of Mrs. L. S. Webb and Mrs Wilder Bird, the mother of Mrs. P. H. Winston. Her brother, Mr. Robert C. Watson, was a well-known merchant and politician in the county. Mr. Tayloe's maternal ancestral connection is of still more interest to his denomination. His mother was a niece of, and named after, Prudence Burkitt, wife of Lemuel Burkitt, the early pioneer of the Baptist faith in this county.

As a public officer, David E. Tayloe was conservative, conscientious and painstaking. He bore about him the knightly courtesy and manners of the old school. He was for many years an earnest and devoted member of Cashie Baptist church and was repeatedly honored by it in being made delegate to the Association and in other important work.

The crowning glory of his character was the perfect life he led in his family. At an early age he married Miss Elizabeth Outlaw, daughter of Dr. Joseph Outlaw and granddaughter of Gov. David Stone. Forty years of the sweetest domestic felicity and conjugal joy attested the wisdom of his choice.

He died at peace with the world, and Oh! what is more precious still, at perfect peace with the blessed Redeemer. He feared not death except its removing him from the tender care of relatives and wife. The dark valley of its shadow was brightened by a perfect faith and service of the Master. He daily sought consolation and comfort in God's word; he had long trusted in it to furnish him a safe passage to the life immortal, and with faith he gently awaited the summons. It came at midnight. He entered upon a new day in Paradise. His soul is at rest.

The lamented Henry W. Grady, said of GERMETUER—"I believe it to be the Ultima Thule of Medicines."

We could fill this paper with names of people who have been cured of diseases by the use of KING'S ROYAL GERMETUER, but consider the above sufficient.

We are having with us, and all over the country, the dreadful scourge LaGrippe. Hundreds are being cured right here at our doors in a few hours by taking two teaspoonfuls of Germetuer in one-half glass hot water every hour for six or eight hours. It is as pleasant to take as a glass of lemonade. For sale at $1 per bottle by all druggists. Manufactured by KING'S ROYAL GERMETUER CO., Atlanta, Ga.

NOTICE.

We wish to state, in connection, that we have noticed an advertisement to the effect that a certain piano received the highest award at the Southern Exposition. This piano, so advertised, was not even on exhibit, and only one make was represented, which was not entered for the premium. Also, there were only two makes of organs exhibited, and the only one entered took the diploma. Our Pianos have taken the Highest Awards at every North Carolina State Fair for the last five years, and in 1890 it led two other makes. We did not even exhibit at the "Southern Exposition."

True worth is in being, not seeing,—
  In doing each day that goes by
Some little good—not in the dreaming
  Of great things to do by and by.
For whatever men say in blindness,
  And spite of the fancies of youth,
There's nothing so kingly as kindness,
  And nothing so royal as truth.

We get back our mete as we measure—
  We cannot do wrong and feel right,
Nor can we give pain and gain pleasure,
  For justice avenges each slight.
The air for the wing of the sparrow,
  The bush for robin and wren,
But always the path that is narrow
  And straight, for the children of men

'Tis not in the pages of story
  The heart of its ills to beguile,
Though he who makes courtship to glory
  Gives all that he hath for her smile.
For when from her heights he has won her,
  Alas! it is only to prove
That nothing's so sacred as honor,
  And nothing so loyal as love!

We cannot make bargains for blisses,
  Nor catch them like fish in nets;
And sometimes the thing that life misses Helps more than the thing which it gets.
For good lieth not in pursuing,
  Nor gaining of great nor of small,
But just in the doing and doing
  As we would be done by, is all.

Through envy, through malice, through hating,
  Against the world early and late,
No jot of our courage abating—
  Our part is to work and to wait
And slight is the sting of his trouble
  Whose winnings are less than his worth;
For he who is honest is noble,
  Whatever his fortunes or birth.

The Art of Walking.

IT CAN BE LEARNED BY CAREFUL STUDY AND PRACTICE.

Something that is very much neglected nowadays among young women is the art of walking well. Most people reach their desired destination at the cost of a great deal of scrambling, of jerking shoulders, of angular elbows working like the vans of a windmill, of arms laboring like oars, swinging hips, head nodding as a cow does as she walks, the gown flung up behind at every movement of the heels, the knees bent, and feet lifted with the stiffness of a jumping-jack pulled by a string; and, provided they reach the point aimed for, a goodly proportion of their number think no more about it. Others, again, walk with a flexibility (that is to say, the want of it) of a peripatetic ramrod, the head, the back, the legs, the feet all moving together with a simultaneous and unjointed precision that gives them the air of automata playing at life, and the imperturable restraint no more like the dignity or composure desired than an angle is like the line of beauty.

There are others still who walk with a mince and a wriggle which are painful to see, which make one think of a hitching cankerworm, and welcome heartily the sight of the no less reprehensible Amazon who stalks onward without measuring her steps, hit or miss, so that she gets over the ground, or the loose jointed individual who rattles along as if every bone in her body were hung on a wire, like those of a skeleton in the physician's closet. There, too, is the tripping young thing at whose figure you never glance without thinking of the topical song, "One, Two, Three, Balance Like Me," and among all others in the great procession there are those also who walk with such pains and effort—as if the proper work and function of each muscle and member were to be remembered first—that you half fancy they may have had the same lesson at the feet of the dancing man that he gave good Peter in the "Bad Ballads:"

"Come, walk like this," the dancer said;
"Stick out your toes, stick in your head:
Stalk on with quick, galvanic tread,
  Your fingers thus extend—
The attitude's considered quaint."

There are very few who walk with the easy, equable grace that would seem to proceed from an easy and equable mind, neither hurrying impetuously and fitfully and with pronounced exertion and evident eager desire to reach some point, or with the effort to condone delay, nor dawdling along as if they had not an object in mind and nothing were of any consequence.

Decent mental reserves, it is thus to be noted, can be maintained almost as much in the gait as in the conversation; and it is to be doubted if we have the right to obtrude our business and worries and ennuis upon public observation, as we do by any other than a calm and even motion, whether the motion be swift or slow. Of course one may walk as rapidly as necessary, or as loiteringly as inclination prompts, but equally, of course, without the personal betrayal of the impatient nervous motion of haste or the aimless one of irresolution.—Harper's Bazar.

Add to Your Vocabulary.

A certain father constantly told his daughters, "Girls, get new words into your vocabularies!" It was plain his admonition was heeded. Seldom were girls met whose language was as varied and picturesque as theirs. They were never at a loss to express exactly what they intended. They used different phrases to describe different feelings and sensations, and the proper one appeared where it was needed. After talking to the average girl, to whom everything is "awfully sweet" or "simply dreadful," and whose terms for joy or grief, assent or denial, can be confidently predicted, it was a delight as well as a relief to listen to these bright young people, whose conversation suggested what might be accomplished with a little effort.

[illegible] language, made up as it is of [illegible] derived from the principal languages of the world, holds immense possibilities for the student. Those able to speak or write it easily, who have a ready command of a correct phraseology, possess a power quickly recognized and strongly felt. And it is a power which a sufficient amount of study can give to those willing to take the trouble to acquire it.

Every one may not be allowed to write freely and with the most agreeable effect to the reader, although, with the requisite amount of pains, more could be done in this direction than most people suppose. But it is at least possible for young people—and some older people—to "get a few new words into their vocabularies." A book of synonyms is an easily accessible help. It could teach a few adjectives besides those in every-day use, which are frequently worn threadbare. Indeed, some of these stock phrases have become meaningless.—Harper's Bazar.

The Perfect Business Man.

Some eminent writer penned the following. We have had it among our scraps a long time, but can not now name the author:

"A sacred regard to the principle of justice forms the basis of every transaction, and regulates the conduct of the upright business-man. He is strict in keeping his engagements; does nothing carelessly or in a hurry; employs nobody to do what he can easily do himself; leaves nothing undone that ought to be done, and which circumstancies permits him to do; keeps his designs and business from the view of others, yet he is candid with all; prompt and decisive with his customers, and does not overtrade his capital; perfers short credit to long ones, and cash to credit at all times, either in buying or selling, and small profits in credit cases with little risk, to the chance of better gains with more hazard. He is clear and explicit in all his bargains; leaves nothing of consequence to memory which he can and ought to commit to writing; keeps copies of all his important letters which he sends away, and has every letter, invoice, etc., belonging to his business, titled, classes and put away; never suffers his desk to be confused by many papers lying upon it; keeps everything in its proper place; is always at the head of his business, well knowing that if he leaves it it will leave him; holds it as a maxim that he whose credit is suspected is not to be trusted; is constantly examining his books, and sees through all his affairs as far as care and attention will enable him; balances regularly at stated times, and then takes out and transmits all his accounts current to his customers at home and abroad; avoids as much as possible all sorts of accommodations in money matters, and lawsuits where there is the least hazard. He is economical in his expenditures, always living within his income; keeps a memorandum book in his pocket in which he notes every particular relative to appointments, addresses, and petty cash matters; is cautious how he becomes security for any person; and generous when urged by motives of humanity."

"Somebody Pays."

A druggist in one of our large cities said lately, "If I am prompt and careful in my business, I owe it to a lesson which I learned when I was an errand boy in the house of which I am now master. I was sent one day to deliver a vial of medicine just at noon, but being hungry stopped to eat my luncheon. The patient, for lack of the medicine, sank rapidly, and for some days was thought to be dying.

"I felt myself his murderer. The agony of that long suspense made a man of me. I learned then that for every one of our acts of carelessness or misdoing, however petty, some one pays in suffering. The law is the more terrible to me because it is not always the misdoer himself who suffers."

The law is usually ignored by young people. The act of carelessness or selfishness is so trifling what harm can it do? No harm, apparently, to the actor, who goes happily on his way; but somebody pays. A young girl, to make conversation, thoughtlessly repeats a bit of gossip which she forgets the next moment; but long afterward the woman whom she has maligned finds her good name tainted by the poisonous whisper.

A lad accustomed to take wine, persuades a chance comrade to drink with him, partly out of good-humored wish to be hospitable, partly, it may be, out of contempt for "fanatical reformers." He goes on his way, and never knows that his chance guest, having inherited the disease of alcoholism, continues to drink, and becomes a hopeless victim.

Our grandfathers expressed this truth in a way of their own:

For the lack of a nail the shoe was lost;
For the lack of the shoe the rider was lost;
For the lack of the rider the message was lost;
For the lack of the message the battle was lost.

But though we do not see it, we do well to remember that it is there; and to remind ourselves at the beginning of every day, that each careless act, each unkind word in it, will be paid for, not by us, perhaps, but in the want or plan of some one.—Youth's Companion.

Whatever has been the past year, or day, or hour, the future is before you, as unsullied and unstained as the pure untrodden snow. What comfort is the thought! Therefore, take courage.—Young People's Union.

Kindness has converted more sinners than either zeal, eloquence or learning.—F. W. Faber.

Mr. G. W. Fowler, Washington, D. C., tells of a case of croup. A little visitor was attacked, and in spite of all remedies it seemed that he would die before his eyes. Within ten minutes after the application of the Electropoise he was fast asleep.

The Electropoise is an Instrument for the Cure of Disease Without Medicine.

BASED on new theories of the cause and cure of disease, it deals with the electrical and magnetic conditions of the body and the gases surrounding it in the atmosphere, controlling these conditions at will. It is not electricity. DISEASE is simply impaired vitality. The Electropoise constantly adds to the vitality and only assists nature, in nature's way, to throw off the trouble.

Sketches of Pioneer Baptist Preachers in North Carolina.

BY JOHN W. MOORE, STATE HISTORIAN.

MEMOIR V—REV. LEMUEL BURKITT.

CHAPTER FOUR.

The war of the Revolution was a great interruption and obstacle to many others of the godly laborers in the Lord's vineyard besides Elder Lemuel Burkitt. So direful grew the struggle in parts of North Carolina that even the pitiless soul of Col. Banastre Tarleton grew sick of such butchery as marked the forays of David Fannin, and declared in his memoirs of the period, that another year, such as 1781, would depopulate the State. While the Albemarle region was almost wholly exempt from such evils, still British outrages at Suffolk in Virginia were so close at hand that the alarm that was occasioned led to the suspension of the sessions of the Kehukee Association for several years. Many church-members of that fold were either in the Continental army, or they were enrolled under the standard of Gen. Gregory. It was during these stormy years of blood and confusion that a great bond of love and confidence was formed between Mr. Burkitt and Godwin Cotton. So close was this tie, the great preacher bought a farm alongside that of his friend and brother in the Lord. They were nearly the same age, and to both the cause of the Baptist people was paramount to all other human affairs. Not that either felt for a moment in any way indifferent to the freedom of America. On the contrary, their brightest hopes for the emancipation of their faith were bound up in the success of the revolted Colonies. With the overthrow of King George's control in America, they had much reason to believe there would come at the same time the downfall of the Church Establishments all over the Republic. Gen. Washington gave noble testimony to the united and zealous support given him in his seven years of perilous combat, and as the first President of the United States certified to the world how they had been alike strenuous as soldiers in the field and in yielding loyal and unquestioned fealty to the revolutionary officials in civil affairs.

When British violence and brutality toward the people of Suffolk and its vicinity had with other reasons resulted in the suspension of the sessions of the Kehukee Association, the heart of Mr. Burkitt was widowed of many of its chiefest joys. He not only pined for the presence of so many to whom his soul was knitted. The valiant soldiers of the Lord, who were still waging a dubious conflict for emancipation in Virginia, as well against the ecclesiastical tyrants at home as the King beyond the seas, no longer met in annual conclave to concert measures with their Carolina allies. All his many plans for missionary concert of action among the preachers and the churches were in complete abeyance. To that reverend father in the Lord, Elder McGlamre as the Moderator, and to Mr. Burkitt as the Clerk, the Kehukee Association had committed authority to call another meeting whenever they should think such action prudent and proper. For some reason now unaccountable in its strangeness, the chapel of St. John in Hertford county was first selected as the place where the session should be held in October, 1782. Capt. Arthur Cotton, the father of Mr. Burkitt's peculiar friend, as one of the church wardens of old St. John's, had given his consent to the use of the Episcopal chapel, but just before the arrival of the delegations, Col. Robert Sumner, the other warden, made such violent objection to what he said would be a profanation of the ancient fane, Capt. Cotton invited the Baptist people to his own spacious brick residence. There under the shade of wide-spreading mulberry trees, arrangements had been made for the comfort of the delegates and visitors. The village of St. John's and the many farm-houses of Aboskie Ridge gave ample entertainment to all the many good people who gathered there to rejoice over the renewal of old Kehukee's power and usefulness.

Just a year had gone by since along with all true Americans the Baptist people of the Kehukee churches first heard the glad tidings of Lord Cornwallis' overthrow at Yorktown. The ablest and most effective of all the British commanders had, after a noble career of victory, at last came to such entire defeat that the seven years of war were virtually ended. We can not in our day appreciate the feelings that actuated our forefathers on that occasion. In our plenitude of power and safety from all apprehensions of invasion from foreign nations, we fail to remember how feeble in comparison were the thin settlements strung along the Atlantic seaboard. With all the conjoined dangers of Indian and servile insurrection, added to the bloody work of the British soldiers and Tories, the wonder is that men could be found brave enough to risk such an aggregation of perils. But the men who thus dared so much to be free, were not to be balked in the line of duty by any suggestion of evil to come. They had an unfaltering trust in the God of battles. They felt assured of that divine protection promised to all who, in the direst grief and danger, put their trust in the Lord. Had they been modern agnostics with their sneers and doubts, they would have prated about the maxims which tell us that God is neutral in such human complications, and that the sole arbitors of every conflict at arms are the heavier battalions and larger purse of those who may be so fortunate as find themselves possessed of such advantages.

The war had largely circumscribed, during its pendency, the area of Mr. Burkitt's activity as a missionary. With the return of peace, he put on a double portion of that wonderful activity that was so largely characteristic of the man in every portion of his career. Like his noble compeer in grace, Elder Silas Mercer of Halifax county, he was no longer to be circumscribed by State lines. No pent up Utica should longer confine his powers. Strange peoples and unknown lands were to be now visited and thrilled by his eloquent appeals. This same distinguished Baptist divine, the Rev. Silas Mercer, was present at the Association of 1782. He was one of the foremost preachers ever born in North Carolina, and the great crowds gathered beneath the spreading trees at Mulberry Grove were enraptured with his splendid discourse on Sunday.

Another of the foremost American Baptist preachers was seen and heard on the same occasion in the person of Elder Abraham Marshall of Georgia. He was the son of that Rev. Daniel Marshall whose life and services were commemorated in the preceding memoir. With broader culture and a more finished elocution, Mr. Marshall was even more powerful in the pulpit than his honored father in his palmiest days. But he or some one else brought great loss to North Carolina by inducing Mr. Mercer to leave our limits and make Georgia his future home.

With the return of peace to the American people, Mr. Burkitt was further cheered by the continued applications of the different revolted churches of old Kehukee, which had gone off on a tangent at the Falls of Tar river in 1775. Soon the vast christian brotherhood had with hooked shields again formed their phalanx of old. But the body got to be so huge and unwieldy that in 1790 the Virginia churches withdrew and formed the Portsmouth Association. A year or two later the churches around Newbern followed this example in the formation of the Neuse Association. These movements curtailed the amount of Mr. Burkitt's labors as Clerk of the Kehukee Association, but the favor of his brethren soon more than restored the sum of his labors by making him the historian of the great Association he so much loved. We have only to read the chronicle he was thus induced to prepare and compare it with the rapid and jejune continuation by other hands, to see how remarkable a man he must have been. Confined by the directions of the committee who had the proposed history in charge to a mere skeleton of a narrative, he yet managed to store it with many incidents of movement and in his terse style was always abounding in pungent and pertinent observations. The little fragment, meagre as it is in size and detail, is still the only source from which we can recall the Baptist movements in eastern Virginia and North Carolina for the period embraced in its pages. Thus as leading preacher and man of affairs in the Kehukee Association, besides his great role as reformer, Mr. Burkitt had bargained out into still another great department of usefulness. It was thrice fortunate for his own fame and memory that he thus left his imperishable record; for great as he was without this book, we should have but a mutilated torso, instead of the full statue of the man. No doubt many traditions would have handed down to after generations dim glimpses of his power and usefulness, but at best these would have been vague and shadowy.

But Mr. Burkitt had great sorrow along with many of his brethren that the late war had so completely steeled the hearts of the people to any religious influences. It was all in vain that the most moving discourses were delivered in the hope of a revival of religion. It seemed, on the contrary, that French skepticism and atheism were poisoning and blighting the hopes of heaven over a large part of the new Federal Union. France had given such noble and timely aid to the suffering Colonies in their late struggle that great love and gratitude was felt by all the American people for their late gallant allies in the bloody struggle. This sentiment, so natural and honorable in itself, was used by French emissaries of the infidel philosophers to debauch the minds and souls of the trusting American people. Alas! the task seemed but too easy when in place of the old trust in God doubt and blasphemy were heard all over the land in the little debating clubs which were organized to spread abroad this foreign contagion. It was all in vain for Lemuel Burkitt to expect God's blessing on a people thus perverted and apparently undone. When the Associations met, there was only a meagre list of additions to the churches to be reported. He gives these reports for a number of years, and so small were they that the loss by death and dismission must have more than countervailed such small gains. The future of America seemed overcast with a hopeless gloom. Men of God were on every side depressed and with only one hope left. They never forgot that "Christ is able to save to the uttermost part of the world," and they trusted, in good reason, their hope would yet be realized.

At last came tidings from Tennessee and Kentucky that the Lord had visited his people. A great pentecostal season of refreshment and conviction flowed in upon the new countries like some mighty tidal wave of God's grace. The careless and skeptical multitudes came flocking by thousands and myriads to find the Lord they had learned to doubt and neglect. The great spiritual revival of 1801 and 1802 is yet one of the wonders of our history as a nation. From dead apathy and distrust of all things heavenly and pure, the same communities awoke to newness of life. From the Atlantic sea coast to the wilderness beyond the Mississippi, the great tide of grace rolled on, and America was saved from the foul embraces of a creed which had already deluged France in blood and ruin.

The glad tidings from the West filled the soul of Mr. Burkitt with such joy that he mounted his horse and set out for the theatre of such glorious blessings. How, as he went on his way, he found the great gatherings of men and women seeking the way to life; and how, through both of the new States, he thrilled so many thousands with the magic of his eloquence and zeal, is yet a household tradition in many a family whose ancestors found peace in his preaching and prayers. He had long prayed for the coming of the Holy Spirit in all his power, and lo! here was what surpassed and dwarfed his loftiest dreams. Thus in a continuous round of abounding grace, Lemuel Burkitt lingered until, when duty called him home, he came back with a light in his face that had never been seen there before. He was like Moses when he descended from Sinai, the glory of the Lord had not yet ceased to illume his features.

Spurgeon at Rest.

Charles Haddon Spurgeon has passed away. The faithful preacher, the devoted pastor, the noble philanthropist, the beloved college president, and the voluminous author and writer has finished with earth and has entered into that Sabbath-rest that remains to the people of God.

Mr. Spurgeon was literally worn out by untold labors. He fell, but without any rust on his armor; buckler, breast plate, shield and sword burnished and gleaming, is the panoply which he left to the earth when he was wafted to the skies.

There were twenty-four departments of labor connected with Metropolitan Tabernacle, Mr. Spurgeon's great church in Newington, London. These labors in mission fields, Sunday schools, orphanages, &c., employed thousands of workers, and hundreds of thousands of dollars were expended annually. London throbbed with his influence reaching all classes, high and low. England, Scotland and Ireland know him personally, while all of the civilized nations, and some that are not, have read his sermons and books, which have brought thousands of souls to Christ.

We are almost led to say that the sum of all this great soul's labor for Christ would equal, if not surpass, that of many entire nations who are called christian. Counting the last thirty-six years, has not this one man equalled in influence for good, the labors with their results, of the millions of Baptists of the South? How do you account for these results of one man's life? Why couldn't you do so? Why couldn't I do so? Is the answer, Because we didn't try? Or, in other words, Because I did not want to do so?

The question has been often asked, What is the secret of Spurgeon's power? The answers have been as various as their numbers. He possessed great versatility of talent, or, in other words, he did well so many things. He perhaps had in him the gifts of twelve first-class intellects, enabling him in as many directions to play the master. He could not have discovered these gifts had he not tried. Do we try? He was not classically educated, and yet he trimmed the sails of sceptical authors and scholars, as only few critics could. His monthly periodical, The Sword and Trowel, fully attests this remark.

The secret of Paul's, and even of Christ's, success as preachers, we all know. It was consecration, energy, fire. We shall not miss it much if we say, it was Spurgeon's also.

In his inaugural address before his Pastor's College in 1881, he said to the young preachers: "It is dreadful work to listen to a sermon, and feel all the while as if you were sitting out in a snow-storm, or dwelling in a house of ice, clear but cold, orderly but killing. You have said to yourself, 'That was a well-divided and well-planned sermon, but I cannot make out what was the matter with it,' the secret being that there was the wood, but no fire to kindle it. Everything gives way before fire. Let the fire be kindled by the Holy Ghost and not by animal passion, the desire of honor, emulation of others, or the excitement of attending meetings. Burn, because you have been in solemn fellowship with the Lord our God. Recollect, also, that the fire which you and I need will consume us if we truly possess it. 'Spare yourself,' may be whispered by friends, but it will not be heeded when the fire is burning. We desire to be whole burnt offerings and complete sacrifices to God, and we dare not shun the altar. 'Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone, but if it die, it brings forth much fruit.' We can only produce life in others by the wear and tear of our own being. Fruit can only come of the seed by its spending and being spent even to self exhaustion. All men who are eminently useful are made to feel their weakness in a supreme degree. When God visits us with soul-saving power, it is as though devouring flames come forth from heaven, and made its abode in our bosoms; and where this is the case, there may well be a melting away of all strength. Yet, let it be so; we humbly invite the sacred burnings. We have a choice between these two, to be eaten up by our corruptions, or by the zeal of God's house. He that saveth his life loseth it; but he that loseth his life for Christ's sake shall find it unto life eternal."

We have selected this extract from Mr. Spurgeon's inaugural address, to prove our remark that he wore himself out, for he practiced what he preached.

We were in London in 1864 and heard him once every Sunday, besides many delightful interviews which it was our privilege to enjoy. At that time it was published that he preached regularly eleven times a week, and not less than twenty thousand people heard him weekly.

We felt as easy in his presence as we could in that of Dr. John Mitchell or any other brother in North Carolina. He would ply me with questions, and, Yankee like, we returned the compliment. On one occasion, we asked, "Brother Spurgeon, aren't you doing too much work? Will you not cut short your usefulness by over taxing your constitution?" His answer readily came, "My constitution and my work all belong to the Lord. I'll do the work with his help, and he must take care of the constitution." He did not care to live long, or to be known as great, but to do the work of the Lord while it is day, because the night cometh when no man can work. He was of powerful build, a very strong man physically, and he endured wonderfully when we consider his labors and their variety. As Demosthenes said, (Not action) "Energy is the first thing in oratory, and the second thing is energy, and the third thing is energy," and so Spurgeon said, "I am sure that as a matter of fact, energy is the main thing in the human side of preaching." Not action, running from one side of the platform, shaking your fist, and saying nothing, but soul energy. "Like the priests at the altar," said he, "we can do nothing without fire." "Brethren, speak, because you believe the gospel of Jesus; speak, because you feel its power; speak under the influence of the truth which you are delivering; speak with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, and the result will not be doubtful."

The correspondent of the Washington Post must be corrected in some of his animadversions regarding Mr. Spurgeon. After saying many good and true things, comes this: "Only word about his eccentricities. On one occasion he gave out as his text, 'Its d——d hot,' and then proceeded to say that this was the remark he heard a young man say, on entering his chapel, and thereupon he preached a sermon on blasphemy."

Now, in the first place, there is no such text; and, secondly, the same thing was attributed to Mr. Beecher in 1851, while this writer was a student in the Seminary in New York City. Mr. Spurgeon never said such a thing.

But much more serious is the statement of this same London correspondent in these words: "Spurgeon was more ridiculed and abused during his life-time than most preachers are. During the early part of his career, his sermons on regeneration by baptism excited a world of opposition and censure, and he was for many months attacked all along the line of established orthodoxy, hundreds of papers and pamphlets devoting themselves to the exposition of the current theological quack, as they were fond of calling him."

Now, we may be mistaken, but we submit to the candid and intelligent reader that this statement is calculated to mislead and cause one to think that Mr. Spurgeon was trying to prove the Scriptural truth of regeneration by baptism, especially when in the same article the London correspondent deliberately says: "He believed that unless you are baptized you will be damned." "There is to be no mitigation of punishment."

The Post must have very cheap and unreliable men to write for its columns, since every intelligent person must know that the Baptist churches of the world do not believe that "unless you are baptized you will be damned," but, on the contrary, they hold and preach that baptism comes after conversion, and that only regenerate persons, or those already saved by repentance and faith in Christ, are authorized by the Scriptures to be baptized. Salvation by faith must precede the ordinance, and therefore the ordinance cannot be saving, because the subject of baptism must be regarded as saved by faith in Christ before the subject can be accepted by the church for baptism. This is a great slander on Mr. Spurgeon. We wish to call special attention to this misrepresentation since the State Chronicle, Feb. 2nd, and News and Observer, Feb. 3rd, copies the article of the London correspondent of the Washington Post, and thus publishes in North Carolina what the ill informed and careless correspondent of London chooses to scribble. We were in London when Mr. Spurgeon preached and published his scathing sermon against Baptismal Regeneration, as taught by the Episcopal church of England, or as it called there, the established church. This sermon of Mr. Spurgeon was answered by over one thousand of the pulpits of the establishment, and this explains the correspondent's statement with regard to the censure and opposition by the clergy-ministers of the establishment—"he was for months attacked all along the line of established (italics ours) orthodoxy."

One more correction. The London correspondent has in his head lines "The building of the Tabernacle and his secession from the Baptists." Mr. Spurgeon lived and died a Baptist. He did not secede from the Baptists. "In October, 1887," says the correspondent, "Spurgeon withdrew from the Baptist Union, giving as his reason, 'to pursue union at the expense of the truth is treason to Jesus; to tamper with his doctrine is to become traitors to him. We have before us the wretched spectacle of professedly orthodox christians publicly avowing union with those who deny the faith and deny the personality of the Holy Ghost.'"

The Baptist Union is not an ecclesiastical body. It is a missionary society, like the Southern Baptist Convention. What would be thought of us if the Southern Baptist Convention should receive delegates from churches who rejected the divinity of Christ or denied the personality of the Holy Ghost? The world and the Established Churches of State in Europe know nothing of the separate, independent and sovereign constitution of the original gospel churches, notwithstanding their own Archbishop Whately's views to the contrary. The Metropolitan Tabernacle church, of which Mr. Spurgeon was pastor, is as much a true gospel church, without any representative connection with the Baptist Union, as if it was represented in that Union. The correspondent is not to be blamed perhaps for not understanding our Baptist church polity, even though it be the New Testament polity.

We rejoice in the fact that Mr. Spurgeon did not leave the world without conveying to us in express form his belief or creed of his church and of himself, which the correspondent was thoughtful enough to embody in his sensational account of this unequalled man, who really is cosmopolitan and belongs to all nationalities, creeds and centuries, as one of the Almighty's greatest gifts to the church of his Son. We will reproduce it. Mr. Spurgeon, not more than six months ago, in conjunction with a large number of ministers, issued the following confession of faith:

"We the undersigned, banded together in fraternal union, observing with growing pain and sorrow, the loosening hold of many upon the truths of Revelation, are constrained to avow our firmest belief in the verbal inspiration of all holy Scriptures as originally given.

"To us, the Bible does not merely contain the word of God, but is the word of God. From beginning to end we accept it, and continue to preach it.

"To us, the Old Testament is no less inspired than the New. The book is an organic whole. Reverence for the New Testament, accompanied by scepticism as to the Old Testament, appears to us as absurd. The book is an organic whole. The two must stand or fall together.

"We accept Christ's own verdict concerning 'Moses and all the prophets' in preference to any of the supposed discoveries of so-called higher criticism. We hold and maintain the truths generally known as 'the doctrines of grace.' The electing love of God the Father, the propitiatory and substitutionary sacrifices of his Son Jesus Christ, regeneration by the Holy Ghost, the imputation of Christ's righteousness, the justification of the sinner (once for all) by faith, his walk in newness of life and growth in grace by the active indwelling of the Holy Ghost, and the priestly intercession of the Lord Jesus, as also the hopeless perdition of all who reject the Saviour according to the word of the Lord in Matt. 25:46, 'These shall go away into eternal punishment.' These are, in our judgment, revealed and fundamental truths. Our hope is the personal premillenial return of the Lord Jesus in glory."

This is no mean creed. It was intended, doubtless, to meet the intimations of many, of Baptist and Pedobaptist views, which are now being aired in the ecclesiastical synods and other forms of ecclesiastical authority. One thing the Baptist brotherhood of the world may count on as true, that our people, the sect everywhere spoken against, intend to believe, teach and defend these views to the last, and this is what Mr. Spurgeon did, from the first to the last, insist upon, and we also insist upon.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1892.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

BRO. DUNCAN MCNEILL, of Richmond county, will represent the BIBLICAL RECORDER in the counties of Richmond, Anson, Montgomery, Robeson, Columbus, Brunswick and Bladen.

ONCE FOR ALL.

Our friends up North are a very progressive people. Nearly all the new isms of the day originate up North, or originating in Europe, they first strike this country North, and if popular, are propagated through other sections. Some good things have originated South; but upon the whole, our people are considered rather plodding, and entirely too conservative and non-progressive. It has been quite the thing for contributors to popular magazines, newspapers, &c., to so write of the South as to produce the impression that the bulk of our people are yet in ignorance and far behind the age. The Century Magazine a few years since regaled its readers with quite an attractive series of "war papers," that were plentifully interspersed with papers headed "Recollections of a Private," in which the writer, when he attempted to quote the words of the average Southern soldier, almost invariably represented him as using such expressions as "we'uns and you'uns." And we find this popular disposition to misrepresent our Southern people, and to claim that they are ignorant, quite noticeable in the current literature of the day.

One result of all this is, that many of our friends North are clearly persuaded that they "have a mission" South, and they are coming down to enlighten us. Well, we are glad to have any and all come who will join us in developing the wonderful resources in our sunny land. We are glad to have our social and religious life quickened by the presence and fervor of people who are the advocates of true piety, and who favor progress in the right direction. But now and then some religious craze originates North, or first strikes our shores in the North, which we of the South are slow to accept, and at times positively reject. Among these is the determined effort to bring women to the front as public lecturers, or speakers before mixed assemblies, or as ordained preachers of the gospel.

Once for all, let it be known everywhere that our people South, as a rule, are unalterably opposed to this thing. And especially is this true among the christian people of the South. This is a great day for "societies," and if they keep on multiplying we shall need a new, or larger alphabet, to supply the demand for initials. Now let us be understood. Some modern societies formed in, or in co-operation with our churches, are doing good. The object of others is good, but they are being handicapped by having local beliefs or customs that are distasteful to other sections of country foisted upon them. For instance, take the Baptist Young Peoples' Union of America, the initials of which are B. Y. P. U. A. The original design of this organization was perhaps a good one. We rather like the idea of the young people of our churches having some kind of organization, entirely under the control of the churches, however, through which they may develop their zeal and draw out their benevolence. Besides, such organizations are well calculated to keep them from entangling alliances with interdenominational organizations which usually accomplish little, except to wean our young people from active work for the churches with which they are connected. The B. Y. P. U. A. movement is being pushed principally by our brethren North, but the organization is "taking" in a good many places South. Some of our best pastors and churches are bidding it God-speed. No doubt these pastors and churches who have taken this position in regard to the movement have been favorably impressed toward it by some such reasons as those mentioned above, and hence acted on the strength of those reasons.

But in scanning the organ of this organization, "The Young Peoples' Union," from time to time, such notices as the following, in the last issue of that paper, (Jan. 28d, 1892,) can be found, viz: "The discussion was ably opened by Miss Nellie Burt of Rosedale, and Mr. J. N. Penrod of Argentine," &c., (see page 8, under head of Kansas City B. Y. P. U.) Let it be remembered that this was a public meeting of the B. Y. P. U. of Kansas City and wholly.

Again we say, if our friends North (and South too), who are pushing this movement so zealously, wish it to take with Southern workers and churches, and hence the young people of our churches, they must once for all [illegible] the tendency of the organization is [illegible] wives and daughters to the front as lecturers before, and preachers to, mixed assemblies. Do you answer us back with the silly taunt, "What are you going to do about it?" Well, permit us to say by the Lord's help we can, and we propose to do many things "about it," if you attempt to foist this organization upon our churches with the female annex. God knows that we honor and respect the noble women of the South and of our country at large. They are, under God, the light and comfort of our households. They are the tender messengers that watch by our bedsides and those of our children when affliction visits our homes. They are the ones that train the footsteps of the young in the paths of virtue; they are, in one sense, the hope of our country and of the world.

It is because we honor and respect our noble women that we break these religious lances in their defence. When we see woman in the sphere in which God has placed her, and for which he designed her, we behold her in the home circle and in the gentler walks of life as one clothed with such tenderness, beauty and gentleness as to prompt us to say from the depths of our heart that, as a help meet and human comforter, "she is God's best gift to man." But when we see her on the rostrum, addressing mixed assemblies on politics, or on even the good enterprises of the day, her attitude, her voice, her deportment, seem to transform her into something like the female communist of Paris as she stands shoe deep in mud behind the street barricade shrieking at the friends of law and order. Nor is the disagreeable impression made on the average Southerner much modified even when he sees woman on the public rostrum lecturing on such a good cause as that of temperance, or in the pulpit preaching the gospel. We bid our dear sisters God speed in their efforts to break down the curse of intemperance in America; but we are very decided in the opinion that they will greatly cripple the noble cause they so ardently love by holding public meetings, with mixed assemblies, and having set addresses by female lecturers. If they must have public meetings, by all means let the set speeches be made by men.

As to women preaching, our views, and those we try to represent, we suppose are well known. On this thing especially our people ar very determined. We do not propose to be persuaded, cajoled, or drawn by the force of public or private opinion, into adopting this unscriptural and foolish practice. Here and now the RECORDER would lift up a trumpet voice. We cannot afford to be silent on this living question. We have spoken once and again on this subject, but still it seems to grow somewhat in favor with Southern people, and at places, even with our Baptist brotherhood or sisterhood. Now, brethren, as one who honestly tries to shape, as best he can, the religious sentiment of those who call the RECORDER their State organ, we desire to offer here some advice. Let all of our people positively refuse the use of our churches to female preachers. If they cry "persecution," and resort to the public school-house or town hall, let them speak to empty benches, and go away with empty purses, and the craze will soon die for want of support. Let no encouragement whatever be given to such an unscriptural and dangerous innovation.

We are aware of the fact that these words may excite some adverse comment in some Southern communities, but just let us say in all kindness to our brethren that have come South, from any clime, if you wish to have influence with our people it would be best for you, if you are advocates of this modern craze, to be silent on that subject. We have a few pastors and laymen South, even in the Baptist churches, that favor this thing. Our first impulse, when we think of these brethren, is to say, "From womanly men, and from manly women, good Lord deliver us;" but we will not scold them, and hence only ask them to examine God's word, and if this thing is not condemned by it, we are ready to apologize for these words. We are willing to risk the whole argument on two passages from Paul's writings, viz: 1 Tim. 2: 8, "I will therefore that (the) men pray everywhere," &c., and 1 Cor. 14: 34, "Let your women keep silence in the churches." One passage teaches that women should not pray in public or mixed assemblies, and the other that they should not preach to such assemblies. If they do not teach these things, what do they teach?

We will add that we believe that some of our wise and good men and women have been unwittingly led to encourage this unscriptural movement. We do not deny that talented women, especially in the North, advocate it. We can only call your attention, then, dear brethren and sisters, to the words of the sturdy old apostle, who is everlastingly in the way of its advocates, "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."

"Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these, Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God. But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law."—Galatians 5: 19-23.

If the churches of Christ are unable to deal with the seventeen deadly sins above mentioned, there is need for seventeen outside, independent, religio political societies, instead of one, as we now have, to aid in the good work. Christ's last prayer for his disciples was not that God should take them out of the world, but that he should keep them from evil, or the evil one. See John 17: 15. This doubtless seemed strange to his followers, as by taking them out of the world they would have been at once delivered from all temptation and made at once supremely happy, and removed them at once from all trial and conflict. But with his disciples, as with him, the conflict must come before the victory, the cross before the crown. If the Captain of our Salvation must needs be made perfect through suffering, temptation and trial, so also must his followers. The removal of us from all temptation, or the removal of all temptation from us, would destroy all the virtue of resistance and remove all possibility of victory over the world, the flesh and the devil. Our duty is to overcome the world by withstanding its trials and temptations.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

HENDERSON, N. C.

My first work for 1892 was done in Henderson. One day was sufficient to renew all of the old subscribers, as well as to add some new names to the RECORDER list.

The Henderson church has thirty-nine more members than it had a year ago. These have been added through the instrumentality of the pastor alone, so far as other pastors were concerned. It is fortunate for a church to be able to rely on its own pastor to conduct its revival seasons. I found Bro. VanDeventer waiting for me at the depot, which is now only a short distance from his residence. Bro. VanDeventer has recently moved into an elegant house, and is enjoying just such a home as he and his splendid wife are worthy of, and such a one too as the Baptists of Henderson are delighted to see their pastor enjoy.

Some changes are being made in the business circles. The firm of Lassiter, Stainback & Co. has been dissolved by limitation, and a partnership has been formed by Bro. Lassiter, Hill and Bat Parham. These young men are the sons of sister M. Parham, and are steady, industrious, and energetic young men. Their activity, added to the good judgment and long business experience of Bro. Lassiter, is a guarantee to a successful and prosperous business.

The warehouses were full of tobacco. Bro. D. Y. Cooper told me his sales were never so large in any one season.

Profs. T. J. & W. D. Horner have resumed their school here for boys, and considering this is the beginning session, they have a fair school. The Horners are born teachers, and deserve the best of success. There is no reason why Henderson should not maintain a first-class school for boys.

My work over, I make my way to the Bertie Union. Thirty days ago I should not have gone by but the railroad is now completed to this point. So leaving Henderson between one and two o'clock, at 5:30 I shook hands with President Brewer and Prof. Foushee who met me at the depot at Murfreesboro. The railroad is there, and no doubt about it. I have never seen the people of any town more delighted at anything than the citizens of Murfreesboro are at the completion of this railroad. True, it will open up a new era of prosperity and convenience for the business of the town. It has especially infused new life and energy into the Chowan Female Institute. The girls seem to think they are much nearer home and their friends than they were before. This is substantially true, for in these days it is not so much a question of distance to a place as it is what are the facilities for reaching it. Now that Murfreesboro has railroad and telegraphic communications, many girls will in the future go there to college who never would have gone before these conveniences existed. Many of the real friends of the institution, and men of distinction, will be present to see and hear the exercises on public occasions who were never seen there before. The surprising thing about it all is, that these things were not done before. Now that this start has been made, may we not reasonably expect to see other needed changes and improvements in regard to the Institute soon follow? In some particulars the building needs to be changed, but especially does it need to be enlarged, so as to afford more ample accommodations to the different departments of the school. This is the property of the Baptists of the State, and as such we are all interested in its continued growth and best development for the education and training of Baptist girls. I expected to find that the hard times had caused a loss of pupils to the school this session, and was surprised, as well as delighted, when President Brewer told me he had as many pupils now as were present in the fall term. The day and two nights I spent at the Institute I fared like a prince, for I received not only the boundless hospitality of President and Mrs. Brewer, but also I spent a portion of my time in the pleasant homes of brethren Scarboro and Wood. These brethren seem to love only one thing better than they do each other, and that is the cause of the Master. The work they have done, and are still doing in this section, is not to be measured by human calculations.

From Murfreesboro, Prof. Foushee carried me to St. John's, twelve miles, to the Bertie Union. A Union Meeting here looks like an Association, except there is not altogether as elaborate preparations made for dispensing dinner. But we had a splendid time, and the excellent supper which awaited us at the home of Bro. C. W. Mitchell fully compensated for any inconvenience which we may have suffered during the day. The program was discussed in a manner highly creditable to the Union. Bro. B. B. Williams made one of the best efforts of his life.

A spirit of fraternal greeting and liberality pervaded the meeting from the beginning to the close.

Bro. T. T. Speight was constantly receiving congratulations upon having the degree of D. D., conferred upon him. This, however, did not seem to disturb Bro. Speight to any great extent; at least he discharged his part of the program in his usual pleasing style.

The church on Sunday was dedicated at eleven o'clock. Before the sermon, however, which was preached by Rev. C. W. Scarboro, the church debt was paid off in full. So now the church is free from embarrassment, and Bro. Green, the pastor, and the brethren who compose the new organization are happy, and hope to do good work in the years to come.

The brethren were very kind to me, and by me they sent the most substantial evidences of their appreciation of the BIBLICAL RECORDER.

J. C. C.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. W. M. Bostick of Troy, N. C., helps us by a club of subscribers from his field.

....Rev. E. W. Wooten writes us a sad note announcing the death of Dr. J. S. Devane of his section.

....Rev. J. K. Howell of Yanceyville called to see us on Wednesday, and handed us a list of subscribers.

....Rev. Dr. T. E. Skinner and Rev. Dr. J. J. Hall give our readers this week their views of the late C. H. Spurgeon.

....The Baptist State Sunday-school Convention will meet in the First church, Winston, N. C., on Thursday, April 14th.

....Rev. J. B. Boone of Raleigh attended the meeting of the Warren Union last week, and visited friends in Murfreesboro, N. C.

....The American Baptist Publication Society will at an early day publish a life of Mr. Spurgeon, by Rev. Dr. H. L. Wayland.

....Rev. W. W. Smith known as the Moody of the mountains of Virginia, will hold a series of meetings in Newport News, Virginia.

....Rev. T. M. Baldwin of Rise, N. C., has had a three weeks' trial of patience and strength with grippe and has come out victorious. We extend congratulations.

....Rev. Dr. W. B. Royall and Prof. W. L. Poteat of Wake Forest College called to see us on Saturday. All the sick on the College hill are better, and the prospects are cheering.

....Rev. J. W. Hundley of Luray, Va., has received a call to Martinsburg, Va., and will accept. Bro. Hundley made a good impression in North Carolina when pastor in Tarboro.

...."It is dangerous in some respects to tell it, but Dr. Hall is in many respects an evangelist of unusual ability as well as one of the foremost preachers in the State."—Watchman in the N. C. Baptist.

....Rev. W. T. Jones, pastor at Liberty, Siler, Ore Hill and Jonesboro, moved last week from Ore Hill to Jonesboro. As the brethren at the latter place had a parsonage they insisted that the pastor should be located with them.

....Rev. J. F. Love of Rocky Mount writes: "Bro. White left us Thursday morning. Of course he captured the town. There were something like seventy-five professions, and could he have remained another week, I believe there would have been twice that number. The interest was growing with every service. It was to our sorrow that duty took Bro. White from us so soon, but we are profoundly grateful for his coming. He is pre-eminently the revivalist of the Baptist ministry of the State. Said an intelligent and cultured lady, 'I had heard of Bro. White before he came, but the half had not been told me.' I have just read that Bro. Battle has been called to succeed Bro. White at Durham. The church could have made no wiser choice."

....Thanks to Rev. Dr. A. G. McManaway of Charlotte, editor of the North Carolina Baptist, for two subscribers, and for his kind offer of service in securing renewals of subscriptions.

....Dr. MacArthur says, in the Christian Inquirer: "The world never knows how great a Baptist minister is until he resigns his pastorate and intimates that he is about to leave the Baptist denomination."

....Mr. Spurgeon once remarked that he was very thankful the Lord had called him to be the pastor of a large church, because he felt that he had not talent enough to be the pastor of a little one. Wise man!

....The Board of Missions and Sunday-schools is to day (Monday, Feb. 8th,) due the missionaries for work ending Nov. 1st, 1891 $900 25. Then the first quarter on this year's work is ended. Who will help?—Durham, Cor. Sec.

....Rev. G. M. Webb removed from Shelby to Randleman, N. C., on Feb. 3d. Bro. Webb's correspondents will please note the change in his office. We congratulate the Baptists of all that section on securing the services of such a preacher and pastor.

....Mr. W. S. Pilcher, deacon of the Grove Avenue Baptist church of Richmond, Va., died last week. Bro. Pilcher was one of the best and most successful business men in Virginia, and was a zealous, active christian as well. He was brother to Rev. Dr. Pilcher of Petersburg, Va.

....Rev. J. T. Brasington of White Plains, S. C., has accepted the call to the pastorate of the church in Kershaw, S. C., and removed to that new and flourishing town. The Lord has greatly blessed Bro. Brasington in his work. He added over seventy by baptism to his former charge.

....Rev. H. A. Brown of Winston was in Reidsville on Sunday, January 24th, and preached two able sermons for the pastor, Rev. J. A. Howard, and aided in ordaining the four new deacons of the church. The Weekly of January 26th reproduces the morning sermon, and speaks in high praise of Bro. Brown as a preacher.

....Rev. H. W. Battle of Wilson, N. C., has received a hearty and unanimous call to the pastorate of the First Baptist church of Durham, N. C. Our Durham brethren have made a wise selection. Bro. Battle is one of our ablest and most ready preachers, and if he accepts we shall have to mourn with the church in Wilson, and rejoice with our brethren in Durham.

....Rev. A. Prevatt of Lumberton is now in his eighty fourth year, and has been in the ministry fifty-two years. He has read the RECORDER from the first number, and still has it read to him. Bro. Prevatt is now aged and nearly blind. He sends his love to all the brethren and churches in the Cape Fear, Cedar Creek and Robeson Associations, and bids them an affectionate farewell, as he expects soon to enter upon his eternal rest.

....The New York gamblers who own the Louisiana lottery have written a letter to the people of that State, stating that they will not accept a new charter if granted, &c. This is doubtless intended to lessen the zeal of the anti-lottery Democrats, and give the State to the McEnery crowd, who are fighting for the lottery and the $1,125,000 annual bribe. The anti-lottery people should stand to their guns and whip out the lottery and all its advocates.

....Rev. A. W. Price of Wadesboro writes: "My congregation has been very kind to me since I came to Wadesboro. Not long ago the ladies presented me a nice suit of clothes. A few nights ago the men, women and children broke in upon us all unexpectedly and pounded us severely. I do not write this by way of parading what I have secured, but simply as a public recognition of the great kindness of my people. Surely "the lines have fallen to me in pleasant places."

....Rev. J. A. Campbell, principal of Buie's Creek Academy, at Poe's, Harnett county, N. C., attended the Union of his section. He encloses a club of subscribers, and writes: "We had a good Union. Wish I could send you more subscribers for the RECORDER, but did the best I could. Times are very hard. School numbers 110 for spring session. Two new ones entered today. We are expecting to have a Sunday-school Convention at Hector's Creek in May. I am taking several other papers, both in and out of the State, but none of them can fill the place of your excellent editorials. The whole paper is good, but most I enjoy your columns. God bless you."

....And now they have formed the Christian Steward's League which requires every member to give a proportionate part of his income to benevolent and religious purposes. There was such an organization in the apostolic era, it has continued to the present day, and there is no need for any other—and the name of this ancient "league" is the Baptist church.—Central Baptist. Look out, Bro. Williams. The society runners will put you down as of "a covetous spirit." You must join all the hundreds of societies in and out of the church, and contribute to them more liberally than you do to your church and its missions, or you are utterly behind the times, if not an heathen.

....Bro. George W. Cockrane, a one-legged soldier, writes us a most cheering letter. He has read the RECORDER from childhood, and intends to read it as long as he lives. He says: "When I fail to renew, you may safely conclude that I am dead or too poor to pay for it. I have read it from childhood and expect to continue to read it as long as I live. I do not know how any Baptist can live without it, and still less do I understand why any Baptist should desire to injure it by endeavoring to build up rival papers. May it overcome all opposition and continue to be in the years to come as it has been in the past, the greatest power for the advancement of our denominational enterprises in the State."

....The Atlantic Methodist of Wilmington is a new venture in journalism. Rev. Dr. L. L. Nash, pastor of the Fifth Street Methodist church, starts the paper for the purpose of paying the debt on their new house of worship. Newspapers generally impoverish their editors and publishers. But this one is started in order to raise some $8,000 or $10,000 debt on a house. This is a most remarkable experiment, and if it succeeds, Dr. Nash should take out a patent on his invention.

....Bro. W. S. Grandy, father of Mrs. T. H. Briggs of this city, set out for Florida on Thursday last. He will visit Dr. Crawford and Mrs. E. M. Grandy of Ocala. Brother Grandy spent most of his life in Oxford, N. C., where he has a host of friends. For a number of years he was clerk and manager of the Sunday school Supply Store for the Sunday-school and Mission Board of the Baptist State Convention. We wish him a pleasant trip to Florida and a happy visit to his friends in Ocala.

....The Bertie Union met at St. John's Chapel on Friday last. Capt. Langley Tayloe was elected Moderator, and Mr. A. J. Cobb, Secretary. Rev. H. T. Williams preached the introductory sermon. A number of interesting topics were discussed. The indebtedness on the church at that place was paid, and the church was dedicated on Sunday free of debt. Rev. C. W. Scarboro preached the dedicatory sermon. The next meeting will be held at Margarettsville beginning on Friday before the fifth Sunday in May.—Murfreesboro Index, Feb. 4.

....Rev. J. T. Albritton of Mt. Olive writes: "I wish you would say for me in the RECORDER that sickness of myself and family kept me from the Union Meeting. We are somewhat better than we have been. I would say, also, that the reports of Associational Committees on Finance should always appear in the Minutes. Had the reports of the Finance Committee of the Atlantic Association been printed it would have shown that Mt. Calvary church paid $90 instead of $10 to State Missions, as an individual pledge of $10 was placed to their credit."

....Rev. M. A. Adams of Jonesboro, Tenn., is much pleased with his people. Jonesboro is a good place to live. The Baptists there are true and tried, and know how to deal with evils and isms, male and female, of this day of isms. Bro. Adams says: "You do not know how I appreciate the RECORDER now. It seems like a letter from home. I never knew its value until I became a stranger in a strange land. I miss North Carolina a great deal. In some things the Baptists of Tennessee are ahead of North Carolina, but on the whole we lead by far. Much success to you all. My heart is still with you."

...."The Examiner requests that the various religious bodies, through their representatives, use their best powers to influence the negroes of Louisiana to vote against the lottery. It asks every negro Baptist in the North who has a negro acquaintance in Louisiana to write him on the subject. This is an excellent suggestion for others as well." What will Rev. Dr. John William Jones say when Generals Early and Beauregard die? These two distinguished soldiers of the South are the backbone of the infamous Louisiana lottery, and have done more to give the lottery countenance and support in the South than all the rest of its aiders and abettors combined. They are its heavily-salaried figure heads.

....Rev. C. B. Justice of Rutherfordton, N. C., sends us an article written for the Statesville Christian Advocate by Mr. W. T. R. Bell, Jr., against lotteries, in which he quotes from a Shelby paper the following: "Our popular merchant J. D. B., had a free drawing of prizes on January 1st, 1892. It was a fair distribution of three prizes and was conducted by O. E. F., J. C. B., and Rev.———. Free ticket, No. 624 was held by W. H., who drew in gold $25. J. L. A., was the second lucky man, who drew 801 and gained $15 in gold. Ticket 75 secured for T. H. H., the third prize $10." We do not know any of the parties referred to, but do not hesitate to say that this whole thing was wrong and in violation of the laws of North Carolina. That preacher surely was ignorant of the law against lotteries, and acted his part thoughtlessly. No minister of the gospel can favor such demoralizing practices.

Wanted.

We have a complete file of the catalogues of Wake Forest College, bound in three volumes, from 1856–7 to the present time. We have also a copy of the catalogue for each of the following sessions: '48–9, '51–2, '54–5. We wish to secure, if possible, a full file of all the earlier catalogues of the College, and need all that were published before '48–9; also the catalogues for '49–50, '50–1, '52–3, '53–4, and '55–6.

Please look over your old pamphlets and see if you cannot find one or more of these missing documents, and, if you are successful in the search and are willing to give them to the College, send to my address.

CHAS. E. TAYLOR, Wake Forest, N. C.

South Yadkin Union.

This body convened in Salisbury, Jan. 30th and 31st, 1892. Rev. C. S. Cashwell preached the opening sermon. Several subjects were discussed.

"State Missions" was Rev. C. Durham's theme on Sunday morning, and at night he gave an account of his trip to Cuba.

Collection for State Missions, $42.82; collection for Havana house, $15.39.

Instead of a Union Meeting, the Sunday-school Association will be held at Mocksville on the fifth Sunday in May, 1892.

Personal Reminiscences of Rev. C. H Spurgeon.

BY REV. J. J. HALL.

To know Mr. Spurgeon was to love him. His genial countenance, merry laugh, warm grasp of the hand and kindly words won your heart to him.

However stubborn he was in the defence of what he believed to be right, however serious in his manner and terrific in his denunciations against sin, Mr. Spurgeon in his personal intercourse was as kindly disposed and as tender-hearted as a little child. I have sat by his side and listened to his words many a time, and shall never forgot how he took my hand and said, "God bless you," as I bade him "Good-bye," ere I left England's shores. It was not so much the word spoken as the manner of saying it; and when ten years afterwards I saw him again, the old smile greeted me and his kind words welcomed me.

Many hearts are sad because C. H. Spurgeon is dead. I am thinking of the nearly three hundred orphans who are housed at the beautiful Orphanage at Stockwell, who always rejoiced at the appearance of their great benefactor, and in whose death they have lost their best earthly friend. Mr. Spurgeon loved the orphans, and frequent and earnest were the appeals which through the press and from the pulpit he made in their behalf.

The row of neat and substantial cottages not far from the Tabernacle bidding, attests his interest in the aged also, for herein a comfortable home is provided for them and everything done to make their last days happy.

I know of several instances of kindly help rendered by Mr. Spurgeon to individuals which have never found their way into print, but show the kind of man he was. And what shall be said of the thousands who, through his ministration, have been led to the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, and of the tens of thousands of sorrowing hearts who have been comforted by his words.

Well do I remember, although but a mere child at the time, when the fame of young Spurgeon was penetrating every corner of the world's greatest metropolis, and London was aroused from her long sleep of indifference by the voice of a boy. My honored father, being a Baptist and Calvinist of the Calvins, the advent of such a prodigy as Spurgeon seemed to be the commencement of his labors in London near our home and among my parent's people caused him to be the topic at our table's conversation, and awakened my curiosity in the boy preacher, and some of the earliest cartoons and caricatures I ever saw were those in which Spurgeon figured prominently. Not a few persons regarded him as "a seven days' wonder" whose career would soon end, while others believed thoroughly that God had raised up this boy to cry aloud, not in the wilderness but in the crowded city, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord."

Of the remarkable career of this the greatest preacher since the Apostle Paul, as I believe C. H. Spurgeon to have been, it is not my present purpose to write, but desire to present a few personal reminiscences of the man.

My first interview with him was at his home in Nightingale Lane, for he had not then moved to his beautiful retreat at Beulah Hill. I had made application for admission to the Pastor's College, and our conversation was chiefly upon that matter. He spoke kindly, cheerfully, hopefully, and in process of time, everything going through its regular order, we found ourselves among those whom he called his "boys," while we called him "Governor." It was then my pleasure to meet him weekly as he came to the College on Friday afternoons to give a lecture to his students. When he was not able to attend, his brother James came in his stead; but it was always a disappointment to the boys when Charles Spurgeon was absent on that day.

These lectures took a wide range,—sometimes historical, then theological, and at other times, biographical. We seldom knew beforehand what would be the topic or line of thought. For instance (I refer to my note-book and see): "Friday, Jan'y 14th, 1870. Lecture by C. H. Spurgeon—The Life of James Hamilton, D. D." I look at the week following and see, "Address by C. H. Spurgeon—Doctrines to preach that are necessary to the Christian Faith."

These lectures were generally preceded with a written sermon preached before him by a student, and subjected to his criticism. In criticism of the sermons by his boys, Mr. Spurgeon was merciless. His brother James seemed always more considerate of the feelings of the young men respecting their sermons. No one forgot Charles H. Spurgeon's criticism, and yet no one helped so much by criticism as did he. He wanted to turn out preachers, fearless, strong, studious—men that need not be ashamed of their message or their manner of proclaiming it. Sometimes his criticism—if such it can be called—would afford more merriment to the rest of the students than to the young man whose effort was standing the fire; as, for instance, when, upon one occasion, he stopped a young man in his preaching, sent for the janitor, whom he told to bring in the dust pan and broom, and upon this being done, told him to go up to the pulpit and sweep up the h's which the young man there had been dropping.

But we loved him and he loved us. His words would cheer us in our darkest hours, and his voice was like the trumpet's blast calling us to battle. That voice sounds out no more. That busy hand is now still. That fearless soul has passed from the scenes of this present life. May God protect the widow and bless the two sons! There is no other C. H. Spurgeon to-day! In his death the church loses its most watchful and able champion of the faith once delivered to the saints. But God lives and rules over all.

Colleges for the Education of Women.

There are a few facts I wish to state, that will surprise some of your readers, who are not up on this subject. The first well equipped and completely endowed College for young women ever projected was done by Matthew Vassar, a Baptist. Another surprising thing is that Vassar College is just thirty years old. Another noteworthy fact is that the oldest College for girls in North Carolina, except the Moravian school at Salem, is the Chowan Female Institute at Murfreesboro.

The foregoing facts show that the Baptists have not been indifferent to female education. But they have rather been in the lead of the other denominations on this subject. Another observation, for the remedy of our impatience, is that so much has been done for the higher education of females in so short a time. The progress in this department during the last quarter of a century has been marvellous. And when we remember that College education for women is in its infancy we may expect to see still more astonishing developments in that direction within the next few years.

I quot from the Baptist Encyclopædia by Cathcart:

"Vassar College, an institution for the liberal education of young women, located in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was founded and endowed by Matthew Vassar,* * It is the first grand completely endowed College for young women ever projected."

The same authority gives the following:

"The oldest school for girls in North Carolina, next to the Moravian School at Salem, is the Chowan Institute, at Murfreesboro. It was founded in 1848, by the Chowan Baptist Association."

From an excellent article in The Examiner headed "College Education for Women," I give the following extract, in which we have the authority of the editor for saying that Vassar College is just thirty years old:

"The most empthaic note in their deliverances was the rapid extension and vindication of the movement for woman's education in this country. The history of that movement, at least in its visible and organized form, belongs practically to the period since the close of the civil war. Vassar College at Poughkeepsie is but just thirty years old. Within this comparatively brief space of time the idea of college training for women has spread so widely and rooted itself so firmly that Mrs. Freeman Palmer, the ex president of Wellesley, estimates that fifty thousand girls are now pursuing collegiate studies in the United States, and Dr. Seeley, president of Smith, confidently predicts that the beginning of the next century will see as many young women as young men in our colleges.

"The higher education of women has had no more formidable opposition to overcome than the notion, long obstinately urged and not yet wholly abandoned, that the feminine physique is incapable of enduring the strain of serious mental exertion. But it is already possible to point to a generation of vigorous alumnæ, whose high average of health triumphantly refutes this calumny. Not only do the college records, to which Miss Ely, of Vassar, pertinently appealed, show a decided gain in health and strength during the college course, but it is beyond dispute that the college-bred women have as a rule sounder organs, steadier nerves, stouter limbs, stronger backs, a better equipment for the physical demands of life than women whose girlhood was without college training. Mrs. Freeman Palmer, with no less sense than wit, maintained that college education has promoted the health of women by saving them from being bored. Many of the ailments that drive women so frequently in middle age to sanatariums and rest-cures, may be traced to the want of wholesome preoccupation of thought. Precisely this is what college education and the interest awakened by it almost invariably supply.

"Perhaps the most satisfactory aspect of the whole woman's college movement is that already it has ceased to be novel or 'queer.' We are finding out that the girls want to go to college for precisely the same reasons the boys do. It isn't that they aspire to all sorts of new careers, or feel themselves set apart for some special and conspicuous mission. What leads them in such numbers to seek the higher education, both at the colleges for women and at co-educational institutions, is the honest and simple purpose to fit themselve better for the ordinary duties and demands of a woman's life. There is no danger that the woman's college will revolutionize our national character. There is good reason to hope that it will strengthen and exalt it."

Inasmuch as we have been in the very forefront of this great movement, let us see to it that, in these days of our prosperity, we hold our position so honorably taken.

In and Around Mt. Airy.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—The third Sunday in January, 1892, was my second anniversary as pastor of the Mt. Airy church. During the two years 116 have been added to the roll, who have swelled its membership to 178.

There are pleasing signs of development on every hand. A greater friendship is now existing between the church and all the Boards of the Convention; and there is a general awakening in the Sunday-school, prayer-meetings and regular services. At both services last Sunday larger congregations greeted the pastor to worship together than ever before since the beginning of his pastorate. It is a joy to see the pleasure of the Lord thus prospering. This is due largely to the earnest efforts of many of these faithful and true brethren and sisters. They are among the best and truest friends of the pastor in his wants and of all things that concern them as christians. We are trying to believe more that we are workers together with him. Each active, vigorous member of the church is doing all he can to be most agreeable. Such oneness is affecting good in every department of our work. Unity and an earnest contending in the faith as Baptists hold it are the pressing needs of to-day.

Quite a number of noble Baptists from Virginia, Eastern Carolina and South Carolina have recently pitched their tents in our aggressive town. To these good people and to all strangers we give a warm welcome, and bid them share with us all that this grand west affords—the purest air from the highest peaks of the Blue Ridge, the refreshing waters gushing forth from the hills, a delightsome climate, natural curiosity far beyond a just description—inexhaustible resources of wealth. It is generally conceded that the present year will be the most marked of Mt. Airy's material prosperity. God grant that the spiritual condition of the town may keep pace with all material strides!

We hope in a few years to be able to invite the brethren of the Convention to convene with us. But let us lift our eyes and look upon the surrounding hills for a moment.

Baptist affairs are not only encouraging here, but the whole Pilot Mountain Association is taking on fresh courage and gathering strength as the days go by. I expect to see the day when this Association will be one of the strongest in the State. Why not? We have the territory and the material. In these mountain gorges there is much of the best brain to be found in the South, and I am glad to say that this broken and beautiful section is being rapidly cultivated. The mighty locomotive is rushing in, drawing its immense cargo of light; towns and cities are springing up, and churches and academies are being erected here and there. In short, all of Western North Carolina is ascending on a higher plane of physical, moral and religious attainment.

Every morning the RECORDER comes, our homes is made brighter and happier.

Mt. Airy, Feb 4, 1892.

Letter from Baltimore.

Dear Brother:—I have read your editorial in the RECORDER of Jan. 27th on Wake Forest College, an interesting subject to North Carolina Baptists. It is indeed encouraging to know that we have nearly $200,000 as an endowment fund. Judiciously invested, that means an annual income of about $12,000, which, added to the per capita income of over two hundred paying students, means an enviable future for the dear old College, which its best friends may well feel proud of.

Think, if you can, of the vast and almost incalculable good the College has already done for the Baptist churches in North Carolina and other States in the past fifty years, in her poverty and adverse struggles. Then let us hope, with pleasure, what is possible for her to do in the next half century.

We had at Immanuel Baptist church in this city, a few Sundays since, one of the best sermons I ever heard. It was on rather an unpopular subject. But Dr. Ellis sent the truth home to the hearts of all who heard him with such force, that those who did hear him will not soon forget it. His subject was the "Missionary Duty of the Southern Baptists to the Colored People." His text was Psalm 72: 12—"For he shall deliver the needy when he crieth; the poor also, and him that hath no helper."

As before intimated, no matter how unpopular the subject may be, for some cause unknown to you and me, the Baptists of the South are so circumstanced that we have more spiritual cares and responsibilities for the souls of the colored people with us than any other denomination. The question is with you and me. How are we using our opportunities?

Dr. A. C. Dixon of Brooklyn, N. Y., has been with us and preached to a full house in his usual style at 4 p. m. on Sunday. In the morning and evening he preached to Mr. Wharton's church.

Moneys Sent Little Alice Russell.

The following sums of money have been sent little Alice Russell for the Baptist church at Mt. Vernon Springs:

Harris Jones, 25 cents; Mrs. —— Gilmore, 25 cents; Master Willis Gilmore, 25 cents; Charles Rassour, 25 cents; Miss Mary Truce, 25 cents; Buddie Pearl Russell, 25 cents; Rev. W. P. Fife, $3.00; Mrs. Lucy McDaniel, 25 cents; Mr. Eugene Gorrham, 25 cents; Miss Kate Matthews, 25 cents; N. E. Matthews, 25 cents.

I will tell how one man made the money to send me. He chewed much tobacco. After reading my letter of Nov. 11th, 1891, he decided to stop chewing tobacco for forty-eight hours, and thereby saved twenty-five cents, which he sent me. The act did him good, as he has not used near so much tobacco since. A worthy example. If all the tobacco users would do the same, we would have our church before the birds sing their spring songs. Will some one else try it?

A wealthy merchant has told me he would give me one dollar for every five dollars I get for the church. Will the good Baptists help me to get a few of the merchant's dollars?

ALICE RUSSELL.

Moneys for Roper Church.

The following contributions have been received for the Roper church:

Yeopim Union Meeting, $90.52; D. W. Roper, 1.00; C. W. Simmons, $1.00; Mrs. John Davis, $1.00; Samuel Wixon, 25c.

Many thanks to the brethren. Our house is not yet completed.

Dr. Basil Manly Dead.

The death of Dr. Basil Manly will send a thrill of sorrow over all the land. No man in the denomination was more lovable or more loved. The announcement of his serious illness caused great and wide spread anxiety. He was known to be in frail health and it was feared he could not resist a severe attack of disease. For years his heart had been affected, and for months he had been greatly troubled with insomnia. Some two weeks ago he had an attack of pneumonia, and from that time the doctor held out no hope of his recovery. He spoke of his own death with brightest cheerfulness, but there were reasons why he wished to live a few years more, and so he told the doctors that while he was ready to go he yet would make as brave a fight for his life as he could. He held his own better than was expected, but on Saturday night blood poison set in and he went into a torpor from which it was increasingly difficult to rouse him, till 8:45 p. m. Sunday, when he fell asleep, and the brave, noble, true soldier of Christ passed to his reward.

All the qualities of goodness and greatness shone forth in him most brilliantly. Knowing him most intimately for years, having been his pastor since May 1881, we are unable to recall a single instance in which he manifested any wrong spirit or moral weakness. He came as near to being all that a man ought to be as any one we ever knew.

His was no negative character. He was brave and aggressive. He had the courage to have convictions and he had the courage of them. There was never any trimming, any shrinking from responsibility, any hesitating to do or say needful things lest his influence or reputation should suffer. He disdained shame. He loved truth and righteousness. He was always ready for any service he could render, and his versatile gifts were in constant exercise. He was a wise man, and in that wisdom his colleagues and his brethren trusted. He was ever on the look-out for opportunities to do good. For example, he was the moving spirit in establishing various missions in Louisville. His last movement remains incomplete, viz., the building of a house of worship and the planting of a mission on New Broadway in the Highlands. He was tireless in doing good, and it was literally his meat and his drink to do the will of God.

He was a man of broad culture, of remarkable talents and of thorough scholarship. He adorned every position he occupied—as pastor, as college president and as professor in the Seminary. It is to be regretted that he did not leave more literary remains. His book on Inspiration, his fugitive articles, his hymns and the little hymn book he prepared—these are all. The "Choice" was the last work of his life. After his fatal illness set in he corrected the final proof sheets of the music edition of this grand little Hymn book.

Gentleness and manhood combined in him most happily. He was a true gentleman, and his gentlemanliness was crowned with profound piety. He had a fine sense of honor, a keen appreciation of all that is good, a clear insight into principles and tendencies, an unselfish heart, a disciplined mind, an unwavering faith and a glad hope.

He has finished his work, he has gone to his reward and his memory will rest like a benediction upon the world. Standing by the dead body, gazing upon the placid face, all radiant with the well known smile which suffering and death could not mar, we could almost hear the welcome of the Master, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant,—enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

Of the four noble men of God who founded our loved Seminary, three have passed away. Williams, Boyce and Manly have gone to their reward. Broadus remains. May God long spare him to us. And may the men who shall occupy chairs in our Seminary ever be worthy successors of these heroes of the faith.—Western Recorder.

Union at Lee's Chapel.

We had a good Union Meeting at Lee's Chapel, Nash county.

Rev. Worley Creech of Hare's Store made a capital talk on temperance. I am sure it will do good—it must—such a talk from a good man's experience cannot fail to produces a good effect.

Rev. O. L. Stringfield of Wakefield was heartily in favor of giving all the hogs to save the people. Men and women are better than hogs and sheep.

Rev. F. H. Poston of Smithfield was sick with the grippe, but he was at his post and gave us the force of his example and the pleasure of his company.

Rev. J. W. Rose of Pine Level was present with his heart burdened with our mission work.

Rev. J. L. Cottingham of Wilson's Mills ran off to the Western Union, with a view to securing help to erect his house of worship at the Mills. He was conspicuous for his absence because of his faithfulness in attendance heretofore.

Prof. W. J. Ferrell, J. M. Beaty and all the brethren seemed to make over average talks. There were three collections taken during the meeting for missions and Sunday-school work. The hospitality of Lee's Chapel church and community was abundant.

The Lord was with us and made our hearts glad.

The next Union will be held with Bethesda church, Johnston county.

Yours fraternally,
O. C. HORTON.

Christian Forgiveness.

For a long time I have noticed with regret the adverse views of writers and theologians on the subject of christian forgiveness, some taking the position that we are scripturally bound to forgive every one who trespasses against us, whether they ever repent or not, while others take the position that we are not bound to forgive unless the offender repents.

This subject is of such paramount importance, and our spiritual interest so much involved in it, that we can neither realize refreshings from the presence of the Lord or lay any just claim to genuine discipleship, unless our hearts are right in this very important matter.

Our Lord says, Matt. 6: 15, "If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." "But," says one, "how can I forgive him who has wilfully and knowingly injured me and will not repent." I know from sad experience and observation that it is an exceedingly difficult thing to do. Nevertheless it is a duty of indescribable importance, and one in which we must continually pray God's blessing and grace to help in its performance. Our Saviour says, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you." Luke 6: 27, 28; Matt. 5: 44. When we read the above injunctions and requisitions of God's word, we feel alarmingly the need of a larger measure of grace and of the spirit of him who said, "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do;" and of Stephen, imbibing much of the same Christ-like spirit, says of those who cast the murderous stones upon him, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." Acts 7: 58. "But," says one, "Christ never forgives without repentance, and why should I? Isn't it my duty to possess the spirit of Christ, and be as near like him as I possibly can?" Surely it is. But it would be monstrous and impudent in us to dare to exercise the functions that belong alone to God. When God forgives, it means the absolution from guilt, and makes us new creatures in Christ. But when we forgive the sinner he may remain the same unchanged enemy to God and man that he was before. So we see there is a vast difference between our forgiveness and Christ's forgiveness. And in order to have just and scriptural conceptions of this subject we must recognize that difference. Some have thought that the language of our Saviour in Luke 17: 3, 4, implies that we are not bound to forgive unless the transgressor repents. Let us examine this language very carefully and see just what the Saviour says, and the object he had in view. He was here talking with his disciples about the awful sins offending his redeemed ones. He tells us elsewhere that whatever is done against his disciples is equally done against himself. It seems to me that the Saviour's main object here was to caution his disciples against offending one of his ransomed children. The language clearly signifies that it is our special bounden duty to rebuke the transgressor and forgive him when he repents. It would be exceedingly un Christ like not to do so, and would betray in us greater criminality of heart than we could reasonably impute to him who trespassed against us.

Christ desired his disciples to be the light of the world and the salt of the earth. A great part of the duty of the disciples of Christ is to reflect his image and keep themselves unspotted from the world. Hence the language take heed to yourselves, i. e., give special attention to all your words, actions and feelings. Christ would have his disciples to be very far from harboring feelings of resentment. While forgiveness is one of the most difficult duties of the christian religion, it is also one of the most important duties to perform. And the requisite ability to its performance is attributable to the special grace of God, for which we should earnestly and continuously pray. It is a grace and blessing peculiar to christianity to forgive offences. Perhaps in no way is Christ wounded in the house of his friends so often as by neglecting to cherish a spirit of forgiveness. I think if any one will carefully and prayerfully examine the spirit of the gospel of peace and the distinguishing genius of christianity, he will see that there is no room for the indulgence of an unforgiving spirit in him who has grace enough in his heart to love and pray for his enemies.

Oh that God's children would worthily exemplify the above injunctions in their every day lives. JAMES JORDAN.

A Partial Contrast.

Says one, "I am opposed to the assessing system." All right, if you really mean it. You are opposed to the Bible system also. God has made the assessment himself and recorded it for our benefit. The assessment will remain recorded in the Book of Books until the end of time, whether we like it or not. Instead of a finance committee meeting to assess, as we say, they meet to equally apportion as near as they can the assessment already made by God himself. Here is the assessment: Give according to that "a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." For I mean not that other men be eased, and ye burdened, but by an equality. Finance committees agree on amounts their churches will need in a given time to carry on the Lord's work, then upon the Lord's own assessment they equalize this amount among the members of their respective churches and thus have equality that none may be burdened.

The finances of our country are based upon and carried on upon the same principle, taken from the same Bible. Take a county for example. Three or four men assess all the families in the county. Then the commissioners of said county make an estimate of the needs of the county for a given time. Then they apportion this [illegible] every family in the county according to that they have. Then the collector goes round and collects every dollar assessed, and no one thinks of anything but paying their full assessment. Now see the contrast between the government of the county and the government of the church. The laws of the one are enforced and carried out to the letter. The other is not. Thus comes this confusion, dearth, tangle, death and drag in churches. How sad to see how we treat God and the government of his churches with perfect contempt and disregard, and obey man and his government to the letter. I repeat, how sad. Now the church collector starts out. "Say, brother, I have started out to get up some money for the church." "Well," says the brother, "I have no money for the church now. I owe some other little debts that I must pay first. I will pay part of my assessment when I get the money. I don't expect to pay it all, no way, for it is too much." Did this same man talk this way to the county collector? No, no. He paid all to him without a word.

The church collector sees another brother. "Well, brother, I want some money from you." "All right; when I get it I will hand it to the pastor, or some of you. I don't like some of the members very much. They are not running things to my notion, and I can't pay much." And so on with a host of church members. While these are almost numberless, there are in all churches those who are true and tried.

Shame on such looseness, indifference and stupidity in, we suppose, all the churches. Remember this is God's work. He has not only made the christians assessment, but has also told the churches what to do with members who will not be governed by it and the churches, and thus walk disorderly. This is also recorded. Here it is: 2 Thess. 3: 6, "Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which he received of us."

Suppose for a moment churches and their collectors were as true and honest in the prosecution of God's laws and work in the churches as the county and its collector is to carry out her laws and work. Then the churches would blossom like the rose, and Zion bring forth sons and daughters unto God. It is a wonder God don't spew all the do-nothing churches out of his mouth for their disobedience to him and his laws in his work.

Suppose a State act upon the same principle as churches—every man do as he pleased—we could have no government. Men would not pay to support it, just like they won't pay now to support churches. Then what and where would we be? And we can almost say now that we have no church government, because we haven't enough of the true and tried to enforce the laws of God in the churches.

An Excellent Commentary.

One of the chief glories of the American Baptist Publication is its series of commentaries on the New Testament. They embrace seven volumes and are edited by Dr. Alvah Hovey, of Newton Theological Seminary.

Let it Come.

Dear Recorder:—It seems from Dr. R. D. Fleming's resolutions offered at the last Baptist State Convention, and the recent expressions of brethren Prichard, Hufham, Albritton, Stradley and Haymore, together with your editorial entitled "Misappropriations of Public Money," that there is much thinking along a very important line just now, and some of us are glad that it is so.

I want to say that I have stood squarely on the principles embodied in those resolutions for twenty-five years; and if any one can show any error in those resolutions, he will render the public a profitable service at this time; and if any brother can show from the New Testament that it is right for him to do his benevolent work through any other organization than the church, such information will be news to the public, and will be highly appreciated by many of us.

As to the appropriations at Oxford and elsewhere, the fact that they are contrary to the spirit of the constitution and to the principles of our fathers who struggled for our religious liberty, should cause every patriotic citizen (not to say Baptist) to decide where to stand. S. C. PAGE.

Making Glad the Waste (Waist) Places.

"That's what I call making glad the waist places," said Smithson, as he put his arm around a lady's waist. But Lilly won't care much for this show of affection if Smithson doesn't get rid of that disagreeable catarrh of his. Won't somebody tell him that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will cure him.

By its mild, soothing, antiseptic, cleansing and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures the worst cases of Chronic Catarrh in the Head, as thousands can testify. "Cold in the Head" is cured with a few applications. Catarrhal Headache is relieved and cured as if by magic.

In perfect faith, the makers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy—the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N. Y., offer to pay $500 to any one suffering from Chronic Catarrh in the Head whom they cannot cure.

Now, if the conditions were reversed—if they asked you to pay $500 for a positive cure you might hesitate. Here are reputable men, with years of honorable dealing; thousands of dollars and a great name back of them.

They believe in themselves. Isn't it worth a trial? Isn't any trial preferable to catarrh?

POKINE.

I have used the within remedy (Pokine) with great success. JAMES H. LASSITER.

I have used the Pokine Remedy (prepared by W. T. Cheatham, Jr.) in case of Sciatica with the result of positive relief in a few hours, and believe if used as directed is will effect a permanent cure.
J. L. H. MISSILLIER.

MARCH 6, 1891.

For the benefit of the public, I unhesitatingly recommend Cheatham's wonderful remedy, "Pokine," to all sufferers of rheumatism. It has produced marvelous results in my case. I was a sufferer of the malady for five years, and after taking a few bottles was entirely cured.
Very respectfully,
W. W. DOWTIN.

HENDERSON, N. C., March 7, '91.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM:
Dear Sir—My wife was down in bed with rheumatism, and the Pokine I bought of you gave her relief after taking four doses. She has not been troubled since. It is the best medicine she ever took for rheumatism. Respectfully,
ZACK DAVIS.

MR W. T. CHEATHAM, JR:
DEAR SIR—I have been afflicted with rheumatism time and again, for the past thirteen years. I have received more relief from Pokine than any medicine I ever took, and therefore take great pleasure in recommending it to all sufferers of rheumatism. Very respectfully,
F. G. MITCHELL.

JANUARY 19, 1891.

W. T. CHEATHAM, JR.:
Dear Sir—I desire to say that in January last I was down with rheumatism; my suffering was great, and I was completely prostrated. One bottle of your Pokine completely relieved me, and I have not had any rheumatism since. My son also was relieved of rheumatism by Pokine.
Yours truly,
CHARLES G. BURROUGHS.

Your rheumatic cure, Pokine, has completely cured me. I. M. GREEN.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM, JR., Henderson, N. C.:
Dear Sir—Being asked my opinion of your rheumatic remedy, Pokine, will gladly state I deem it the only medicine of its kind on the market that will accomplish that which is exclusively claimed for it. Being a sufferer of rheumatism, I consequently tried many remedies, until finally relieved by Pokine. Very respectfully,
J. A. KELLY.

Medical Missions.

Outside of christian countries nearly all disease is esteemed to be of supernatural origin. The belief in disease-spirits is found from the Eskimo to the Patagonian; in Central, Western, Eastern, and Southern Africa; in Borneo, Australia, the Indian Archipelago, among the Malagasy, and is well-nigh world-wide, and has existed through uncounted centuries. The treatment of disease is in consonance with the theory of its origin. Even where the rude medical notions of Greece, Egypt and Arabia have migrated, there is ever found the superstitious treatment of disease. Medicine and religion go together in the thought of the non-christian man. He is quite ready to receive them together from the christian missionary! "The recovery from disease is the kindliest exhibition of divine power; and the christian medical missionary occupies a lofty vantage ground in his work."

The results of medical missions abundantly sustain these statements of what might be expected of them. Of the twenty stations in the region of the English Presbyterian Hospital at Swatow, China, seven or eight are said to owe their origin to hospital patients. In the hospital of the London Missionary Society at Amoy it is said twelve to fourteen thousand towns are yearly represented. Intelligent natives from all parts of China going to Canton visit the hospital and dispensary there, it is said, as one of the great sights of the city. Twenty thousand patients a year, some of whom have come hundreds of miles to it, are treated at this hospital, and hundreds of them have been led by it to give up idol worship. All these institutions illustrate the power of medical missions to lessen the anti foreign feeling, to diminish the power of superstition, and to exhibit the unselfish character of the christian religion. Medical missions have opened the way into many countries where prejudice otherwise shut out all christianity. It was so in Jeypore, India, and in Korea.

The story is the same in every land whither the medical missionary goes as to the effects in winning the people.

It used to be said that in India the birds never sing, the flowers have no fragrance, and the women never smile. No wonder the women of heathen lands never smile. Their lot is sad beyond description, but a better day has come for them. The christian women of christian lands are hastening to give their sad sisters the blessed story of the gospel. There are in the United States 34 women's foreign missionary societies, 10 in Canada, 24 in Great Britain, 1 on the continent of Europe, and 1 in South Africa. The work that has been done by these societies, especially for the women of heathen lands, is one whose value and influence cannot be estimated. It would be easy to gather up and present here a table of statistics, but large as the figures would be, they would give no adequate view of the results of the work which woman, with her loving heart and her gentle touch, is doing for her sister woman in darkened countries.—Missionary Review.

In Japan many of the temples were destroyed in the earthquake. The priests are very busy burning incense repeating prayers to Buddha, and many other gods. All through the devastated disiricts, the sick, wounded and homeless are constantly repeating 'Ah-mi-da veh,' 'Ah-mi-da-veh,' a prayer they hope will reach the ear of great Buddha and bring them relief. But a greater than Buddha looks with pitying eye on these suffering people and has turned the hearts of many to bring them help. Straw shelters are being prepared—one for each family—clothes, blankets, food, doctors and nurses. But with all this help many will die from hunger and cold.

The London Christian says: "The Chinese government is now taking very vigorous steps to suppress and to prevent attacks on missionaries. We may therefore reasonably trust that those who are carrying the word of God into that distant land will be in less danger than has recently been the case. This is something to thank God for not only for the sake of the missionaries, but of the future weal of China itself."

Living at Our Best.

Do not try to do a great thing, you may waste all your life waiting for the opportunity which may never come. But since little things are always claiming your attention, do them as they come, from a great motive, for the glory of God, to win his smile of approval, and to do good to men. It is harder to plod on in obscurity, acting thus, than to stand on the high places of the field, within the view of all, and to do deeds of valor at which rival armies stand still to gaze. But no such a act goes without the swift recognition and the ultimate recompense of Christ. To fulfill faithfully the duties of your station; to use to the uttermost the gifts or your ministry; to bear chafing annoyances and trivial irritations as martyrs bore the pillory and stake; to find the one noble trait in people that try to molest you; to put the kindest construction on unkind acts and words; to love with the love of God even the unthankful and evil; to be content to be a fountain in the midst of a wild valley of stones, nourishing a few lichens and wild flowers, or now and again a thirsty sheep; and to do this always, and not for the praise of man, but for the sake of God—this makes a life.—F. B. Meyer.

A Good Share.

Last year, the American Baptist Publication Society had in its service eighty-two colporter missionaries and eighty-four Sunday-school missionaries, making in all one hundred and sixteen. The Southern States got the service of sixty-one of these missionaries, sixteen of whom are negroes, whose labors were given wholly to the negroes. The sixty-one men were distributed in thirteen States, South Carolina, 27; North Carolina, 9; Mississippi, 5; Georgia, 3; Alabama, 3; Tennessee, 3; Texas, 3; Louisiana, 2; West Virginia, 2; Virginia, 1; Arkansas, 1; Kentucky, 1; Florida, 1. Nearly all the colporteur missionaries were employed by the several State organizations, but sold and gave away Bibles and other books furnished by the Society. The Sunday-school missionaries were employed and paid by the Society. Say what we may, still it is true, that the American Baptist Publication Society reaches and touches and teaches and trains the people, all over this whole country, for God and glory.

Notes from Oxford, N. C.

Out of the three hundred who made a profession in the Fife meeting in Oxford, less than one hundred have united with the four denominations in the town. Yet the meeting seems to have done much good. There has not been a ball since the meeting. There seems to be less drinking. Many half-dead church members have taken on new life, and bid fair to make good workers.

On account of death and removals, it became necessary for the Oxford Baptist church to choose three more deacons. The lot fell on brethren E. T. Rawlins, R. V. Rice and S. W. Parker.

Our churches and Sunday-schools are flooded with song books, but there is a great dearth of good singing. We greatly need some well trained teachers of vocal music. There ought to be a first class teacher of music at Wake Forest. A good knowledge of music ought to be considered a necessary part of every young man's education.

Rev. J. S. Hardaway has been nine years with the Oxford Baptist church as pastor. He is as small physically as he was when he came, and yet he has grown wonderfully.

A liquor seller who has recently built three elegant new houses, pointed to them and said to a friend: "H church built that, M church built that, and E church built that." He meant that he had made profit enough on the liquor sold the members of these churches to build these houses. Another liquor seller said: "If all the church members were to stop patronizing my saloon, I would have to quit my business."

A christian and a neighbor get into trouble. They get angry. Harsh words are spoken. Bitter feelings are cherished. The neighbor is surprised that a christian should act so. It lowers his estimation of christianity. The christian is injured. Love and hatred cannot dwell in his heart at the same time. A protracted meeting comes. The christian cannot enjoy it. He can do no successful christian work with hatred in his heart. The neighbor can get no good from the meeting. To both it is a failure. Christ says, "If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." Matt. 6: 15.

Two persons fall out with each other. One says, "I won't go to church where the other belongs." This one thinks he is justifiable in disobeying God by absenting himself from his house and worship in order to show his hatred of the other. Will such a reason stand the test at the bar of God?

"I have not seen, smelt or tasted a drop of whiskey during the holidays." This statement was made by a number of families in a certain community just after Christmas. A good sister of one of these families said, "This good change has been brought about by the influence of our pastor. From the beginning of his ministry among us he has fought Christmas egg-nogs, together with all whiskey making, selling and drinking. He has greatly reformed our church and neighborhood." That pastor was made thankful by hearing such a statement.

Rev. William Hill Jordan once said: "We need preachers who can preach bad persons out of the church as well as preach good persons into the church."

A Most Vexatious Question.

One of the most vexatious questions of our time, and indeed of all time, is the place and work of woman. To be sure, the Bible has settled the question if we would abide by its decision, but right here is our trouble.

In this Book she is recognized as one with man in nature, bone of his bone, and flesh of his flesh. She is called a helpmeet for him, which clearly means a suitable help, or a help over against him, the counterpart and complement of himself. Both are creatures of God, and equally dependent upon each other.

But while they are one in nature, they are different in office. The man cannot be the woman, the woman cannot be the man. The man is protector and provider; the woman the helper and inspirer. If the man rules, and he should rule, its as ruling his own flesh; if the woman submits to his authority, and he should, its as submitting to her own will. This distinction of individuality gives each their place and work, to disregard which is monstrous, and can only bring confusion.

The woman cannot mother and mature the race and perform the public duties of man in any profession or calling; and to sacrifice the one for the other is to lose both. The best woman is a sorry man, and the best man is no woman at all.

My grandfather never suffered a crowing hen to live, and a woman in breeches was his abomination. Right or wrong, I inherited his prejudice; so if any sister should judge me harsh or unkind, remember this; and remember too that a mother reared me in this faith, and a wife indorses me.

But men are no less blame-worthy for this state of affairs, for I never saw a he-male wife that she did not have a she male man for a husband, so I judge that the disposition on the part of woman to play the man is mostly due to the fact that men are degenerating. Women see this and seek to make up the deficiency by becoming men themselves, with what success, is apparent in the Dr. Mary Walkers and female evangelists that disgrace our civilization.

It is worth while to remark that as nations are civilized, the male and female are more distinct in dress, voice and habit, and that barbarous nations are indistinguishable in this respect.

Whither are we drifting? and echo answers whither! whither!! whither!!!

R. E. PEELE.

From Winton, N. C.

Mr. Editor:—My attention has been called to a letter of Judge Winston of the 18th inst. in the RECORDER. I am glad that the Judge has moved off on boy-criminals. I hope the stone will continue to roll until something is done to better the condition of our boys and men. Suffer me to give my opinion.

If we would have good men, let the boys be well trained from seven to twenty-one. Boys make men. Every parent who has no regular employment for his children from seven to twenty-one, should have them taken away from him and bound out to some good people who would regularly give them something to do. Let the children be taught trades, if possible, and given at least two years' schooling.

Let every Justice of the Peace see that no child in his section be allowed to spend his time in idleness. Idleness is the cause of a great deal of crime. Time constantly occupied will certainly prevent the commission of criminal acts.

I pray the next Legislature to enact a law to prevent idleness on the part of children. Such a law would be worth more than all the reformatories in the United States. Prevention is better than cure. The way boys are trained from seven to twenty one will be, in nearly all cases, their way through life.

Health Suggestions.

A prominent physician recently said:

"There are ten simple precautions which form an excellent rule in life, and if people would but observe them I should have to resort to some other means of making a livelihood:

"Don't read in street cars or other jolting vehicles.

"Don't pick the teeth with pins or other hard substances.

"Don't neglect any opportunity to insure a variety of food.

"Don't eat and drink hot and cold things immediately in succession.

"Don't pamper the appetite with such variety of food that may lead to excess.

"Don't read, write or do any delicate work unless receiving the light from the left side.

"Don't direct special mental or physical energies to more than eight hours' work in each day.

"Don't keep the parlor dark if you value your own and your children's health.

"Don't delude yourself into the belief that you are an exception so far as sleep is concerned; the normal average of sleep is eight hours.

"Don't endeavor to rest the mind by absolute inactivity."

ABSOLUTELY PURE

SKINS ON FIRE

With AGONIZING ECZEMAS and other ITCHING, BURNING, SCALY, and BLOTCHY SKIN and SCALP DISEASES are relieved in the majority of cases by a single application of the Cuticura Remedies, and speedily, permanently, and economically cured, when physicians, hospitals, and all other remedies fail. Cuticura Remedies are the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies of modern times, are absolutely pure, and may be used in the treatment of every humor, from the simplest facial blemishes to the severest diseases of the blood, skin, and scalp.

CUTICURA

The great Skin Cure, instantly allays the most intense itching, burning, and inflammation, permits rest and sleep, clears the scalp of crusts and scales, speedily soothes and heals raw and irritated surfaces, and restores the hair. CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, is indispensable in cleansing diseased surfaces. CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood and Skin Purifier, and greatest of Humor Remedies, cleanses the blood of all impurities and poisonous elements, and thus removes the cause. Hence the CUTICURA REMEDIES cure every disease and humor of the skin, from pimples to scrofula.

☞ "HOW TO CURE DISEASES OF THE SKIN, SCALP, AND BLOOD," mailed free to any address, 64 pages, 300 Diseases, 50 Illustrations, 100 Testimonials. A book of priceless value to every sufferer.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold throughout the world. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; CUTICURA SOAP, 25c.; CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Boston, U. S. A.

Pimply, Blotchy Skin, red, rough and oily skin and hands, painful finger-ends with shapeless nails, are prevented and cured by Cuticura Soap, incomparably the greatest of skin purifiers and beautifiers, while rivalling in delicacy and surpassing in purity the most expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. The only medicated toilet soap, and the only preventive and cure of inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, rough, red, and oily skin.

Letter from Rev. M. P. Mathenev.

Our Centennial mass-meeting at Mt. Ruhama closed yesterday. It was far by the most profitable meeting I have attended in this Association. The brethren were prepared and the discussions were spirited. The entertainment was all that could be desired, and Pastor Hoyle worked the "visiting brethren" for all they were worth. This is the oldest church in the Association, having been organized in 1816. They have a membership of near two hundred, and should rise and build themselves a new house.

Prof. C. E. Woodruff of Clairmont College in Hickory is our new acquisition. He is a fine preacher as well as teacher, and we were delighted to have him with us. His sermon on Sunday morning from "the love of Christ constraineth us" was very inspiring indeed. We were disappointed in not having Dr. Whitesides with us, but if all who do not come to these meetings would send us as good a substitute as he, we will forgive them for staying away.

We missed the genial faces of brethren Marsh and Murchison. Bro. Marsh has not been strong this winter, and so we did not expect him.

It was a peculiar pleasure to have our brother, Capt. Sidney Bridges, with us in our mass-meeting this time. For months he has been confined to his home with rheumatism and other complications. Brother Bridges "stands high" in the denomination and "carries a good deal of weight" as well. He is a safe and conservative adviser, although it is difficult to get him to make a public speech. For a great many years he has been a leader in this and the old Catawba River Association. We shall be rejoiced to learn of his complete recovery. His absence from our meetings is always felt.

It is desired that our churches give to the various objects of the denomination, but that all funds for State and Associational Missions be sent to Brother D. P. Bridges, Treasurer of the Association at Catawba, N. C. It is hoped that the churches will greatly increase their contributions to these two causes, and that we may be able to do a greater work than ever before.

January '92, has been a prosperous month in my churches. We have received some fifteen additions to the membership. Our finances are in a healthy condition, notwithstanding the stringency in money matters. We are demonstrating that churches with once a month preaching can have system in their finances. The great need of this day is systematic effort in our finances, both as regards missions and pastor's salary. These contributions should be collected as often as the church has services, and not until they come to this will they be as efficient as they should and could be. Let all of our churches try it. M. P. MATHENEY.

Letter from Rev. P. H. Pernell.

Bro. Bailey:—I send you the money to renew my subscription. Though I am no longer a citizen of the old North State, I cannot afford to be without the RECORDER. I look for it every week with as much anxiety as a young man looks for a letter from his best girl.

I have been on the eastern shore of Virginia nearly one year, and must say I am well pleased with place and people. I never lived among a kinder people in my life. The good people of Winston use to pound when I was there occasionally, but here the pounding last all the year, for there has been but few days since we came here but what some one has sent in something nice to eat, besides they have made me some nice presents; among them a thirty-dollar suit of clothes, a twenty-five dollar talmer, a fine bear skin buggy-robe lined with plush, a purse of forty dollars, and a lot of other things too numerous to mention. Many of the good people of Eastville, who are not members of my church, took part in treating me thus.

I am preaching to two churches over here: Eastville church which has a small membership, but a nobler band no preacher ever served, and Red Bank, which has the largest congregation in the county. These churches own a nice parsonage and furnish the pastor with a horse and buggy, and nearly feeds the horse.

The climate here is very different from that of Winston, N. C., being damp and salty, but it agrees with me. I am nearly clear of rheumatism, and enjoy better health than I have for years.

Bro. H. Petty, who was pastor in North Carolina for several years, is pastor of two churches over here, and is doing a good work, but has been very sick with grippe for some time, but I am glad to say is improving, and will soon be attending to his master's business again.

Rev. J. B. Pruitt of Onancock, a North Carolina boy, has done a noble work over here. He has built one of the finest churches on the eastern shore. He has a large congregation, and is held in high esteem by all who know him. One thing he lacketh, and that is some one to look after that splendid new parsonage which his church has just finished.

With best wishes for the RECORDER and all the North Carolina Baptists,

I am as ever, P. H. PERNELL.

Letter from the Seminary.

Dear Recorder:—For sometime I have been thinking of writing to you, but grippe, bad weather and examinations have so used us up, that we have not been able to get a long breath. But through the providence of God, we are on our feet again. The Intermediate examinations are a thing of the past, and "forgetting the things that are behind let us press forward to the mark."

In the RECORDER of Jan. 27th, is an article entitled "Our Roll of Honor," by our beloved Dr. Durham. He appeals to a number of the leading churches of North Carolina to begin the Missionary Centennial by adopting missionaries and supporting them, and among the list of churches he calls on Reidsville.

Let me say that very soon after the writer of this article came to the Seminary last October, he received letters from the Missionary Society of Reidsville, asking if funds were needed; and if so, that they desired to supply them, with a view of supporting me in China. I came here trusting in the Lord, and praying that he would supply my needs while here (for there was no one else in whom I could trust). And now the Missionary Society of Reidsville is defraying all my expenses here, and anxiously waiting for me to go to the benighted regions of China, and they will support me there. Blessed be the name of the Lord.

How it filled my heart with gratitude, when that band of christians, all strangers to me, offered their aid to me while here and then in China. Nothing but the grace of God and their love of poor lost humanity could have induced them to do such deeds. I pray God that many more churches may do as this is doing. Each one can have its own missionary.

How we all watch the mails every Thursday night, so eager to get the RECORDER in order to ascertain what the brethren are doing throughout the State.

We were all delighted when we read that Rev. J. L. White had accepted the call to Asheville. We were so afraid that some other State would capture him. We trust that North Carolina will keep him; he is too valuable a man to let go.

Glad to see from the RECORDER that Bro. W. M. Gilmore expects to come here next fall. We hope that quite a number of the young brethren will do likewise, for if they want to study the Bible, they will not find more learned, pious men of God than our instructors here.

We expect Dr. T. P. Bell to address our Missionary Society on Feb. 1st, which will have passed when you get this. Our meetings are all interesting and instructive, and this one will be unusually so, owing to the presence of Dr. Bell.

Yours in Christ,

F. M. ROYALL.

Pilot Mountain Union at Red Bank.

Dear Recorder:—It was my good fortune to be with the brethren of the Pilot Mountain Association in their recent Union at Red Bank near Germanton. It was a most enjoyable and a very beneficial meeting.

Bro. J. M. Lindsay of Madison, still vigorous and strong mentally, though eighty-two years of age, was made Moderator.

Elders Brown, Haymore, Conrad, Betts, Crews, Jenkins, Matthews, Gourley and Hall were present—a band of energetic, progressive preachers; and such laymen as D. F. King, E. W. Cullen, Matt. J. Crews, T. M. Baker and others, ever forward in every good work were there also.

The motto of these brethren is "Forward." They are seeking to occupy all the available places within their bounds. Fourteen neat, commodious houses for worship have been erected within a few years and others will be built soon.

HIGH POINT FEMALE COLLEGE.

I received great encouragement relative to High Point Female College and will get substantial aid from a number of the brethren.

I have a letter from a brother in the Anson Association, informing me that the Union Meeting of that Association endorsed and recommended the project.

The Union of the Liberty was quite enthusiastic over it.

I shall devote most of my time in actively working for its accomplishment until it is consummated.

Some, who could aid if they would, hide themselves behind the hard times. The bonds are arranged so that the first payment may come after another crop is raised, when it can be easily met. I predict that we will have better times after this hard year than we have had in many. It will result from economy practiced now, and from the sensible reduction of the acreage devoted to cotton and tobacco and the great increase of provision crops.

Now is the most favorable time to make pledges, because they will be redeemed in the flush times, which, with the ordinary blessings of Providence, will be sure to follow the present time of depression. The bonds are in the nature of pledges. No object is more worthy or necessary than that for which I plead. It cannot, must not, shall not, fail.

If all the brethren who approve the object will pledge to help a little, it will be successful. Help, brethren, just a little for our girls. Fraternally,

J. N. STALLINGS.

Southern Union of Eastern Association.

This body met with Caswell church, Pender county, on Friday before the fifth Sunday in January, 1892.

Rev. M. C. Walton preached the introductory from Ruth 1st chapter, latter clause of the 16th verse.

The subjects were discussed with more fire and zeal than usual, which made the session very interesting as well as instructive, and we trust will prove a spiritual blessing to all who heard.

Our Presbyterian brethren around Caswell were numerous and did much toward making the sessions a success, aiding us in conveying delegates and visitors to and from the church to railroad, and some came to the church in the afternoon of the first day, seeking a chance to help entertain.

The following are the collections: Orphanage, $8.00; State Missions, $6.07. Total, $14 07.

Our next session will meet with Salem church, Onslow county, on Friday before the fifth Sabbath in May, 1892. Rev. R. E. Peele to preach the introductory.

SECRETARY.

The annoyance of breaking lamp-chimneys need not be borne.

Get tough glass chimneys. Macbeth's "pearl top" and "pearl glass" are tough against heat; they do not break, except from accident.

They are also clear, transparent, not misty or milky; they fit and stand upright; shape and proportions are right to direct the draft upon the flame.

They cost a little more than rough and wrong chimneys of common glass that break continually.

Dr. Boykin's Worm Killer.

"The Best Selling Vermifuge in the Market."

The Most Reliable Worm Destroyer in Use.

☞ Recipe furnished to any regular physician when requested. ☜

LA GRANGE, N. C., July 1887.

Mr. J. P. Joyner:—I gave my child one dose of Boykin's "Worm Killer," purchased of you. It brought 366 worms. I consider it the best worm medicine made.

Respectfully, J. W. THOMAS.

Messrs. I. M. & B. F. Powell, prominent merchants in Columbus county, N. C., wrote us in July, 1887, that "Rev. T. C. Floyd gave his child one dose of Boykin's 'Worm Killer,' and the result was 367 worms. He wishes all interested to know it."

RIDGEWAY, S. C.

Messrs. Boykin, Carmer & Co.—Gents: I have quite a demand for your "Worm Killer." It is the best Vermifuge I can get. A farmer bought a bottle of me a few weeks ago, gave one dose to his child; came in next day with a 'chow chow' jar filled with worms, the result of one dose. Since then all want it. W. J. DAVIS.

DUCK CREEK, N. C., May 8, 1884.

Boykin, Carmer & Co., Baltimore, Md.—Dear Sirs: Mr. A. Rudd, a very responsible customer of mine, gave a half teaspoonful "Worm Killer" to a child last week, and the result was 35 worms. Mr. Daniel Pines used it with still better results: 75 worms from one child. Of course my sales will be large. Yours truly, E. S. SMITH.

Read the following from one of the most prominent and best known physicians and farmers in South Carolina. He writes, "That a negro girl 10 years old near him took two or three doses of the 'Worm Killer,' and passed 366 worms."

Dated, Ridgeway, S. C., May 26th, 1884. R. H. EDMUNDS, M. D.

Mr. H. M. McDonald, of LaGrange, N. C., says Dr. Boykin's "Worm Killer" brought over 100 worms from one child in his neighborhood; and that it gives universal satisfaction. He sells more of it than all other worm medicine.

Price only 25 cents per bottle. Do not let your druggist or general dealer put you off with some other. Ask for "Boykin's Worm Killer," and get it. Any M. D. can prescribe it, and many do.

Dr. J. B. Hawthorne Re-Affirms.

(AN INTERESTING CORRESPONDENCE.)

REV. J. B. HAWTHORNE, D. D., Atlanta, Ga.,

Dear Sir:—More than two years ago you were kind enough to allow us to publish a letter from you in which you declared that you had been cured of Catarrh by the use of King's Royal Germetuer. In the same letter you said that you had seen its curative effects upon various diseases.

Knowing your enviable reputation throughout the nation, and confident that the public would rely upon any statement coming from you, the manufacturers of King's Royal Germetuer would esteem it a real favor if you would consent to answer the following questions: 1. Has there been any return of your Catarrh trouble? 2 Have your observations of the effects of the medicine within the last two years strengthened the convictions expressed in your first published testimonials?

Hoping to hear from you at your earliest convenience, I am yours truly,

T. H. BLACKNALL,
General Manager K. R. G.

MAJ. T. H. BLACKNALL,
Manager K. R. G. Co., Atlanta, Ga.:

Dear Sir:—In reply to your letter requesting me to answer certain questions concerning King's Royal Germetuer, I take much pleasure in saying that I am indebted to the medicine for what seems to me a complete cure of catarrhal trouble. My present health is almost perfect.

My observation within the last two years has so strengthened my faith in the remedy that I am prepared to say that there is not a medicine on the market that is worthy of comparison with it. Thousands of intelligent and reliable people, among them some of the most distinguished men of the country, have expressed to me the same opinion.

Many of my friends have been cured of dyspepsia, others of rheumatism, and some of neuralgia. As a remedy for cholera infantum it is absolutely par excellence. Atlanta alone has a thousand living witnesses to its triumphs over the la grippe.

My conviction as to the merit of this medicine is about as strong as any conviction can be made.

Yours truly,

J. B. HAWTHORNE.

DRY GOODS.

Winter, 1892.

Mail Order Department.

Through our Mail Order Department we offer advantages to the people of North Carolina for "Shopping by Mail" second to none in the Southern States, for by the means of this, a very important department of our great business, we place almost at the very doors of our patrons our enormous stock of goods, and we do carry the largest and finest collection of Dry Goods and kindred wares, at retail, of any house in North Carolina, and equaled by very few Southern houses.

We want the patronage of our North Carolina people, not simply that ours is a North Carolina house, but because we will sell them Dry Goods at as low prices, for the same quality, as any house in the trade.

We can only mention here a few of the more important departments, but will be glad to hear from those who desire anything relative to Dry Goods or the kindred wares:—

FOREIGN AND AMERICAN DRESS WOOLENS,
BLACK DRESS GOODS,
SILKS, VELVETS,
HOUSEFURNISHING GOODS,
CARPETS, CURTAINS, &c., &c.

Samples cheerfully sent, and letters of enquiry promptly answered.

When writing for samples, our patrons will please make their orders as definite as possible, for then we can send a suitable line, instead of a lot entirely different from what they want.

William Carey. "A sketch of beginnings in Modern Missions." By Rev. Arthur C. Chute, with Prefatory Note by Rev. E. B. Hulbert, D. D. Price 25 cents, single copies, postage paid. Five copies, or more, 20 cents each.

Dr. Hulbert says: "In this monograph of William Carey from the pen of Rev. A. C. Chute there is a very near approach to the ideal compendium—short enough to be read at a single sitting, full enough to include all the silent features of the great man's life, learned enough to give only authenticated and trustworthy information, racy enough to hold the reader's unflagging attention to the final sentence, pointed and orderly enough to be easily remembered and repeated, fervid enough to set the heart aglow with true missionary ardor. It is with lively satisfaction that we commend this graphic and vivid delineation of the faith, energy, courage, zeal and skill of the pioneer Baptist Apostle of Inidia." Rev. J. B. Crainfill, D. D., Waco, Texas, writes: "I think the William Carey booklet should have a wide circulrtion. I have seldon read a more entertaining and graphic biography."

Open Wags. By Rev. T. L. Baily. 12mo, 304 pp. Price, $1.25. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society. 1420 Chestnut St.

This is a story of a young man, who at the death of his father, was left with the responsibility of conducting a farm, and proving too lazy, he worried his family about going West and "making a pile," until he was permitted to go. In this new country he fell into the hands of a saloonists, and soon came to grief and "came to himself." After reaching the verge of starvation he was rescued by a missionary and turned into the path of wisdom, honesty, industry and religion. Several interesting side characters are introduced, all with correct moral and economical teaching. The shifting of the scenes from the foot-hills of his Alleghanies, in Pennsylvania, where an honest and fair living was gained, to the rising towns of Kansas and California, attended with ultimate prosperity, is quite naturally done. The story as a whole is pleasant reading; it draws the attention and impresses the reader that the way of the slothful and the vagrant is as darkness, but that there is a way of rescue.

The Lord's One Baptism. By Rev. B. J. Savage. 18mo. 144 pages. Price, 50 cents. American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

In the present day there is much discussion on the subject of Christian union; but many whose pens are busy with that topic, seem not yet to have seen one great stumbling block that has long been lying in the way, and must ever make real union impossible unless it is removed out of the way. That stumbling block is the wide prevalence of the supposition that the Lord has appointed three different acts for baptism, and two radically different classes of subjects. The acts are said to be immersion, pouring, and sprinkling, either of which may be used at the option of the candidate if able to make a personal choice; but there are also said to be two classes of subjects of the ordinance, believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, and infants to whom the name of the Lord is unknown, and who can make no choice of the act, and have no memory of its administration if somebody else chooses for them. The design of this little volume is to present in plain and simple style the teaching of the New Testament on "The One Baptism of the Lord," and to point the faithful followers of the Lord to the importance of teaching and practicing his one baptism, in order to manifest their obedience to him, and to bring about the christian union on which he will smile, and which will give a new impulse to the onward progress of his kingdom, for whose coming he has taught us to pray, and to labor.

Arrows for the King's Archers. By the Rev. Henry W. Little, Sussex, N. B. 12mo. Cloth binding. Price, $1.00. Published by Thomas Whittaker, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York.

The title of this attractive new book is as suggestive as its contents are pleasing. It is a series of analytic outline addresses upon religious, temperance, and social topics, with several courses of addresses for special seasons. The volume is designed for the use of busy and overworked ministers, lay-readers, teachers, and other christian workers. The author is no novice in books of this kind; he has published a somewhat similar volume under the clever title "What Shall I Say?" of which three large editions have been sold. The purpose of the book is to suggest ideas on subjects for short sermons and addresses in the smallest compass, and in the simplest form possible. The author gives a systematical and uniform character to these helps without making them too elaborate or artificial. They will be found simple, yet not superficial; methodical and yet thoroughly practical; brief but not barren; clearness is one of their striking characteristics. The author holds that it is a plain duty of every speaker to be plain—to be thoroughly understood; that in imparting religious instruction in any form, whether in the pulpit, on the platform or in the class room, the three great departments of the work of the church in the world, (1) the defense of the faith; (2) the exposition of the faith; (3) the maintenance of the moral purity and rectitude of society, are best helped by direct, robust, and plain teachings upon the fundamental doctrines of the gospels. There is an Appendix containing seventy-eight facts and anecdotes to illustrate the addresses. There are many volumes of pulpit aids, but here is one that is a help indeed.

Resolutions by Warwick Baptist Church.

This church, located in Chowan county, N. C., has received the resignation of their pastor, Rev. M. L. Green, whose pastorate expired in December, 1891. In September previous, the church adopted the following preamble and resolutions:

WHEREAS, We offer the following resolutions of respect and love to Bro. Green, who has served us faithfully as pastor nearly eight years. During the time he has held three revivals with seventy-nine additions to the church. Bro. Green leaves the church in much better condition than when he first visited us. Therefore Resolved 1st, That we tender to him our heartfelt thanks for his self-sacrificing labors and consecrated life among us.

Resolved 2d, That we shall always look upon him as one of the best pastors the church ever had.

Resolved 3d, We will follow him with our prayers and gladly welcome him to our homes.

JAMES E. BUNCH,
D. HOLLOWELL,
JOSIAH SPIVEY,
Committee.

A church, conformed in its structure and materials to God's idea of a church, as set forth in the teachings of the New Testament, is the greatest institution in the world. To belong to it is the greatest honor in the world. Brother, do you appreciate that honor?—Central Baptist.

Atlantic Notes.

Disease, distance and indifference combined against our January Union. There was, however, a meeting of the Executive Committee at Newbern on Friday, Jan. 29. The especial attention of the pastors and laymen of the Association is called to its deliberations.

Chairman J. C. Whitty announced a quorum present, and on motion, Rev. R. Ford was elected a member of the committee.

Colportage was taken up. This important work, recently undertaken in our borders, has been faithfully prosecuted with but poor remuneration. It was, therefore, moved that "each church in the Atlantic Association be requested to take up a collection in the month of February for Colportage." It was further agreed that "Rev. T. J. Leary, our efficient colporter, continue his work until our Union in May on a basis of four hundred dollars per year, including commissions." Bro. J. C. Whitty, Newbern, was appointed to receive and disburse colportage funds. The Committee requested Brother Leary to spend a few weeks in the pastorless Pamlico field.

It was decided to hold the May Union with the church at Smyrna, eighteen miles east of Morehead City, Rev. R. Ford to preach the opening sermon. The program committee—R. Ford, J. H. Vernon, H. C. Moore—made out a program which will appear in due season. Adjourned.

BURLINGTON, N. C., July 9, 1891.

I have been suffering with pulmonary consumption for more than three years, unable to perform any manual labor, and was finally closely confined to my bed, without hope of recovery. Commenced using the Electropoise last March, and I am now able to walk around anywhere I wish. It has proved a wonderful success in my case. To those that are suffering I say try it.

THOMAS BOSWELL,
Glencoe Cotton Mills.

Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, President of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of South Carolina, Charleston, S. C., writing under date of January 20, 1890, says: I was truly glad to learn that an office had been opened in our city for the sale of an instrument (the Electropoise) about which I became so enthusiastic a few months ago that I rashly went into print in an article describing its wonderful curative properties, I did not imagine the trouble I was bringing upon myself, for not a week has passed since that I have been called upon to give further testimony and tell more about it. I have friends who, after suffering for years the most excruciating pain, which the most skillful physicians North and South had failed to relieve, have been cured by the use of the Electropoise. It is a panacea for nervousness, brain fatigue, and general debility. It only needs a trial to convince the most skeptical, and when I hear the testimony of the Hon. Wm. C. Bibley, of Augusta, the Rev. T. W. Moore, D. D., of Florida, and others, whom I personally know and who have been benefited, I feel it a duty I owe suffering humanity to say, try the Electropoise.

MARRIED.

COMER—DUNN—In Moore county, N. C., by Rev. T. M. Baldwin, Mr. A. P. Comer and Miss Margarett Dunn.

JOYNER—FORBES—On Jan. 27th, 1892, by Rev. A. D. Hunter, Mr. Olthus Joyner and Miss Annie Forbes, all of Pitt county.

BAKER—SAVAGE—On the 27th ult., at the house of the bride's father, Mr. Simon Savage, by Rev. W. B. Waff, Mr. W. E. Baker of Bertie county, N. C., and Miss Jennie Savage of Nansemond county, Va.

DIED.

BLACK—Sister Sallie Black was born in Ashe county, N. C., in the year 1813, and died at her home January 16th, 1892. She lived as those who have hope of a glorious immortality. The writer saw her attending services about two weeks before she took her everlasting flight into those heavenly mansions above, where rest remaineth for the people of God.

E. C. T.

HARRELL—It is painful to write of the death of Sister Amanda Harrell, wife of Bro. N. J. Harrell, recently of Harrellsville, N. C. They had just moved to Greensboro, where she was a most excellent christian woman and spoke while sick of soon being in the skies. She died Jan. 20th. May God comfort the sorrowing ones.

W. B. WINGATE.

WELSH—On the 9th of January, 1892, of la grippe, Miss Jaqueline R. Welsh. Sister Welsh was about seventy years of age. She made a profession of religion when about eighteen years of age, and thus gave a long life to the Master's service. She was a member of Middle Swamp church, and an earnest, faithful christian; whose adorning was a "meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price." She had been in feeble health for a long time, and when the disease came, her weakened constitution could not withstand it. But she was ready, we believe, for the summons, and entered into the rest prepared for the people of God.

W. B. W.

ROGERS—In less than a week from the the death of Miss Jaqueline, she was followed by her sister, Mrs. Sarah M. Rogers, with whom she lived. Sister Rogers was the wife of Bro. Levi Rogers, and was about sixty-five years old. She also died of la grippe. When about sixteen years she gave her heart to the Saviour, and lived a quiet, peaceable life. She was a member of Middle Swamp church, and like her sister, loved her church and took an active interest in its work. Life brought her many trials and afflictions, but she bore them with christian resignation, often longing, however, to depart and be with Christ. On the 14th ult., death released her from her sufferings, and she went to dwell with her Saviour.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, Our Sunday-school was visited, Jan. 10th, 1892, by the impartial angel of death, who plucked from its ranks and from our midst our tenderly beloved and highly esteemed brother, P. B. Picot; therefore be it

Resolved, That we bow submissively to the will of him "who is too wise to err, too good to be unkind," "whose mercy endureth forever."

That our school has lost one of its members whose heart always beat in loving loyalty to the Sunday-school cause, whose hands were ever ready to bear aloft in exulting triumph its glorious banner.

That one of our classes has lost an efficient, earnest, investigating, consecrated teacher, whose genial smiles and gentle words his class will sorely miss.

That our deepest sympathy be extended to the bereaved wife and daughter, mother and father, sister and brothers, other relatives and friends.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and also to the Kind Words for publication.

"In Due Time."

I marked a child—a pretty child,
A gentle, blue-eyed thing;
She sowed the scented mignonette
One sunny day in spring:
And while the tiny grains she sowed,
The stream of thought thus sweetly flowed:

"On this dear bed the dew shall fall,
And you bright sun shall shine—
'Twill spring, and grow, and blossom then,
And it will all be m'ne!"
And the fair thing laughed in childish glee,
To think what a harvest hers should be.

I saw a man an acorn plant
Upon the hill-side bare—
No spreading branch, no shading rock,
Lent friendly shelter there;
And thus, as o'er the spot he bowed
I heard him—for he thought aloud;

"Frail thing! ere glossy leaf shall grace
Thy wise and sturdy bough,
I may be laid amid the dead,
As low as thou art now;
Yet wilt thou rise in rugged strength,
And crown this barren height at length."

Each had a hope: the childish heart
Looked to a summer's joy;
The manly thought—strong and mute—
Looked to futurity.
Each trusts to nature's genial power—
He wants a forest; she a flower.

Who sows the seed of heavenly truth,
And doubts Almighty power?
Will years less surely bring the oak,
Than months the summer flower?
Then sow, although no fruit you see;
God "in due time," will raise the tree.

Points for Parents.

HOW TO BRING DOWN A SON.

1. Let him have plenty of spending money.
2. Permit him to choose his own companions without restraint or direction.
3. Give him a latch key and allow him to return home late in the evening.
4. Make no inquiry as to where and with whom he spends his leisure moments.
5. Give him to understand that manners make a good substitute for morality.
6. Teach him to expect pay for every act of helpfulness to others.
7. Allow him to occupy a seat in church with the boys rather than a pew with his parents.
8. Permit him to regard the Sunday-school unsuitable for a boy on the verge of young manhood.
9. Let him spend the Sabbath hours between service on the street.
10. Be careful never to let him hear your voice in prayer for his salvation and spiritual growth.

HOW TO BRING UP A SON.

1. Make home the brightest and most attractive place on earth.
2. Make him responsible for the performance of a limited number of daily duties.
3. Never punish him in anger.
4. Do not ridicule his conceits, but rather talk freely on matters in which he is interested.
5. Let him feel free to invite his friends to your home and t ble.
6. Encourage his confidence by giving ready sympathy and advice.
7. Do not discourage "collection manias;" they help to give information and fix habits of investigation and perseverance.
8. Be careful to impress upon his mind that making character is more important than making money.
9. Live Christ before him all the time; then you will be able to talk of Christ t > him with power when occasions offer.
10. Be much in prayer for his salvation and spiritual growth.—Rev. D. E. Marvin, in Young Men's Era.

Advice to a Young Man.

Remember that in the morning of life comes the hard working days. Hard work never killed a man. It's fun, recreation, relaxation, holidays, that kill. The fun that results in the head, the next morning, being so big that a tub could hardly cover it, is what kills. Hard work never does.

Those who come after us have to work just as hard as we do.

You can't afford to do anything but what is good, you are on dress parade all the time.

Don't be afraid of pounding persistently at one thing. Don't be afraid of being called a one-idea man, or a crank.—Robert J. Burdette.

Taking a Nap.

While taking a nap we may have been resting one side of our face upon some rough surface. When we wake up we are surprised to be told that there are strange red figures upon that side of your face, as if it had been stamped. They disfigure our face. Those figures, however, disappear after the blood is in full circulation again. If weary in well-doing we lie down and take a nap; if we cease to be zealous toward the Lord for a time season, we become disfigured spiritually to some extent. But this disfigurement disappears when we wake up and go earnestly to work again.—Rev. Charles Luther Williams, in Young People's Union.

Wonderful Presence of Mind.

It was in India. Dinner was just finished in the mess room and several English officers were sitting about the table. Their bronzed faces had the set but not unkindly look common among military men. The conversation, at best had not been animated, and just now there was a lull, as the night was too hot for small talk. The Major of the regiment, a clean man of fifty-five, turned toward his next neighbor at the table, a young subaltern, who was leaning back in his chair, with his hands clasped behind his head, staring through the cigar smoke at the ceiling.

The Major was slowly looking the man over, from his handsome face down, when, with a sudden alertness and a steady voice, he said:

"Don't move, please, Mr. Carruthers. I want to try an experiment with you. Don't move a muscle."

"All right, Major," replied the subaltern, without even turning his eyes. "Hadn't the least idea of moving, I assure you. What's the game?"

By this time all the others were listening in a lazy, expectant way.

"Do you think," continued the Major, and his voice was trembling a little, "do you think you can keep absolutely still for, say, two minutes—to save your life?"

"Are you joking?"

"On the contrary, move a muscle and you are a dead man. Can you stand the strain?"

The subaltern barely whispered "Yes," and his face paled slightly.

"Burk," said the Major, addressing an officer across the table, "pour some of that milk in a saucer, and sit it on the floor here just back of me. Gently, man. Quick!"

Not a word was spoken as the officer quickly filled the saucer, walked with it carefully around the table, and put it down where the Major had indicated on the floor.

Like a marble statue sat the young subaltern in his white linen clothes, while a cobra di capella, which had been crawling up the leg of his trowsers, slowly raised its head, then turned, descended to the floor, and glided towards the milk.

Suddenly the silence was broken by the report of the Major's revolver, and the snake lay dead upon the floor.

"Thank you, Major," said the subaltern, as the two men shook hands warmly. "You have saved my life."

"You're welcome, my boy," replied the senior. "But you did your share."—Youth's Companion.

A Ship Destroyed.

Some years ago the merchant ship Albatross sailed from an Atlantic port, bound for the coast of Africa.

"And she will never reach it," said an old sailor on the pier.

"Why?" asked a bystander. "She seemed to me to be a staunch, well-built vessel."

"She should have had a copper bottom. Here is what I found on her hull."

He held out his hand, on which lay a soft, tiny mass a lump of taffy within a wall of shell.

"What harm could that do," said the other, laughing? "It is a harmless, half-dead creature."

"Harmless. I a'f dead creatures like that will eat into the soundest hull that ever was laid and leave it a rotten hulk," was the reply.

At the end of the year the good ship Albatross was reported to have sprung a leak and sunk. The barnacles had eaten their way through the sound oak timber and brought ruin and death.

How many gallant boys and young men leave school and college with high hopes for the long voyage of life before them? They are well born and trained; they have inherited vigorous bodies and alert minds, they are honest, self-respecting, ambitious; they are equipped with some special craft or profession, which will in all probability bring them success. The ship is, to all appearance, sound and staunch: the sails are set, the wind is fair, the sun shines; every voice prophesies a fair voyage.

But has any miserable little barnacle fastened on the sound timber? This lad relishes unclean jokes, and only is happy in low company; this gay, brilliant youth, a favorite in society, seeks only his own ease and comfort, another "good fellow" is regardless of money, whether it be his own or his neighbor's.

It is the little neglected traits, like the harmless worms, that eat into the strongest character, until they bring ruin. Remember, boys, it is hard to clean them off in the middle of the voyage. A great vice, which draws upon us the scorn of the world, or its punishments, we strive to drag out by force; but the habits, the routine of daily acts acquired in youth usually stay with us. —Youth's Companion.

"Do the duty lying nearest to you" is a phrase that has been often since Carlyle first gave it utterance. And yet, we imagine, we talk about it more than we act on its principle. Nothing, however, can be more important than it. To do the duty lying next to us, each moment, each day, is to prepare us for the duty lying beyond. If we fail, we break the line of continuity, and introduce an element of weakness into our lives. In truth, we shall not, in the best way, reach the duty farthest from us save through the duty nearest. He who does not begin at Jerusalem will hardly go to the uttermost parts. He who does not seek to illustrate to the fullest extent christian manhood at home, will hardly be eminent in illustrating it abroad. The duty nearest us, young people, is the duty most imperious in its demands and the most far reaching in its influence.—Young People's Union.

Best of All.
CHICAGO, May, 1888.
I consider it my duty to recommend to all sufferers of nervous diseases Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, now 15 years of age, was suffering for 4 years from epilepsy to such an extent that no remedy seemed to even relieve the attacks, but after using only 5 bottles of Koenig's Nerve Tonic he had but one slight attack. I make this statement out of gratitude, and with the desire to make this best of all remedies better known. T. STEIN, 321 22d St.
I certify to the truth of the facts as stated above. L. KLING,

Electropoise
SIMPLE IN CONSTRUCTION. PERMANENT IN DURATION. EASILY APPLIED. ITS SKILLFUL USE QUICKLY LEARND.
The Electropoise is an Instrument for the Cure of Disease Without Medicine.
BASED on new theories of the cause and cure of disease, it deals with the electrical and magnetic conditions of the body and the gases surrounding it in the atmosphere, controlling these conditions at will. It is not electricity. DISEASE is simply impaired vitality. The Electropoise constantly aids to the vitality and only assists nature, in nature's way, to throw off the trouble.

Sketches of Pioneer Baptist Preachers in North Carolina.

BY JOHN W. MOORE, STATE HISTORIAN.

MEMOIR V—REV. LEMUEL BURKITT.

CHAPTER FIVE.

The treatment of historical subjects is largely subject to the same rules of treatment that regulate a painting illustrative of some event in the past. Thus we find the artist gives prominence of place in his grouping and the highest sights to the chief actors in the scene he depicts. On the same principle in our reproduction of the Baptist past in North Carolina, we must give Lemuel Burkitt all the space and position his unequalled services merited. It takes more space to tell the story of such a life because it was so much more frequent and abiding in its influence for good. He had brethren, no doubt, who were as zealous and faithful as he, but the measure of his deeds and achievements so far surpassed them all that comparisons would be simply odious. Indeed with the single exception of the great work of enlisting Baptist support in the cause of Foreign Missions and Education, he had left nothing to be added to the completeness of his work as a reformer. Nor was he to withhold his aid from those other steps for higher usefulness and consecration in the individuals and churches. He was to align himself alongside of Martin Ross, when that great preacher introduced his first memorable resolutions into the session of the Kehukee Association held in 1803, whereby they were exhorted to put themselves on the same level as had been lately witnessed among the Baptist people of Kettering in England. Dr Carey had gone on his way to seek the lost millions of British India, and Andrew Fuller was left to lead his people into a proper support of the new apostle to the Gentiles. American Baptists had manifested great interest in the salvation of their Indian neighbors, but that they owed any duty to heathen nations beyond the seas had never suggested itself to their minds. It required just such leaders as Ross and Burkitt to bring on so great proposals. Of course the old conservatives were there in force to protest against the Lord's work, simply because they and their fathers had not found it their duty to help in the conversion of the heathen millions. But with two such champions of missions to thunder forth the defence of the work they had embraced, the smaller natures were either abashed or so silenced, that a proper circular was framed and sent out to the churches urging them to go forward in the work of the Lord.

It was remarked at the conclusion of the last chapter that Mr. Burkitt came back from his recent participation in the great revival in the West in 1801 as one who had been freshly inspired and magnified in his office as God's ambassador to perishing men. Never before had his voice such wondrous power on listening multitudes. It seemed that some wonderful spiritual magnetism flowed out from his person and prostrated the hardest hearted and most unbelieving of sinners. Vast crowds were in tumult of a varying emotion as the great preacher waxed ever more impressive and resistless in his pictures of the terrors awaiting the unrepentant death-bed. With equal force, but in the most melting appeals, the safety and beatitude of those who trust in Christ's atonement was presented as the wise alternative. His first meeting with his Baptist people on his return was at the Kehukee Association, held that year with the church at Great Swamp in Gates county. In a sermon he told of the wonders of God's grace he had witnessed in the West. How in eight months more than six thousand souls had been converted, and how the work was still widening and deepening as it extended over the settlements of the new States. The effect was profound in its immediate and consequent results upon the people attending the session.

Great revivals at once began in the surrounding churches, and the next year two thousand additions to the membership of the congregations were reported to the Association. As a specimen of the deep concern which had taken possession of the people's minds in relation to the salvation of their souls, a short and exceedingly modest account from the pen of Mr. Burkitt himself is herewith given. Says he:

"At a Union Meeting at Parker's (Meherrin) Meeting House in August, 1803, it was supposed there were four thousand people. The weather proved very rainy on Sunday. There was a stage erected in the meeting house yard, and at about half after eleven o'clock Elder Burkitt ascended the stage to preach, and it was expected from the appearance of the clouds it would rain every moment, and before he was done preaching it did so. Yet notwithstanding, the numerous congregation still kept together; and although every effort was used to shun the rain by umbrellas, carriages, blankets etc., yet we believe one thousand people were exposed to the rain without any shelter; and some crying, some convulsed on the ground, some begging the ministers to pray for them; and they composedly stood and received the falling shower without ever being dispersed."

This was in all truth a severe test upon Mr. Burkitt's powers in holding the attention of his congregation. Very rare have been the instances of such unusual influence over a mixed multitude. It proves conclusively that he was indeed a great orator. Yet those who heard him preach said that his voice was far from being strong and sonorous. He was of medium height, well-formed and active in his movements. So much was he loved and trusted by people of all creeds that in the State Convention called to meet in Hillsboro in 1788 to consider the propriety of adopting the new Federal Constitution, he with no solicitation on his part was chosen along with Maj Samuel Harrell as a delegate to represent Hertford county. He had been so uniform in his support of the American cause and so firm in his adhesion to the more democratic views of Mr. Jefferson and his supporters, that it was safely left to his discretion to determine for his constituents as to what should be done in the premises.

With increasing years beginning to warn him of failing strength, Lemuel Burkitt, after his return from the revival in the West, only redoubled his previous zeal and labors for the Lord. Though not yet an old man so far as the lapse of years is concerned, he was yet sensibly feeling the results of ceaseless labor. The night was close at hand when a long rest would be his. He who giveth his beloved sleep had one more great work for the faithful servant, and then like Moses on Pisgah, all the weary load of toil and responsibility would forever be lost in the peace of God. The famous query touching the duty of the Baptist churches then constituting the Kehukee Association as to Foreign Missions had developed in the ensuing years plain proofs of a want of unity and homogeniety as between the congregations east and west of Roanoke river. While the ascendency of Messrs. Burkitt and Martin Ross was too great for open opposition to a scheme of love they both so warmly advocated, yet there were such delays in action and such cold commendation from most of the churches lately returned from their temporary revolt, that the two great preachers, along with Hon. George Outlaw of Bertie, were convinced that if the Albemarle Baptist churches ever expected much christian growth and development, then it was time to sever all entangling ties with the torpid and lifeless crowd that only hung as an incubus on their best efforts to advance the cause of the Lord and his people.

Moving on this line, petitions were sent up from the Albemale churches to the Kehukee Association as it met in session at Meherrin in 1805. Then and there the great body, since known as the Chowan Association, had its origin. It was in the next year that the first session was held, and from that day to this the mighty results on the one hand wrought by the new body, and the schism, slow decay and total non-effectiveness of the other, show how wise and timely was the movement. If Burkitt and Ross had been gifted with such length of years as Methusaleh, and the leavening power of the Chowan churches had still in the clear vision of old by sheer force of higher zeal and faith kept this people from the ruin and downfall of 1827, it would have been accomplished at great cost. Not only would many a noble step taken in reaching a higher plane of usefulness been checked and retarded by the crowd who could see nothing good beyond what was practiced by their fathers, but the wear and tear of souls thus chained to a body of death would have realized something of the Apostle's torture when he cried out in his anguish as to who should deliver him from such tribulation. There is no curse greater to any christian sect than churches which are so lifeless and avaricious, that they were ever found as stumbling blocks in the way of others who are anxious to give themselves and their means to the Lord's cause. The human heart is never so cunning and remorseless as when framing excuses for withholding any bestowal of its hoarded treasures. Men who are apparently godly in other respects, find their shibboleth on such an occasion. With all their sighs, groans and loud prayers in public, they find it impossible to part with that accursed gold that has stolen their souls from the Master.

Elder Burkitt had planted a new church at Potecasi, but it was not organized until the year after his death. He saw the Chowan Association move off on that noble and illustrious career which, under God's providence, has resulted in so many blessings to the Baptists of the whole State. He served as its Clerk for the two years he was spared to his people, but his long service in the same capacity in the old Kehukee made his soul still yearn for the presence and companionship of many that he loved very tenderly. It was thus that he missed no session of the venerable mother of so many Associations. The greetings were as warm as of old, and on Sunday the great crowds of people listened with a strange awe and delight to a preacher they had long thought the greatest in the world, and yet here he was aflame with a strange light in his eyes, and his voice thrilled with a burden it never bore before. Overflowing with the greatness of the issues at stake and the shortness of his time in this world, he would descend with streaming eyes from the pulpit, and, falling on his knees, he would beseech his hearers to be reconciled to God.

The premonition of coming death was one of the strangest incidents in the life of this extraordinary man. He was but fifty-seven years old and apparently in health, but the inner voice was repeating ever and anon, "Labor while it is yet day, for the night cometh wherein no man can labor." The event abundantly justified the correctness of these mysterious premonitions. He was preaching in July, 1807, when in the midst of his discourse he was seized by an ague. The end sure enough had come at last. They bore him in much love and tenderness to his humble home and were soon to bear him to his grave. Like Charles II., he never rallied from the fatal effects of those awful chills that slew so many thousands before the world and the doctors had learned the value of quinine.

Thus passed from the theatre of his usefulness a most richly and variously gifted man. In thirty years he had managed to bring about larger and more lasting improvements in the eastern Baptist people than all his predecessors had been able to accomplish in the century preceding. He was not one of those men who was great on a single line of human excellence. He was no more eloquent or successful in the pulpit than he was deep and accurate in his theological stores. With a strong bias to practical fancies, he could yet make as deep and subtle an analysis of any chain of reasoning as if the impassioned images of his vision never led to such rapturous flights in his oratory. His greatest usefulness after all were the personal magnetism and tact that enabled him to win all hearts and then keep them in spite of the fact that he was so often brought in temporary antagonism with such friends as he pressed on his way as a reformer of abuses. It was seen and known that though only the Clerk of the Association, yet it was Lemuel Burkitt's will and schemes that were the rule of all the great christian body. Yet no one ever resented or denounced this powerful control exercised by a subordinate officer. It was accepted as a matter of course and the reformer was thus left to go on his way rejoicing. But these and all things else earthly were become things of the past when the Rev. Aaron Spivey as the preacher of the funeral sermon, and his sorrowing brethren far and near, gathered to bury his remains out of human sight. "A great man and a prince in Israel" had fallen in his armor. He had served long and nobly, and in dying had left not his like in all the land so abundantly blessed by his life and labors.

The Birthday Ball.

BY REV. CHAS A. G. THOMAS.

And the daughter of the said Herodias came in, and danced, and pleased Herod and them that sat with him, the king said unto the damsel, Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee.—Mark 6. 22.

It was the spring of the year 29 when Herod sent out invitations to the best society of his province to attend his birthday ball. As the night of festivities approaches, Herodias, the unlawful wife of Herod, is quietly scheming vengeance on John the Baptist for his scathing denunciation of her illegal union. The night arrives. Behold the scene! The hall is decorated in splendor. The table is laden with a sumptuous feast. The fashionable society with elegant costumes grace the occasion with their presence. They feast until satisfied. They drink until intoxicated. They call for the dance. Hired dancers appear and go through the movements of that day. But that is not all. There appears upon the floor another figure—a princess—breaking through the standards of propriety and dancing before their lustful eyes in garments which, combined with her movements, worked upon the hearts of the guests with unspeakable effect. This ball was to that day and place what the average ball is to this, and gives me the occasion to discuss the modern dance and its influence upon the people.

I discuss the dance because I believe it to be one of the greatest social evils. I believe it is immoral, and must warn my people against it. But let me say that I do not brand every one who dances as immoral or unrefined. I believe there are numbers of women of refinement who dance. They are innocent of anything like impurity, but they are drawn into it by a society whose first thought is self-indulgence, and whose influence is against spiritual religion. I am not discussing the dancers, but the dance; not the dance as it was or might be, but as it is.

I. OBJECTIONS ANSWERED.

(1) "There is no more harm to dance than to gossip." Admit it, but it proves nothing; certainly not that dancing is innocent, for you are comparing dancing with a harmful thing. Gossip is very sinful, and if dancing is no better it also is sinful on your own ground. But when you offer this objection you are not paying yourself a great compliment, for you are making the admission that you can't converse without gossip, or else you can only pass the time either with a sinful use of the tongue or feet. It seems to me that the objection condemns rather than justifies.

(2) "The Bible says there is a time to dance." It also says in the same chapter "a time to kill." Now, suppose upon that authority you get up a "killing ball." The Bible also says "a time to plant;" and isn't it remarkable that the people who do the most of the dancing do the least of the planting?

(3) "But David and Miriam danced." Yes, David danced, but before whom? a fashionable belle? The Book says, "before the Lord." Miriam also danced, but not in the embrace of a dude. There are several facts about the Bible dance which should be mentioned. (a) It was a religious act. Is the modern dance religious? (b) Practiced on great and joyful occasions. In certain places the great occasion for a dance is the presence of fiddlers. (c) It was usually performed in the day. Now it is done in the night. (d) The sexes were separated. Now they are very closely united. (e) Those who perverted the dance were deemed wicked, and were punished. Job 21: 11.

(4) "But dancing in the abstract is not wrong." Did you ever see anybody dance in the abstract? All that I have ever seen or heard of has been in the concrete.

(5) "If I never do anything worse than dancing, simply keeping time with my feet to music, I'll get along very well." Here again is bad logic. No sensible person holds that there is any harm in keeping time to music. Many persons do that in church. Keeping time to music is not all that is in the modern dance. This I will now try to show.

II. EVILS CONSIDERED.

I have engaged in the dance. The Tuesday night before I gave my heart to Christ I danced nearly all night. I have on several public occasions since seen the dance, and I am fully convinced that it is evil in every particular.

(1) It is detrimental to health. The heated room, atmosphere heavily freighted with impurities, the passing out of these into cold halls and porticos, the late hours, exciting movements, all tend to undermine the health. The continued exercise is exhausting and unfits for the duties of the next day. All these, combined with the undress of the costumes, have a tendency to produce pneumonia an l consumption and other diseases.

(2) It is detrimental to mind. The dancers as a rule are the novel readers of a community. How much time they waste upon extravagant dress to the neglect of the mind. Read the newspaper accounts of the last ball, and it is a rehash of fine dress. It takes but little brains to dance. Monkeys can beat men at it. There is no exchange of ideas in the dance, but a great deal of emotion and magnetism. The action of the trustees of the North Carolina University indicates clearly what they think about the matter, and shows clearly that the dance takes the mind from its best interests. Distinguished scholars have gone to the commencements to deliver addresses, and only a few of the students heard them. Attention was called to it, and it was found that they danced all night on Tuesday and Wednesday. An order was passed that dancing should stop at one o'clock on those nights. The next year the order was disregarded and the dance continued until three a. m. The visiting committee then recommended to forbid dancing on those nights. This was carried by a vote of twenty to five. President Winston spoke in favor of the report. Now the ball occurs after the session closes.

A correspondent of the Richmond Dispatch, writing from White Sulphur Springs in 1887, says: "Time was—not very long ago—when non dancers were considered social bankrupts, but such is not the case now. A young lady can be a belle and not enter a ball-room, for it becomes more and more apparent that the best men—that is, the most agreeable, intellectual, substantial men—do not dance; and a cultured girl need have no fear of being a 'wall flower' even when the german is in progress."

The Christian Inquirer of New York, a year or so back, had similar statements concerning summer resorts, and asks the question, "Is the common sense of the world going to join the church in regarding the dance as, at best, a trivial and unsatisfactory recreation?"

(3) It is detrimental to morals. (a) Dancing violates the best standards of social conduct, and thus touches good morals. If I were to draw a picture of a man and woman in the act of waltzing on a blackboard, or were to call up a wife or sister and give an object lesson, it would shock every person in this house. I saw children dancing to music last summer, and the position of the children was altogether different from that of the young men and women. The combination of music and bodily motion among the children gave them pleasure, and seemed innocent and helpful when done in moderation. But as the age advances it passes from a form of exercise—exercise is no longer enough—to an act of familiarity which would be tolerated nowhere else in social life. If a man was to look through a parlor window and see his wife or daughter alone with a man in the attitude of the waltz, there would be a divorce suit or murder. Think of it! A man with but an hour's acquaintance with a woman, putting one hand around her body and with the other clasping tightly her hand, and with limb to limb, body to body, head to shoulder, and the dress exposing arms and bust of the woman, they whirl to the strains of enrapturing music. I emphatically declare that such an amusement, as thus violates the high and noble standards of good society, is immoral, and the patronage of the "best society" nor the recognition of any church, can give it respectability. However pure and innocent the women may be who engage in the dance, familiarity allowed tends to immorality and stimulates to excess. (b) The dance opens the avenues to unholy desires. Men do not dance together. Women do not dance together. Who ever heard of an old bachelor's ball? Who ever attended an old maid's dance? Why not have these? Every man knows why. Marriage usually puts an end to dancing. Very rarely married women dance except when unhappily married. Almost every circumstance connected with the dance points to passion. Gail Hamilton says, "The thing in its very nature is unclean and cannot be washed. The very pose of the parties suggest impurity." Did you ever listen to the conversation of the boys after a dance? (Now, boys, I'm going to tell on you.) Listen: "She dances up to a fellow alright." "I wouldn't give a cent to dance with Miss ——. She is as cold as a post." That means passion and nothing less. Have you ever seen the beginning of a ball? The boys bring the girls, and when they get to the door the girls go to their room and "lay off their wraps." The boys go to the hay stacks and "lay off their wraps," to be used between sets. Ask any physician if the modern dance can exist without stimulating to unholy desires, "and if he says yes, he is either a fool or a liar; a fool because he does not know physical science, or he loves to dance and lies to conceal his sin." Dr. Vincent quotes a minister of large experience as saying that any intelligent and honest physician will tell you it sets the passions on fire. Prof. Wilkerson says, "And shall I not cry shame upon a usage that, under cover of respectability, regularly titillates and tantalizes an animal appetite as insatiable as hunger, more cruel than revenge? * * * * * I charge that here, and not elsewhere, in the anatomy of that elusive fascination which belong so peculiarly to the dance, the scalpel is laid upon the quivering secret of life. Passion—passion transformed if you please never so much, subsisting in no matter how many finely contrasted degrees of sensuality—passion, and nothing else, is the true basis of the popularity of the dance."

Byron is a competent witness. I can give only one extract:

"Round all the confines of the yielded waist,
The strangest hand may wander undisplaced;
* * * * * *
Thus all and each, in movement swift or slow
The genial contact gently undergo;
Till some might marvel, with the modest Turk,
If 'nothing follows all this palming work?'
True, honest Mirza! You may trust my rhyme,
Something does follow, at a fitter time;
The breast thus publicly resigned to man,
In private may resist him—if it can."

(c) Ruinous to christian influence. The world has no middle ground for the christian. When a christian dances the report goes abroad, "Miss Piety danced," but nothing is said about "Mr. Worldly." A christian woman once said "there was no harm in the dance," and in the next breath declared that "the dance kept her children from the church." The best and most intelligent christians take a stand against the dance. The Catholic Bishop of Quebec said, "The round dance is a particular kind of dance possessed of the devil." The Bishop of the United States in 1866 said it was "revolting to every feeling of delicacy and propriety, and is fraught with the greatest danger to morals." Bishop Hopkins of the Episcopal church said, "Dancing is chargeable with waste of time; hinderance to useful study; the indulgence of display and vanity; and tends to the excitement of the passions." Bishop Meade, of the same church, said, "It is in itself wrong, improper and of bad effect." Bishop Coxe, of Western New York, same church, says, "The modern dance—waltz, german, or whatever else they call it—is immoral." Adam Clarke, of the M. E. church, said, "I know it to be evil and that only." Bishop Pierce, of the M. E. church, said it was "the silliest amusement that rational beings ever engaged in." Dr. Cuyler, of the Presbyterian church, says, "The whole trend of the promiscuous dance is against moral purity and spirituality." Dr. Palmer, of the same church, said the dance "will open wide the flood-gates of immorality."

God's word is against the dance. Gal. 5: 19-21; 1 Peter 4: 1-3. There is hardly a doubt but that the word "revelling" corresponds to the modern dance. "Love not the world." "Be separate." "Be not conformed," &c. Similar counsel from God's word is against the dance. What should be our attitude to the dance as a church? I believe that after due warning, counsel, entreaty, if members still persist, they should be excluded from membership. But we have reason to thank God that we are free from dancing church members. I now add

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1892

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

BRO. DUNCAN MCNEIL, of Richmond county, will represent the BIBLICAL RECORDER in the counties of Richmond, Anson, Montgomery, Robeson, Columbus, Brunswick and Bladen.

BAPTISTS AND RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

The Psalmist says, "The entrance of thy word giveth light," and the Apostle Paul thus exhorts christians, "Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." From these two passages of Holy Writ, and others like them, we infer that the acceptance of God's word and its teaching, especially as completed by New Testament revelation, gives men true light, by which they are to judge questions of conscience and to regulate religious faith and practice. We are also taught that there is a liberty that a man attains unto, when he accepts God's word, and Christ as his Saviour, which is precious, and in which he is exhorted to "stand fast."

Ever since the organization of the first New Testament church at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost, down to the present, there have been people who held to a faithful and honest interpretation of God's word, and hence to the cardinal principles that we as a people now hold. It is on this ground that we believe our people can date their origin from Christ and his apostles. It is a fact that no intelligent student of church history can deny that whenever the church became corrupted by the introduction of Judaistic errors, pagan rites, and the assumptions of unscriptural ecclesiasticism, that at once there sprang up on all sides those who protested against the prevailing errors. It is a remarkable fact that among those who thus protested could always be found the remnant of true disciples. The Lord in ancient and modern times has never been without true witnesses on earth. These witnesses have ever been noted for their adherence to God's word. "Thus saith the Lord" has ever been the end of all cavil on their part.

Hence, we Baptists modestly, and yet joyfully, claim that our fathers and progenitors have been found in all ages of the church. They were known by different names: Sometimes they were organized; at others, like flocks scattered to the four winds, without visible organization, and yet always to be found, and always a homogeneous people, humbly following God's word, and having fellowship one with another. There is an unseen, yet mighty spiritual bond that has always united our people together. The Baptists have ever, and if they continue faithful to their record, must ever be distinguished and marked as a peculiar people. Among other peculiarities that thus distinguish them is their intense love for both civil and religious liberty. It is with the latter, however, that we have now to do. The Baptist love for religious liberty may be the better understood when we remember the following facts:—

1. As a people they are unalterably opposed to the union of Church and State. This opposition is based upon the fact that they find no traces of such unholy union in the faith and practice of the Apostolic churches, and the further fact that they have implicit faith in Christ's leadership and power as the only Great Head of the church. It is not necessary here to repeat the record of the struggles of our fathers in ancient and in modern times to maintain their belief on this particular subject. The line of march of Christ's redeemed church through the wilderness of this world can be traced in many places by the bleaching bones of Baptist martyrs, or men of like faith and spirit. Through the efforts of these martyrs, light, by God's help, has come to the world. Mainly through the efforts of our fathers, assisted to some extent by other creeds that had caught more or less of their spirit, the church establishment was utterly broken down in America. Dr. Hawks, good Episcopal authority, says "the establishment was easily put down. The Baptists were the principal promoters of this work, and in truth aided more than any other denomination in its accomplishment."

2. They believe in the complete independence of the individual local churches, and admit no authority whatever above the local church, except that of Christ himself. Hence they are opposed to delegating authority to ecclesiastical courts, councils, &c. Nor are they willing to submit to the mandates of bishops, archbishops, or popes. Such place, power and authority in the hands of one man, or a body of men, independent of the local church, and you at once not only destroy the New Testament independence that Christ and the apostles established, but inevitably prepare the way for ecclesiastical domination and the union between Church and State. The best man, or men, that ever lived cannot be trusted with unscriptural authority. As proof, notice the contrast between the gentle remonstrance of the pious metropolitan of old and the thunders of the Vatican to day!

3. They believe in the voluntary system of supporting worship and of propagating the faith. Not even a local church has a right to assess its members without their consent. It is true that a majority of votes in any local church requiring such assessment makes it lawful; but even in that case the assessment should be publicly read, and each church member allowed the privilege of changing the amount of his assessment if any good reason for the change can be given. When such is done, the contribution is really voluntary and in accordance with Baptist usage. We do not regard the Old Testament regulation of giving one-tenth as binding now. It is, however, a good rule to follow. Some may find that they can give more, some less; but the giving ought to be voluntary. The idea of willingness seems to pervade the whole New Testament. "Whosoever will let him take the water of life freely." We are exhorted to render to the Lord a willing service, etc. Before God's people were enlightened as they are under the new dispensation, he regulated their civil and religious life by many ordinances, rites and precepts, but now they are supposed to have such a correct and spiritual conception of the relation between them and their Father and the needs of his kingdom as to do their duty, and not abuse the freedom of which the apostle spoke when he said, "Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free," &c.

4. They believe in the entire freedom of the conscience, the mind, the soul, when the same are enlightened by the teachings of God's word, and it is made the ultimate standard of appeal. The conscience, not properly enlightened by the Bible, is not a safe guide; nor can the mind decide wisely, or the soul have proper spiritual insight, as to religious duty or responsibility, without bowing to the authority of God's book, and making it the only true standard of appeal. The failure to do this caused no little strife and division in the religious world.

5. They are unalterably opposed to infant baptism, (so called), and all other rites which trample upon the liberty of choice or conscience. The Pope at Rome is responsible for the wresting of baptism from its true place in the christian system, and for putting it before instead of after repentance and faith, and also making it an involuntary act of a helpless and unconscious babe. How does the advocate of infant baptism know that his child, when old enough to exercise intelligent faith and choose his church connection, will think just as he does on baptism and kindred subjects? Where has God given the parent or sponsor any such authority? How shall he be said to have made a full choice of his faith, and how can he be held to a strict accountability for his stewardship when he stands before the Judge, if others are to believe and act for him in matters of such importance? To baptize an unconscious babe, then, is to treat it like an idiot, and to deprive it of that liberty of belief and action that God has undoubtedly given to each one of his rational crertures. Here, as elsewhere, Baptists are found true to such record as the distinguished historian Bancroft makes of them, "Freedom of conscience, unlimited freedom of mind, was from the first a trophy of the Baptists; or that of the celebrated John Locke, "The Baptists were the first, and only promoters of the absolute liberty, just and true liberty, equal and impartial liberty."

Our history, then, and our record especially on soul liberty, as founded on God's word, are causes, not of self-congratulation, but of humble and devout thankfulness to our God, who has brought us out of the wilderness of fiery persecution and given us a name and a local habitation in this fair land. Let us be true to the trusts imposed upon us.

HON. A. M. SCALES, ex Governor of North Carolina, died at his home in Greensboro on Tuesday evening, February 9th. Governor Scales had been hopelessly ill for more than a month, and his friends had long dispaired of his recovery. We knew him well, and had the highest respect for him both as a man and State officer. He was a pious christian, an honest, conscientious politician and officer. No man ever discharged the duties of a high office with purer motives or a higher sense of duty. Without brilliant talent or high pretentions, he was a gallant soldier, a pure patriot, a noble, true man.

ANNIVERSARY AT WAKE FOREST.

This is always a pleasant occasion at the College. The young men at Wake Forest have always shown a most zealous interest in the Literary Societies of the Institution. The halls are said to be the finest in the entire South. The invitations sent out from year to year are, we think, as elaborate and handsome as those from any other College, North or South.

The fifty seventh anniversary was celebrated on the 12th inst. by a public debate at two o'clock and by an oration delivered by a member of each Society. The subject for discussion was "Ought Canada to be annexed to the United States?" and was discussed by Messrs. Graves of Selma, and Kittrell of Kittrell's, for the affirmative, and by Messrs. Bridges of Texas and Webb of Shelby, for the negative. The debate was pronounced by competent judges to be up to the average of these occasions. The question was decided in the negative, a majority very gratifying to the young men who espoused that side of the question. The orations delivered by Mr. J. S. Ray from the Euzelian Society, and Mr. J. W. Millard from the Philomathesian Society, were well written and delivered in admirable style.

The social gathering in the Literary halls was well attended and seemed to be thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

The professors and students are all in good health, and are ready for the last half of the year's work.

June will be here very soon, and forty young men are looking for their diplomas on Commencement day. These men will be felt in the pulpit, in the law, in medicine, and on the farm. North Carolina needs them all, and for honest, faithful labor will give them a bountiful support.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. J. S. Hardaway of Oxford returned last week from a visit to friends in Virginia.

....Rev. R. T. Vann of Scotland Neck is preaching to large congregations, and his brethren are delighted.

....Rev. J. Walter Kenney is settled in Smithville, S. C. His correspondents will please bear this in mind.

....Rev. G. M. Webb of Randleman, N. C., called to see us on Thursday last when on his way to the Wake Forest Anniversary.

....Rev. Jo. H. Lamberth, the bishop of Person county, with a party of his parishioners, went down to Wake Forest on Thursday last.

....The Sunday-school Association of the Caldwell Association will be held with Lower Creek church, near Lenoir, March 25th to 27th.

....Rev. A. W. Lamar accepts the call to the First church, Galveston, Texas. From the extreme Northwest he goes to the extreme South.

....Rev. A. W. Crabtree of Longford, N. C., has all his time filled in looking after his four churches. He has baptized six persons recently.

....The First Baptist church, Savannah, Ga., has called Rev. Dr. George B. Eager, of Anniston, Ala., to succeed the late Dr. Holmes.—Index.

....DeLand, Florida, Big Stone Gap, Newport News! How familiar these names are to the readers of Virginia papers, secular and religious.

....The Orphanage church has resumed its monthly conference; has elected Rev. J. M. Hilliard pastor, and chosen two deacons.—Charity and Children.

....Rev. Dr. J. J. Taylor of Mobile, Ala., declines the call to the First church, Chattanooga, Tenn.—Baptist Courier. We verily thought he would accept.

....Rev. A. L. Stough has reached Kinston, and his congregations are large. Bro. Stough is hopeful, and determined to push forward the Baptist cause in that town.

....Rev. Dr. J. B. Taylor of Lexington, Va., recently delivered a lecture in Chatham, Va., on "Good Times." Wish he would come over here and cheer us by such a lecture.

....Rev. Dr. J. J. Hall of the Baptist Tabernacle, Raleigh, delivered on Wednesday evening of last week an interesting lecture to his people on the life of the late C. H. Spurgeon.

....Rev. G. P. Hamrick with his family, moved to Boiling Springs last week. We regret to lose Mr. Hamrick and family, but congratulate Boiling Springs on the acquisition it has made.—Shelby Review.

....Rev. Dr. R. H. Pitt of Richmond, Va., resigns the pastorate of the Venable Street church, which he has served acceptably for six years, and will devote all his time to work on the Religious Herald.

....Rev. W. H. H. Lawhon of Carthage has been carefully nursing his aged father for ten weeks. The aged saint is now extremely ill and daily expected to die. Bro. Lawhon has for this reason not been able to fill any of his appointments.

....Rev. P. G. Elson, a Virginia evangelist, closed a meeting with the First church, Suffolk, Va., last week that resulted in forty professions of faith, and in this week aiding Rev. Dr. Theo. Whitfield of Richmond, Va., in a meeting.

....Rev. George W. Newell of Mapleville, Franklin county, was in Raleigh on Wednesday of last week and called to see us. Bro. Newell is one of the delegates to the Alliance Convention to be held in St. Louis on February 22d.

... Rev. T. S. Wright has removed from Wadesboro to Bennett, N. C., and taken charge of Deep Creek church for three-fourths of his time. He also preaches for Mt. Olive and Peachland. The Lord is blessing him in his work.

....Rev. Dr. Broughton has recently received calls from Baptist churches at Leaksville, Concord and Winston, N. C. He will probably accept the call from the latter place.—Reidsville Review. [He has accepted the call to the latter place.]

....We learn that the Baptists are discussing the question of building a new church at this place. The matter is nearly decided, and it is thought the new building, which will be a large, modernly constructed one, will be located on West Decatur street.—Madison News.

....Prof. E. L. Middleton of Durham, N. C., called to see us when on his way to Wake Forest last Friday. He graduated from Wake Forest College some years ago, and feels like returning again to his home. Wake Forest College is greatly blessed in the character of her graduates.

....The new Baptist church at Mt. Adar, eight miles north of Mebane, in Mt. Zion Association, will be finished it is hoped and dedicated in May. Rev. J. F. McDuffie, the pastor, and the little mission church, deserve great credit for this work. This is another house of worship on a mission field.

....Rev. J. L. Sproles, the new pastor at Shelby, has been most warmly welcomed by the church and people of that town, and has gone at once to work, looking for the blessings of the Lord upon the people. He is the brother of Dr. M. F. Sproles, the honored pastor of the Baptist church at Jackson, Miss.

....A minister who can preach to his church or churches regularly for years and give no hint as to his views on any denominational tenet or doctrine, is a ministerial curiosity. Paul's declaration that "he was made all things to all men" really did not mean that he held no special views or opinions on doctrinal points.

....Bro. John M. Stoner of Charlotte, N. C., in renewing his subscription, says: "The RECORDER is very dear to me. I do not see how it is possible for you to improve on it much. I do not know of many of our people here who take it, but I cannot understand how a good Baptist can get along without the RECORDER."

....Bro. W. P. Shaw of Winton, N. C., in sending an obituary notice to the RECORDER, says: "I find a large number of similar notices in the papers recently. How suggestive they are of the inquiry to which no human tongue can voice the reply, 'Who will be next?' and of the great injunction as well, "Be ye also ready."

....The Baptist Book Concern of Louisville, Ky., has published "The Choice," with notes by the late Rev. Dr. B. Manly, in convenient form, for churches and Sunday-schools. Price, 35 cents per copy. This is one of the best song books for churches and Sunday school to be found. We heartily commend it to all our readers.

....Prof. Charles Lee Smith of William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo., reports William Jewell prosperous and progressing. He promises us a letter for publication at no distant day. For years Bro. Smith was connected with the RECORDER, and is known and loved by thousands of good brethren in this his native State. They will be glad to hear from you, brother.

....Rev. D. J. Clark of Clarkton, N. C., writes: "The BIBLICAL RECORDER is sparkling and bright. You may soon ask more money for it. It can never be a cheap paper with its present staff. I could not do without it. My sermons would lack for it. I have been reading it fifteen years. My wife likes it; my children are reading it. What would our home be without it?"

....Thomas Lemuel Berkitt Whidby died near Atlanta, Ga., on January 2d, 1892, aged eighty-three years. He was born in Perquimans county, N. C., and moved to Georgia in 1829. He leaves a wife, seven children, twenty-one grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren. He had been married for sixty years, and a member of the Baptist church for the same period.

....J. H. Tucker, Esq., of Asheville, N. C., and Bro. Jordan Womble of Parnell, N. C., called to see us on Tuesday last. Brother Tucker reports Baptist affairs in Asheville prospering. The splendid new house of worship will be completed in the next six month. The basement room is now ready for use, and Rev. J. L. White, the new pastor, will occupy it on reaching Asheville.

....The funeral services of Mr. Spurgeon took place on Thursday last. Rev. A. T. Pierson, a leading American author, who has been occupying the pulpit of the Tabernacle during Mr. Spurgeon's sickness, preached the sermon, and Rev. A. C. Brown, pastor of the East London Tabernacle, delivered the oration at the grave. All the people of London manifested their respect for the dead preacher.

....Bro. W. A. Ray of Knoxville, Tenn., attended the Wake Forest Anniversary on Friday last. On his way out he and his little son called to see us. He reports the Baptists of Knoxville flourishing, and speaks of his pastor, Rev. Carter Helm Jones of the First church, as a deacon deeply in love with his pastor and church should. It was refreshing to hear Bro. Ray. Pastor Jones is a fortunate preacher, and will doubtless stay a long time in Knoxville. Bro. Haley, of the Second church of that city, is holding a most interesting series of meetings, with Bro. McConnell of Gainesville, Ga., aiding him.

....Rev. John F. Ellington died at his home in Clayton, N. C., on Tuesday evening, February 9th. Bro. Ellington was about ninety years old, and had spent more than fifty years in the active ministry. He was industrious and active as a man, and by his good sense and hard work accumulated considerable property. During all his long life he lived honestly and humbly as a servant of God, a pure and stainless life, and was greatly loved and honored by all who knew him. He leaves a number of children, among them Mr. J. T. Ellington of Johnston county, Mr. J. C. Ellington of Raleigh, to mourn his death. He was buried on Thursday, the 11th, Rev. O. C. Horton, his pastor, preaching his funeral.

....The second annual meeting of the Baptist State Sunday-school Convention of North Carolina will be held with the First Baptist church in Winston on April 14th to 17th. The Convention will be called to order for organization at 3 o'clock p. m., April 14th. The executive committee has arranged a suggested programme which, if adopted by the Convention, will be, we think, a feast of fat things to all who will attend. Some of the best speakers in Maryland, Virginia, Tennessee, and this State are on the programme, and have promised to be present and to do their "best." Their best is the best of the best. The progamme with subjects and names of speakers will be published soon.—C. Durham, for Ex. Com.

....The late Mr. Spurgeon was, as are some of the Baptists of England, an open communionist. But he was not in any sense offensively so. His life was spent not defending isms but in preaching the gospel of Christ both to saints and sinners. His success as a preacher and his popularity as a pastor lead a few ambitious but feeble-minded preachers in this country to come out as open communion Baptist preachers. The churches very promptly set these spirits aside, and their small candles soon went out. Mr. Spurgeon was not what is termed in this country an open communionist. It is true that strangers visiting his Tabernacle on communion occasions might, if they saw fit, remain and partake of the communion, but no person living in London and attending the Tabernacle could commune with the church unless he or she had a certificate as to character, &c., from the deacons of Mr. Spurgeon's church. Mr. Spurgeon held that conversion must precede baptism, and that baptism was immersion and immersion only.

A Word from Tarboro.

THE FIFE MEETINGS.

The Fife meetings closed on Wednesday night of last week, having continued twelve days. I doubt whether the evangelist has done better work in the whole course of his ministry, though he did not seem to take this view of it.

A new spiritual atmosphere pervades all the churches that participated in the meetings. Personal difficulties of long standing between christians were settled and the blessed spirit of peace-making spread to those who are outside the churches. Christians whose lives had been wrong made confession of it and pledged themselves to a new life of faith and holiness. It was surprising to see how many men among the church members acknowledged that they had neglected to maintain family worship; and all of them promised to set up the fireside altar.

Of the converts, twenty three have indicated their purpose to join the Methodists, six will go to the Presbyterians and about the same number to the Baptists, while some will go to the Episcopalians. As in all such cases some others will come in later after deliberation and investigation.

These results look small when compared with the returns from Louisburg, Oxford and Clinton, but in reality they are very large. The weather was cold, and as the opera-house, in which the meetings opened, could not be made comfortable, it was necessary to remove them to the Baptist church on the fourth day. The river was at flood and people could not come in from the country. The largest church in the place held aloof from the meetings and bore no part in the work. That so much should have been accomplished under the circumstances is quite as remarkable as the larger results reported from other places.

Of the evangelist himself, it may not be amiss for me to write a word. Of course he has much in common with the other evangelists that I have heard, from Earle and Graves to Pearson. That which differentiates him from them all is his christian experience. He had led a wild life, and grace rescued him from the very jaws of hell. The struggle was short, but while it lasted sharp and painful to the last degree. He can never forget it and can never doubt his own conversion or the power of God to save the worst of sinners. Having been converted himself, he turned with all his heart to the task of saving others. His experience forms the basis of his activity and imparts to his preaching a tinge of what in literature is called realism. His preaching, his prayers, his dealing with individual souls, all have this air of realism. He says he does not preach sermons; he gives readings from the Bible and relies on the Word to do the work, but his readings are conducted with rare skill and power. His greatest strength lies in the tenderness of his appeals to saints and sinners, though the prevailing tone of his mind is belligerent. He is a Presbyterian, but is entirely fair to all in his preaching, a thing which I could not say of Mr. Pearson. The converts here are distributed pretty nearly in proportion to the numerical strength of the churches represented in the meetings. There was little breaking away from the old places.

THOSE SUBSCRIPTIONS.

I have been very patient with the brethren of the Central, West Chowan and Tar River Associations, who made subscriptions to help me in my work here. The money is sadly needed. Will they not send it on soon as possible?

Our Missions in China.

BY REV. C. W. SCARBORO.

The subject assumes that we ought to have, and therefore have, a mission in China; have work to do there—work which belongs to us because God has given it to us. Wherever man is found without Christ, there the christian finds work; and because he has the spirit of Christ, he will ask that land, that people for an inheritance and for a possession. Ps 2: 8. If this be true, we cannot be deaf to the Macedonian cry of China. This cry, this soul cry comes from one third of the human race. Is it not something more than "An infant crying in the night,

An infant crying for the light,
And with no language but a cry"?

If we intend to obey God's command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," it is time we were studying China in earnest, that we may plan wisely and largely and go up and possess the land for him. I have tried with all the help at hand to spy out this land for you.

The geographical position of China is both interesting and significant. In many respects it is very similar to the United States. Both lie between twenty-five and forty-five degrees north latitude. Our Mississippi river is to us what the Yang-ste Kiang is to China. Our States correspond to the Chinese Provinces, while the area of each country is about 3,500,000 square miles.

Looking at the religious surroundings of China, we find that it is separated from the christian countries of Europe by barriers more formidable than its own great wall. On the north is the Russian Empire bidding defiance to western christianity; on the south is India separated from China by the Himalayan mountains, and India itself largely in darkness and needing help, while on the southwest is Turkey, Persia and Arabia with their Mohammedanism, probably the most powerful false religion known and fighting to the death every effort to turn the millions of Asia to Christ. Straight across the Pacific ocean from San Francisco the way is open, and no other way is beset with so few difficulties as this. Does it not seem to be a way left open by the Lord for the loving service of American christians?

Think, too, of the population of China. There are in China 400,000,0000 human beings, made in the image of God, but groping in the darkness of idolatry and superstition. Do we realize what 400,000,000 of people mean? Twice as many as North America, South America, Africa and Australia combined; joining hands singly, they would reach ten times round the world; marching by a given point in single file, at the rate of thirty miles per day, it would take them twenty-three years to pass. In China are one-third of all the human race, one-third of all who are to make the future of the world, one-third of all for whom Christ died, one-third of all who must appear with us at the judgment. Can we afford to meet them at God's bar until we have tried to save them? Will not the broken commands of God meet us there if we do no more than we have done? Remember, too, that these Chinese are rapidly increasing, settling the countries around the China sea, and pushing the other races into the background, and that 33,000 of them die every day and go into Christless graves. At the same death-rate, everybody in the United States would die in five years.

The possibilities of individuals and of nations are matters of character, and so we must study the character of the Chinese. They are not savages but were highly civilized when our ancestors were savages. Two thousand years B. C. they had their great canals and an elective monarchy. They were printers five hundred years before the time of Gutenburg and Faust, and navigators with the various compasses before America was dreamed of. They equal the Jews in industry and economy, and in their power to get and to hold. They go anywhere, everywhere, in search of work, and work when they have found it. They are not a dead people, but for a long time have slept. Just now the whistle of the steam engine is arousing the Chinaman. The railroad and telegraph have gone into China to stay. At this time a railroad six hundred miles long from Pekin in the northeast to Hanchow in central China is being built. The Englishman and the Yankee are in China also. English and American textbooks are being used in many of the schools. Western ideas and civilization are touching it at almost every point, and when these shall have broken from her hands the shackles of superstition, she must be one, certainly, of the great world powers. How inspiring the hope of laying all this power at the Master's feet!

They have a large trade at home, and their trade with Europe and America is rapidly increasing. They export immense quantities of tea, silk, chinaware, matting and firecrackers, and import cotton, woollen goods, opium, kerosene oil, silver and other metals.

The religious condition of China interests us most. It is the only great pagan or idol-worshiping nation left now. Other great pagan nations, such as Babylon, Nineveh, Persia, Egypt, India, are either gone down or ceased to be idol worshipers. China, then, is the last great stronghold of idolatry. In China there are gods many, and yet it is thought that there are traces of the worship of the one true God still left in China. Once a year the Emperor offers a whole burnt-offering in the "Temple of Heaven" in Pekin. Drs. Martin and Legge, two of China's foremost foreign scholars, regard this as a continuation of the primitive worship of God. But only the Emperor offers it. The sailors sometimes pray to the true God in extreme danger. Yet Dr. Graves of Canton tells us that the Chinese know nothing of the forgiveness of sin and the salvation of their souls. There are three religions in China—Tavoism, Confucianism and Buddhism. These religions, all three of them, are often held by the same person. These religions have never helped the people, never elevated them in character, and because God is not in them they can never save. As a matter of fact they have gone lower and lower until now they worship almost anything, and even trifle with and attempt to deceive what they call their gods. The most powerful of these three religions is that taught by Confucius, who lived about 500 B. C. His religion or philosophy was a moral system taking account of this life only, not of the life to come. He said, "We do not know life, how can we know death?" He magnified the respect due parents and all ancestors. The father and the husband might be tyrants—really did have the power of life and death. Only as a mother, or as the mother of a husband, did woman receive any respect. From this came ancestral worship. They worship their dead ancestors to get help in this life, help to drive a sharp trade, to insure good luck, to triumph over an enemy, indeed to get help to do almost any evil thing. If this is their worship, what must be their life? With false religion they have gone further and further from the right way until now lying, gambling, stealing, vile language, obscenity, opium-smoking, polygamy, killing their children and cruelty are the prevalent sins. Have the Chinese failed to live up to the light they have had? Yes, they have failed. Does that excuse us from sending them the gospel? Is there a single man or woman here to day who has done the best he could? No, not one. Now because we had not done our best, it was some one's duty to preach to us; for the same reason, and also because God has commanded us to do so, we are bound to send the gospel to China. The Chinaman and the American must be saved by the power of the Holy Spirit and by faith (Acts 15; 8—11)

In 1842 at the close of what is known as the opium war, China proper was opened to missionaries. In 1845 the Northern and Southern Baptists separated, and the Southern Baptist Convention was formed. In 1846 the S. B. Convention began work in China. But J. L. Shuck of Virginia and I. J. Roberts of Mississippi went to China in 1836 as missionaries of the old Triennial Convention. They were afterwards transferred to the S. B. Convention. The first missionaries of the S. B. Convention were S. C. Clopton and George Pearcy of Virginia. They reached Canton in October, 1846, and since that time our Convention has had some representative in China.

At this time we have missions in three sections of China. I shall speak of each mission separately.

1. Southern China, embracing the city of Canton and its vicinity. Canton is a city of about 1,500,000 inhabitants. It is larger than New York and is the seat of government for two provinces which contain 26,000,000 of people. It is also the chief city of trade for these provinces and is noted for its intelligence and enterprise as well as for its hatred of foreigners, and yet this mission has been noted as our most fruitful field. This mission was established in 1846. We have there now working in Canton and in the two provinces (Kwang Tung and Kwang Li) ten missionaries and twenty one native assistants. About one thousand have been baptized at this mission, five hundred of whom are in fellowship with the Canton churches. Twelve have been ordained as preachers, some of whom have been pastors of Chinese churches in the United States and in British Guinea. With this mission there are in our schools 396 pupils. In 1891 there were 78 baptisms, and the 500 members raised $641 60 for christian work. This mission has one self-supporting church and two others partially so; they have daily preaching in the chapels, make preaching tours into the country, circulate tracts and Testaments, hold meetings for women, conduct training classes for preachers, and keep up regular preaching at ten places in the country. It was at this mission that the native christians raised $950 and started a school of their own. Look at the record of these Chinese christians and learn that they are living, active workers for Christ.

2. From Canton in Southern China some six hundred miles to the north is Shanghai, the original station of our Central China Mission. Shanghai is the chief commercial city of China, and therefore the center of Western influence. It is the commercial capital of Kiang Lu Province, and this Province has 40,000,000 inhabitants. Mission work began at Shanghai in 1847 by J. L. Shuck and T. W. Tobey of Virginia, and by M. T. Yates of North Carolina. Brother Yates spent forty years on this field in heroic, successful work for Christ. This Central China Mission works in the three cities of Shanghai, Soochow and Chinkiang. Bro. Bryan has recently gone from Chinkiang to establish a mission at Yangchow twenty miles away. This may with propriety be called North Carolina's Mission, for of the fourteen missionaries at work there, eleven are from North Carolina. Here Mrs. Yates, the Herrings, the Tatums, the Brittons, the Bryans and the Chapells live and work. Here lived the native deacon Wong who built a chapel at his own expense that he might preach Christ.

Taking this great Province with 40,000,000 of souls and putting fourteen missionaries to work in it, we have one preacher to 2,857,142 souls, which is like having one preacher for both North Carolina and Virginia. We say our "Foreign Mission work"—is it our work or our play? Well may our brethren there beg for more help. The latest figures at command show for this mission four organized churches, fourteen missionaries, two native preachers and ten chapels. These churches have 147 members who gave last year $205 for christian work.

3. Some 450 miles north from Shanghai is our Northern China Mission. This mission is in the Province of Shan Tung which has 29,000,000 inhabitants. It is noted as the birth-place of the great Confucius. His descendants live there still, and the head of the family enjoys the hereditary title of Duke. This has been kept up for over 2,000 years. In recent times the Province has been noted for severe famines and for the number of its people who have become christians.

Tung Chow, Whang Hein and Pingtu are the centers from which our missionaries work. North Carolina has two missionaries on this field—Bro. Bostick at Tung Chow, and Sister Fannie Knight at Pingtu. Work was begun on this field in December, 1860, by J. L. Holmes and J. B. Hartwell. Holmes was killed by the Chinese rebels, and Hartwell is working with the Chinese in San Francisco.

In this Province where there are 29,000,000 of souls our board has thirteen missionaries and one ordained native preacher, five organized churches and fourteen preaching stations. Last year there were 151 members and twelve baptisms.

Such is the history and progress of our own work in China, but it may interest you to know that this is not all the work the Baptists have done in China. Our brethren of the North are doing quite as much as we are, and the English Baptists are also at work there. Other Protestants besides the Baptists have successful missions in China, so that it is safe to say there are about 35,000 Protestants there. It is within the limits to state that, leaving out the Catholics, some 1,200 missionaries are to-day telling the old, old story to hungry ears, but into minds darkened by the sin and superstitions of at least 3,000 years. "But what are these among so many" hungry, restless souls? for we must remember that the people are not satisfied as they are. They know they are sinners, and their hearts yearn for something better, and cares press them as they press you and me, and they wont rest—but they do not know that salvation and the better life for which they strive, and rest and peace are found in Christ. So many are dying without this knowledge. Look at their chances to hear. The most highly favored province in China is Fun Kien. This has sixty missionaries for 10,000,000, or one preacher for 167,000, this is like giving Richmond one preacher for twice a month. The province of Hunan has 16,000,000 souls and not one preacher, if it had just one (but it has not) it would be like having four preachers in the United States.

With these facts before us, do you think we are obeying the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature?" Do you believe God will save you if you do no more than you have done to obey the command? At a missionary meeting when a collection was being taken, J. L. Shuck put into the hat a card with this word written on it "myself." All of us ought to give money, and give till we have felt the giving, but as sure as there is such a thing as consecration to Christ there are others who ought to give themselves to preach the gospel in China. Have you offered yourself to God for this work?

There are many difficulties, and many encouragements in this work. It is ours not to count difficulties when God says go, but to inquire for things that are for us, and that shall stimulate us to greater effort and more faith.

1. It is commanded by an allwise God. When God commands us to do a thing, he is for us and with us in the doing. He knows the work with all its difficulties, and he knows his appointed means; these can never fail to accomplish his work. Now, nothing is more clearly taught in the book, than his command to his people to go to all nations and teach them the gospel; so it was understood by the Apostles and by the early christians. Many of them did not care to believe it, and would not until God forced it upon them, (Matt. 28: 19, 20; Acts. 13: 45-47; 15: 8-12; 18: 6; 28: 28; Rev. 7: 9-14; Rom. 10: 11-13).

2. God has shown his power to save the heathen. His blessings have been upon his word preached to the Chinese—to all heathen. To human wisdom it has seemed the height of folly to preach to the Chinese, and yet the Lord has saved even them. God has said "Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." This we are doing for Christ and God is fulfilling his promise. This work is not a work to be done without hope. It is as sinful to doubt God's power to save a Chinaman as to doubt his power to save our children. The heathen are coming to Christ in increasing numbers. Within the past ten years the increase in Chinese converts has been 120 per cent. Nor are they only nominal christians, showing none of the power of the new life. In this they put to shame many members of our own churches. Many of our converts in heathen lands turn away from family, friends, estates, and in the face of the bitterest persecutions are loyal to Christ. In the matter of giving, if that is a test, mark the figures—the 35,000 Protestan christians of China gave last year $38,000 to benevolent work.

3. It is encouraging also to know that to-day the spirit of missions is stirring the christian world as never before. Since 1850 more has been done than was done for 1,000 years previous to that time; and for the last ten years more has been done than was done in thirty years previous to that time.

May God help us as individuals and as churches to be with the foremost of his great host who are going forth with his promise to conquer the world for Christ.

Bro. John Marshburn, Catharine Lake, N. C., states that he is anxious to complete the church building for the Baptist church at the Lakes by May 1st. He needs $150 from the brethren at other points, and makes an earnest appeal to them for this aid. Help them, brethren. Acknowledgments of such moneys by Bro. Marshburn will be made through the RECORDER.

The Bible speaks more than once of the wings of the Almighty. These wings are broad wings. They cover up all our wants, all our sorrows, all our sufferings. He puts one wing over our cradle, and he puts the other over our grave. Yes, it is not a desert in which we are placed; it is a nest.—Talmage.

Our Sunday-school Work from 1871 to 1892.

We have gone carefully through the minutes of the Baptist State Convention for twenty years. The Treasurer's reports contain some suggestive facts in our Sunday-school work. The amount of money used through the Board in this department, from year to year, is, I find, a good index to the other aspects of our Sunday-school work as reported in the Convention minutes. Hence I give the total amount of money used through the Board in each of the past twenty years, viz:

1871, $686.25; '72, 374 84; '73, 702 29; '74, 1,043 15; '75, 922.36; '76, 619.19; '77, 1,600.20; '78, 1,082.56; '79, 1,188.62; '80, 1,803.11; '81, 1,384.21; '82, 1,689.45; '83, 3,080.89; '84, 4,803 86; '85, 5,616.91; '86, 5,873.46; '87, 6,536.08; '88, 7,345 56; '89, 7,587.19; '90, 8,445 20; '91, 7,625.77.

From 1871 to November, 1887, the Convention had a "Sunday school Board." During 1871 this Board was located at Shelby, '74 to '75 in Charlotte, and from '75 to '87 in Raliegh. At the Convention in '87 the Mission and Sunday school Boards were united and called the "Board of Mifsions and Sunday-schools."

From '73 to Feb., '75, Rev. N. B. Cobb was Secretary of the "Sunday-school Board," and devoted his time and energies to the work. From May, '75, to the Convention in that year, Rev. G. W. Greene was the Secretary of the "Sunday school Board," and in '76, Rev. J. K. Howell held this position and gave his entire time and thought to the work.

From '77 to '80, John E. Ray was the Secretary of this Board, and from '80 to '82 he was the Secretary of both the Mission and Sunday school Boards. At the Convention in '82, he was made Corresponding Secretary of the Convention, and from thence to the time he left us, Sept. 12, '87, he had charge of all the work—Missions, Colportage, Sunday-schools, and the Supply Store. From '87 to the Convention in '90, the entire work was committed to the writer. At the Convention in '90, the writer was relieved of Sunday-schools, Colportage and the Supply Store, and the Board was instructed to select a Secretary for that department. From November, '90, to June 15th, '91, this department was without a head, but from this latter date to the Convention in Goldsboro, Rev. M. L. Kesler gave time, thought and energies to this work.

From the last Convention to Jan. 12th, '92, this department was again without a head, and at this latter date the Board put the responsibility of the department on the writer.

Place these facts alongside of the figures above for the corresponding years, and gather your own conclusions.

We greatly preferred, and do now prefer, not have charge of this department. There is more work for the Corresponding Secretary of the Convention in Missions, State, Home and Foreign, than any one man, working fifteen hours out of each twenty-four, ought to be expected to do. On this statement we will risk the judgment of John E. Ray, and if, in his opinion, it is not true, will beg pardon and repent.

But the work of this department could not, the Board felt, be longer neglected, and being, as it seemed, shut up to the necessity of their present arrangement, the Board put this work again on the writer. Brethren, we do greatly need your help. We have never needed it more than now. Thanks, thanks, a thousand times, from a grateful heart, for your aid in the past—in State, Home and Foreign Missions, the Havana House, Colportage, Sunday-schools and the Supply Store. But the work, the great work this year, in each of these departments, must be done, and we look to and depend on you.

Will not every pastor arrange, in his plans for collections, for one collection for Sunday-school Missions, and one collection for Colportage, during the year? Will not each Sunday school Superintendent arrange for one collection for each of these objects during this year? This would greatly aid us. Last year we organized 128 new Sunday-schools. This year it ought to be 250. There are 5,000 families that our Colporters ought to reach this year in which there is no Bible. Of these families, 2,000 of them are too poor to purchase a Bible. But they must have Bibles. Who will aid us?

C. DURHAM.

From Henderson, N. C.

Dear Recorder:—Our town has very recently been much stirred up on the subject of temperance, caused by the refusal of our commissioners to grant license to the barrooms.

Some of us for a few days were really ecstatic over the thought of having this the greatest of all evils removed. Our hearts all sympathized with the poor and needy, the heart broken wife and hungry children, and all humanity suffering from the effects of this prevailing curse. But alas! our joy, like smoke, is gone, and sorrow succeeds in its place! Some of our best people, yea, prominent church-members, so much sympathized with the poor liquor-dealers, that they signed a petition gotten up by the whiskey-men, and sent it to the Judge of the Superior Court to annul the proceedings of our commissioners! Two christian lawyers plead at the bar of justice in behalf of the dramseller!

I don't know how to mix the church of God with the world. I have always been taught that the two should be separate. My feelings are hurt, and I think there are some others who feel just as I do. Will not some one give their views in regard to these proceedings? LUCY E. HICKS.

We take pleasure in calling attention to the advertisement of Julius Lewis & Co., one of the oldest hardware houses in North Carolina. Their house is perfectly reliable, and their stock large. See ad. on the eighth page.

Oxford Female Seminary.

In taking up again the work, which ill-health forced me two years ago to lay down, it is not out of place for me to trace the history of the school, and give something of its prospects.

For forty-one years, without interruption, the Baptists have had in Oxford a school of high grade for girls. In 1850, Dr. Wait was placed at the head of Oxford Female College and conducted it until about the year 1857, when Mr. J. H. Mills became President. His administration continued till about the year 1867. For short periods of time Mr. J. H. Phillips, and Drs. March and Lewis, had charge of it. After them Mrs. Stradley had a flourishing school here, in which she was afterwards joined by Miss Jordan. These ladies resigned their positions as Principals to accept positions in my corps of teachers. This was in the year 1880.

Preparatory to my assuming the Presidency of the Seminary, the Trustees expended nearly four thousand dollars in enlarging the buildings.

The session of 1880-81 opened under the most favorable auspices. The number of students was so large that it was necessary in the following summer, again to add to the buildings. And four years afterwards the sum of five thousand dollars was expended in improvements. The patronage steadily increased and the catalogue of 1888-89 showed an enrollment of one hundred and thirty-four students, sixty-six of these from abroad, and sixty seven from the town. The reputation of the school was such that it has continued since then to prosper even under adverse circumstances, and its prospects now are most encouraging.

One will have to go far to find a better location for a Baptist Female Seminary than Oxford. All the conditions requisite for establishing a school of this kind are fulfilled here. Our railroad, express and telegraph facilities are all that could be desired. The town has long been noted for its healthfulness, and is used by many people as a summer resort. The environments are all favorable. The social life of the place is refined and cultivated, the effect of its schools male and female. Perhaps more newspapers of the better class, more magazines and more books are brought here than any other town of its size in North Carolina. And in no other place can be gathered so large audiences for the commencement exercises of its schools. Even in the busiest seasons both in the town and the country around, the people come together in large numbers to witness these; for its school are its pride and glory. This also I think is true—that no other town in the State of the same size has a larger number of children attending school, even though Oxford has no Graded School. The atmosphere here is educational; and now, as in the past, to have been educated in Oxford is a passport to the best positions.

In January, 1892, this school to which I had given ten years of hard work again passed into my hands under more favorable conditions than those under which I took charge of it in 1880. It has a strong constituency in the town and the surrounding country, to say nothing of the large patronage which it draws from every other portion of North Carolina and from other States. It is every year educating the daughters of its former students. And, now, conscious of restored health and relying on the Divine help, I resolutely set my face to the future, and hope to accomplish much in the work which I love. F. P. HOBGOOD.

Death of Dr. T. Steward De Vane.

I have to day laid away in the grave one of the most affectionate and faithful friends I had in this world, Dr. T. Stewart De Vane. He died of grippe at his home in Bladen county on the night of Tuesday, the 26th ult. He was born in Duplin county in 1836; was baptized into the fellowship of the Bear Marsh church in 1853 by a brother Minor and has resided for the past twenty-two years in Bladen. He was a student with me at Wake Forest in 1853-4 and took his degree in medicine at the college of Charleston, S. C.

He was a gentleman of varied information and had the reputation of being a wise, learned and skilful physician. He was the friend of everybody, and the many tributes paid to the kindness of his heart as well as his professional efficiency was most gratifying to his friends. The first gentleman I met in the neighborhood said to me, "Sir, we have lost our best man," and a very intelligent colored man remarked that "the colored people would miss him more than the whites, for he was a friend indeed, to them."

Dr. De Vane was a man of much public spirit, often spoke in public, and evinced so deep a spirit of piety that his church had licensed him to preach the gospel. He was the leading spirit in all religious work in his community and his loss is a most serious misfortune to the church of which he was a member. His beloved pastor, Rev. E. W. Wooten, was present and took part in the funeral services. He leaves a wife and three children, the eldest of whom, Dr. J. D. De Vane will probably take his place as a physician and it is to be hoped, follow in the footsteps of his father in the service of the Lord.—T. H. Pritchard in Charity and Children.

Meeting at Dobson.

A very interesting meeting closed in the Baptist church in Dobson on the night of Jan. 31st, with twelve accessions to the church, among them the son of the pastor. Rev. L. B. Pruett of Mt. Airy did most of the preaching, and did it well. He greatly endeared himself to the people.

The Baptist cause is greatly strengthened and will soon build a new house of worship. The Mt. Airy people did a wise thing when they called Pruett as their pastor.

Dobson, Feb. 3, 1892.

thus hear persons say, "Your leading church in the State allows dancing. The First church, Raleigh, tolerates it." I am glad that I can contradict that. On August 30th, 1889, the following amendment to their Manual was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the members of this church who engage in dancing shall be subject to discipline for the same; and if, after due warning, admonition, and entreaty, they still persist in dancing, the fellowship of the church shall be withdrawn from them."

This is the position taken by most of our churches. I have but little respect for any church which gives its recognition and patronage to the modern dance. Well might such churches make for themselves the continual prayer, "God be merciful to us miserable sinners."

The "gay and guilded halls" no longer attract attention. The illusion clad figure no longer greets their lustful gaze. The tempting dishes no longer satisfy. They await the coming of the final course. The door in yonder wall opens. What new dish is borne to tempt their taste? Nearer and nearer the waiter approaches. Behold! "And he brought his head upon a platter and gave it to the damsel, and the damsel gave it to her mother." In the moral world that scene is oft repeated. Proud mothers oftentimes chaperone their daughters to the birthday balls. The daughters dance and please the Herods of society, but in the darkness of other places the characters of innocent victims are laid upon the table of private discussion, and oftentimes borne back upon the platter of public opinion to broken hearted fathers and mothers.

My duty is done. I have tried faithfully to rebuke this illegal union between the dance and the christian, and now I am ready for the critic's sword. My friends, I denounce the modern dance as the slimy serpent which has wormed its way into the morals of our people. It is leaving its slimy and poisonous trail wherever it goes. The churches must strike the monster, or it will ruin the churches with its poisonous influence.

Authors.

About forty Southern authors are represented in books published and sold by the American Baptist Publication Society. The South is justly proud of these authors, and the Society is proud of their books. The Book Department of the Society is a great Missionary. It now pays all expenses of the Bible Department and of the Missionary Department. Not one cent of the money contributed for Bible work and for missionary work is used for salaries at the Rooms. Every cent goes directly to the work proper, for which it was contributed. In the American Baptist Publication Society we have a missionary agency, which costs the denomination nothing. Up to date and all told, the contributions of the Book Department to the benevolent work of the Missionary of the Society amount to something over $126,500.

Letter from Waynesville.

Dear Recorder:—For two years you have been a visitor in my family, and the more I see your face the more I like you.

The RECORDER ranks among the best. Bro. Bailey understands how to get up a good paper. I would like much to get acquainted with him and the brethren east of the Blue Ridge, but as yet have had no opportunity.

Let me send you a little breeze from our "Land of the Sky." We cannot see you across our mountain, but we love to hear from you, and perhaps a message in return will be welcome.

Our little town of about 2,000 souls is twenty five miles west of Asheville, is on a branch of the Richmond & Danville Railroad, which branch now connects Asheville with short lines leading to Atlanta. We are something over a half mile above sea level, 2,750 feet, about as high as your hawks fly to escape the shot of the fowler. But we have a better foundation than "thin air,"—solid growth here and plenty of it; but withal a generous soil, the best water and purest air in the world. What a delightful place for the lowlander to spend a summer! It will give a new lease on life. He will have fair visions of it in his dreams many summers after as he falls to sleep wearied with slapping nats and fighting mosquitoes. Come to see us.

We have the highest railroad town east of the Rockies, and moreover the prettiest. We are a kind-hearted, generous people, and love for our brethren of the east to come to see us.

We had at our last Convention, which met here, Bro Jack Mills, a great big-hearted man, who won our hearts by telling us about some orphans, and put his hands right on our purses. God bless him! Does he ever come to see you? We also had our Dr. Pritchard, who took us all captive with his great soul and eloquence. But perhaps you have heard him. The soil that produces such growth as these two must be a fertile soil. Have you many more like these? Please send them again.

I have been pastor here two years. We count a net increase in that time of seventy-five. Our people are growing not only in numbers, but more perhaps in christian activity and consecration. We are not above growing, you see, albeit we are so much higher than our eastern cousins. Pastor's salary this year one-half greater than last. Is that not quite handsome? Does it not indicate some growth, at least in the "grace" of giving?

We have some noble men and women in our church. We have a Sunday-school that would gladden your heart to see. Superintendent L. M. Welch is a brother of lofty stature and great heart. Our cause is making progress on each side Blue Ridge.

We lost a grand man when Dr. W. A. Hobbs left us. May our father above prolong his days and give him health. His successor is making a fine impression on his Asheville people.

We have many other good men among us. There is Dr. Nelson's brother, Bro. D. B. Nelson, a strong and consecrated man. There is Bro. John Ammons. You seldom see more christian manhood and true nobility in one human frame than in him. And there are brethren Speight and Adams of Asheville, and Glenn of Hendersonville, and many others. But I must close.

Fraternally, GEORGE WHARTON.

Waynesville, Feb. 6, 1892.

Letter from Lenoir, N. C.

Dear Recorder:—I have decided to write you a short sketch of how the work is progressing in this county. If we are to judge by the interest taken in Union Meetings, we would say the outlook is bright.

Our last Union Meeting, which was held at Rocky Springs church, was, I think, the most interesting we have had.

When we arrived at the church, Bro. W. H. Davis, a student of Globe Academy, was preaching the introductory sermon. Subject, "Consecration," which was handled with zeal and earnestness.

Outside of the county ministers and speakers were brethren J. F. Spainhour of Boone, and J. G. Pulliam of Montana, who added greatly to the interest of the meeting by their splendid speeches on the different subjects.

It seems that a Union Meeting cannot fail of success in such a splendid neighborhood as that, located as it is in the fertile valley of John's river and occupied by people whose hospitalities are unbounded.

We feel sure the work in Lenoir is progressing, though not as fast as we might wish, but the prospect is bright. Bro. I. W. Thomas, who has charge of this work, is certainly the right man in the right place, an earnest expounder of the gospel truths, and dearly loved by his people. We all feel fortunate in securing him for this field.

Bro. H. M. Croom is doing excellent work as Associational missionary. We hope through his labors to reach some destitution and to arouse more interest in missions in the churches already organized.

Bro. T. C. Buchanan, who, by the way, is a good preacher as well as teacher, is striving hard to, and we hope will, make Globe Academy second to none in the State.

We hope to organize a County Sunday-school Association at Lower Creek church, two miles east of Lenoir, on Friday before the fourth Sunday in March. This and Associational mission work are two departments of christian work, which has been neglected until recently in this Association. We are earnestly expecting the blessings of Almighty God to crown the efforts of his servants in these departments.

One of our greatest needs is a larger circulation of our denominational organ, the BIBLICAL RECORDER, among our Baptist people. May the time soon come when they will realize the duty they owe to the cause, to themselves and to their families in this particular.

Great success to the RECORDER.

Dear Sir:—I have known the Electropoise used in a number of cases for different complaints. In no instance have I known it to fail to benefit or to cure the person who has used it. I am not in any way interested in it. My only object is to benefit suffering humanity, and, I unhesitatingly say, that from my personal acquaintance with you, as well as the wonderful cures it has wrought under my own observation on various persons, afflicted with various ills, I am prepared to believe the testimony offered in proof of the wonderful cures produced by the persistent, intelligent use of the Electropoise. I commend it to all invalids.

Twenty years ago the people of Japan had never seen any part of the Scripture in their own tongue, and placards prohibiting christianity were displayed on the corners of the streets. From 1874 until now the American Bible Society has circulated in Japan more than five hundred and fifty thousand volumes of the Scriptures; and there are now more than two hundred and fifty churches, with over thirty thousand members.—Ex.

Wonderful Statistics.

When it is considered that the percentage of deaths from consumption is 91 per thousand against 63 per 1,000 of any other malady, how important to guard against a slight cold. Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein is the great medicine for coughs, colds and consumption.

Dear Sir—My wife was down in bed with rheumatism, and the Pokine I bought of you gave her relief after taking four doses. She has not been troubled since. It is the best medicine she ever took for rheumatism. Respectfully, ZACK DAVIS.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM, JR:

Dear Sir—I have been afflicted with rheumatism time and again, for the past thirteen years. I have received more relief from Pokine than any medicine I ever took, and therefore take great pleasure in recommending it to all sufferers of rheumatism. Very respectfully, F. G. MITCHELL.

W. T. CHEATHAM, JR.:

Dear Sir—I desire to say that in January last I was down with rheumatism; my suffering was great, and I was completely prostrated. One bottle of your Pokine completely relieved me, and I have not had any rheumatism since. My son also was relieved of rheumatism by Pokine.

Yours truly, CHARLES G. BURROUGHS.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM, JR., Henderson, N. C.:

Dear Sir—Being asked my opinion of your rheumatic remedy, Pokine, will gladly state I deem it the only medicine of its kind on the market that will accomplish that which is exclusively claimed for it. Being a sufferer of rheumatism, I consequently tried many remedies, until finally relieved by Pokine. Very respectfully, J. A. KELLY.

W. R. KYLE, Gen. Pass Agt.

J. W. FRY, Gen. Manager.

Woman's Missionary Department.

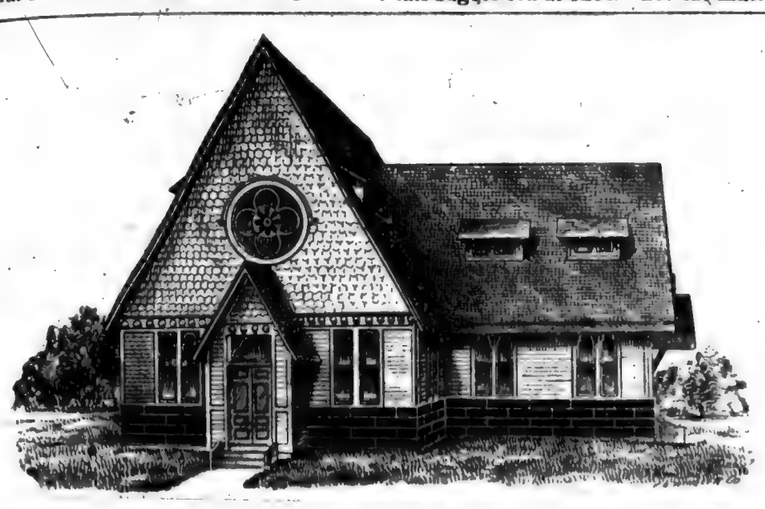
President Woman's Central Committee of North Carolina, Miss FANNIE E. HECK, Raleigh, N. C.; Secretary, Mrs. J. A. BRIGGS, Raleigh, N. C.

Centennial Work and Plans for the Woman's and Children's Missionary Societies.

Doubtless all have read the articles of Dr. Harris of the Foreign Board and Dr. Tichenor of the Home Board, calling upon the women and children to aid in raising a permanent Centennial Building Fund of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and followed with interest the plan of collection mapped out.

They have reminded us that but once in our life-time will such an effort as this be made, that is, therefore, our one opportunity to lend our aid to so grand and memorial a service to God's kingdom. We are urged to so improve this opportunity that on the mission fields of five continents may rise lasting monuments of our gratitude to the God of Missions who, in this hundred years of missions, has opened to his servants every land and saved to himself thousands out of every nation and kindred and tongue and people. We are told that to celebrate this grand Centennial Year of Modern Missions as we should, we must begin the work with prayer and seal it with sacrifice.

It but remains, then, for the Woman's Central Committee of Missions to express its most hearty approval of these plans, and to add its voice to those already heard urging their fulfillment, and to announce that it stands prepared to supply societies and individuals with the means for carrying out these plans: Centennial Fund Chapel Cards, Centennial Fund Self-denial and Thanksgiving Mite Boxes, Certificates of Centennial Fund Stock (on receipt of five dollars or more to building fund), Centennial Leaflets, &c.



Centennial Chapel Building Fund.

PLANS FOR RAISING FUNDS.

While the Boards have thus mapped out the plans of collections wisely and well, it is left to each State, church, society and individual the working out these plans as best suits their necessities or surroundings.

The Central Committee suggests three methods of raising funds for the use of societies and individuals:

1. Collection. It is hoped before the year is out, that every woman and child may have an opportunity to give to the Centennial Building Fund. For this purpose, the list of members should be divided into neighborhoods, and the names given to responsible, intelligent collectors, who should explain the object and collect money, using the Chapel Brick Card, which brings a gift within the reach of the poorest. If, however, any are found too poor or too indifferent to take, at least, one brick (ten cents) in the fund, it is hoped some one will take one in their name, that all may be represented. The collector, whose collection card must be signed with her name by the president of the society or pastor of the church, returning the Chapel Card with five dollars or more, is entitled to a Centennial Certificate of stock in Building Fund, in her own name. It is advised that this canvass be made so as to be completed and in a state to report by Oct. 2, 1892, the Centennial day of the Woman's Missionary Societies, or before the State Convention, Dec. 8, 1892.

2. Larger gifts. Many of us will desire to make to the Centennial Building Fund outright gifts of five, ten, twenty five dollars. Such gifts of five dollars or more will entitle the giver to stock certificate of the amount given. Many will delight thus to give, even to sacrifice, to aid this monumental fund. Others who now think they cannot give thus, will, as the year goes on and more and more is known of the greatness of the occasion and our opportunity, gladly join the number of these larger givers. If there comes to you any great joy, any deliverance from pain or threatened sorrow, offer your thanksgiving by making a gift to this fund.

3. Centennial Building Fund, Self denial and Thanksgiving Boxes. Many will desire to give five dollars or more to the Centennial Fund, but will feel that they cannot. For such these mite boxes with a chapel card have been prepared, as a bank and register of the small self denials and of the every-day joys that go to make up our lives. They are for every one who will endeavor thus to save her mites and obtain a five-dollar or larger certificate of stock in the Centennial Building Fund before the close of the Centennial Year. We would urge societies to act upon this suggestion at once. Let the matter be laid before the societies and as many boxes be placed as possible, one at least in the family of each number of the society. Explain, however, that these offerings will not take the place of dues to the societies, but are free-will offerings to the Centennial Fund.

LITERATURE.

To make all or any of these plans successful, the societies and churches must be kept supplied with Centennial missionary literature. Knowledge is the seed from which the leaves of enthusiasm and the fruit of contribution must spring. The Central Committee has for free distribution the Centennial publications of our Boards and can supply other publications at small cost from the Maryland Mission Rooms.

FINALLY—A CAUTION.

Let it be clearly understood that these plans are not intended to run counter to any general church collection for Centennial funds for sending out new missionaries or other work.

The aim of the woman's missionary societies is, and has always been, not to subtract from, but to supplement, church collections by added gifts, the outcome of larger knowledge of missions and deeper interest awakened by that knowledge.

How to Help a Minister to Preach.

It is astonishing how dull religious audiences, as a rule, look. In lecturing halls you see people with eyes wide open, nudging each other, and nodding in the sentiments offered. In prayer meetings the same people look dull; they cultivate the dull look; they have an idea that to be devotional they must look sleepy. A brother gets up to talk, and a father in Israel puts his head down on a cane, and a mother in Israel her head on the back of the seat in front of her, and another looks up to the ceiling and seems to be counting the cracks in it. Now, when your minister gets up to preach look at him. There is inspiration in the human eye. Many a time I have, through pressure of other work, gone into the pulpit with little to say, but in the upturned faces of the people I have seen twenty sermons, and the only bother was to know which I should preach.—Dr. Talmage.

Cultivate a spirit of gentleness.

Immigrants and returning voyagers find in Ayer's Sarsaparilla a cure for eruptions, boils, pimples, eczema, etc., whether resulting from seed-diet and life on ship board; or from any other cause. Its value as a tonic and alterative medicine cannot be overestimated.

Learn from the earliest days to inure your principles against the points of ridicule; you can no more exercise your reason if you live in constant dread of laughter that you can enjoy your life if you are in constant fear of death.—Sidney Smith.

"I am the vine; ye are the branches." The branches are the very same wood as the vine, and the very same sap pervades them both. And they that are joined to the Lord are of one spirit. The same mind is in them which was also in Christ Jesus.—Jay.

SWEET GUM AND MULLEIN is Nature's great remedy for coughs, colds, croup, consumption, and all throat and lung troubles.

The Repression of Drunkenness in Germany.

They do nothing by halves in Germany, and when a peril to the State, either from without or within, is realized, they strike fearlessly at the very root of the evil. The bill which their government has introduced for the repression of drunkenness, in vigor and stringency, goes far beyond any scheme that has been seriously suggested here. It absolutely prohibits the sale of liquor to children under the age of sixteen, to any person already drunk, to any one known to be an habitual drunkard, or on credit; if a man wants drink he must pay for it then and there, a most salutary precaution. But it is in dealing with the drunkard himself that the measure makes the greatest advance. It treats him, if not as a criminal, yet as one who cannot be considered accountable for his actions, and takes power to appoint a guardian over any persons who are disqualified by drunkenness from managing their own affairs, who threaten to bring their families to want, or endanger the lives of themselves or other people. The guardian may in case of necessity place his ward in an asylum for inebriates and keep him there, and if he fails to act, the judicial authorities may do so in his stead.—Evangelist.

The Pastor's Assistant.

One of the ablest and wisest ministers has said that the first duty of the pastor is not preaching the gospel to the unconverted, but training and developing the spiritual life of the church. If this is effectually done, the individual members become the most successful workers, by the power of a godly life and by direct effort, in reaching the unconverted.

Perhaps one of the greatest needs of church-life at this present time lies just here. There is often a lack of adequate training of those who have been gathered into our churches. No observing christian can fail to notice that a large proportion of the young people that join our churches are exceedingly ignorant of the christian world. Many of them have not been brought up in christian homes, and many, alas, of those who have are almost unacquainted with the Bible, with the principles held by the church which they have joined, with religious literature, with the state of religion in the world, and with the doings of the great denominational societies and general agencies for the propagation of the gospel. Now is the time for them to be instructed and educated. They have the essential, the divine life already begun in the soul, they have experienced a real change of heart; but they have yet to learn the new world into which they have been born, to rise to an appreciation of the heritage which is theirs, to grow in grace and be developed into full-statured manhood and womanhood in Christ.

Doubtless many a pastor has felt the pressure of this need, and has longed amid the urgent duties of his position, the numberless calls in every direction, and the manifold drafts upon his energies, to do more for those who are in the formative period of christian life. But the pastor cannot do it all. He is human and limited. He needs an assistant, who shall talk to his people when he cannot, and visit them oftener than he is able. Such an assistant is at hand for the service of every pastor, an assistant whose salary is small and easily raised, whose visits are always welcome, who has a helpful word for everybody, whom the people learn to love. This assistant is the christian newspaper. It is one of the best agencies in the christian world to-day. Its educating power cannot easily be estimated. It comes into our homes, is a companion at our fireside, and leaves its good words with us in permanent form. The young man in a boarding-house can find room for this guest though he has no home of his own. It is in place alike in the finest and in the plainest abode.

Every young christian should be a regular reader of one of our best papers. If it is not in the family, then he cannot make a more profitable investment than to subscribe for it himself. It will do more to broaden his knowledge and sympathies, to beget a taste for healthy religious reading and to stimulate his thought on religious subjects of living present interest than almost any other external means.

Of course, the religious newspaper will not do everything, nor will its influence take the place of other means of education; but it is one of the means at command. It is so accessible and practical, so good in itself, and can so easily be made helpful to many more than are using it, that those who are now readers ought to labor to increase the number simply for the good it will do. Advise a person to subscribe for a good paper just as you would advise him to buy a good book, because it will be helpful to him. To guide a person into right reading is to confer on him an unending benefit. —J., in the Standard.

Letter from Rev. Archibald Cree.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I moved my family here last Wednesday. From the previous kindness of the brethren to myself, I expected a kind welcome, but I must say the warmth of that welcome took me and mine quite by surprise. I had received such welcomes before in the old country.

In my first church in Scotland (my native land), I used to think no people could be so hospitable and kind as the Scotch, and after nine years of labor there, we carried away farewell tokens of their regard, which we shall prize as long as we live. We have had experience also of an English welcome, which for its kindness we can never forget, and kind tokens accompanied us when we left; but the welcome of the brethren of Roxobel and Rich Square seems to excel either, and shows at least that this eldest daughter of the old country, especially in this Southland, still retains all the kind heart and hospitable feelings of her old mother across the sea.

Evidently the brethren here do not intend that their pastor should practice any strict monastic rule of asceticism in regard to daily food. When we arrived on Wednesday night, the parsonage was lit up, the fires blazed, and the table was laden; and the kitchen was fairly stored and cumbered with supplies. Next night some of the brethren came up by train from Rich Square, and a wagon had to be found to haul the good things they brought from the Depot. I said to the brethren that the times being very depressed and no trade doing in the stores, I supposed that they felt they must move the goods somehow, and thought they had as well move them to the parsonage. I may say, as Paul said to the Philippians of their gifts, "I have all and abound."

Bro. Powell, my predecessor here, told me before I came I would find the people a kind, clever people. I like your use of that adjective "clever" in its old English sense, which we find in Shakespeare and other old authors, meaning morally good and genuine, but which the English people of to-day use only to mean ingenious and smart, and I believe Bro. Powell just rightly describe them.

The sphere of duty here, so far as I now see, seems to me an almost ideal sphere of labor for a minister of the gospel. There is only one church in the village or near it, and that the Baptist church: with over 300 members—by the way, I am wrong, there is a small Episcopal church with a few adherents, but service is held there at very rare intervals, I believe, and I am glad to see the members of that church regularly at our services. There are also a few Methodists, but the community is a Baptist community.

At Rich Square or Corinth, there are 150 or 160 members. The new church building is progressing since the grippe abated and the weather improved. The windows are in, the floor laid, and the upper part of the spire painted and complete. The golden globe, which symbolizes the world to be won for Christ, now gleams brightly in the pure upper air. Some of the brethren felt the church at Corinth to be such a hallowed spot that they could not at first consent to remove to Rich Square, but then these brethren are such good and true Baptists, that they can hardly help themselves, but come with us to Rich Square and assist us in carrying on the Lord's work; and after a time I believe they will feel that the glory of the second temple is greater than that of the first, besides the greater convenience it will be for improving the services and extending the work. Bro. Vann, one of the deacons there, could not have borne any other name half so appropriately. He leads the van in all such progressive work. The church is beautifully proportioned, and is pronounced by some (not of ourselves) to be the prettiest church in Bertie county.

Now two churches with 450 or 500 members is just enough for one man to shepherd and minister to in holy things in all their times of joy and sorrow.

The day after we arrived, the brethren gathered around the grave and I preached the funeral of one of the oldest members, eighty-five years old.

I trust God will give me an open door and effectual here for the ministry of his word, and enable me to repay in spiritual things the great christian kindness of the brethren.

Yours fraternally, ARCHIBALD CREE.
Roxobel, Feb. 6, 1892.

Letter from Wilson, N. C.

We feel that the Lord hath highly honored our church in having given to us the beloved Battle even for the short time he has been with us. Not only the church, but the whole community, is stirred at the intimation of a call elsewhere.

We shall try to feel submissive to the dispensation which takes him away from us, and to feel proud of the abilities which commend him to the consideration of other churches abler to more fully compensate and appreciate those abilities, and to feel that the Lord's hand is in it for the good of us all—believing the Lord intends good to his people and that the poor will have the gospel preached unto them, and that his cause is not dependent on any one man. He will never have a more appreciative, tender or loving people no matter where he may go—but he may go where his usefulness may be enhanced by having a larger field in which his preaching ability may be displayed—but there is joy among the angels of heaven over one sinner saved, and a big work is before us in that line right here, a big church to build—no higher service can be rendered the Lord than right here. G. W. B.

The real victory of faith is to trust God in the dark and through the dark. Let us be assured of this that as the issues and ends are of his appointing, and that as his all wise love had engineered the deep turnings of trial on the heavenward road, he will never desert us during the discipline. Nothing for us is not to deny and [illegible]—J. L. Taylor, D. D.

Forty Young Preachers must have Help or Leave College.

So scarce is money and so great is the cry of "hard times," that it requires a struggle to ask for a contribution to any object. But we have here forty young men studying for the ministry who have no means to help themselves. Nearly one hundred dollars are due for their board, washing and room-rent for January. The Education Board cannot ask for credit for large amounts or for a long time. Shall these young men now in the midst of their preparation for their life work leave college? Liberal pledges to this work were made at nearly all the Associations.

Will not the churches send us a part of what they pledged now? Brethren, in raising now the amounts pledged to other objects, can you not divide with us a little? Help us in this our crisis.

W. R. GWALTNEY.

Don't waste time, money, and health, trying every new medine you may see advertised in the papers. If the cause of your trouble is in the blood, liver, stomach, or kidnies, take Ayer's Sarsaparilla at once, and be sure of a cure. Take no other.

Help Asked for Maxton.

A little band of Baptists at Maxton, Robeson county, N. C., ask that you help them build a church. This is an important railroad junction, and it is desired to build a house of worship worthy of the goodness of the Lord, and commendable of the great Baptist brotherhood.

ROBESON BAPTIST ASSOCIATION,
January 19th, 1892.

We are acquainted with the membership of the First Baptist church at Maxton, N. C., and do cheerfully recommend them to the brethren as earnest and zealous workers, and request that their petition for aid in building a house of worship be liberally responded to. A. R. PITTMAN, Mod.

Farmers, Merchants and Business Men.

The following resolutions of joint committee of farmers, Merchants and business men, were adopted February 1, 1892:

WHEREAS, The present depressed condition of agriculture in our midst is clearly traceable in part to the neglect on the part of our farmers to raise sufficient food supplies to make the farm self-sustaining; and whereas, this condition of affairs has been brought about in part by the over production of cotton, and consequently the lowering of values, until the present market prices for cotton will not pay the cost of production; and whereas, it is clear to every man that a radical change in the farming system will better our condition; therefore,

We, the undersigned committee, consisting of farmers, merchants and business men, do hereby Resolve:

1. That we earnestly recommend and appeal to every farmer in Wake county, whether he be an Alliancemen, non-Alliancemen, tenant or landlord, to reduce the acreage in cotton at least twenty per cent., and to plant and raise, as far as possible, a sufficient quantity of home supplies to make the farm self-sustaining.

2. We recommend and appeal to every supply merchant in Wake county to encourage in every possible way the carrying out of this plan, and, so far as is consistent with their interests, to refuse, if necessary, to make advances to parties who intend to continue the present system of planting all cotton to the neglect of the more important products of the farm.

3. We make this appeal to the farmers, merchants and business men, believing that they will readily accept the doctrine that "the interest of one is the interest of all." The farmer knows from his experience that he cannot prosper depending on cotton and neglecting the more important crops. The merchant knows and realizes that he cannot prosper while having for his customers a community of farmers who depend upon the west for the mules they plough, for the hay and corn they consume, and in fact upon some other farm for almost everything needed, while our own lands are so well suited for diversified farming.

4. That these resolutions be printed and distributed throughout the county.

5. That the merchants of the county be requested to post a copy in some conspicuous place in their stores, and to freely distribute other copies among their customers.

One of the troubles of life is the breaking of lamp-chimneys. Needless. Macbeth's "pearl top" and "pearl glass" are tough against heat.

You will save nine-tenths of your chimney-money by using them.

"Pearl top" fits most of the little lamps; "pearl glass" is for "Rochester," "Pittsburgh," "Duplex," etc.

We make a great many sizes and shapes, all of tough glass. You can get the right ones. Talk with your dealer about it.

A Good Possession.

Every Sunday school ought to have a good library, and especially in country and village churches, or towns that have no public library. This is a reading age, and many children will read. They ought to have the opportunity to read good books of healthful, moral and religious thought, for life will be largely colored by what we habitually read. The American Baptist Publication Society is prepared to furnish such libraries at low prices, and will help poor schools in obtaining them.

"Survival of the Fittest."
If Darwin's theory is to be accepted, then the fact that I am the sole survivor in the trade of those who began with me the same line of business, gives significance to the fact that my sales of seed to market gardeners, well known to be the most critical of all buyers, has increased year by year until it has now reached vast proportions. That I raise many varieties on my five seed farms, make 1200 tests annually for vitality, and test novelties, that no one may be imposed on, will explain much to the thoughtful buyer. REV. J. B. HAWTHORNE, D. D., Atlanta, Ga.
Dear Sir:—More than two years ago you were kind enough to allow us to publish a letter from you in which you declared that you had been cured of Catarrh by the use of King's Royal Germetuer. In the same letter you said that you had seen its curative effects upon various diseases.
Knowing your enviable reputation throughout the nation, and confident that the public would rely upon any statement coming from you, the manufacturers of King's Royal Germetuer would esteem it a real favor if you would consent to answer the following questions: 1 Has there been any return of your Catarrh trouble? 2 Have your observations of the effects of the medicine within the last two years strengthened the convictions expressed in your first published testimonials?
Hoping to hear from you at your earliest convenience, I am yours truly,
T. H. BLACKNALL,
General Manager K. R. G.

MAJ. T. H. BLACKNALL,
Manager K. R. G. Co., Atlanta, Ga.:
Dear Sir;—In re, ly to your letter requesting me to answer certain questions concerning King's Royal Germetuer, I take much pleasure in saying that I am indebted to the medicine for what seems to me a complete cure of catarrhal trouble. My present health is almost perfect.
My observation within the last two years has so strengthened my faith in the remedy that I am prepared to say that there is not a medicine on the market that is worthy of comparison with it. Thousands of intelligent and reliable people, among them some of the most distinguished men of the country, have expressed to me the same opinion.
Many of my friends have been cured of dyspepsia, others of rheumatism, and some of neuralgia. As a remedy for cholera infantum it is absolutely par excellence. Atlanta alone has a thousand living witnesses to its triumphs over the la grippe.
My conviction as to the merit of this medicine is about as strong as any conviction can be made.
Yours truly,
J. B. HAWTHORNE.

Letter from Rev. A. J. Diaz.

HAVANA, CUBA, Jan. 20, 1892.

Dear Dr. Tichenor:—Yours, date January 15, was received. About two months ago I sent a list with all the names of our twenty-five scholars and names of teachers and what kind of tuition we give them to Miss Armstrong, of Baltimore, and besides this with all the particulars about each one of the ten they already has select. I spoke in my letter how large are the rooms that we have space for one hundred boarders.

There is not other idea that has been received so well by the citizen of Havana as the establishment of school of this kind. I told this to Miss Armstrong, and told her that if they help us a year it is very probably this people of Havana will support the school (Baptist and Catholic). I may mistake but they show great sympathy on this institution.

Now let me tell you some information in order you may use.

Our school have ninety-two daily pupils—from these I select twenty-five intelligent, poor, or orphans, ten was received on the school as boarders since the month of October 1st. We occupy the fourth part of the building the Board bought for the church purpose. The cost of each boarder including tuition or salaries for professors are twelve dollars each a month, and we give everything they need. We have five professors on the school, and they are Minnie Diaz, my wife, my mother, Miss Julia Lozano and myself. The order of the school is as follows:

My mother is in charge of the board.

My wife in charge of needle-work, and trimming department.

Miss Julia Lozano in charge of the primary department.

Minnie in charge of piano, organ and singing, class of spelling, first reading and Bible class.

Myself, English, Spanish grammar, writing, geography—America and Europe arithmetic, geometry, typewriting.

We commence the work at six o'clock a. m. and get through at five p. m; then sister and my wife are in charge of the boarders.

An incident—last Sunday after the services I was called for one of the brethren in charge of the church collection and gave me an envelope which was found on the basket's collection, addressed to me. I open and find a letter and a note bill for five hundred dollars (Spanish paper). The letter have only four lines and it said: "Take this money and buy twenty-one sew-machines; make a present of them to twenty-one of the young ladies that are able to sew. An unbeliever)." I was not pleased with the signature, and was inquire who it was, in order to give that money back, but can't find him, and I conclude to get the sew-machines for them; so I bought them, but I have the idea if I understand who is the person that put the unbelievered money on the Lord's treasure to give back right away. What do you advise me? You think I am right or wrong?

Salaries we pay—

Mother's——twenty-seven for missionary work and school.

My wife do not charge nothing.

Miss Julia Lozano.....$20.00.

Minnie.....$4.00.

Myself nothing.

But somebody need to take my place because is too much for me, and the salary will be thirty-four dollars. I have a very intelligent lady who is christian that is willing to accept this call.

Please be so kind as to drop a line to Miss Armstrong and tell her what you think will interest them from this account I give you, because is very probably my letter has been miss on the mail.

Did you have a good trip? Are you well now? Good bye.

Yours in Christ,

DIAZ.

NOTE.—It is hardly necessary to say that the secretary worte Diaz that he did right in investing the five hundred dollars put in the collection basket by "An Unbeliever" in the sewing machines for the school, and that hereafter whenever "An Unbeliever" is led to cast anything into the treasury of the Lord, he should, without hesitation, accept and use it. "Spoiling the Egyptians" in that sense and in that way is surely legitimate.

From Bro. R. D. Haymore.

Dear Recorder:—I enjoy a ramble over my native State through the columns of your excellent paper. Though I am and have been for years the weekly recipient of six Baptist papers coming from as many States, I enjoy none more than the BIBLICAL RECORDER.

You have a brother living forty miles from here just in sight of a little village called "Elber," at the junction of the Franklin Extension of the R. & D. R. R. with the main line. * * * I often call to see him.

I came to this place first in 1869, in company with a Bro. Bailey, who had recently come to us from the Methodists and resided at the time in Germanton, N. C., where the year before I had been at school, but was at the time a student of "Beaulah" Institute, Madison, N. C. Since that time I have been acquainted in the county, but never lived here until last year. My labors have been blessed, having baptized seventy-five converts. Until the winter set in I enjoyed the work, preaching one half time to two country churches located six and ten miles north and south of the town.

Though I have been in Virginia for thirty years and know the faces of all our ministers and am known to all, yet I often go back in my mind to old Surry county, N. C. The red clay yard of the home of my boyhood, the spring path with the slab across the track, and the old orchard graveyard, are all often revived in my thoughts. It was from this home a younger sister and myself walked together to "Holly Springs" schoolhouse to hear the first Missionary Baptist prerchers who had ever been in that section. The preachers were Elias Dodson and Caudle. Dodson preached and Caudle concluded. Here the Spirit first came to my heart. I knew not what was the matter. Being near the door, I stepped out and through an opening between the logs caused by the removal of a "chinking," I beckoned my sister and she and I walked silently home. I might have been converted that day had I known what to do.

I may never get back, but I feel the deepest interest in your work, and would salute all my old acquaintances, and bid the brotherhood a hearty God-speed.

R. D. HAYMORE.

Funeral and Burial of Dr. Manly.

We buried Dr. Manly's remains by the side of the grave of Dr. Boyce in Cave Hill cemetery Tuesday of last week. The funeral was from Walnut Street church and was very simple. The house was filled with the best people of Louisville, many ministers of all denominations being present. Dr. Tupper gave out the hymn,

"What a friend we have in Jesus," after which Dr. Kerfoot read appropriate selections of Scripture. Dr. Whitsitt led in prayer. Dr. Dudley read the following hymn, written by Dr. Manly in 1850, which was printed on slips and distributed through the congregation:

In doubt's dim twilight here I stray,
Up n me shines no cheering ray;
My Saviour, drive away my fear,
Abide with me, for night is near.

Dwell thou within my heart; O come
Not as a stranger, but at home;
Here reign supreme it is thy right;
Abide with me both day and night.

And when my day of toil is done,
When weak and weary age comes on,
Uphold me, Saviour, as I die;
Abide with me, when night is nigh.

Soon shall a voice my slumbers wake,
A glorious, endless morning break;
When night and grief forever flee,
May I in heaven abide with thee.

We then spoke from the text, "Rejoice evermore," stating some reasons his parents, his family, the community, the Seminary and the church had for rejoicing that God had given us such a man as Dr. Manly for so many years of varied and efficient service. We spoke of the inspiration such a life should be to us.

Dr. Broadus followed in a tender and felicitous address. He pointed out the elements of Dr. Manly's greatness, his wonderful versatility, his remarkably good judgment, his readiness in emergencies, his lovely spirit, his thorough scholarship, his personal power and rare achievements. In speaking of the miscreant who struck Dr. Manly down three years ago and inflicted the injuries which hastened his death, probably by ten years, Dr. Broadus broke forth in a wonderful burst of eloquence which thrilled the vast assembly. He strongly commended Dr. Manly's book on Inspiration as a wise discussion of the subject and suited to general reading.

The body was then borne to the grave. The trustees and officials of the Seminary were honorary pall-bearers, while the active pall bearers were chosen from among the students as follows: R. E. L. Aylor, of Virginia; Weston Bruner, of Kentucky; A. J. Harris, of Texas; A. S. Smith, of Alabama; T. P. Stafford, of Missouri, and R. J. Williams, of South Carolina.

The students marched in line to the grave, where, after Dr. Sampey had offered prayer, they sang with singular sweetness and power and Prof. Robertson pronounced the benediction.

"Shall we gather at the river."

No death that ever occurred in Louisville has more profoundly impressed the community.—Western Recorder.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Raleigh Affairs.

The North State, Republican organ, which was removed from Greensboro to Raleigh several weeks ago, has been moved back to Greensboro.

Between seven and eight o'clock p. m., on Saturday last, the polar lights were seen in the northern heavens. The display was beautiful and imposing, and the lights extended all along the Atlantic coast and as far west as Iowa, and south to Tennessee. The lights are usually preceded or accompanied by electrical disturbances. Along with this phenomenon, spots are now visible on the sun, thousands of miles in length and breadth.

DIED.

DEMENT—Stephen Edward Dement died at his home in Granville county, N. C., on January 11th, 1892, after a short illness. He was in his seventy-eighth year, had been a member of the Baptist church for nearly fifty years, and the greater portion of that time a deacon of Brassfield church. In all the relations of life he was noted for his punctuality and faithfulness. Thus has departed from us, one who performed duty for its own sake, with no hope of praise from men.

COM. OF BRASSFIELD CHURCH.

TAYLOR—Sister Elizabeth Taylor fell on sleep Tuesday, Feb. 2d, about 6 p. m., at the home of her son, Bro. Jas. A. Taylor, in the sixty-eighth year of her age. At the early age of sixteen she gave herself to the Saviour, and two years later was baptized into the fellowship of Spring Branch church by Elder Stephen Center. For more than a half century she was an active worker in the Lord's vineyard. An uncompromising Baptist, devoted to the simple teachings of God's word, she died in the triumphs of the christian's faith. Her funeral services were conducted by the writer from the Dunn Baptist church on Wednesday at 3:30 p. m., and we laid her away in Greenwood cemetery to await the resurrection morn. May a kind Heavenly Father sustain by his grace the bereaved members of her family, and may they derive comfort from the thought that their loss is her eternal gain.

W. F. WATSON.

NEWSOME—Died at her home, near Winton, N. C., on January 12th, 1892, sister Caroline Newsome, widow of the late Bro. Joseph Newsome. She was born on August 3d, 1821, and was in the seventy-first year of her age. For a long period of years she had been a consistent and honored member of the Baptist church, and for quite a while had held her membership with the church at Winton.

Kind, faithful, energetic and frugal, she pursued the pathway of duty and right as it was given her to see it, with calm, patient and even temperament, striving always to make her home enjoyable and pleasant, which home has been darkened and made desolate by the going out of her life's light. But in the mourning circle of that home so recently bereaved by the death of a loving sister and then a kind mother, it is not my province now to enter. Trusting that the departed ones have gone to "a home not made with hands eternal in the heavens," will leave it to "time with healing in its wings" to assuage the grief of the sorrowing ones, with a faithful reliance on "him who doeth all things well."

S.

HUNTER—Our community and church at Mt. Hermon, Orange county, N. C., were called upon January 21st, 1892, to give up a dear mother-in Israel, sister E. J. Hunter, in the seventy-third year of her age. She was the affectionate wife of deacon A. C. Hunter, and the devoted mother of a number of children, most of whom are members of Mt. Hermon church, and a kind friend and neighbor to all the community in which she lived.

She died as she lived, in the full faith of the gospel. We shall miss her presence, but cherish fondly her influence as a devoted christian mother, wife and friend. To know her was to love her.

She leaves behind to mourn her loss most of all, an aged afflicted husband and two affectionate daughters, besides several sons and daughters who are married. May God's grace sustain and keep them, and when the gathering is on the other shore, may there be a final gathering of them all around the throne of God never to separate any more, is the prayer of their pastor.

J. F. MACDURFIE.

LAWRENCE—In Gates county, N. C., Feb. 4th, 1892, after a few days' illness, Bro. Marmaduke Lawrence, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. He was a deacon of the Gatesville Baptist church.

Bro. Lawrence was possessed of a tender, sympathetic heart, and died lamented by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. He leaves an aged widow and seven devoted children to mourn their irreparable loss. He was a regular attendant upon the public worship of God, and a devout, attentive and inspiring listener to the proclamation of his word. He was a friend and benefactor to the poor and distressed, and will be sadly missed, not only by his church, but by the community in which he lived.

Bro. Lawrence started in life almost penniless, but by dint of untiring industry, frugality, and sound judgment, accumulated a large landed estate, and died owing no man anything but love. His funeral services were conducted by the writer, and the large congregation present testified the esteem in which he was held.

It is an old-fashion notion that medicine has to taste bad to do any good.

Scott's Emulsion is cod-liver oil with its fish-fat taste lost—nothing is lost but the taste.

This is more than a matter of comfort. Agreeable taste is always a help to digestion. A sickening taste is always a hindrance. There is only harm in taking cod-liver oil unless you digest it. Avoid the taste.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BAPTISTS, BY Henry C. Vedder.

12mo, 245 pages. Price, $1.00.

Mr. Vedder has taken great care to have it accurate on points with respect to which there is difference of opinion.

The book will have a large circulation among our young people. To make it more useful to them, copious tables of contents have been prepared, which can be used as questions in classroom work, and a full and complete index.

Prof. Benjamin C. True, Prof. of Church History, Rochester Theological Seminary, writes:

"Mr. Vedder's 'Short History of the Baptists' is history, not assumption or romance. Its brevity is the result of the author's fixed purposes to write a book neither too large nor too expensive for general use. It is by far the best manual of Baptist History extant."

Prof. J. B. Thomas, Professor of Church History, Newton Theological Institution, says:

"'A Short History of the Baptists' is a valuable accession to our denominational literature, being judiciously concise, while perfectly lucid and fairly comprehensive. It will prove attractive and instructive to the young people."

He Has a Use For Thee.

Lift up thy face and smile,
'Tis but a little while;
The threat'ning clouds that bend above thy way
Will lift and break, full soon, in brightest day.

Think not thou livest in vain,
Or that one honest pain
Of thine is lost;
He who in loving care
Numbers thine every hair,
Knows all the cost.

No lightest care of thine
Escapes his love divine;
No smile's forgot, nor cup of water given;
Each tender, loving deed,
Like some strange, precious seed,
Shall bear its fruit in heaven,

Nor dream if thou wert gone
From out life's troubled throng
Thou'dst not be missed.
If, from the ocean's mass
One drop for aye should pass,
One diamond ray the less
The eye of man would bless;
Some rose would be unkissed
With morning dew.

Thou knowest not what heart
That lives in gloom apart
Would find its sunshine fled
If thou wert dead;
What slender thread of faith would break,
What havoc in some life 'twould make,
If thou shoudst prove untrue.

The flower that blooms in desert place,
And lifts its head with winsome grace
Might drop and sigh, "Alas! Ah me!
Why should I live where none can see?"
But he who formed both field and flood
Has made the flower and called it good,
And in his wisdom placed it there,
To make the desert seem more fair.
And if he then has need of flowers,
To deck this barren world of ours,
He has a use for thee.

—Edna J. Platt, in The Ensign.

Mother's Day.

She was a woman of about sixty, the wife of a Pennsylvania farmer. There was not a picturesque or unusual point about her; she was tall, lean and round-shouldered. Indeed, as she walked with long, loping strides from the kitchen to cellar, the cow-yard or the wood-shed, she bore and absurd likeness to the gaunt hound that followed her.

Her day was never eventful. She rose at four in the morning, and made up the fires in the stoves. Her husband and sons were asleep. "Men," she said, "hated housework." She did not call the girls until breakfast was nearly ready, because "young things needed sleep." She milked five cows before the sun was fairly up.

The farmer, his five children and two farm-hands sat down to breakfast, and she poured out the coffee and baked the cakes which they ate. After they had finished she ate her own breakfast if she cared for any. Then came washing or ironing or scrubbing or baking until it was time for the heavy noon meal which she cooked. Her daughters used sometimes to help a little, but in an idling, half-hearted way. Sometimes she would drive them out with a queer, pathetic smile.

"Young folks like pleasure. They ought to have their fun!" she would say.

There was the morning's work to finish after the dinner was over. It was a large farm, and the men were hearty eaters. She "laid down" quantities of meats and canned and dried vegetables.

After supper was over, everybody found some recreation but mother. The farmer smoked, the young people visited the neighbors or gathered at one end of the porch chattering and laughing. Mother was inside at work, sewing or with her great basket of stockings.

She would look at them smiling.

"They like their fun," she would say. She looked at them again sometimes as if, old as she was, she would like some fun too, but she never joined them. They were with the friends whom they had made at college and school. Mother had been very little at school when she was young. Besides she had no time for idling. Sometimes when she was making shirts for the boys she worked until midnight.

One evening her youngest girl read her a story, which she thought would suit her mother's intellect. It touched and pleased her greatly. She spoke of it for years afterwards.

One of her days was like all the others, except Sundays, when she had time to go to church. She was very happy there, but especially when they sang any hymn which she had known when a girl; she would join, scarcely above her breath, for she knew her voice was cracked.

When strangers remarked that she was growing thin, her children replied that it was no wonder. Mother's energy would wear the flesh from any woman's body. Her appetite failed, the very smell of salt meat and the cabbage which she cooked nauseated her. She used to listen eagerly when they talked of the fruit which could be bought in the city. But nobody noticed it. "Mother had always been the motive power, which had kept the whole machinery in motion. It never occurred to anybody that the power could be exhausted.

One day, however, when they came down to breakfast, the table was not spread, and no fires were lighted. For the first time in her life, when she was needed, mother lay in her bed still and quiet. She would never work for them more.

After they had buried her they knew how much they had loved her. Their grief was sincere and deep. They never wearied in talking of her unfailing gentleness, her unselfishness, her perfect unselfishness.

None of them seemed to think, however, that any effort of theirs they could have made while she was still moving patient and [illegible] story is a true one. We have [illegible] purpose.—Youth's Companion.

A Word to Boys.

Boys, be kind to the loved ones at home. Don't wound your parents hearts with words of impatience and disrespect. Remember the love and care they have lavished, and will continue to lavish on you, from the cradle to the grave. Remember what your life has caused them—how many sleepless nights and dreary days have come to them because of their love for you. Don't come into their presence with an air of disrespect and self importance; don't imagine that because you came into the world several years after them that you are therefore wiser; don't get impatient and resentful because they favor you with some of their dearly bought experience and wholesome advice; don't expect them to see things from your standpoint or sympathize with you in all your little disappointments. Remember they have fought life's fiercest battles and been sorely wounded therein; and they know you are as yet only on the skirmish line.

Don't be too eager to leave the home nest. Of course it is natural and right for every boy, when the proper time comes to think and plan for a home of his own, but don't imagine that time has come when you put put on your first swallow-tail and cravat.

No matter how well you may promise to do, the day you leave the old homestead to start out for yourself in the world will be a day of mourning for the old folks therein. So be careful and don't try to remind them on every occasion that the time is coming and that you are anxious for it to come.

Be courteous to your sisters. There is an old adage that as the boy treats his sisters so the man will treat his wife Show your sisters the same kindness and courtesy that you would the fairest lady in the land. Don't appropriate the easiest chair in the room, and leave them to take the footstool or hunt a seat at pleasure. Don't snap them up if they ask you a question, or answer them as though they were idiots and incapable of comprehending a sensible reply. Don't go into the room which their careful hands have made tidy and throw things around in such a manner as to convert it into a curiosity shop, and then wonder why your "things" are not always in order. A gentle boy will make a gentleman, and there is no surer proof of a boy's character than his manners at home.

The Bridle.

"Don't go without a bridle, boys," was grandfather's favorite bit of advice.

Do you suppose we were all teamsters or horse jockeys? No such thing If he heard one cursing and swearing, or giving to much vain and foolish talk, "That man has lost his bridle," he would say.

Without a bridle, the tongue, though a little member, "boasteth great things." It is "an unruly evil, full of deadly poison." Put a bridle on, and it is one of the best servants the body and soul have. "I will keep my mouth with a bridle," said King David; and who can do better than follow his example?

When my grandfather saw a man drinking and carousing, or a boy spending all his money for cakes and candy, "Poor fellow!" he would say, "he's left off his bridle." The appetite needs a reining. Let it loose, and it will run you to gluttony, drunkenness, and all sorts of disorders. Be sure to keep a bridle on your appetite: don't neglect to have one for passions. They go mad if they get unmanageable, driving you down a blind and headlong course to ruin. Keep the check rein tight; don't let it slip; hold it steady.—Never go without your bridle.

That was the bridle my grandfather meant—the bridle of self-government. Parents try to retain and check their children, and you can generally tell by their behavior what children have such wise and faithful parents. But parent's cannot do everything And some children have no parents to care for them. Every boy must have his own bridle, and every girl must have hers. They must learn to check and govern themselves. Self government is the most difficult and most important government in the world. It becomes easier every day, if you practice it with steady and resolute will. It is the fountain of excellence. It is the cutting and prunning which makes the noble and vigorous tree of character.—Exchange.

The best friend I have is the man who in some way leads me to do better things than I would do. He is friendless, indeed, who has no one to draw out the best that is in him.—United Presbyterian.

It is sweet to love, but oh! how bitter—to be troubled with a cough, day and night. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, however, is a sure remedy. 25 cents.

"I cannot sing to-night! My throat is sore." "Of course you haven't tried Salvation Oil!" "No," "Then get it, and you will sing like the birds."

Alive Forevermore.

"And behold I am alive forevermore." Rev. 1: 18. Ours is not a dead Christ, but a living Lord. Christianity is founded on a living personality—on the living one, who is alive forevermore. The sepulchre is empty, and the meditorial throne is occupied. The christian church is not the church of the sepulchre, but the church of the resurrection. The christian religion springs from a life, is permeated by a life, a living life runs through and through it. It is full of vitality. Its author is alive, and he is a live author—wide awake, on the alert, up to date. With sleepless eye he takes in all space, all events, all persons, all ages, all creatures. He has conquered death and darkness, and, as the living one, he will ultimately triumph universally and eternally over all antagonism. Because he lives, we shall live also. The empty sepulchre is the guarantee of the empty graveyard. Blessed title this for our thoughts to-day.—Dr. David Spencer.

PASTOR KOENIGS NERVE TONIC

Physicians Couldn't Cure. X

SIDAMSVILLE, Hamilton Co., O., June, 1889.

One bottle of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic cured me entirely, after physicians had tried unsuccessfully for 8 months to relieve me of nervous debility. W. HUENNEFELD.

Best of All.

CHICAGO, May, 1888.

I consider it my duty to recommend to all sufferers of nervous diseases Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, now 15 years of age, was suffering for 4 years from epilepsy to such an extent that no remedy seemed to even relieve the attacks, but after using only 5 bottles of Koenig's Nerve Tonic he had but one slight attack. I make this statement out of gratitude, and with the desire to make this best of all remedies better known. T. STEIN, 321 22d St.

I certify to the truth of the facts as stated above. L. KLING,

HAIR ON THE FACE, NECK, ARMS OR ANY PART OF THE PERSON QUICKLY DISSOLVED AND REMOVED WITH THE NEW SOLUTION

MODENE

AND THE GROWTH FOREVER DESTROYED WITHOUT THE SLIGHTEST INJURY OR DISCOLORATION OF THE MOST DELICATE SKIN.—DISCOVERED BY ACCIDENT.

IN COMPOUNDING, an incomplete mixture was accidentally spilled on the back of the hand, and on washing afterward it was discovered that the hair was completely removed. We purchased the new discovery and named it MODENE. It is perfectly pure, free from all injurious substances, and so simple any one can use it. It acts mildly but surely, and you will be surprised and delighted with the results. Apply for a few minutes and the hair disappears as if by magic. It has no resemblance whatever to any other preparation ever used for a like purpose, and no scientific discovery ever attained such wonderful results. IT CANNOT FAIL. If the growth be light, one application will remove it permanently; the heavy growth such as the beard or hair on moles may require two or more applications before all the roots are destroyed, although all hair will be removed at each application, and without the slightest injury or unpleasant feeling when applied or ever afterward. —MODENE SUPERCEDES ELECTROLYSIS.—

—Recommended by all who have tested its merits—Used by people of refinement.—

Gentlemen who do not appreciate nature's gift of a beard, will find a priceless boon in Modene, which does away with shaving. It dissolves and destroys the life principle of the hair, thereby rendering its future growth an utter impossibility, and is guaranteed to be as harmless as water to the skin. Young persons who find an embarrassing growth of hair coming, should use Modene to destroy its growth. Modene sent by mail, in safety mailing cases, postage paid, (securely sealed from observation) on receipt of price, $1.00 per bottle. Send money by letter, with your full address written plainly. Correspondence sacredly private. Postage stamps received the same as cash. ALWAYS MENTION YOUR COUNTY AND THIS PAPER.

BY JOHN W. MOORE, STATE HISTORIAN.

MEMOIR VI—REV. MARTIN ROSS

CHAPTER ONE.

"The kingdom of God cometh not with observation" was the declaration of our Lord. There were myriads of men in many different lands waiting and watching for the sign which were to disclose the advent of the long expected Messiah, yet the star of Bethlehem was an unheeded signal to all save the three wise men of the east and the humble shepherds of the Jordan plain. The Pharisee, set and rooted in the nest of his own preconceptions of the pomp and splendor necessarily attendant upon an event so august and potent in human affairs, dismissed the thought that the King of the Jews could be identified with the puling baby, making his entrance upon life in the little stalls of a village inn. It was the same incredulity that led his sect thirty years later to mock at all the miracles of a Saviour who had been so long known as a village carpenter. A great feature in Christ's visit to this world seems to have been to mortify and banish from the hearts of his people all such vain and selfish expectations. We often find the true successors and representatives of these ancient self deceivers in persons who have fixed up in their minds the way they will find release from their consciousness of sin and want of acceptance with God. Some expect to be converted by some manifestation from heaven almost as miraculous as that by which Saul of Tarsus was arrested on his bloody errand to Damascus. Others more reasonable await less significant manifestations on the part of the Holy Spirit, but with all their evident thirst for deliverance, we invariably find that such people are the last to be blest in the richest seasons of revival. But let us be thankful that not even stupidity and obstinacy are proof against the infinite mercy which sees and pities our poor human frailty. "If any man thirst let him come unto me and drink," cried the Lord Jesus to the listening multitudes, and so says he to-day even to men and women who would dictate the manner and style of their receiving pardon from the courts of heaven.

Such a line of thought was suggested by the life and conversion of Martin Ross, whose career in this world will form the subject of this memoir. A lad born in seclusion and comparative poverty amid the dense swamps which then fringed both banks of the Roanoke river, and then at the earliest moment of his fitness for military life going off to mingle in the carnage and confusion of contending armies, would appear to have slight prospect of usefulness in the future, so far as christian beneficence was concerned. His alternations of labor on his father's farm near Williamston, and then months of toil, exposure and evil connections amid the net fishermen of the Roanoke, were a poor school of morals at best, but counted as nothing when contrasted with the countless temptations and sinful examples encountered in armies so largely composed of French infidels and atheists. Yet a youth thus exposed to so many dangers of soul and body was, by the help of God, not only to survive the perils of the battle-field, but almost immediately on his return to his old home, he found the pearl of great price.

We have in the life of Rev. Reuben Ross, a brother of Martin, a vivid picture of the old Ross homestead and of life on the Roanoke in those far off days. It seems that one William Ross had come as the first of the name, and made his home on the same farm near Williamston. He left a son, also named William, who was born Aug. 9th, 1731. Nine other boys and girls, beside Martin, made full the quiver of this pious and prolific old man, the second Wm. Ross. He was a member of Skewarkey Baptist church, and held with unquestioning faith all the extremest Calvinistic teachings and deductions on the subject of predestination. It would be amusing if so much that is tragic and ruinous did not mingle with the story, to tell to what lengths these well-meaning people carried their deductions of the fact that God has foreknowledge and control in human affairs. That men had at the same time been left in possession of their own wills in such matters, was as entirely ignored as if Christ had never taught the truth, that men are free to accept or reject his terms of mercy. With a fatalism that would astound even a Saracen dervish, these ultra Calvinists said it was "love's labor lost" to teach the way of life to their children. If they were of the true elect, then it was, they said, forestalling the work of the Holy Spirit to be thus attempting to save a vessel perhaps consigned to eternal wrath from the foundation of the world. Thus beyond regular family worship there was scarcely a semblance of effort to mould and direct the moral growth of their own offspring. They were left to follow their own devices as to how they should spend Sundays It was a matter of small concern to old Mr. Ross, and men of his ilk, that his boys forgot that the Sabbath was not to be profaned. If they drank too much apple brandy on these Sunday frolics, it was set down as only an incident of youth and indiscretion which would be all forgiven when, in his own good time, God should call the prodigal from the error of his ways.

The Ross family lived just east of the town of Williamston on a farm then known as the "Islands." It was so situated that great advantages were obtained as to rearing and fattening live stock. William Ross found that the rich bottom lands of the Roanoke were a mine of wealth in their many sources of food for both hogs and neat cattle. The never failing supply of reed forage and the great crops of acorns and other kinds of mast sustained his cattle and hogs of themselves, and corn was only used to keep them gentle and mindful of human help. A low, rambling house built around a large central room, with a huge, wide spreading mulberry tree shading the front door, were the chief elements in the rural landscape containing the old Ross homestead. In that humble and unpretending home of simple, homely abundance were to be reared three ministers of the gospel. Two of them, Martin and Reuben Ross, were to attain great usefulness and influence in their separate fields of labor, while their brother James, in an humbler sphere, was to be no less zealous and useful. That so many of William Ross's sons thus became so useful in God's service, shows how much more pregnant and convincing is a pure and consistent christian's life than oceans of advice and admonition, wanting the proper sanctions of sincerity in the monitor. It is breath wasted for an inconsistent parent to talk morality to a boy who is aware of how such things fail to influence the life of him who thus essays to show the way to holiness. The father who dogmatizes and utters loud prayers all the week and still can not visit the stores on Saturday without getting fuddled with bad whiskey, rather disgusts than edifies the boys he would seek to influence for good. Old Mr. William Ross took just the opposite course. He walked close with God and let his example alone plead with the youths he loved and yet only aided as to council, in his prayers made in their hearing, that God would yet in his own good time give them "the peace that passeth understanding."

Martin Ross no doubt pondered long and well over those weighty questions touching providence, free-will and that soul fatalism he saw overshadowing the life of his honored father. His strong, natural affections in earlier years might lead him to accept as true any gloss, however monstrous and incredible, that he got from William Ross; but that keen, undaunted intelligence that was in late years to make him immortal, early began to question many of the deductions made by the fatalists in their pretended amplification of Paul and Calvin's teaching on the subject. When in the stress of the Revolutionary war, Mr. Ross had sent Martin to join his two older brothers, John and William, on the tented field, the future orator and divine found a new school of lasting impressiveness. His ideas and emotions hitherto had been colored only by the hints he received at the old field school and in the godly lives of his parents. In the army he found every day experiences showing the contrasts of strength and weakness in human character. He saw men grown to be veterans in the ranks who yet trembled and sought every means to avoid going into actual battle. On the other hand were a multitude that would be grieved and shamed if accident kept them back from the post of duty on such an occasion. He saw these same men freely volunteering to make up a forlorn hope, whenever their commander thought so bloody and dangerous a resort should be used against the insolent foe. He heard all shades of ecclesiastical teaching mooted and discussed around the winter camp fires and much to weaken his faith in Calvinistic fatalism. The Methodist chaplains and the reformed Baptists never grew weary in expatiating on the love and mercy of Christ for all our race. That his atonement was for all conditions and tribes, and that peace awaited every weary and heavy-laden soul that would really accept of Jesus. Such great Baptist preachers as John Gano, John Leland and Jeremiah Walker in their addresses to the troops preached a religion so much broader and more merciful than the iron-clad tenets Martin Ross had been hearing at Skewarkey, that his soul acquired a breadth of love and faith in the world-wide mercy of God that could never again cramp itself into the gloomy and hopeless fatalism of his parents.

When happily in 1781 the young soldier at the age of nineteen years returned in peace and safety to his home on the Roanoke, both his own soul and those of the family went out in gratitude to that protecting providence which had not only shielded him from death in battle, but had brought him back without wounds or any of the diseases that wreck so many strong men in camp and hospital. He had not as yet made any open profession of religion, but the matter was not to be much longer deferred. Before the year was out, he was baptized as a member of Skewarkey church: There, young as he was, the congregation were edified and astonished at the mingled grace and power of his modest and short addresses in conference. He soon yielded to his impressions of duty and requested the church to give him license to preach the gospel. They not only did this, but at an astonishingly early period in his life and ministry called him as their pastor.

In the thick veil of oblivion which lies for ever hidden away from all human knowledge so much of the lives and transactions of even of the greatest men in North Carolina, we have lost all the details of how Martin Ross, under so many disadvantages, yet made himself the great preacher of after years. We are left to imagine how the strong native intelligence was alternately exalted and then grew almost desperate in his struggles for more light. It was vain to seek aid of the illiterate brethren he met in Union Meetings; they could not venture in exegesis beyond the plainest of beaten paths in their limited field of Bible construction. Some had read Dr. Gill's opinions on some of the deep things in Scripture, but as a rule not even so great a Baptist authority as the eminent English commentator was known to men who set themselves up as the spiritual guides of a people almost perishing for want of higher light and knowledge. Such perfunctory guidance of his people could not for a moment satisfy the conscience of Martin Ross. His clear, unclouded vision saw all the defects in himself and his older brethren who were trying to break the bread of life to the still more ignorant people. With great wrestling in prayer and close study of every literary aid in his reach, the rich natural endowments soon began to show increased lustre as the result. A wonderful young preacher, they said one and all, as the speaker warmed up into enthusiasm in the progress of his discourse. A flowing and yet severely logical style of preaching was the charm that delighted, and at the same time convinced such multitudes of their spiritual needs. It was an elocution that grew more finished and powerful as the orator waxed greater in knowledge and experience. And thus he went on from one degree of grace and strength unto another until all eastern Carolina was ringing with his praises.

About Spurgeon.

LECTURE BY REV. DR. J. J. HALL, RALEIGH.

[Stenographic report by R. C. Lawrence.]

I have decided, my friends, to give you to-night some incidents from personal knowledge of C. H. Spurgeon.

I remember, although a child at the time, when the fame of Spurgeon was arousing the world. Our sympathies were awakened for the young preacher. Some persons charged mankind with being fools for running after a school boy. One represented him sliding down the railing of the pulpit steps with apparent ease and saying, "This is the way to hell." Of course no such thing ever happened, but he was so represented.

Others, however, believed that God had raised up young Spurgeon to be a great preacher, to preach to the world "Repent, repent!" but no one ever dreamed of the future that awaited young Spurgeon. He afterwards preached to audiences containing as many as twenty three thousand souls.

For forty long years his life blazed forth with the brightness of a great light. When we trace his ancestry we find that his grandfather, father, and brothers were preachers, and Spurgeon's two sons are preachers, one in London and the other in Australia.

Spurgeon was raised from neither the rich nor the poorer class of persons. He belonged to that class from which has come forth the brightest lights; not that the rich have not supplied great men, but the middle class has furnished far more than all the other classes.

His father spoke of him as a boy of spirit, and yet there was always a frankness about the boy. He was fearless. Let me illustrate: In the spring of 1840, before he was six years of age, seeing a person who was a professed christian standing in the village streets with men of doubtful character, young Spurgeon walking up astonished them all by saying, "What doest thou here, Elijah?"

I have heard him tell the story of his conversion: "I was a miserable creature. I thought he would never save me. Six months I prayed and still had no answer. I felt that I would do anything if he would only forgive me. I longed to understand how I might be saved. One day it snowed so hard that I was obliged to stop and seek shelter from the storm on my way to an appointment. Blessed hindrance. There happened to be a little Methodist chapel near, and I went to that. The minister read, 'Look unto me and be saved,' then setting his eyes on me he seemed to see my trouble, for he said, 'Young man you are in trouble. You must look, look unto the Lord for your salvation.' I saw it all at once. I must look, look, look, and I have been looking, and will yet look unto the God of the universe."

The boy having been converted, adopted the Baptists as his chosen people, and obtained the rather reluctant consent of his father, and the young man walked seven miles to be baptized.

It seemed as if God had told him he must be a preacher, for he at once commenced thinking of it. And a great preacher he was.

In March, 1871, the great London Tabernacle was opened for worship. It cost over $150,000. He often preached twelve sermons a week. It had a seating capacity of six or seven thousand souls. There are great works going on now in the world which were first stimulated and strengthened by Spurgeon.

His "Pastor's College" is a great work. It sprung up from his hands, and hundreds of ministers learned to preach the gospel within those walls. They now have a beautiful building, which cost over $75,000. Who can tell the toil and labor which was necessary for Spurgeon to undergo to have all these things attended to by himself.

The colportage department of this institution is a grand work. Thousands of people are supplied with books, Bibles, Testaments, etc., free if they were unable to buy them.

There is the Stockwell Orphanage, in which more than one thousand homeless and friendless orphans have been fed and clothed, and it is conducted so that the children do not feel themselves a burden on the kind people who support them, but are made to feel independent, and they had no greater friend or benefactor than C. H. Spurgeon.

As to his honesty and integrity, neither friend or foe had ought to say against it. It was unquestionable.

Spurgeon was a man of strong prejudices. He was violently opposed to what is known in England as "High Church." Once he was reading a book, and finding it was devoted to the high church he threw it across the room, and on picking it up and finding the back was broken, he said, "I wish that the back of every one of these books was broken this way."

He had no love for money. Offers were made him to deliver lectures and addresses in this country, but no sum could induce him to cross the waters to America.

When, however, his Pastor's College was once in sore need of money, said he to us, "There is not enough money in the treasury to pay this month's bills. Boys, pray to him who owns the silver and the gold for help." It showed his faith.

In his death the world has lost a great friend. He loved mankind. He was the brother of the human race.

But Spurgeon is no more. Never again can I speak with him. Never again can I grasp his hand and talk with him.

If ever a man worked himself to death that man was C. H. Spurgeon. For more than forty years he went on preaching to the multitudes that awaited him, and often in the lonely hours of the night he was seen working his life away in the cause of Christ. He was a kind man, a good man, a christian man, and has now gone to his reward. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

DR. M. D. HOGE OF RICHMOND, VA., ON SPURGEON.

Dr. Hoge says he had often remarked that he was the greatest power for good in Great Britain. Spurgeon's was a popularity that had increased with increasing years. His Tabernacle has 6,000 sittings, and during his life sixty volumes of his sermons were published. All of his sermons had been reported and were read in all English speaking countries, and many of them were translated into other modern tongues. The statement of his (Dr. Hoge's) nearest ecclesiastical brother, that England was but the platform of Spurgeon's pulpit and his audience was the world around, was no exaggeration. No man when he first started on his career had been more ridiculed than Spurgeon. All sorts of stories had been trumped up about him, but he had pursued the even tenor of his way and won the respect not only of all classes but all sects. He had been cheerful and sunny and loyal to his convictions under all circumstances. His life was a magnificent illustration of what pluck, self-reliance, and adherence to the right could accomplish. Spurgeon had done more than any other man to bring about christian fellowship.

Some one had said that the world was abjuring Calvinism. The speaker did not propose on this occasion to defend Calvinism, but it was needless to tell him that Calvinism was dying out when the most popular preacher in the world was the strongest Calvinist in the world. No man in the world had had such audiences as Spurgeon, and there was not a month in which he did not preach Calvinism. That was the spirit and essence of his discourses. Spurgeon was a man who, although he was devoted to his friends, would sacrifice a friendship rather than sacrifice a principle.

DR. HOGE'S SERMON ON SPURGEON.

Rev. A. W. Price of Wadesboro, N. C., writing to the Wilmington Messenger under date of Feb. 10th, says:

"I read with pleasure the sermon of Dr. Hoge on Spurgeon in your issue of the 9th inst. It was a noble tribute of a noble man to a noble man. And yet it does seem to me a little incongruous, to say the least, that at this time when all our hearts are sad over the loss of that great and good man, Dr. Hoge should use the dead Spurgeon to thump the heads of living American Baptists. He says, 'His great heart throbbing with love for all that love Christ's name could not be deceived by any logical fallacies that would deny to other blood bought sinners the right to sit down at the table of a common Lord. * * * I cannot but believe that there are many Baptists in America that long for the same freedom, and in the absence of ecclesiastical courts to discuss and decide these matters, I long for some Baptist in this country to arise who, like Spurgeon, shall be great enough to lead the way in this great reform.' You see the implication American Baptists lack the 'great heart, throbbing with love' that cannot 'be deceived by any logical fallacies.' It might be well to inform Dr. Hoge that Spurgeon was not able, with all his great influence, to carry this 'great reform' into all the ranks of English Baptists, for it is a fact that to-day there are more 'strict' Baptists in Great Britain than open-communionists. And if Dr. Hoge knew more of the rank and file of American Baptists, he would know that should such a great reformer arise, he could not be able to carry a single congregation much less the denomination. Witness the egregious failures of such men as Dowling and Pentecost, and Behrends and Bridgeman, who when they went off on the communion question, not only did not carry their congregations with them, but left the denomination without taking any members. We repel the insinuation that lack of love to other christians is the basis of strict communion. We appreciate and reciprocate christian love, but we can not renounce truth and principle even for its sake. It is because we do 'believe in the word of God,' and not because of 'logical fallacies' that we are close communicants.

It is unfortunate that such a tender tribute to the dead should be used to thrust at the living."

A NOTABLE SAYING.

Among the notable sayings of Mr. Spurgeon this extract, from one of his later sermons, is worthy of special mention:—

"My time is ended, although I had much more to say. I can only pray the Lord to give you to believe in him. If I should never again have the pleasure of speaking for my Lord upon the face of this earth, I should like to deliver as my last confession of faith this testimony—that nothing but faith can save in this nineteenth century; nothing but faith can save England; nothing but faith can save the present unbelieving church; nothing but firm faith in the grand old doctrines of grace and in the ever-living and unchanging God can bring back to the church again a full tide of prosperity, and make her to be the deliverer of the nations for Christ; nothing but faith in the Lord Jesus can save you or me. The Lord give you, my brothers, to believe to the utmost degree, for his name's sake. Amen. —Christian Inquirer.

Letter from Bro. W. S. Milliken.

Dear Recorder:—I have just read an interesting article from the pen of Elder D. N. Gore in which he expresses an earnest desire to be a good Baptist. And puts it down as an insolvable enigma what shall be done to, or how shall the member be dealt with, who does little, or nothing for the pastor, evangelist, mission cause, education or even the poor of the church. And I seriously doubt if there is any church that has not had ocular demonstration of the case to which Bro. Gore refers. And I am equally frank to admit that this must be one of the most trying perplexities in church government. And it is plain to any humble seeker after truth that covetousness and self-conceit are the controling passions of any man who has espoused the doctrines of the glorious gospel and does not bestow according as God has prospered him. It occurs to me just here that the individual described has simply pretended to put on Christ because it is respectable, and thinks to pass along, in good company as a fellow of Christ without one spark of his meek and lowly spirit in his heart. Now it seems to me that it is not so much a question what shall be done with such an one, as how shall we go to work to knock the pride and self conceit out of this mistaken individual. For this accomplished Humility, benign visitor, heaven reflected in man, steps in. We find him on his knees, and behold! he prays, and his exclamation is "Lord what wilt thou have me to do." And for the first time in his life he sees the necessity of removing the beam from his own eye, that he may be able to see clearly the mote that is in his brothers eye. His whole nature is humbled. And before demanding that his brother should be stoned, he examines himself, to see whether or not he is without sin, and whether he is worthy to cast the first stone. At last having learned to love God, he wants more of God's love, and as God loves the cheerful giver, he thenceforth bestows liberally of his worldly goods to every christian object. Brethren let us pray to become more humble. Yours in Christ,

W. S. MILLIKEN.

INTER-CHURCH COMITY.

Baptist churches are independent bodies; and we think their independent form of church government is evidently the form that prevailed among the apostolic churches. This complete independence existing among our churches, however, does not imply the absence of reciprocal duties one toward another.

There are certain courtesies due from one Baptist church toward another, or other churches "of the same faith and order," which cannot be ignored or disregarded, if our churches would preserve a hearty and cordial fellowship one with another. This inter church comity, we are persuaded, is not practiced among our churches to that extent that the importance of the matter demands.

One way in which there is danger of one church failing to show proper respect or courtesy for another is when efforts are made to receive excluded members of a sister church without requiring them to be restored to the fellowship of such church, and then dismissed in the usual way by letter. It is true that not much of this is done, but still there is at times more or less tendency in this direction, and sometimes considerable pressure is brought to bear on excluding churches with a view of getting them to agree that excluded members shall be received elsewhere without being restored to their former churches. With some possible exceptions, the old Baptist custom in regard to this matter is the safe one to follow. Now in behalf of those excluded, a word of advice. It is too generally the case that churches do not show toward excluded members that kind attention and christian regard which will often prove the means of winning them back to the fold, if they are really converted men or women, or else, leading them to Christ, if they are not. Paul's direction about the excluded member at Corinth ought to impress upon our churches the importance of looking after their excluded members with a view of reclaiming them.

Another way by which our churches may fail to show proper inter-church comity is in securing or calling pastors. Here, as elsewhere, in our lives as individual christians, or in our work as churches of Christ, we should never forget the words of the Saviour, "All things therefore whatsoever ye would that men do to you, do ye even so to them." We think we have noticed rather marked evidence of the absence of the spirit that this important passage teaches, in the manner in which pastorless churches sometimes find new shepherds "to go in and out before them." It is often the case that a church has the reputation of "coveting the best gifts," and many churches we fear have complacently adopted this idea, and put it into practice, without remembering that it is wrong to covet; and in regulating the matter of pastoral supply and demand, their sister churches have rights which they ought not by any means to ignore, and that they are due them courtesies that they themselves would expect under similar circumstances. To illustrate: the church at A, after considerable writing, correspondence, anxiety, &c., secures a good pastor. The place is important, the work is important; but after the pastor has remained only about a year, and just as he is getting a good hold on the congregation and the community, the church at B becomes pastorless by the resignation of its popular pastor, who accepts a call to another field. The church at B perhaps appoints a committee to correspond with different pastors, and to nominate a suitable man to fill the vacancy. This committee at once agree on the pastor at A, and decide to recommend him to their church at the next conference. This is done, and the church extends the call. This is done, too, regardless of the fact that the church at A has secured their pastor only a year or two since; are very much pleased with him, and would be delighted to retain his services.

In a case of this kind, we think it decidedly better for the pastorless church not to covet the pastor of her sister church. If the union is recent, and he is doing a good work, and they have no reason to believe that the relations between pastor and church are anything but pleasant, it strikes us forcibly that the pastorless church would [illegible] wisdom and christian courtesy to look elsewhere for a pastor.

Before the decision to call any man in fill a vacant pulpit is made, we honestly believe that such questions as these should be asked: "Is it right to make this call? Would we be treating our sister church as we would have her treat us under similar circumstances?" We fear that such questions are not at all entertained at times by churches or committees when they are looking for new pastors. This leads us to ask some other question in this line: Has the church, whose pastor it is proposed to call, no just claim to be consulted? Is it a matter for the called pastor, and the calling church alone to settle, without regard to the wishes of the other church concerned?

We think it more conducive to church harmony, and more in accordance with the proprieties regulating church comity, for churches that are pastorless to consult pastors that have been for some considerable time on the fields they occupy. Other things being equal, the pastor who has long labored on one field, is much more apt to be willing to entertain a call elsewhere; and often his usefulness would be decidedly increased by the change.

This whole thing is one that demands tact, care, some experience, and much religion, to manage in an entirely scriptural way. Our idea of the best manner of procedure, when a pastor is to be called, is about as follows: Let a judicious committee be appointed to consult or correspond with other churches and pastors, as to supplying the vacancy. After doing so, let the church be called together, and let the committee mention some two or three men that they think are available, allowing any member of the church the privilege of nominating other ministers for the pastorate. Then, after earnest prayer for divine guidance, and after allowing a free expression of opinion by the members as to the fitness of the man they prefer, let the church vote by ballot; and if there be no majority after the first vote, let the ballot be taken again, for the two that receive the larger number of votes, and after the second vote let the one receiving the largest number of votes be declared pastor, making the vote, if possible, unanimous. This plan is a little cumbrous, we admit, but it is less open to objection than other methods often adopted, and possibly more in accordance with our democratic ideas of the rights of our people. Besides it enables the humblest and poorest member of the church to better realize that he is a factor in church life and church work. This, we opine, is as the Saviour would have it be: "I am the vine, ye are the branches."

Proceeding in this way, after paying proper attention to that courtesy that should always exist between the churches, our people will be kept from mistakes in calling pastors. Let the call be indefinite as to time, and thus have the appearance of stability about it.

It is also best for pastors, we think, to accept with the idea of some permanency in their work. This plan is decidedly better for the reputation of pastors, for by frequent changes they almost unavoidably produce the impression that the salaries offered had much to do with the changes, and that they are only using the humbler churches as stepping stones to more important positions. The pastoral relation is an important and tender one, and should not be lightly formed or broken.

These views are advanced with all due respect to brethren and churches that may differ from us. We do not by any means claim to be infallible.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

A WEEK IN EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA.

The Baptist church at Weldon is still without a pastor. The brethren want one, and the only difficulty in the way is that there are only a few brethren who compose the financial strength of the church. These of course want a good preacher, and they deserve just such a man as they desire. But it will be exceedingly hard for them to replace Bro. Morton for the amount they are able to pay.

The town is growing in population, and the business interests of the place is growing even more than the population. This only makes it the more necessary that the Baptist interest should continue to grow as it has for the last half dozen years. I know of no better place for a young man who is educated, and who has ability to preach, and a mind to work, to settle than in Weldon. The church is in good condition, and the brethren are ready to lay out their best strength for the support of the right man for their pastor.

At Boykins, Va., Bro. J. M. Corbitt "laid violent hands" on me. So next morning found me in his pleasant home, the doors of which for thirty years have stood open to North Carolina as well as to Virginia Baptists. I was not very hard to hold this time, and I am sure I shall be always found agreeable for all time to come.

Saturday and Sunday I spent at Roberts' Chapel, one of Bro. C. W. Scarboro's churches. This church is on the Tar River railroad in Northampton county, and is one of the very best country churches in this section of the State, having between three and four hundred members. The building is large, neat and comfortable, and they have recently put on two nice rooms in the rear for the use of the Sunday-school. On each Sunday morning may be seen from eighty to a hundred children who recite the Sunday-school lesson in these rooms. The prayer meeting is held as regularly on Wednesday night as if the church was in a town or city. In the two days I spent there I did not see where a single individual dared spit on the church floor. Such things not only impress a stranger favorably, but it is evidence that those who meet there to worship have some reverence for the house which has been dedicated to the service of the Lord. Bro. Scarboro is a pastor in the truest sense of the term—one that will not grow old nor become stale. He is not only a preacher, but his work and sympathy extends wherever the poor and afflicted need comfort and help.

On reaching Lewiston Sunday night, I learned that court met in Windsor, Bertie county, on Monday, and believing that wherever men meet in North Carolina there the RECORDER ought to be represented also, I take my place along with two lawyers, Mr. Williams of Norfolk, and Capt. Peebles of Northampton. Mr. Williams, who is a young lawyer, on taking his seat at once challenged the team "for cause," avowing that the harness wouldn't hold a buck rabbit. Capt. Peebles being to the "manor born" at once "passed" the gray and the bay, as did many other vehicles of all sorts before we reached Windsor. For my own part I was not in the least disturbed. Nobody who has been over the rocks and mountains of Watauga, Ashe and Alleghany, a distance of two hundred miles, with Bro. J. H. Mills a good portion of the time, and Dr. Durham all the time, in the same conveyance, would be much distressed at the sight of a poor team and rotten harness, when the road is as level as a plank floor. But we got there, as the hotel proprietor is ready to testify. The level country and good roads causes a large attendance here at court. I saw a number of men who had come as far as thirty and forty miles to court. I found that a large per cent. of the crowd were Baptists. I got a good number of new subscribers, and but for the hard times would have gotten many more.

Messrs. D. C. and Frank Winston, also lawyer Pugh, (you see, I was like the man in the Bible: I fell among lawyers), were very kind to me, and helped me in my work. Bro. Mizzell, the proprietor of the hotel, is one of the oldest Baptists in Eastern North Carolina. He says he has read every copy of the RECORDER for the last forty years. He was especially kind to me, both in giving me the very best of accommodations and also in his efforts to help me in my work for the paper.

I spent a night with Bro. T. T. Speight on my return from Windsor. He has one of the handsomest country homes I saw in Bertie county. He has a large farm on which he raises horses, cows, hogs, corn, cotton and peanuts. Bro. Speight has four churches which he is serving most acceptably. But he is making wise preparation for that period of his life when he will no longer be able to serve churches.

Bro. Love has just closed a splendid meeting at Rocky Mount in which he was assisted by Bro. White of Durham. Seventeen were baptized last Sunday, and there are others awaiting baptism. The Baptists of Rocky Mount seem to be profoundly thankful for the new strength which has come to the church.

Among the new subscribers I got for the RECORDER was Bro. Wilson, late of Virginia. He is doing a fine business in leaf tobacco, and he allows his church and his pastor to share in the success he is having. Brother Love stands with open arms to receive all such Baptists as Bro. Wilson who may decide to come from the "sacred soil" to the Old North State. J. C. C.

REV. M. M. LANDRUM of Marion is steadily improving in health and hopes by spring to be able to do full work as pastor. He writes: "Never before have I seen so much sickness, and fatality as a result, some one around us nearly every day passing into the spirit-land, and among them so many that it looks as if we can so ill spare in our work here below; but then the same God rules that takes from us. Truly, soon all of us will be gone. O, how we should work! I still appreciate, and anxiously week by week look for, the 'old reliable' RECORDER."

THE Workers' Convention lately held in Nashville, Tenn., seems to have been a success. About two hundred brethren attended it.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. Dr. C. E. Taylor, President of Wake Forest College, was in Raleigh on Saturday.

....Rev. H. C. Moore of Morehead City returned from his visit to friends in Globe, N. C., on Thursday last.

....Rev. W. B. Morton of Wake Forest called to see us on Friday last when on his way to Leaksville, N. C.

....Dr. E. B. Ferebee of Belcross, N. C., is now in New York attending lectures in the post graduate medical school.

....Rev. Josiah Elliott of Hertford, N. C., one of the best men who ever lived, is again confined to his room by sickness.

....Rev. W. R. Gwaltney of Wake Forest was in Wilmington, N. C., on last Sunday in the interest of the Board of Education.

....Rev. W. S. Ballard desires that his correspondents address him in future at Scotland Neck, N. C., instead of Southport.

....Rev. J. O. Alderman has returned from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., and his office is now Hawley's Store, N. C.

....Rev. J. R. Jones of Milton, N. C., has accepted the call to the pastorate of the church in Yanceyville, N. C. He will preach there regularly one Sunday in each month.

....Rev. J. B. Boone of Raleigh, Financial Secretary of the Baptist Female University, went up to Monroe on Saturday last, and will visit points along the C. C. road this week.

....Rev. O. L. Stringfield has been conducting a series of very sucessful meetings at Wakefield for about ten days. Bro. N. B. Broughton went down on Sunday last to aid him in the good work.

....Dr. A. C. Dixon of Brooklyn is to preach the commencement sermon of Carson and Newman College, May 17th, and Dr. W. A. Nelson is to deliver the alumni address.—Baptist and Reflector.

....Rev. N. P. Stalling of Coinjock, N. C., is hard at work on his field trying to build up the cause. In his opinion it is impossible for any one to be an intelligent Baptist and not read the RECORDER.

....John E. Ray, the former Corresponding Secretary, says: "Our warmest prayers for the success of the glorious work in which you are personally engaged. Heaven's choicest blessings crown it with success."

....Rev. J. K. Howell of Lenox Castle, Caswell county, N. C., was in Raleigh on Thursday last. Brother and Sister Howell seem to have consecrated their lives to the one work of doing good. We know of none like them.

....Rev. Josiah Elliott says: "I will do my best to raise the last cent on the pledges of my churches for Home and Foreign Missions by May 1st, and by the help of my Heavenly Father I hope to raise more than the pledges."

....Rev. D. C. Murchison of Gulf, N. C., in renewing his subscription, says: "Allow me to congratulate you upon your success in still making the RECORDER better. You have certainly made a good start for the year 1892. May the Lord bless you."

....Rev. Dr. T. H. Pritchard of Wilmington, Rev. R. VanDeventer of Henderson, and Rev. Dr. A. G. McManaway of Charlotte, were in Raleigh on Tuesday of last week to consult with Rev. Dr. C. Durham about mission work, home and foreign.

....Spurgeon overflowed with humor. He used his humor wisely. All men who do much in the world have a broad streak of humor in them.—J. A. Broadus in Western Recorder. This may be a lesson to some, a comfort to others, and an illustration for all.

....The infliction of pain as a penalty for sin is pre-eminently a beneficent provision; and, therefore, not only justified by God's right to inflict it, but actually demanded by the benevolence of his nature. God is not too good to punish sin. He is too good not to do it.—Daniel Dodge in Law and Liberty.

....We understand that all the members of Crane's Creek Baptist church will transfer their membership to Cameron Baptist church, so this new church will start with a membership of about fifty. Rev. Mr. White, who has been preaching at Cameron for the past year, has been called as pastor.—Carthage Blade.

....Rev. John T. Albritton has been quite sick ever since the Goldsboro Convention. He is now only able to sit up a part of the time. He says: "The Lord only knows what is in store for me, yet I feel sure that he will do with me what is best. If I can do nothing else I can pray for the great work of missions."

....I want to say amen to your last editorial headed "Once for All." Every Baptist in the State should read it. Let those who take the RECORDER furnish the article to those who do not take it. There is too much fainting and falling back with some of us when we come in contact with the isms, orders and societies of the day.—C. C. Haymore.

....The Rev. George C. Needham and W. P. Fife will hold a Bible Institute in the Y. M. C. A. hall of Wilmington the first week in April. Mr. Needham is said to be a very able and useful Bible teacher, and is one of four brothers, Irishmen by birth, and all of them Baptist preachers. Later in April the Rev. Geo. H. Simmons of Kentucky, who is now managing the Workers' Convention in Nashville, Tenn., will hold a meeting with the First Baptist church of Wilmington, assisted by Mr. Moody's famous singer, Prof. T. D. Tounce. The same brethren will aid Bro. Adams in a meeting in Asheville about the first of May.—Dr. T. H. Pritchard in Charity and Children of Feb. 19.

....I was very sorry to see by last wee RECORDER the announcement of dear Devane's death. I never met with a fi spirit, a nobler man, a better christian. was too modest to be extensively know He was a fine physician and had a la practice; yet he read extensively, had a f mind, and was well posted in literature, e pecially of a religious nature. He was Baptist, and was able and ready to give a man a reason for his faith. He was t generous and kind in his nature to mak riches, and though his practice was ve large his collections were small. He will greatly missed by the poor churches in h section. Farewell, beloved brother, an may God deal kindly with the dear ones le behind.—Jno. F. McMillan, Savage, S. C.

....The Presbyterian Observer of Balt more stated some five years ago that Mr Spurgeon once stated to a sainted Bapti friend of the editor, "I hate a close com munion Baptist as I hate the devil." Th Baptist Weekly of this city responded saying "the story is a miserable falsehood." Soon afterwards Mr. Spurgeon wrote to th Rev. Dr. Patten as follows: (I am indebte to Rev. Dr. Medd'editch of the Christian Inquirer for leave to copy it.) "Dear Sir I do not know who the sainted gentleman may be, but he did not speak the truth. never even thought such a thing. The saint must have dreamed it. I know m own mind and views. As compared wit the bulk of English Baptists, I am a strict communionist myself, as my church is com posed strictly of baptized believers. Yours heartily, C. H. Spurgeon."—New York cor respondent of Western Recorder.

....Dr. Joseph Parker of London has written for the Times a sketch of the late Mr. Spurgeon, from which we reproduce the following sentences: "To Mr. Spurgeon christianity was not an argument but a mes sage; not something to be discussed, but something to be delivered by the preacher and instantaneously accepted by the hearer. Other ministers account for the universe Mr. Spurgeon took it for granted and made the best of it. Other ministers take the Bible to pieces and put it together again in some other shape; Mr. Spurgeon took it from his mother's hands in plain English, and accepted every word of it as the very speech of God. * * * To Mr. Spurgeon prayer simply meant asking. * * * Mr. Spurgeon's career has settled several important points. He has proved that evangelical preaching can draw around itself the greatest congregation in the world, and hold it for a life time. He has also proved that it is possible to draw and to hold the greatest congregation without organ, or band, or choir, or painted window. He has demonstrated beyond all doubt or question that the voluntary principle can be so worked as to sustain the greatest religious and benevolent institutions in the fullest vigor. And he has vividly, almost indeed sublimely, illustrated the Divine election which chooses its own instruments, protects them in the face of all hostility, and brings obscurity to the point of world-wide renown. Mr. Spurgeon was ordained 'in a mountain apart.'"

Thanks.

In the RECORDER of Feb. 10th you had the boldness to give utterance to much needed truth on the drift of this age away from God's word on the subject of women preaching, praying and speaking in mixed public assemblies. You certainly have my thanks for your brave words, however unpalatable to many. The time has come, it seems to me, when all who love, and are determined to follow, God's teachings, must speak out in no uncertain tones on this subject. I have constantly protested against this palpable violation of Bible truth. On one occasion, I deliberately left a congregation when a woman was called to "lead in prayer." Last summer I was in attendance on one of our Associations. A Northern woman was invited by the Association to address it on temperance. I was only a visitor, hence contented myself with saying, "Let your women keep silence in the churches," and retired from the house till she was through. On the next day, having to preach, and the necessity of letting God absolutely settle our religion for us, I took occasion to say to the Association, "I was grieved and mortified beyond measure to see a whole Association of Baptists, a people who boasted that God's word was their sufficient and exclusive rule of faith and practice, deliberately, with their attention called to it, walk over that word, and call on a woman by a vote to address them." This was a radical course. But we must not yield to open violations of Scriptural instruction without instant and stern protest. So it seems to me. It will be found necessary, unless we intend weakly to give up the fight for God's right to dictate his own worship, in all things, great and small, to observe the Latin maxim, obsta principiis, and "resist beginnings" of departure from Scriptural teachings.

But I did not intend to write so much. I simply took up my pen to thank you for your most manly and excellent editorial.

A Model Letter of Resignation.

We reproduce from the Wimington Messenger of the 16th, Rev. R. E. Peele's letter of resignation to his church:

At Brooklyn Baptist church on Sunday the Rev. R. E. Peele, the pastor, tendered his resignation in the following note to the deacons:

"To the Deacons of Brooklyn Baptist church: Dear Brethren—I do hereby tender my resignation of Brooklyn Baptist church to take effect on the 1st of April next, or sooner if my successor shall be secured. This is final and I hope the church will so regard it. My strength is not sufficient for the work, hence I retire rather than see it suffer. Please pass no resolutions of appreciation. If I have been faithful, none are needed; if unfaithful none are, deserved. Let the work speak for itself and let me abide by what it says.

Affectionately,

R. E. PEELE."

At a meeting of the church last night, Mr. Peele's resignation was accepted and the congregation voted to call the Rev. J. T. Jenkins, of Winston. Mr. Jenkins is well known among the congregation, having last fall spent several days with this church, conducting a very successful revival meeting.

Not only will the congregation of Brooklyn Baptist church regret to part with Mr. Peele but the community will also share in that regret. Mr. Peele is an original, able and faithful preacher and Brooklyn church has flourished under his charge.

Don't Know How to Mix the Church and the World.

I was forcibly struck with the article of Sister Lucy E. Hicks of Henderson, contained in the RECORDER of Feb. 17th. She said she don't know how to mix the church with the world. If I knew how, I would think it bad policy. "Come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord." "Let your light so shine," &c.

I don't say a man is not a christian who will aid or give his influence for the sale of whiskey. But I do say he is failing to let his light shine. I am persuaded to believe that the church of Christ would suffer less if she was purged of all such members. We need men to battle for the Lord, who will stand firm on his side. If the world will engage in the whiskey traffic, let them do so at their own risk: we can not afford to aid them; if we do, we become injurious to the Lord's cause. To help Satan in his works is displeasing to God. I verily believe if all professors of religion would emphatically have nothing to do with the accursed evil, and let the devil and his followers alone patronize it, it would soon perish.

Seminary Notes.

Work has been begun on the new Seminary building, which is to be completed by next October. This will be a handsome structure, occupying the spacious lot which fronts on Broadway.

Dr. Sampey has taken the chair of Old Testament for this term since the death of Dr. Manly. Dr. Sampey is looked upon as one of the brightest, most promising young men of the denomination. A shadow hangs over his home now in the recent death of his only child. He has the warmest sympathy of students and all.

Bro. Anderson of the McAll Mission in France gave a short lecture yesterday on the work of protestantism in France, and especially in Paris where he works. Surely the word of God is working like leaven in all lands.

Dr. Boyd is conducting a series of meetings at Walnut Street church. Much good is being done.

The Baptist Missions in this city have lost one of their most efficient helpers and supporters in the death of Dr. Manly. The students under his wise direction have done a wonderful amount of successful mission work in and around the city. By this means many churches have been planted.

The March number of the Seminary Magazine will be a memorial issue in honor of Dr. Manly. It will contain many rare addresses and articles, together with a portrait and life of the subject. A large number of extra copies will be printed and you can obtain a copy by sending fifteen cents to the Seminary Magazine, Louisville, Ky.

We are congratulating ourselves over the fact that the health of Dr. Broadus continues good. We pray that he may be spared long for the wonderful work he is doing.

William Carey.

"A Sketch of Beginnings in Modern Missions." By Rev. Arthur C. Chute, with Prefatory Note by Rev. E. B. Hulbert, D.D. Price 25 cents, postage paid.

Dr. Hulbert says: "In this monograph of William Carey from the pen of Rev. A. C. Chute there is a very near approach to the ideal compendium—short enough to be read at a single sitting, full enough to include all the salient features of the great man's life, learned enough to give only authenticated and trustworthy information, racy enough to hold the reader's unflagging attention to the final sentence, pointed and orderly enough to be easily remembered and repeated, fervid enough to set the heart aglow with true missionary ardor. It is with lively satisfaction that we commend this graphic and vivid delineation of the faith, energy, zeal and skill of the pioneer Baptist Apostle of India."

We have just read every word in the above little book. It would be difficult to find a more entertaining, stimulating and helpful biography. Dr. Hulbert has not spoken too strongly. It aught to go into ten thousand homes in North Carolina this year. Any pastor will greatly aid missions by putting this little book in the hands of his people. It will be sent from our Supply Store on receipt of 25 cents.

C. DURHAM.

Help Asked For.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—The eight Baptists at Seven Springs have, with the help given them by others, put up a very nice church-building. We need about $150 now to complete the building, and I write to appeal to our Baptist people elsewhere to help this noble little band down here in the heart of a great destitution. Are there not 150 Baptists in North Carolina who will send me a dollar each?

I have visited several towns in the interest of this work, and most of the brethren have received me very kindly and helped me all they could, but I would also occasionally meet a few stingy dead-heads who would neither give me help or encouragement.

Now, brethren, I believe there is a bright future for us in the Seven Springs section, but we cannot reap the harvest without a house in which to worship. Will not many brethren and sisters respond to this appeal and help us in our labor of love for our divine Lord?

Matters in our Association are in an encouraging shape, and we are hoping to do a good year's work for the Lord.

We were all very much distressed some time ago at our Bro. Baker's leaving us to take work in Georgia. He is a true and tried soldier of the Cross, and a more faithful missionary has never labored among us.

God bless the RECORDER.

Yours in the work,

G. L. FINCH.

Resolutions of Bethlehem Church.

WHEREAS, Bro. G. M. Webb has labored among us for a number of years with faithfulness and zeal to the building up of the Lord's cause, and has served our church for a short time, and now offers his resignation to go to another field. We accept it with regret and sorrow. Therefore, be it Resolved 1st. That we tender to him our heartfelt thanks for his labors among us.

2nd. That we look upon him as a faithful pastor and zealous worker, and that we heartily recommend him to all with whom Providence may cast his lot.

3rd. That we shall follow him with our prayers and gladly welcome him again to our homes.

From Glenville, N. C.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—For some time I have been thinking of writing you a short letter from the mountains of Jackson county—my home since last July. But like many other of our intentions, I have left it undone till now.

Last August I accepted the place of Principal of The Hamburg High School which is located in Glenville; and for the past six and a half months have been closely confined to teaching, and preaching occasionally. In some respects teaching is pleasant, and yet it is not so pleasant as a pastorate with devoted co laborers.

I have not read the RECORDER a great while, compared with others of your readers, and yet long enough to love it. The editorial, "Once for all," in your issue of Feb, 10, 1892, I think, not only timely, but exactly on the right line. The world seems so eager in its search for something new, odd, or strange, that it seems difficult to keep some churches from becoming its apes. So many persons are afraid that their religion will make them, too, unlike the world. And yet unlikeness to the world is the characteristic after which all christians should earnestly seek.

Jesus said, and still says, to the disciples, "Follow me;" and just in proportion to our complete submission to Jesus as our Lord and law-giver, will we honor him, and glorify him in our lives. If we hold ourselves in readiness to follow the whim of every one who is brassy enough to take God's word, and, ignoring its plain teaching, lead us astray, just so long may we expect to have unsettled views of doctrine and less settled views of its practice.

May the Lord help you to fight on, holding up his word of warning, although, there be many like the people of Samuel's day who longed to be like the other nations. The Lord's people here are like they are in other sections of our State, they need to undertake greater things for the Lord, and expect greater things from him.

The Sunday school work here goes on ordinarily well. Rev. B. N. Queen is the pastor. He is growing into ripe years of manhood, and is a faithful servant of the master.

The nine months session of my school will close about the middle of April.

This is a delightful place in the summer but rather cool in winter. The water is fine and the air healthful and bracing.

The mountain scenery is such as to please all lovers of a varied landscape.

Again, let me say that I enjoy the RECORDER, and am much pleased with the ring of its editorials on the various tribes of "isms." Fraternally, A. T. HORD.

In Memoriam of Rev. John F. Ellington.

Rev. John F. Ellington was born in 1805, and died in Clayton, Johnston county, N. C., Feb. 9th, 1892, aged eighty seven years. He professed faith in Christ under the preaching of Rev. David Thompson, about 1830, and united with "Old Johnston Liberty" (now Clayton) church. His conviction of sin seems to have been deep and distressing, and he did not find peace on the day conviction came to his heart. He could not sleep the following night; so he returned to the house of God after night and remained there praying until he found peace, and then returned home about midnight praising God.

He commenced preaching the gospel in 1833, and continued until about eight or nine years before he died, when he became too feeble to do full service as a minister.

He represented Johnston county in the Legislature in 1838. He was the beloved pastor of Bethesda church for thirty three years, with but little intermission. He also faithfully served Johnston Liberty, White Oak, and other churches, many years each. Being a successful farmer, and able to live independent of a salary for preaching, he rarely received anything for his work as a minister. When anything was offered he would instruct the churches to use it for repairs or other expenses. If this was a mistake, it was one growing out of his goodness, and not out of his ignorance of what the Bible taught on this subject. He was always liberal with his means, never failing to respond to the calls of benevolence, or to the needs of the poor around him. He went to his church as long as he was able to get to and from the Lord's house.

He was a devoted husband, a kind and affectionate father, a good neighbor and a fast friend. All the above and more; but he is gone. The long life has been lived out, and a seat vacated by his departure. The people he used to call neighbor, brethren, friend, daughter and son, are left to mourn the absence of a good man. There are many families in Johnston county which begun by two standing before Bro. Ellington and taking their marriage vow. There are many in the churches near by who believed the word as it dropped from his lips, and many whose bodies were buried in baptism by his hands. There are many living to whom he has spoken words of comfort in their hours of sorrow. There are many mounds of earth, near which he stood, and said, "earth to earth, dust to dust, ashes to ashes," over the lifeless forms being interred. But his work on earth is finished, save its influence; and we mourn most of all that we shall see his face and hear his voice no more on earth. These facts and truths speak tenderly and touchingly to our hearts, and make us mourn the loss of one so good and useful.

Those left behind must sympathize with each other, and seek for reunion with him who has gone before. When we lift our eyes above and think of his perfect home, his perfect church, his perfect brethren and companionship, his perfect employment and enjoyment, our tears give place to rejoicing because he has gone to his Father.

"Servant of God, well done;
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy.'

O. C. HORTON.

To the Churches of the Tar River Association.

Dear Brethren:—Our last Association made a decided forward movement along the line of Foreign Missions. The brethren seemed delighted to have an opportunity of entering more largely into this work, and pledged themselves to raise this year for Foreign Missions $597.00.

If this money is to be reported to the next Southern Baptist Convention, and it ought be, it will be necessary to collect it by the 15th of April.

On the fifth page of the minutes of our last Association, you will find the amount for which your church is pledged. Please collect it at your next meeting, and forward it to Bro. J. D. Boushall, Raleigh, N. C.

Yours in Christ, T. J. TAYLOR.

Warrenton, Feb. 18, 1892.

A Prophecy of Evil.

The resignation of two prominent Baptist pastors on the same Sunday has proved to be hardly a nine days' wonder. The slight ripple of interest caused by the announcement has quite disappeared, and the surface of denominational affairs shows already its usual placid calm. Nevertheless, there are prophets who tell us that underneath this unruffled surface volcanic forces are at work that threaten at any time a destructive eruption. We are assured, with solemn shakes of the head and lugubrious voice, that dreadful times are coming to the Baptist churches. It seems that there is a wide-spread unrest among our most promising young men, many of whom are in danger of leaving the denomination unless its conservatism is promptly liberalized. The New Theology and the Higher Criticism have set the young men athinking, and they can no longer honestly preach the doctrines that are popularly identified with Baptist orthodoxy. The very vagueness of these statements adds to their impressiveness with some, and a timid person with a lively imagination might be really scared by them.

The Examiner doesn't scare. It has heard prophecies of this kind too often to have any other feeling than one of indulgent pity for those who either make them or listen to them. It has lived to see the denomination disrupted many times, in the wild forebodings of some, and the denomination throve under the process in every case. Volcanic eruptions have been promised many times, but they never came. The present case is much less alarming than some previous "eruptions." There was the open communion volcano in 1870, for example, with its secret circulars and other preparations for an eruption that was to shake the denomination into fragments. It shook two or three men out of the denomination, and then all was silence once more. Don't be nervous about these denominational cataclysms, good people for all experience shows them to be dangerous only to those who prepare them.

This nervousness, to be quite plain, discloses on the part of many Baptists an absurdly low estimate of the strength of denominational sentiment and conviction. Do these timid ones realize, have they ever tried to realize, the force of this denominational bond? True, it is not a legal bond. No ecclesiastical court enforces uniformity of doctrine or action. The bond is wholly spiritual. Its essence is community of spirit, of belief, of aim. But this bond, though intangible and without means of enforcement, is self-enforcing to a wonderful degree. Its strength is never known until some rash man defies it. The experiment has been tried now and again of breaking this bond, with results disastrous to the experimenter in every case, but with no injury to the bond. Rather might one say that in every case the bond has been made stronger and more enduring. In those who have watched these things the conviction has grown that even should there be a defection of a considerable number of those who are accounted its leading men, the denomination would suffer no disruption. The occasion would develope new leaders, and the denominational life would continue without a break.

But we decline to believe these tales about the young men. Who has authorized anybody to speak for them? We recall that in one of our Baptist anniversary meetings a speaker shouted, "In the name of the young men of the Baptist ministry, I demand" thus and so. This self constituted spokesman of the young Baptist ministers had been a Methodist nearly all his life, and is one again to-day. Most volunteer spokesmanship is of this character. Where is the proof that the young men are so restless, so unable to teach the orthodox faith? Is it found in the class-rooms of our seminaries? Or in the pulpit utterances of young ministers? Or in papers read before ministerial conferences? In a word, have these vague reports any better basis than the irrepressible chatter and gossip of men who have nothing better to do than to spread any rumor that comes to their ears? If so, let us know the worst, and that as speedily as possible.—New York Examiner, of Feb. 18.

We very heartily endorse the Examiner's views, and not only do not fear the defection or departure of these over-smart and ambitious young preachers, but rather wish them a speedy departure from the Baptist fold. In some of the cases South, their departure from us was a great gain to the cause of truth, if not also, of morals. These ambitious men, who show restlessness in our churches, are, as a general rule, leading double lives and are preaching, rather than ploughing, to make a living. One of the leading causes of this may be found in the great facilities now offered for getting an education; and sometimes the whole trouble grows out of the fact that the young preacher has no religion—has never been converted.

We asked an old colored preacher the other day how his church was getting on and his answer was "Mighty poor, mighty poor, brudder." We ventured to ask the trouble, and he replied:

"De cieties, cieties. Dey is jist drawin all the fatness and marrow out'en the body an' bones ob de blessed Lord's body. We can't do nuffn' widout de ciety. Dar is de Lincum Ciety, wid Sister Jones an' Brudder Brown to run it, Sister Williams mus march in front ob de Daughters of Rebecca. Den dar is de Dorcases, de Marthas, de Daughters ob Ham and de Liberian Ladies."

"Well, you have the brethren to help in the church," we suggested.

"No sah, dar am de Masons, de Odd Fellows, de Sons of Ham and de Oklahoma Promise Land Pilgrims. Why, Brudder, de time the brudders and sisters pay all de dues, an' tends to all de meetin, dere is nuffin' left for Mt. Pisgah Church but jist de cob, de corn has been shelled off an' frowed to dese speckled chickens."—Religious Herald.

Caldwell Union.

The Caldwell Union met at Rocky Spring church, was well represented and well attended. The discussions were interesting and edifying.

Bro J. F. Spainhour and J. G. Pulliam of Boone came over and helped us much. On Sunday Bro. Pulliam preached a good sermon to a large and attentive congregation, and followed it with a good collection for Associational Missions.

Bro. Croom of the Globe is our Associational missionary. There are destitute sections in Caldwell county at which he will preach, and visit some weak churches and try to inform them about our mission work at home and abroad and try to stimulate them to greater zeal and activity. This is a much needed work and we hope and pray will be productive of much good.

The next session of our Union will be held with the church at Granite Falls, on the railroad between Hickory and Lenoir.

The Caldwell Sunday-school Association will meet with Lower Creek church on Friday before the fourth Sunday in March. This will be a new feature of work in this section, as the idea was conceived and planned at the last session of the Caldwell Association. We hope it will result in good, and that we may be favored with the presence of brethren outside the Association. Come and help us, brethren.

Our dear brother, H. C. Moore of Morehead City, to our delight, was with us and preached a good sermon. The Caldwell people think much of Bro. Moore, and rejoice in the success the Lord is giving him in his work. I. W. THOMAS.

Hibriton, Feb. 8, 1892.

New Cranberry Church, Furches, Ashe County.

There is a church organized here known as New Cranberry. We now have twenty members—have no house to worship in. I am trying to build one. I am building within one-fourth of a mile of a Union Baptist church and three fourths of a mile of an Anti-mission Baptist church. The point is an important one. I am trying to build a good house, as the Missionary Baptist church will, undoubtedly, be the church in this community.

I am not able to bear this burden, and the members are, financially, too poor to help me. But the house must be built. We are surrounded with enemies, and they hope to see it a failure. I have not asked for help through the RECORDER, because there are so many calling for help, but at present will do the best I can. I am nearly seventy-four years of age—hope to live to see this work completed—that these poor brothers and sisters may have a home. I believe the Lord will help me in this work—I will trust him.

I have secured one and a fourth acres of land, have the frame of the house nearly completed, and lumber sufficient to finish it; all paid for.

I feel like helping our old destitute preachers above anything else, but am not able now. I am now taking care of an old Baptist sister who has no home. She came to my house last summer, I cannot turn her out.

The two churches above named are on the decline. J. H. ELLIS.

The Sunshine of Smiles.

There is one kind of sunshine which it is needful to bring into every home, and that is the sunshine of smiles. Next to the sun light and warmth of heaven is that of a cheerful face. No one can long withstand its influence; no one can mistake it. A bright eye, an unclouded brow, a sunny smile, a loving word—all tell of the peace and joy that dwell within. One glance at such a face has lifted mists and shadows from many a heavy heart and scattered the fogs from a burdened spirit. A host of evil spirits may lurk around the door, but they will never enter and abide where a face of sunshine dwells. They will hasten away as ice melts when the sun rises; they will flee as mists before the light of day. A bright, warm, cheerful face inside the home will drive away gloom and render it impossible for it to exist. The germs of disease, which may lurk at times in the most elegantly furnished room if kept dark, will vanish away before the bright and cheery sunlight. Open, therefore, the windows of your heart and let the sunlight in. God sends it down to brighten, purify and bless the home and the world; but many, alas, bar it out with the blinds of bad temper and the curtains of a sour spirit. Let it be your study to avoid this mistake. One of the best investments you can make is to arrange to lay in a stock of sunshine; you are sure to need it, however large may be the quantity you can secure.

Make, therefore, your home bright and sunny, and the children will love it. If mother is cross and nervous, or out of spirits, the baby will be restless and fretful; but if mother is sunny and bright, the children will be sure to reflect it back, and prove how true it is that "Mother's eyes are baby's skies."—The Quiver.

When you have corrected your child for a piece of wrong-doing, let that end the matter. Repeated transgression, of course, calls for repeated punishment; but to be forever nagging and prodding a child for misdeeds that have already received their full penalty is to be guilty of the very refinement of cruelty. God does not so. When he pardons our iniquities he says "remembers them against us no more for ever." A score that is settled ought to be wiped out.—Nashville Advocate.

A Scholarly Work.

In the preparation of the American Commentary, the pens of our leading scholars were engaged. Dr. Broadus prepared the commentary on Matthew; Dr. Clarke, on Mark; Dr. Bliss on Luke; Dr. Hovey, on John; Dr. Hackett, on Acts; Drs. Arnold and Ford, on Romans; Dr. Gould, on Corinthians; Dr. Hovey, on Galatians; Dr. Justin A. Smith, on Ephesians; Dr. Pidge, on Philippians; Dr. Dargan, on Colossians; Prof. Stevens, on Thessalonians; on Timothy, Titus and Philemon, by Dr. Harvey; on Hebrews, by Dr. Kendrick; on James, by Dr. Winkler; on Peter, by Dr. Williams; on the Epistles of John, by Dr. Sawtelle; on Jude, by Dr. Williams; and on Revelation, by Dr. Justin A. Smith.

Keep to the Right.

Do you know what a maze is? It is a long and intricate series of winding paths generally bordered on either hand by high hedges, and so arranged that it is difficult for any one entering by the outer gate to find his way to the centre. It is, in fact, nothing more nor less than a very big puzzle.

There is one famous maze in a palace garden near London into which it is usually difficult to discover the road—unless you happen to know the rule. Then the puzzle is no longer a puzzle, and it is the easiest thing in the world to walk straight to the centre. The rule is, keep to the right, that is to say, wherever the pathway winds or wherever there is a choice of two roads, always take that which is on the right hand. That maze reminds me of life. We often come to moments of doubt and hesitation, often there lies before us a choice of two or more courses of action, where one seems to be smiling and beckoning to us, and rich in promises of desirable things. There is something about it, however, that does not quite satisfy our conscience, yet we are loth to turn aside and adopt the other course, which is to outward appearances so unprofitable and unattractive. What shall we do in this difficulty? Remember the rule of the maze: no matter what may befall, heeding not the immediate consequences, disregarding all the allurements of the evil one—keep to the right.—Exchange.

Symptoms of Decay.

Having more interest in money matters than soul saving.

A growing appetite for ease and pleasure.

Feeling no condemnation for fellowship with the world.

A disposition to use five dollars for self and five cents for God's cause.

Inclination to find fault with others rather than to help them.

Engaging in levity and terming it christian cheerfulness.

Reading secular newspapers in preference to the Bible.

Preferring meetings where there is nothing to do, rather than those which afford opportunities for personal work.

Avoiding the society of those noted for piety and godliness.

These signs have given unmistakable evidence of the near approach of the grim monster; yea, already with one hand his icy fingers clutch at the victim's throat, and with the other he aims a dagger at the heart. Help! help! An hour hence may be too late.—Exchange.

Torpidity of the liver, and disorders of the stomach and bowels, cause headache and the failure of all desire for food. Ayer's cathartic pills stimulate the action of the stomach, liver and bowels, cure headache, and restore the appetite.

Solitary Passages.

There are within the range of every one's life processes of life which must be solitary, passages of duty which throw one absolutely upon his individual moral forces, and admit of no aid whatever from another. Alone we must stand sometimes, and if our better nature is not to shrink into weakness, we must take with us the thought which was the strength of Christ: "Yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me."

The sense of right can more readily indurate the tender than melt the rocky soul, and that is the most finished character which begins in beauty and ends in power; that leans on the love of kindred while it may, and when it may not, can stand erect in the love of God; that shelters itself amid the domesticities of life while duty wills, and when it forbids, can go forth under the expanse of immortality and face any storm that beats, and traverse any wilderness that lies beneath that canopy.—Selected.

Many indeed think of being happy with God in heaven; but the being happy in God on earth never enters into their thoughts.—John Wesley.

Turn Your Faces to the Light.

It had been one of those days on which everything goes contrary, and I had come home tired and discouraged. As I sunk into a chair, I groaned, "Everything looks dark, dark!"

"Why don't you turn your face to the light, auntie, dear?" said my little niece, who was standing, unperceived, beside me.

"Turn your face to the light!" The words set me to thinking. That was just what I had not been doing. I had persistently kept my face in the opposite direction, refusing to see the faintest glimmer of brightness. Artless little comforter! She did not know what healing she had brought. Years have gone by since then, but the simple words have never been forgotten.—Anon.

Impaired digestion repaired by Beecham's pills.

There is much so called religion that reminds one of boys with wooden guns and tin swords playing soldiers. They go through many evolutions, but draw no blood and have no enemies. There is just such a type of religion which encounters no sin and which affects the kingdom of Satan as little as the boyish make believe.—The Christian Witness.

A CHILDLESS HOME.

Smith and his wife have every luxury that money can buy, but there is one thing lacking to their happiness. Both are fond of children, but no little voices prattle, no little feet patter in their beautiful home. "I would give ten years of my life if I could have one healthy, living, child of my own," Smith often says to himself. No woman can be the mother of healthy offspring unless she herself is in good health. If she suffers from female weakness, general debility, bearing-down pains and functional derangements, her physical condition is such that she cannot hope to have healthy children. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a soverign and guaranteed remedy for all these ailments.

Worn-out, "run-down," feeble women, need Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It builds them up. It's a powerful, restorative tonic, or strength-giver—free from alcohol and injurious drugs. The entire system is renewed and invigorated. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, gives refreshing sleep, and restores flesh and strength.

Negro Schools.

Few people realize the immense number of free colored schools. Only a few days ago the Southern Workman received an inquiry as to the correctness of a statement printed in its columns some months since that there were 20,000 of them in the South. The number appeared so incredibly large that our correspondent thought the printer must have made a slip. But we were within the mark. To quote from the report of the General Agent of the Board:—

"Within a month past the Hon. W. T. Harris, U. S. Commissioner of Education, kindly sent me, under his own signature, the present status of the common school education of the negro in the Southern States. He had not the last reports for the State of Arkansas; the other States reported 19,983 'colored schools.' Arkansas will bring the number to about 21,000. In these schools is a total enrollment of 1,199,410 pupils."

These schools are of course under State and municipal control, and the board of trustees justly considers that the work which they do is better done apart from outside intervention.—Selected.

Is Education Injurious to the Negro?

"In his educational education" the negro is just now at the danger line, of which he, most of all, is unconscious. So far his education has developed wants faster than his ability to earn means to satisfy them. In most of them the result is discontent; with many, unhappiness; in some, a sort of desperation; in not a few, dishonesty. On these points I have not the shadow of a doubt; this particular matter I have studied widely and minutely. A plow-boy earning from $100 to $150 a year—board and lodging 'thrown in'—has enough to supply his normal wants; this boy, after six years at school, not only desires, but needs, from $300 to $500 a year to satisfy the wants that have been bred in him, while his earning capacity has not grown in proportion."

This is what is meant by the employers of negro labor who have replied to the Chattanooga Tradesman's circular, when they say that education injures the negro. To ignore the fact that the elevation of the race must be attended by discouragements and drawbacks, would be absurd. It is only by a recognition of these adverse elements, and a patient, thoughtful effort to counteract their influence upon the problem at large that the gigantic question of negro education can be brought to a successful solution.—Southern Workman.

World Wide Notes.

Over one hundred new Protestant missionaries have reached China since May, 1890.

China has a magnificant fleet of merchant steamers, large dock yards, arsenals, and a complete net work of railroads over the entire empire.

There are in India 79,000 widows under nine years of age. An earnest effort is being made to prohibit the marriage of girls under twelve years of age.

The Catholics claim to have 2,745,000 adherents in mission fields. These in some instances have proved the bitterest foes of the Protestant missionaries.

The Chinese are a nation of students. Last month in the city of Nanking there were between 29,000 and 30,000 students attending the triennial examinations.

The late riots in China have turned out to the furtherance of the gospel, the Emperor's proclamation commanding all lovers of good order to protect the property of the missionaries.

It is a common belief in China, circulated by their enemies, that the missionaries use the eyes of children to make certain medicines, and that children are killed for this purpose.

Dr. Cornelius Van Dych of the Presbyterian Mission in Syria is to receive a decoration from the Sultan as a testimony to the value of his fifty years of mission in that country.

Mr. W. R. Rickett of London intends to give $25,000 to inaugurate the effort on the part of the English Baptist Missionary Society to raise five hundred thousand dollars as a special Centennial fund.

The American Board (Congregational) has put one million dollars as the goal of its annual subscriptions. Two hundred and twelve thousand copies of the New Testament in Hebrew have been distributed among the Jews by the Mildmay Mission to the Jews.

The Japanese court ladies, after making themselves very uncomfortable and often ridiculous by dressing in the western style, have resumed their own beautiful and historic costumes. This is but another sign of the times in Japan and the revolt against foreign domination.

Twenty-five years ago there were less than 500 converts in the whole Chinese empire. Thirteen years ago there were 18,000; now there are 40,000. Yet there are those who say the Chinese cannot be converted. At the same rate of increase, at the end of the next twenty-five years there will be twenty-six million communicants and about one hundred million Protestant christians in China!

The Superintendent.

The Superintendent, published monthly, by the American Baptist Publication Society, at 25 cents a year, is well worthy a place on every Sunday-school superintendent's desk. During the year 1892, it will contain hundreds of valuable, practical suggestions, every one of which will be worth twice the price of a whole year's subscription. The Catechism Lessons, arranged so that the superintendent may always have something to interest and instruct his school, either before or after the regular recitation, every Sunday, is a feature most helpful. If you have not done so, send at once and get The Baptist Superintendent. You can begin with any month.

The Dead-Prayer Office.

What becomes of all the unanswered letters? Thousands of them find their way to the dead-letter office. Some never reach the person for whom they are intended because the postage is not paid; some fail because they are directed to the wrong office; some cannot be sent because the address is illegible, and some because the matter is unmailable. These float through the mails, are examined at different offices, marked "missent," and finally they fall into the dead letter office. They are opened and read, and if valuable are forwarded; if not they are given to the flames. Such is the accuracy and skill of the postal officials that very few valuable letters ever fail of reaching their destination.

Some prayers never reach God because they are not addressed to God's office. They are directed to the audience. Here one prays a "sharp cut" to some stubborn brother, or rebukes some error in theology to another, or drives some keen-edged blade of censure into another, directs a severe criticism to some who are running into fashionable follies, and sometimes (shame on us!) the very supplication which we offer in tenderest tones in behalf of the weeping widow and helpless orphans, is intended more for those who kneel in mourning before us than for God who sits in glory above us. God's office is not in our neighbor's care, and if we direct our prayers to that point they will certainly go to the "dead-prayer office."

Again, there is a prayer upon which the address is illegible, not because it is a rough, scrawling "hand write"—these can always be deciphered—but because it has so many extra flourishes. This prayer is uttered in a pompous, grandiloquent style. It is full of long words, scientific terms, and classical quotations. The writing on the envelope is very much in keeping with the style upon the inside. The ink was fancy, and it soon faded; the pen was the tongue, and it did not set the color in the prayer. How different when indited by the heart! It is no wonder that this prayer gets lost and finds its way into the "dead-prayer office."

The last prayer we notice is the unavailable prayer. There is a great latitude allowed us in the postal matter of our government, but there are a few things which cannot even get into the mail bags. Sharp-edged tools and corroding acids, no matter how securely wrapped, will not be transported through the mails; these are put up in a separate bag and sent to the "dead-letter office," or they are captured by the first postmaster that handles them. Many of our prayers, if answered, might be blessings to us, but they would fall like a shower of daggers upon our neighbors. Sometimes in our prayers we half way complain of the strange providence which has befallen us, and argue the case with God; then the prayer is full of sharp-pointed arrows. Is it at all strange that answers are not returned? The corroding acid of selfishness or sensuality or pride is sometimes in our prayer. Such a prayer is lost on the way. It is poured out in mid air. It is never answered, and well for us that it is not.

No legally "stamped," sincerely directed, and well meaning prayer is ever lost. The answer may be delayed, but the prayer is "on file."—Advance.

GREEN GROVE, ALA., Nov. 29, 1890.
Mr. JOHN N. WEBB, Washington, D. C.

Sir:—The Electropoise is the grandest invention of the age. I have never applied it to any pain, fever, chills, rheumatism, pneumonia, headache; toothache and pain of any kind but what I have cured; and every case of chills I cured with the first application, and they have never returned. I cured a case of three weeks' standing of chills with three hours' application six weeks ago that have not returned, and one of the worst cases of rheumatism and scrofula combined that I ever saw was cured in three weeks' application. And now I am willing to use my judgment on any disease, whether or not it is laid down in the book of instructions. Yours, W. G. JAMAR.

A tender conscience is like the apple of a man's eye—the least dust that gets into it afflicts it. There is no surer and better way to know whether our consciences begin to grow dead and stupid than to observe what impressions small sins make upon them.—Bishop Hopkins.

For Every Good Thing Give Thanks.

We must bring the religion of Christ into our commonest blessings. When the autumn comes and the harvests are in, and the governors make proclamation, we assemble in churches and we are very thankful. But every day ought to be a thanksgiving day. We do not recognize the common mercies of life. We have to see a blind man led by his dog before we begin to bethink ourselves of what a grand thing it is to have eyesight. We have to see some one afflicted with St. Vitus' dance before we are ready to thank God for the control of our physical energies. We have to see some wounded man hobbling on his crutch or with his empty coat sleeve pinned up before we learn to think what a grand thing God did for us when he gave us healthy use of our limbs.

We are so stupid that nothing but the misfortunes of others can rouse us up to our blessings. As the ox grazes in the pasture up to its eyes in clover, yet never thinking who makes the clover, and as the bird picks up the worm from the furrow not knowing that it is God who makes everything, from the animalcula in the sod to the seraph on the throne, so we go on eating, drinking and enjoying, but never thanking or seldom thanking; or, if thanking at all, with only half a heart.

I compared our indifference with the brute; but perhaps I wronged the brute. I do not know but that, among its other instincts, it may have an instinct by which it recognizes the divine hand that feeds it. I do not know but that God is, through it, holding communication with what we call "irrational creation." The cow that stands under the willow by the water course chewing its cud looks very thankful, and who can tell how much a bird means by its song?

The aroma of the flowers smells like incense, and the mist arising from the river looks like the smoke of a morning sacrifice. Oh, that we were as responsive! Yet who thanks God for the water that gushes up in the well, and that foams in the cascade, and that laughs over the rocks, and that patters in the showers, and that claps its hands in the sea? Who thanks God for the air, the fountain of life, the bridge of sunbeams, the path of sound, the fan on a hot summer's day? Who thanks God for this wonderful physical organism—this sweep of the vision, this chime of harmony struck into the ear, this soft tread of a myriad delights over the nervous tissue, this rolling of the crimson tide through artery and vein, this drumming of the heart on our march to immortality? We take all these things as a matter of course.

But suppose God should withdraw these common blessings! Your body would become an inquisition of torture, the cloud would refuse rain, every green thing would crumple up, and the earth would crack open under your feet. The air would cease its healthful circulation, pestilence would swoop and every house would become a place of skulls. Streams would first swim with vermin and then dry up, and thirst and hunger and anguish and despair would lift their scepters. Oh, compare such a life as that with the life you live this morning with your families about you! Is it not time that, with every word of our lips and with every action of our life, we began to acknowledge these every-day mercies? "Whether ye eat or drink, or whatsoever you do, do all to the glory of God."—Dr. Talmage.

SWEET GUM AND MULLEIN is Nature's great remedy for coughs, colds, croup, consumption, and all throat and lung troubles.

The mind wants steadying and setting right many times a day. It resembles a compass placed on a rickety table—the least stir of the table makes the needle swing round and point untrue. Let it settle, then, till it points aright. Be perfectly silent for a few moments, thinking about Jesus; there is almost a divine force in silence. Drop the thing that worries, that excites, that interests, that thwarts you; let it fall like a sediment to the bottom, until the soul is no longer turbid, and say, secretly: "Grant, I beseech thee, merciful Lord, to thy faithful servant pardon and peace, that I may be cleansed from all my sins, and serve thee with a quiet mind."—Bishop Huntington.

Camm's Emulsion of Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, combined with the Hypophosphites, is recommended on its merit alone. It is prescribed by many of the leading Physicians of every state in the Union, besides being recommended by the Doctors and teachers of Medicine in Europe. This alone goes far to establish the justice of its claim to superiority. It is beyond doubt the best remedy in the world for the cure of Consumption, and all kindred diseases. It will positively cure consumption, if used before this fearful disease has made too much headway, particularly if it is persevered in after the arrest of the disease. Wherever there is any wasting disease of any kind, Camm's Emulsion is the remedy. To derive the full benefit from this truly valuable medicine, it is recommended that it be used only by the advice of an intelligent Physician. For sale by all druggists. Manufactured only by E. A. AN APPEAL.

Our little church in her weakness is helping to pay the debt on the Havana house. We have an agent to collect funds for the Thomasville Orphanage, an agent to collect funds for the aged and infirm ministers, contributors to Home, Foreign and State Missions, patrons of the BIBLICAL RECORDER, and whatever other purpose God may see fit to use us for.

Who will be the first to hear God's call to help build St. Joseph's church? We have the lumber cut and about paid for, and are hauling it to the church lot. We want to commence building, and need money to pay our workmen. Brethren, will you come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty? Send money to Spring Style for Ladies.

Our lady friends who wish to be properly and fashionably dressed should glance over the monthly Fashion Letter in "La Mode de Paris," "Album des Modes" or "La Mode," the favorite fashion journals. This letter is one of the best on the subject with which it deals, explaining particularly the style prevailing or coming in fashion. Ladies would do well to patronize these journals, which are not only reliable, but are now considered the Standards of Fashion where ever they are known. The Practical Lesson on Cutting given each month in "Album des Modes" and "La Mode de Paris" is intended to explain fully how to make the new styles as soon as they appear. The series of lessons has been produced under the direct supervision of Mr. A. McDowell, the inventer of the wellknown Garment Drafting Machine, which has proved such a boon to thousands of dressmakers, and has made the cutting and perfect fitting of ladies' garments an easy task to all. "La Mode" is a good family journal, price $1.50 a year. "La Mode de Paris" and "Album des Modes" are intended for more general use, the subscription for each being $3 50 a year. To every subscriber for either of these journals who pays a year's subscription in advance will be given a Premium Book on "Dressmaking Simplified," valued at $5.00. Failing to obtain these journals from your news agent send for them direct to A. McDowell & Co., 4 West 14th Street, New York.

Mr. J. A. Taylor's store and entire stock of goods at Dunn, Harnett county, was destroyed by fire on the night of the 16th. Loss, $7,500; no insurance.

Daniel Smith, a prominent young farmer of Williamson's township, Richmond county, was murdered in his stock lot about dark on Sunday night, the 14th inst.

Mr. G. W. Watts of Durham has donated $5,000 towards the rebuilding of the Presbyterian Orphans' Home at Barium Springs, which was recently burned.

The Charlotte Clothing Manufacturing Company at Charlotte is said to be the largest pants factory in America. It is stated that 225,000 pairs were sold last year.

The store of Messrs. Bagley Bros. at Bagley, Johnston county, was destroyed by an incendiary fire together with its contents, causing a loss of about $10,000.

A seven year old daughter of Mr. John White of Long Creek township, Mecklenburg county, caught fire from a brush-heap last Wednesday and was so badly burned that she died the next day.

The store-house of John Montague at Bethel Hill, together with a large stock of goods, was destroyed by fire on the night of the 16th inst. He was badly burned in making his escape from the building.

The coal deposits near Walnut Cove, Stokes county, are to be developed at once on a large scale. The property is owned by the Greensboro Coal and Mining Company, which will put in a plant that will have a capacity of fifteen tons per day.

J. H. Myers, a liveryman who recently went to Rutherfordton to live, was followed by detectives and identified as the man who sometime ago skipped from Missouri for embezzlement of $30,000. Myers learned in some way that the detectives were in town, and made his escape after transferring all his property to his wife.

On Sunday, the 14th inst., a number of people gathered at a place in Lincoln county known as the "Three County Corner," where Burke, Lincoln and Catawba counties join. Whiskey was the attraction, and soon a fight was in progress between York Brackett and John Pollard, which resulted in the death of Pollard, Brackett stabbing him to the heart. Brackett was captured and is now in Lincoln county jail.

General News.

Henry W. Bates, the English naturalist and author, is dead.

A Steel Windmill and Steel Tower every 3 minutes. ☞ These figures tell the story of the ever-growing, ever-going, everlasting Steel Aermotor. Where one goes others follow, and we "take the country." Though sold, we were unable to make all of the 30,049 Aermotors in '91. Orders often waited 6 weeks to be filled, but now we have vastly increased our plant and are prepared promptly to plant our increase in every habitable portion of the globe.

Are you curious to know how the Aermotor Co. in the 4th year of its existence, came to make many times as many windmills as all other makers combined? How we raise inestimable the Steel Wheel, the Steel Fixed Tower, the Steel Tilting Tower?

1st. We commenced in a field in which there had been no improvement for 25 years, and in which there seemed no talent or ambition, and none has yet been shown except in feeble imitation of our inventions.

2d. Before commencing the manufacture, exhaustive scientific investigation and experiments were made by a skilled mechanical engineer, in which over 5,000 dynamometric tests were made on 61 different forms of wheels, propelled by artificial and therefore uniform wind, which settled definitely many questions relating to the proper speed of wheel, its best form, angle, curvature and amount of sail surface, the resistance of air to rotation, obstructions in the wheel, such as heavy wooden arms, obstructions before the wheel, as in the vaneless mill, and many other more abstruse, though not less important questions. These investigations proved that the power of the best wind wheels could be doubled, and the AERMOTOR daily demonstrates it has been done.

3d. To the liberal policy of the Aermotor Co., that guarantees its goods satisfactory or pays freight both ways, and to the enormous output of its factory which enables it to furnish the best article at less than the poorest is sold for. For as we furnish the most perfect bearings ever put in a windmill, and have made an exhaustive revision of the Aermotor and Towers.

If you want a strong, stiff, Steel Fixed Tower—or if you want the tower you don't have to climb (the Steel Tilting Tower) and the Wheel that runs when all others stand still that costs you less than wood and lasts ten times as long (The Steel Aermotor) or if you want a Giant Aermotor to churn, grind, cut feed, pump water, turn grindstone and saw wood, that does the work of 4 mens at the cost of one ($60), write for copiously illustrated printed matter, showing every conceivable phase of windmill construction and work, to the AERMOTOR CO., 12th and Rockwell Sts., Chicago, or 12 Main St., San Francisco.

The Aermotor Pneumatic Water Supply System enables you to supply every part of your house with water without an Elevated Tank.

GALVANIZED. It is not enough to make portions of the wheel galvanized. The Steel Fixed Tower, the Steel Tilting Tower, the Steel Wheel, the Steel Pumping Rod, the Steel Pump Cylinder, the Steel Pump Barrel, the Steel Pump Tube, the Steel Pump Rod, the Steel Pump Coupling, the Steel Pump Bolts, the Steel Pump Nuts, the Steel Pump Screws, the Steel Pump Washers, the Steel Pump Cotter Pins, the Steel Pump Rivets, the Steel Pump Springs, the Steel Pump Valves, the Steel Pump Valve Seats, the Steel Pump Valve Guides, the Steel Pump Valve Cages, the Steel Pump Valve Springs, the Steel Pump Valve Nuts, the Steel Pump Valve Screws, the Steel Pump Valve Washers, the Steel Pump Valve Cotter Pins, the Steel Pump Valve Rivets

J. Wm. Jones on the Louisiana Lottery.

Editor of the Recorder:—I should not be warranted in supposing that my opinion on the Lousiana lottery would be a matter of the slightest concern to either your readers or yourself, but for the fact that you have thought proper to connect my name with it upon two several occasions.

Two years ago you advised me to collect materials for biographies of Generals Early and Beauregard, in order that I might explain the beauties of the Louisiana lottery with which they have been connected, and in your issue of the 10th you say:

"What will Rev. Dr. John William Jones say when Generals Early and Beauregard die? These two distinguished soldiers of the South are the backbone of the infamous Louisiana lottery, and have done more to give the lottery countenance and support in the South than all the rest of its aiders and abettors combined. They are its heavily-salaried figure heads."

Now the best way to know what a man would say in a certain set of circumstances is to know what he has said on the same subject. I respectfully submit, therefore, that your question is fully answered in the following editorial which I wrote and published in Our Home Field for October, 1890:

"THE HERO THAT CANNOT BE BOUGHT.

"During the bloody days of 1861–65, we knew in the army of Northern Virginia as one of 'the bravest of the brave,' who commanded a Louisiana regiment, and then a Louisiana brigade in the old 'Stonewall Corps,' Francis T. Nichols, of Louisiana.

"He lost a leg, and then an arm, but he stood to his post of duty to the last.

"After the war he was frequently honored by his people, and was twice elected Governor of his State. In the effort of the Louisiana lottery to have its charter extended, Gov. Nichols stood firm against all of their insidious and infamous methods, and when they finally succeeded—to the eternal shame and infamy of that Legislature—in passing a bill submitting the question of the renewal of the charter to the people, Gov. Nichols promptly vetoed the infamous bill, and in a very able and unanswerable message, uses this language which deserves to be printed in letters of gold on a bright page of the history of Louisiana:

"'At no time, and under no circumstances, will I permit one of my hands to aid in degrading what the other was lost in seeking to uphold—the honor of my native State. Were I to affix my signature to the bill I would indeed be ashamed to let my left hand know what my right hand had done. I place the honor of the State above money, and in expressing that sentiment I sincerely voice that of thousands of brave and true men, and of good and devoted women of the State.'

"Prayers will go up from good men everywhere, that this maimed hero may be long spared to 'stand like a Stonewall' against this monster iniquity which is doing so much to disgrace, humiliate and demoralize not only the people of Louisiana, but of the country generally."

I have had occasion more than once upon public platforms, as well as in the public prints, to denounce the Lousiana lottery, and your insinuation that I could be induced to defend it because of the connection of Confederate Generals with it, is as utterly opposed to my record as it is an unwarranted reflection upon my character.

But if you only meant a little cheap wit at my well known Confederate sympathies, then I have only to say in reply, that for these I have no explanation to make—no apology to offer—to you or to any other living man. J. WM. JONES.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 15, 1892.

We did not ask for, or even intimate a desire to know, the opinion of Rev. Dr. J. Wm. Jones on the Louisiana lottery. We took it for granted that he was opposed to the lottery; but as he has diligently kept himself before the people of the South for the past thirty years as the great unreconstructed defender of the Lost Cause, and also the special eulogist of its living and departed worthies, we did feel some curiosity as to what he would say in praise of the two Confederate Generals who had devoted their time and influence to the support of the Louisiana lottery. These two men are not now long for this world, and as Dr. Jones, in all probability, has an obituary of them ready for the press, he will greatly relieve us by sending us the MSS. of his eulogy, obituary or book, as the case may be, with the usual poetry annexed.—ED. Healing Springs and Wilderness Churches.

Editor Recorder:—I will inform you of the good meetings we have been having in this community.

Bro. Elihu Tucker and myself have just closed a successful meeting at the Healing Springs church. Fifteen were converted, twenty joined the church, six were baptized, and several are yet to be baptized.

Bro. Duncan of Ashe county, and Bro. Murray of Virginia, have just closed a good meeting at the Wilderness church. There were twelve conversions.

The Lord is blessing our labors in this part of the moral vineyard.

MARRIED.

MORTON—WARREN—On January 14th, 1892, at the residence of the bride's mother, by W. D. Ray, Esq., Mr. W. T. Morton and Miss India A. Warren, both of Wake county.

PIPPIN—FERRELL—On Feb. 10th, 1892, at the residence of the bride's father, near Wakefield, N. C., by Rev. A. A. Pippin, Mr. C. E. Pippin nf Franklin county and Miss Alice Ferrell of Wake county.

DIED.

HOBBS—Elzie Hobbs, on the night of January 26th, 1892, fell asleep trusting in her Saviour. She was only fifteen years of age. As lovely a girl as she was, yet it pleased our Father to take her to himself. Her mother died a short time ago. She leaves a kind father, one brother and three sisters to mourn her death. She is not lost, but passed from earth to heaven. T. A. H.

HOBBS—Departed this life Feb. 8th, 1892, Lizzie Hobbs, aged twenty-four years She was a member of the Baptist church, and gently passed over the river. She seemed not to fear death. Her afflictions had been great for several months, but she bore them patiently, waiting for her Master's call. Weep not, dear parents' Lizzie is not dead, but gone before. T. A. H.

HOGGARD—At her home, near Bethlehem, N. C., Feb. 10th, 1892, Mrs. Jane Hoggard, after a lingering illness, quietly passed into rest, in her sixty-ninth year.

Sister Hoggard had been a consistent member of the Baptist church from early womanhood. In her death the church has lost one of her best members, the community a kind neighbor, the family an affectionate and loving wife and mother, everybody a friend.

WILLIAMS—On Jan. 17th, 1892, at his residence in Currituck county, Bro. A. J. Williams, aged seventy-two years. Bro. Williams was a plain, unassuming, consistant christian, and highly esteemed by all who knew him for his upright life. He was born into the kingdom to be lead, and seemed to live only to do right. He was kind to the poor and liberal in his church (Providence.) He leaves no children, but a wife, two sisters, and his church to mourn his loss. In the church he will be missed, for his seat will be vacant. R. R. OVERBY.

MORGAN—In Currituck county, on Feb. 9th, sister Nancy Morgan, aged seventy-three years and a few days.

How long Sister Morgan was a member of Providence church I do not know. Thirty-two years ago last September I first visited this section of the State, and sheltered first under the hospitable roof of her husband, then living, Bro. Joseph Morgan. I found Sister Morgan then what I ever found her, a very quiet, reserved and consistant christian woman. She died as she lived. Conscious to the last breath, she rejoiced that the hour of release had come. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." R. R. OVERBY.

HUMPHRIES—Bro. John D. Humphries, departed this life Jan. 5, 1892, aged seventy-three years. He has been a consistent member of Shady Grove Baptist church for forty-five years. He rarely ever missed meeting with his church, and when he did, it was caused by sickness. I visited him several times during his illness, and I never heard him complain, but seemed to be resigned to the will of his God in whom he put his trust. He leaves a wife and one son to mourn their loss. May God bless the family in this hour of trouble. He said before his departure he should be better off up yonder. His church has lost a faithful member, and his family a devoted father. His funeral was conducted by the writer.

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

N. P. STALLINGS.

SMITH—"Death loves a shining mark," it has been said, and surely this was verified when Bro. Elias Smith of Greene county, a few weeks since, was called to his reward. His death was a peculiarly sad one, for he was the stay and comfort of an aged father and mother. Then, too, he was so young—twenty-eight years old, and his life was so pure and spotless. But God knows best and saw that his work was finished and called him up higher. In his early years he gave his heart and life to the Saviour, and died rejoicing in his love. May the God of all grace comfort the broken hearted father and mother, the sorrowing brothers and sisters, and the distressed host of friends who mourn their loss. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." G. L. FINCH.

HOBGOOD—Died, in Oxford, N. C., Feb. 8d, 1892, Robert H. Hobgood, aged fifty-seven years. Bro. Hobgood was born and spent most of his life in Granville county—the past few years in Oxford as the proprietor of the Exchange Hotel. He was the son of Henry Hobgood of blessed memory. At the age of twenty-six he was married to Sarah A. Hester, daughter of Rev. Elijah Hester, who lived about eighteen months after their marriage. Unto them was born Anna, the wife of Mr. Ralph Currin. May 12th, 1867, he was married to Mary L. Maynard, daughter of Rev. R. C. Maynard, who survives with ten children.

Brother Hobgood died in fellowship with Hester's church, of which he had been a member some ten or twelve years. As a church member he was quiet, retiring, attentive and warm-hearted. In death he was patient, submissive and triumphant.

He was an affectionate and tender husband and father, a kind and obliging neighbor, and a good citizen. His guarded speech, even temper and charitable disposition won for him a host of friends. At home, however, he was at his best, not very talkative, but thoughtful, cheerful, polite, full of magnetism, congeniality and sociability. He governed by love, and in return was loved, honored and obeyed by all. The loss of one so genial and helpful is indeed crushing to the family; but their loss is his eternal gain. M.

DAVIS—Died, in Granville county, N. C., Feb. 7th, 1892, William Davis, aged about seventy-eight years. He was born in Warren county. When quite young, his parents moved to Granville, where our brother spent nearly the whole of his life. He was a man of fine mental and physical constitution, and in old age was active and well preserved. His church membership was at Grassy Creek, where for forty years he led a remarkably quiet, peaceable, consistent, faithful and honored life. His good sense, prudence, self-sacrificing spirit, deep toned piety, and exemplary conduct, won for him a name that was above reproach and a character that was alike honored and beloved. In all the relations of life he was a model of meekness, purity, honesty, sobriety and faithfulness—a living "epistle, written in our hearts, known and read of all men."

He lived religion, and in death he had a strong desire "to depart and be with Christ." He was in full consciousness to the last, and his last words, addressed to a son, were, "In three minutes I will be in heaven." Truly a great and good man has fallen—fallen to sleep in Jesus!

He was twice married, and leaves to his sorrowing widow and four sons a name and life of inspiring, purifying and blessed memory. He was buried at home amid the applaudits, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," by brethren and neighbors, to await the final applaudit of his Lord, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." M.

RIDDICK—Mary W. Riddick, the wife of Elisha Riddick, was born Oct. 21st, 1806, and departed this life Dec. 28th, 1891.

Sister Riddick was the last one of the seventeen who organized themselves into a church at Whiteville Grove. She had been a member for more than fifty years. Owing to feeble health and the distance, she had been deprived of church privileges for nine years. Still her love for the church and the cause of her Saviour did not change. She was a devoted mother, good neighbor and a humble, meek christian. Her words were tender and full of sympathy, her heart full of gratitude to God and those of her own home. She lived with her daughter for years, and was often seen quietly raising her hands in prayer to God, though not in an audible voice. She made the home bright, and, though feeble in body, yet glorified her Master in exhibiting the virtues of patience, meekness and kindness. The nearer she approached the end of her journey, the stronger was her faith and the more joyous was she in the anticipation of entering her home in her Fathers house above. Just before she closed her eyes for the last time, she took her farewell look, and, bidding adieu to children, friends and the dear old home, said, "I am going to meet Jesus." She had lived a widow for eighteen years, and fought the battle of life in the name of Jesus faithfully to the end. Henceforth a crown of never-fading glory shall be thine forever. She leaves four children to mourn their loss. May the Lord bless and comfort the bereaved. God bless Sister Perry who has for so many years nursed and cared for mother. Home is sad; but all is for good. She will never come to us, we can go to her.

"Life's race well run,
Life's work well done,
Life's crown well won,
Now comes rest."

Tributes of Respect.

PERRY—Shadrach Johnson Perry was born near Coleraine, Bertie county, N. C., and departed this life Jan. 14th, 1892, aged sixty-five years, three months and fifteen days. The funeral services took place at his late home January 16th, where a large concourse of people and friends gathered to pay their last tribute of respect to one who was greatly respected and admired by all who knew him. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. S. F. Bristow of Coleraine, who preached from Ps. 37: 37—"Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace."

A more appropriate passage of Scripture could not have been chosen. It is not only gratifying, but of great comfort to his relatives and friends, and to the entire community, to know that Bro. Perry was looked upon and known as an upright man with all that the designation implies. While quite young he embraced Christ as his Saviour and united with the Baptist church at Coleraine, where he remained and served in an official capacity until the organization of Bethany church, in the establishing of which he took a leading part. He was one of its faithful and efficient deacons, whose whole heart was in his work. In him the pastor truly found a right-hand man, being ever ready to help where help was needed, not because he thought it his duty, but he had attained to that degree in the spiritual life where he considered every opportunity as a privilege; hence, his giving was not only liberal but cheerful. He was a man of great possibilities, yet very unostentatious, possessed of a meek and humble spirit, gentle in all his dealings, yet firm.

The Lord blessed him with considerable earthly goods, but upon these his heart's affections were not set. As already stated, he was a liberal giver—yea, more, he was exceedingly generous in donations to the Lord's cause in general.

As a business man, he was true and honest in his dealings. With more than ordinary good judgment, he became one of the leading men, if not the leading man, in his community. As a brother living with his two sisters, he was loving, open-hearted and all that a brother could be. No blemish rests on the reputation of Bro. Perry. The church has his record from youth to the close of his life. While she misses him in his various labors, she bows submissively to the Divine ordering, and rejoices that, while his physical presence is no longer with her, the influence of his consistent christian life remains and speaks to all who knew him. Be it, therefore,

Resolved, That Bethany church, in this her expression about one of its most faithful members, gratefully remembers the noble attributes of virtue with which this departed brother was so richly endowed, and heartily sympathizes with the relatives and friends in their loss. We also desire that these expressions, so truly merited by our deceased brother, to be published in the BIBLICAL RECORDER, and a copy of the same be presented to the family, and inscribed on the records of the church.

The above was unanimously adopted in conference by Bethany church on Feb. 6th, 1892, with the additional request that the usual mode of wearing the mourning badge for sixty days be strictly adhered to both by the church and Sunday-school, which the deceased so greatly loved.

Mail Order Department.

Through our Mail Order Department we offer advantages to the people of North Carolina for "Shopping by Mail" second to none in the Southern States, for by the means of this, a very important department of our great business, we place almost at the very doors of our patrons our enormous stock of goods, and we do carry the largest and finest collection of Dry Goods and kindred wares, at retail, of any house in North Carolina, and equaled by very few Southern houses.

We want the patronage of our North Carolina people, not simply that ours is a North Carolina house, but because we will sell them Dry Goods at as low prices, for the same quality, as any house in the trade.

We can only mention here a few of the more important departments, but will be glad to hear from those who desire anything relative to Dry Goods or the kindred wares:—

FOREIGN AND AMERICAN DRESS WOOLENS,
BLACK DRESS GOODS,
SILKS, VELVETS,
HOUSEFURNISHING GOODS,
CARPETS, CURTAINS, &c., &c.

Samples cheerfully sent, and letters of enquiry promptly answered.

When writing for samples, our patrons will please make their orders as definite as possible, for then we can send a suitable line, instead of a lot entirely different from what they want.

A SHORT HISTORY

OF THE

BAPTISTS,

BY

Henry C. Vedder.

12mo, 245 pages. Price, $1.00.

Mr. Vedder has taken great care to have it accurate on points with respect to which there is difference of opinion.

The book will have a large circulation among our young people. To make it more useful to them, copious tables of contents have been prepared, which can be used as questions in classroom work, and a full and complete index.

Prof. Benjamin O. True, Prof. of Church History, Rochester Theological Seminary, writes:

"Mr. Vedder's 'Short History of the Baptists' is history, not assumption or romance. Its brevity is the result of the author's fixed purposes to write a book neither too large nor too expensive for general use. It is by far the best manual of Baptist History extant."

Prof. J. B. Thomas, Professor of Church History, Newton Theological Institution, says:

"'A Short History of the Baptists' is a valuable accession to our denominational literature, being judiciously concise, while perfectly lucid and fairly comprehensive. It will prove attractive and instructive to the young people."

The Home Circle.

My Home Above.

There is for me a home above,
Which every day brings nearer,
Where dwells the Christ whom I so love
Whose name grows ever dearer.

Ah glorious sight that I shall see!
Earth's hills and crystal fountains
Will seem but childish toys to me
When on the heavenly mountains.

There shall I meet the friends I love
Who long ago departed;
They dwell in those bright realms above
Where none are broken hearted.

And yet sometimes my heart doth sink
With foolish dread of dying,
Afraid to stand on Jordan's brink,
No pearly gates descrying.

O foolish heart, why dost thou fear?
Why shrink at thought of meeting
The one of all to thee most dear?
He waits to give thee greeting.

Kind Words.

Many persons speak to children habitually in a rough way, without realizing that they would not use the same tone in addressing any others over whom they had authority. A lady who was on a visit to a family, was in the nursery when a little girl was preparing for bed.

Addressing her in a lively, cheerful tone, she said, "Now let me see how quickly you will hop out of your dress into your night-gown," or something like that.

The child turned to her usual care-takers and said, "Why don't you speak that way, instead of, 'Come now, get your clothes off?'"

They are not seldom provoked into ill-humor, and then punished.

Kind words do not cost much.—Though they do not cost much, yet they accomplish much.

1. They help one's own good nature and good will. Soft words soften our own soul. Angry words are fuel to the flame of wrath, and make it blaze the more fiercely.

2. Kind words make other people good-natured. Cold words freeze people, and hot words scorch them, and bitter words make them wrathful.—Selected.

How Whittier Helped a Little Girl.

A correspondent tells this anecdote of the poet Whittier's success in aiding a little girl at a school examination. "You know Whittier's love for children. The aged poet one winter renewed his youth in a handsome overcoat of the purest ulster pattern, clad with which he attended a school examination up among the hills so dear to him. He was standing beside the teacher, who was catechising a dimpled little dot, in geography.

"'What are the provinces of Ireland?' asked the teacher.

"'Potatoes, whisky, aldermen, patriotism,' began the child.

"'No, no, interrupted the teacher; 'I didn't mean products; I said "provinces"'

"'Oh,' said the girl, Connaught, Leinster, Munster and—and—'

"Here she stuck, put her chubby finger into her rosebud mouth, and sought inspiration successively in her toes, the corner of her apron, the ceiling, and the poet. All children love the old Quaker poet's kindly face. He smiled; her face brightened sympathetically. The entente cordiale had been established between them. He patted his ulster significantly; she looked at him inquiringly. He nodded and she burst out with:

"'Oh, Miss Simmons, I know now! They are Connaught, Leinster, Munster, and Overcoat!'"—Selected.

Some of the Things a Farmer Shouldn't Do.

To plant more acres than can be taken care of.

To work with poor tools and plant poor seed.

To buy at public sale that which is not needed because it sells cheap.

It is shiftless to keep poor stock. A poor cow eats as much as a good one.

To allow hogs and sheep to wander at their own sweet will over their own and their neighbor's premises.

To let the cattle fodder themselves at the hay stack. It saves a little labor, but the waste will make their owner poor.

To leave tools of any kind lying out in the weather; to put them away uncleaned, or to loan them to shiftless and careless neighbors.

To turn cattle out in the bare field in cold weather when there is nothing for them to eat there and they can lose flesh shivering in the cold.

It is shiftless to allow weeds to occupy any portion of the farm, and very shiftless to allow bushes to occupy several yards of ground along the fence rows.

To plant an orchard and then to allow cattle to browse the trees; to leave vacant places in a young orchard; to allow a young orchard to remain in grass.

To wade through mud to the barn and outbuildings when good dry paths could easily be made. To pay heavy doctor's bills for wife and children because their feet be come wet through lack of good paths.—American Agriculturist.

Boy Character.

It is the greatest delusion in the world for a boy to get the idea that his life is of no consequence, and that the character of it will not be noticed. A manly, truthful boy will shine like a star in any community. A boy may possess as much of noble character as a man. He may so speak and so live the truth that there will be no discount on his word. And there are such noble christian boys; and wider and deeper than they are apt to think is their influence. They are the king boys among their fellows, having an immense influence for good, loved and respected because of the simple fact of living the truth.

Dear boys, do be truthful. Keep your appointments at the house of God. Be known for your fidelity to the interests of the church and Sabbath school. Be true in every friendship. Help others to be and to do good.—Child's Paper.

Dangerous Drinks.

A bartender plaintively bewailed the necessity of having to rub congealed drops of sticky beer off the bar. "But if I let them remain," said he, in a tone of one seeking compassion, "they rot the wood."

"They rot the wood, do they?" fiercely replied a beer bibbler. "Then what in the name of common sense does beer do to my stomach?"

Replies the manipulator of the drinks: "It is beyond me to tell. Of one thing I am confident, and that is man's stomach is made of cast-iron. Elsewise how could he withstand the fluids he pours into it? Let me show you something." He placed a piece of raw meat on the counter and dropped upon it a small measure of an imported ginger ale. In five minutes the meat had dropped into little pieces as though hacked by a knife.—Philadelphia News.

Nerve Waste.

Nerve waste is somewhat a new field of consideration for people of studious habits. People think that the supply of vital energy is inexhaustible, and that repair goes on as fast as waste. Then comes a crash and they are puzzled. They should not be. Nerves should be economized as carefully as a bank account. You cannot get out what is not put into the nerves any more than into the bank. Sleep is nature's way of winding up the machine. When we begin to get sleepless the nerves are then exhausted; and either insanity or some other form of nerve depression is near at hand. Railroad traveling, even in a sleeper, is not like a bed. Rapid mental work for short hours is better than a long struggle to do mental work when we are weary. The Master said, "Come aside and rest a while," and summer vacations are as good now as then.—Mid-Continent.

Have You a Mother?

Have you a mother? If so, honor and love her. If she is aged, do all in your power to cheer her declining years. Her hair may have bleached, her eyes may have dimmed, her brow may contain deep and unsightly furrows, her cheeks may be sunken; but you should never forget the holy love and tender care she has had for you. In years gone by she has kissed away from your cheek the troubled tear; she has soothed and petted you when all else appeared against you; she has watched over and nursed you with a tender care known only to a mother; she has sympathized with you in adversity; she has been proud of your success. You may be despised by all around you, yet that loving mother stands as an apologist for all your shortcomings. With all that disinterested affection, would it not be ungrateful in you, if in her declining years you fail to reciprocate her love and honor her as your best, tried friend? We have no respect for a man or woman who neglects an aged mother. If you have a mother, love her, and do all in your power to make her happy.—Anon.

Tale-Bearing.

Before repeating a bit of gossip it would be well to ask ourselves three questions. First, "Is it true? second, "Is it kind?" third, "Is it necessary?" This practice would save us many bitter memories and regrets.

The pious Philip Neri was once visited by a lady who accused herself of slander. He bade her go to the market, buy a chicken just killed and still covered with feathers, and walk a certain distance still plucking the bird as she went.

The woman did as she was directed, and returned anxious to know the meaning of the injunction.

"Retrace your steps" said Philip, "and gather up, one by one, all the feathers you have scattered."

"I cast the feathers carelessly away said the woman, "and the wind carried them in all directions."

"Well, my child," replied Philip, "so it is with slanders. Like the feathers which the wind has scattered, they have been wafted in many directions. Call them back, now, if you can."—Youth's Companion.

No man is strong by nature. He may have the possibilities of strength, but strength comes by exercise. This suggests the value and meaning of temptation. Temptation affords the opportunity of becoming strong in moral and spiritual things.—The Leader.

"Alas! Alas!" the dude exclaims, "in my slender ankle I've got pains." "Don't fret," said ma, for whom he had sent, "I have some Salvation Oil."

"My time is up," said the doctor to the patient, whom he found using Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and he was correct, for his cough had been cured.

Sketches of Pioneer Baptist Preachers in North Carolina.

BY JOHN W. MOORE, STATE HISTORIAN.

MEMOIR VI—REV. MARTIN ROSS.

CHAPTER TWO.

The Rev. Martin Ross did not at once leap into that leadership and control of religious affairs, as was seen in his great friend and contemporary, Lemuel Burkitt. His early opportunity for social and literary culture had been inferior to that youth's, reared in the superior wealth and refinement of Chowan county. It was thus several years after Martin Ross had begun his career as a minister of the gospel before we find any mention of him in the history of the Kehukee Association. But this modest and proper delay on his part in assuming a leading part among the preachers and laymen of so great a body only enhanced his power, when after years of patient observation and preparation he made known the mighty resources of his mind and soul in the great Baptist conclave. Burkitt saw with much delight that here was a debater as skilful as himself in all the resources of synthetic and analytic treatment of the most exalted and abstruse problems of theology. He further recognized in the flowing and magnetic elocution, the sonorous tones, the pleading eyes and sympathetic bodily movements, elements of power that surpassed even his own resources in such respects. That another great religious orator had come to share his honors and influence gave the true man of God never a twinge of jealousy or uneasiness. He loved the cause to which he had devoted his life so deeply for any such sinful and unmanly feelings to find lodgment in his heart. He and Martin Ross, on the contrary, became loving yokefellows in the same great lines of development and progress for the Baptist people. In all the efforts for advance and higher living among the Lord's people these two were ever found with interlocking shields pressing resistlessly on against the advocates of discord and delay. Mr. Ross, like other Baptist preachers of his day and generation, was largely given to making preaching excursions in the different outlying sections of country, that were still near enough to enable him to reach home in time for his regular appointments at Skewarkey. Some of these trips were doubly blessed. Both the missionary and the people were the better for his visitations. To the comparatively rich and cultured denizens of the counties lying between Chowan river and the Atlantic, Martin Ross seemed a gift from heaven. They always heard him gladly, and hundreds found the pearl of great price under his ministry. Many of the wealthiest and exclusive families that had looked with disdain on Baptist preachers and their doctrines were at last seen humbling themselves before the Lord and casting their future lots with their despised neighbors.

In such a community Mr. Ross found that the Baptists were quite a different people from the gloomy and iron-clad fatalists he was vainly seeking to lead into a more loving and gracious estimate of their Creator. While fully agreeing with the old Baptist tenet as to predestination as a necessary part of God's foreknowledge, he yet remembered the fulness of our Lord's offers of mercy to every one who would come and drink of the waters of life. He could not set down as unmeaning so many of those gracious and unlimited offers of the Master, simply because the Apostle Paul, in the course of his argument, had asserted that God, from the beginning of the world, had foreseen who would be saved. It seems a monstrous perversion of the whole tenor of our Saviour's career of loving benefactions and continual forgiveness of injuries and sins, that he should in advance decree the damnation of the least of his creatures. But it was all in vain that Martin Ross reminded his Skewarkey people of the fact that free will was left to every human creature, and it was thus the fault of the negligent and not that of God that men found no mercy at His hands. This church, with those at Kehukee and the Falls of Tar River, were the centres of the baleful hyper-Calvinistic fatalism. They rolled this doctrine as a sweet morsel under their tongues, and felt much of the old Pharisee sentiment of contempt for all who were not numbered among the elect of God.

It must have been a painful task for Mr. Ross to sunder his pastoral ties with the people he had known from infancy, and who had bestowed on him so many touching marks of their love and confidence. He had found peace and been baptized in this very fold. These people had been swift to perceive and encourage his gifts as a young preacher. His stern but faithful father had died in the same fold in 1801. But with all these things to sadden him, Martin Ross felt in his soul that his work was to lie elsewhere in the future. Influences beyond his or any other human sagacity had tied up and circumscribed his influence in such a way at Skewarkey that he was forced to the conclusion that some new man should take the place he held. It was thus that the great preacher at last freed himself of the last incumbrance upon his soaring spirit. Passing over the broad waters that divided old Albemarle from the more western settlements, he went to the church at Yeopim. It was almost like entering upon a new and higher stage of existence. The strong man in all his genius and power felt how much stronger he grew with a multitude of sympathetic souls sharing in his glorious aspirations for a day of better things among the Baptist people.

Burkitt and his allies had done great things for the churches, but there was still pressing need for advance along other lines. Not a letter or a delegate had ever been seen at the Kehukee from Sandy Creek or any of the Associations that once formed a part of her constituency. There was not even the semblance of fraternity, much less any concert of action, between the great bodies of Baptists thus enrolled in separate and almost hostile camps. With that keen, natural sagacity, which was one of Martin Ross's leading features of mind, he selected the recent extension of missionary work to foreign fields as the lever to lift the discordant divisions of his people into unity and fellowship, though all christendom was ringing with conflicting comments upon the great work undertaken by Dr. William Carey. Though a great impulse was pervading myriads of christian souls in different lands, as yet no man had gone from America to aid the brave and godly Englishman who, in despite of so many opposing influences, had yet begun the work of saving the souls of men and women "sitting in the region and shadow of death." While all Baptist traditions and records showed how, in spite of the most cruel and bloody laws to the contrary, the old preachers had passed from land to land, and though often imprisoned and burnt at the stake, these heralds of the Cross were still found faithfully prosecuting the work. In America there were not only the heathen Indians but many outlying settlements in the wilderness to tax the best energies and resources of a poor people in the work of their evangelization. As so much was yet to be done at home in America, the other dusky and almond eyed races swarming on the opposite side of the world, had not entered at all in the matter of their convictions of duty. But the Lord was opening the eyes and hearts of his people to the fact of the universal brotherhood of mankind, and Martin Ross was the first man in North Carolina to urge upon his people their duty in helping to send the gospel even to the far-off Asiatic multitudes.

It was thus that we find in the session of the Kehukee Association in 1803 that the matter was brought to an open issue by the following query offered by the Rev. Martin Ross, "Is not the Kehukee Association, with all her numerous and respectable friends, called on in Providence, in some way to step forward in support of that missionary spirit which the great God is so wonderfully reviving amongst the different denominations of good men in various parts of the world?" Let it be remembered that Martin Ross, born and reared in the darkest haunts of fatalism, was yet the man to take such ground nine years before Judson and Rice had started to India. Of course, so important and exciting a matter was bound, under all the rules and precedents of old Kehukee, to undergo many ordeals before reaching anything like approval from the Association. Mr. Moderator, the Rev. Jesse Read, referred the whole matter to a very select committee, including the leading ministers of the body, with instructions to report at the next annual meeting their impressions on the subject.

This was the beginning of a great work in Baptist circles in North Carolina. Its first effect was a prodigious stirring up of the dry bones in the congregations beyond the Roanoke. Here was another step in advance proposed as to the Lord's work, and that was enough to set all the old-fashioned conservatives in solid opposition. The Association, held at Meherrin in 1804, not only answered the query in the affirmative, but appointed delegates to meet others invited from Portsmouth and Neuse Associations at Cashie church in Bertie. There was inaugurated the movement which, long afterwards, resulted in the formation of the North Carolina Baptist State Convention. As was eminently proper, Mr. Ross was chosen to preach the introductory sermon at the Cashie Convention.

This memorable body convened on the third Sunday in June, 1805, and Revs. Lemuel Burkitt, Martin Ross, Aaron Spivey, Jesse Read and John McCabe were Kehukee's representatives on the occasion. The Convention proceeded to formulate plans for the establishment of regular contributions for Home and Foreign Missions, but made no formal report to the Kehukee Association of the results of their labors. This grew out of the fact that when the year 1806 came, the Chowan Association had been formed, and to this far more sympathetic organization the leaders in the work belonged. Elder Biggs, in his continuation of Burkitt's history, says no report ever reached old Kehukee. This may be true, but we yet know her churches sent up funds repeatedly for missionary purposes to the General Meeting of Correspondence, year after year, until their final adumbration in 1827.

The debate in the old historic church at Meherrin must have been one of the most inspiring ever heard in this country. With Ross, Burkitt and George Outlaw to uphold the cause of missions was to insure a glowing and exhaustive presentation of the reasons that had led to the introduction of the query. It is not astonishing that with such advocates the stolid and inert tide waiters on the other side of the question should have but little to say. They were in fact, as a class, men of very few words on any occasion. If they could be induced to listen to argument and entreaty, it was to very little purpose. To reason and Scripture, to eloquence and persuasion, they simply opposed the vis inertiæ of their moveless natures.

But whatever of grief Martin Ross may have felt in the want of sympathy of such people with things so dear and momentous to him, he was largely compensated in the spirit so opposite to all this evinced by the churches of the new Chowan Association. Unanimity and enthusiasm were accompaniments of every appeal to their souls for longer interest in the extension of Christ's kingdom of this world. The zeal and devotion which have all along marked and ennobled the record of this great christian body, led the people to accept the plain letter of our Lord's latest command without ever a doubt as to their duty in the premises. Christ had told his people assembled on Mount Olivet to witness his ascension, that beginning at Jerusalem they should preach the gospel to all nations. Mr. Ross had only aroused and fastened their attention on a plain matter of duty. Like Carey and Fuller in England, the preachers even had to be reasoned with before seeing the full weight of fealty they owed in the matter. The torpor and forgetfulness of God's people in this great responsibility they owed the heathen was passing away like a nightmare of the past, and nations were making ready to begin the new crusade against the stocks and stones of the swarming millions of the far-off East. The car of Juggernaut might still roll on in its deadly course over the crushed bodies of his dupes, but the days of such fatal delusions were numbered. Deliverance long delayed was coming at last.

Ordination of Deacons.

THE MANNERS AND CUSTOMS OF OUR BAPTIST FOREFATHERS.

Dear Recorder:—We have recently increased the number of our church deacons to seven. We have a church membership of about four hundred and fifty, and have had all along but four deacons. For several reasons it has seemed to be desirable to increase this number to seven; therefore, the increase. Finding that the church—deacons and all the people—were ignorant of the privilege or duty of ordaining deacons, it being simply their custom to elect deacons as they elected trustees, for a term of years, and then do no more with reference to the matter, and believing it to be wise and beneficial to ordain the deacons and give them a charge in sight of all the people, I read up carefully on the subject of the manners and customs of our Baptist forefathers, and herewith submit to the RECORDER the result of my study. It is interesting to study manners and customs, people and institutions. They all have a history; some, like the roots of beautiful plants and flowers, running farther back than others. The deaconate in the christian church has an interesting history which no one can study without being profited. It seems to have a close connection with God's peculiar love for the poor and needy.

Dr. Lightfoot, a distinguished church historian, thinks and says: "This office of deacons, to whom the care and charge of the poor was entrusted, was transferred from the Jewish to the christian church; for there belonged to every synagogue three deacons to whom that charge belonged."

It is impossible to say for certain as to the exact time when this office came into existence. Historians differ as to that matter. But the prevailing opinion at this time seems to be that it came into existence first in the christian church at the time referred to in the sixth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, "in those days when the number of the disciples was multiplied there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration." Then it was that in the midst of these high-seas of church disturbances that the apostles, "the twelve apostles called the multitude of the disciples unto them and said, It is not reason that we should leave the word of God to serve tables, wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business." There may have been deacons in existence before this in that church. Some think so; but where the record reads as if there were none at the time, and this was the first call of the kind that had been made, and the fact that for several hundred years thereafter "the ancient church did not venture in consequence of the number here specified to go beyond seven deacons," would seem to confirm the belief that this was the first appointment of men to this office in the christian church. It is impossible to speak with authority as to the reason for the designation of seven as the number. We know that seven was considered among the Hebrews a sacred number, and signified completion. Contrasting this with the fact that the old Jewish church had but three deacons, it would seem that the number carried with it the suggestion that God's work of organization for his church was then in the christian church complete. One commentator consulted on this subject says, "Let him that has confidence enough venture a reason" for the appointment of just seven. Certainly we know that the christian church is in advance of the old Jewish church, though some of the customs of the Jewish church were by the apostles retained in the christian church. Such for instance as the using of water as an emblem of regeneration and moral cleansing, and such as the custom of laying on of hands and the public reading and explaining of the Scriptures. The custom of laying on of hands existed in the days of Moses, as we see by reference to Numbers 27: 18 23, Deut. 34: 9. It was a formal way of setting apart those who in the church were assigned specific duties.

Dr. Hackett, a learned and distinguished commentator, says, "The imposition of hands as practiced in appointing persons" to an office was a symbol of the importation of the gifts and graces which they needed to qualify them for the office. It was of the nature of a prayer that God would bestow the necessary gifts, rather than "pledge that they were actually conferred." This custom was observed by Christ and his apostles, as you may see by reference to Matt. 19: 13, Acts 6: 6, Acts 8: 19, 1 Tim. 4: 14, 2 Tim. 1: 6. It was also observed by the churches after the age of the apostles, and is still observed in the Southern States in the ordination of deacons and ministers. But it is not observed in the North in the case of deacons. Why, I cannot tell.

Dr. Strong, President of Rochester Theological Seminary in New York, and Dr. Hovey of Newton, both favor the ordination of deacons, as well as pastors, in their works on systematic theology. The ordination of deacons has the same authority in the word of God that the ordination of ministers has, and there is just as much need to give them a charge in the sight of all the people, and remember them in special prayer. It is, therefore, as it seems to me, inconsistent and unwise not to ordain deacons. The service, when properly conducted, is well calculated to impress the deacons and others with a deep sense of their dependence upon God for help in their work. The service can, however, be conducted in such a light and careless way as to be a mere farce. I once witnessed such an ordination service in North Carolina. The minister who assisted the pastor and took the lead seemed to have no sense at all of the solemnity of the service or of the occasion. Yet he was an eloquent and learned D. D. It is better not to have an ordination than to have it thus conducted.

An investigation of this matter of laying on of hands disclosed the fact that our Baptist forefathers once observed the custom of laying on of hands in case of all who came into the church in a kind of confirmation service like that of the Episcopal church.

In the Philadelphia Confession of Faith put forth by our Baptist forefathers in the year of 1742 they said: "We believe that laying on of hands, with prayer, upon baptized believers, as such, is an ordinance of Christ, and ought to be submitted unto by all such persons that are admitted to partake of the Lord's Supper, and that the end of this ordinance is not for the extraordinary gifts of the spirit, and the influences thereof, but to confirm, strengthen and comfort them in Christ Jesus; it being ratified and established by the extraordinary gifts of the spirit in the primitive times, to abide in the church, as meeting together on the first day of the week was, Acts 2: 1, that being the day of worship, a christian Sabbath, under the gospel; and as preaching the word was, Acts 10: 1, and as baptism was, Matt. 3: 16, and prayer was, Acts 4: 31, and singing Psalms, etc., was, Acts 16: 25, 26, so this laying on of hands was, Acts 8: 17-19, for as the whole gospel was confirmed by signs and wonders and divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Ghost in general, so every ordinance in like manner conferred in particular."

I mention this ancient or primitive custom of our Baptist people for the instruction of our younger people in our own Baptist history, and that they may speak intelligently when they speak in admiration of Baptist simplicity in worship.

Now, as to this Philadelphia Confession of Faith, let me here say that it was adopted by the churches of the middle States and by many in New England. Dr. Armitage, in "History of the Baptist," says this Confession became the basis on which almost all the associations of this country were formed. If any Baptist pastor, therefore, feels that he would like more form or ceremony in church services, and many of our best pastors do feel that way, he has a perfect right to have responsive reading of the Scriptures, singing of Psalms and laying on of hands in confirmation of all disciples and in ordination of deacons if the church he serves is like-minded with respect to the matter. Every Baptist church is independent of all others, and in such matters can do as it pleases and no man can say them nay.

On this subject in a foot-note in the Baptist edition of the Comprehensive Commentary, I find this wise suggestion (by Scott), "The right of confirmation as practiced by many christian churches has often been and still is spoken of as a continuation of the apostolical (see Acts 8: 17) imposition of hands, for the confirmation of new converts, by the Holy Spirit thus given. But it is far from evident that this was done universally by the apostles, or by those who immediately succeeded them. As, however, miraculous powers, rather than sanctifying grace, were thus conferred; unless miraculous powers were now connected with that rite, the parallel must wholly fail. How far something of this kind, properly regulated and conducted, may be rendered subservient to the edification of young persons, is another question; but to advance this observance into a sacrament, or even above a sacrament, (as it certainly is advanced, when the Holy Spirit is supposed to be conferred by imposition of hands, and by using words in prayer like those of Peter and John) puts the subject in a very different light. Doubtless it was at first thus magnified in order to exalt the episcopal order to whom the administration of it was confined, as if they were entrusted with apostolical authority; but if miracles are out of the question, so to follow the apostles in faith, humility, diligence, in "preaching in season, out of season," in piety and self-denial, is the only Scriptural or adequate method of magnifying other episcopal or clerical office. Assuredly, as this matter is very often conducted, it must be allowed to be an evil, and it ought either to be attended in another manner or not at all."

These seem to be sound and sensible words. In this same Comprehensive Commentary, (Baptist edition), in a foot note, I find this statement:

"The apostles seem to have laid down a rule that, after being baptized and catechized, the proselytes should have the imposition of hands, accompanied with prayer, in order to their receiving the gifts of the Holy Spirit. Hence in Heb. 6: 2 we find mention made first of baptism, then of instructing, and finally of imposition of hands, the last in the primitive ages only, being done by the apostles; in process of time other teachers obtained this power." (Keim.)

The uses of imposition of hands in the Old Testament are three: 1, as a ceremony in prayer; 2, in paternal benediction; 3, in creating offices. And in proportionable to them many more in the New; 1, for curing diseases; 2, for absolution of penitents; 3, in blessing the infants, (brought to Jesus, that he might lay his hands on them and pray. Bapt. Ed.); 4, ordination of officers of the church; (5, when, as here (Acts 8: 17) spiritual gifts were communicated. Bapt. Ed.)

Bro. Editor, it seems to me that the only consistent position to take on this whole question is that given by Dr. Hackett, who says that the laying on of hands was simply a symbol of the importation of the gifts and graces which were needed, and in the nature of a prayer that they might be received. If we take this view of the matter it could be as consistently used in confirmation services as in ordinations. Why not?

It is both wicked and foolish to say that every man who favors a little more form or ceremony in church services than is common in Baptist churches will have to leave the denomination to get what he wants. Baptist churches are free and independent, and hence it comes to pass that the order of service is not the same even now in all Baptist churches. It would shock some of our friends in North Carolina to go into some of the large city churches of our denomination in Philadelphia, New York, Boston, and other places, and see the Baptist preachers preaching in long silk gowns and singing Psalms, and having their congregations stand in prayer. In some sections, I am told, that they have a special service for small children and infants. It is what we might call a dry consecration. Infants are brought in and the ministers lay their hands on them and pray in imitation of the Saviour's putting his hands on little children and blessing them. The custom cannot be said to be anti-Scriptural. And does not the prayer of a righteous man avail much? This "dry consecration" is vastly better than "infant baptism," which is anti-Scriptural and subversive of the truth concerning baptism. Yet this "dry consecrations" might afford great comfort to the heart of many fond parents who would like to have their little ones thus formally dedicated to God by prayer and the laying on of hands. Baptists and the truth of God certainly has nothing to fear from such a ceremony. And the same might be said of a form of confirmation service, if the laying on of hands should be explained as Dr. Hackett explains it in his commentary on Acts 8. The reasons which the churches in the North give for not ordaining deacons in some cases are the same as they give in the South for not laying on hands in a confirmation service. They say it is not of vital importance, and nowhere commanded in the New Testament, and may be misleading to some people, and therefore they do not ordain deacons, and may after awhile on the same ground and with equal propriety refuse to ordain ever ministers by laying on hands.

Is that not exactly true of the

BRO. DUNCAN MCNEIL, of Richmond county, will represent the BIBLICAL RECORDER in the counties of Richmond, Anson, Montgomery, Robeson, Columbus, Brunswick and Bladen.

THE BAPTIST FEMALE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA.

There is now an evident tendency among our people toward the higher education of young women. The plan of richly endowing colleges and universities for the education of the young men of the country has for centuries been considered a wise one; but the necessity of providing equally as good facilities for the education of our girls may be considered quite a modern idea. There are in this State several good female colleges that may be said to be under Baptist control. These schools compare favorably with like schools of other denominations of similar grade. They are under the management of competent and experienced educators. Concerning these, we wish to write more at length in these columns in the near future. The desire to have a school that would offer the most advanced opportunities to the girls of this and other States materialized in the Convention that met at Greensboro in November, 1888, by the adoption of a couple of resolutions appointing a committee of nine, (to which the name of Col. L. L. Polk was added), "to consider the expediency and feasibility of establising a Baptist Female University in this State." That committee consisted then of L. L. Polk, W. R. Gwaltney, R. R. Overby, T. H. Pritchard, J. D. Hufham, R. T. Vann, N. B. Broughton, R. H. Marsh, A. G. McManaway and H. W. Battle.

This committee made a report at the next Convention, held at Henderson, N. C., in which they recommended that the Convention "resolutely and joyfully assume the duty," which they believed "the desires of the people and the demands of the times" had laid upon us. At that meeting fifteen additional names were added to the committee, and these, with the ten brethren previously appointed on the committee, were constituted a Board of Trustees, "to establish and govern" the proposed institution. The names of the fifteen brethren added were as follows: C. Durham, B. Cade, C. A. Rominger, J. W. Carter, G. W. Greene, W. C. Petty, E. K. Proctor, J. M. Currin, J. H. Lassiter, W. G. Upchurch, W. T. Faircloth, R. P. Thomas, D. F. King, C. E. Taylor and J. L. White.

Before the adjournment of the Convention held at Henderson, this Board of Trustees held a meeting, at which a committee of five, consisting of L. L. Polk, C. A. Rominger, C. E. Taylor, J. L. White and W. R. Gwaltney, was appointed "to advertise our purpose to build a Female College, (University), of high grade in North Carolina; to receive bids from any towns in the State," which might desire such University located in their midst; "to visit such places and examine the claims and inducements of each; and to report at a called meeting of the Board of Trustees to be held in the city of Raleigh on Tuesday after the second Sunday in February, 1890, at 7:30 p. m. At this meeting other committees were appointed to draft a charter, prepare a constitution, suggest a course of study, &c.

The Board met at the time mentioned above; and after a prayerful and earnest consideration of the claims of all the competing localities, selected Raleigh as the location of the University. Recent articles in the RECORDER have given our people sufficient information as to the site in the city of Raleigh finally agreed upon, and the present financial status of the enterprise. The Board has been fortunate in securing the services of Rev. J. B. Boone as Financial Secretary. And now a point or two about the site, and the plan of the proposed institution, as suggested by the name adopted:

1. There was, and there may be yet, difference of opinion among our people as to the best location for the University. Other towns and cities besides Raleigh made liberal offers. The action of the Board of Trustees in selecting Raleigh as the location for the University may have been some cause of disappointment to honored brethren and sisters of other communities that had so nobly competed for the prize. While we are not assuming here the role of apologist for the Board, our brethren and sisters we know will kindly suffer a few words here, that are dictated, we hope, by the best of motives. Of course only one of the competing places could secure the University, and had Raleigh failed, she would have felt her disappointment as keenly as any one of her sister cities. And again, let it be remembered, that the Baptist State Convention placed this enterprise in the hands of some of the most honored and competent Baptists of the State, and these brethren acted as they thought best under the circumstances. There was, there could be, no wire-working in such a body of men. The location was fixed by them with an earnest desire to promote the interests of the school. Now let us, brethren, cheerfully abide by the decision.

2. There was a difference of opinion as to what the name of the proposed school should be. This difference of opinion resulted from the different views of the brethren as to the exact work to be undertaken by the University and the sphere it should fill. Some feared the name "University," and preferred that of "College." Others preferred that the proposed institution should not only be called a University, but be one in the highest sense of the term. The views of these finally prevailed, and the institution is known by the name of "The Baptist Female University of North Carolina."

This, we think, is as it should be. We desire to see it such an institution, or nothing. We have, as we have before stated, some excellent female colleges in North Carolina. They have done, and are now doing, a good work for the education of our girls. They have struggled through difficulties, and, considering the nature of these, have succeeded remarkably well. We are heartily in favor of increasing their patronage. An endowment fund would greatly add to their usefulness. The proposed University should never compete with these colleges for patronage, nor should it attempt the exact work they are doing. By all means let our University be of the grade of Vassar, or the University of Virginia. Certainly we do not need another school to draw on the present not over-abundant patronage of those already established. Such a school would disappoint the hopes of the best friends of the proposed University, and only be in the way of many who would be expected to give it their hearty support.

The plan formulated by one of the distinguished members of the Board of Trustees at Shelby may be the best for the institution. That plan puts the University into something like direct or organic connection with such Baptist female colleges and high schools of the State as may enter the arrangement. The same plan has been adopted by the great Baptist University of Chicago, over which President Harper presides. Whether this plan, considering the genius of our people, and their slowness to accept what may appear innovations, is the best, time will develop. After all that may be said, pro and con; such questions as these may be asked: Is not this the true University plan? Is there anything in it calculated to destroy the independence or autonomy of the colleges of the State? Is there not something in the plan to quench the tendency to literary quackery on the part of schools that suddenly spring up here and there in the land? Whilst such questions are worth asking and answering, it may be claimed that such a system could not be adopted in America without a well-balanced understanding as to the reserved rights of the schools that entered the compact, and, among them, that of withdrawing without odium from it, whenever the trustees of such schools deemed that the interests of the same demanded such withdrawal. It may be asked whether the English or German system of education is best adapted to America. What suits a monarchy or an empire may not always suit a republic.

The important matter that should claim our attention now is to provide first a suitable building for our Female University, and with it an ample endowment to sustain it. It is needless for us to spend much time now discussing plans of work. The Baptist female colleges of the State are independent, and they will be competent to judge as to the wisdom of any proposed combination that the future may bring forth. We need the University. We should exert our best energies to found it, and start it on its beneficent career. To do this, our people will have to give largely; more largely than in founding or starting the average male or female college. Such schools as the latter often depend for years on such patronage as they receive. Their endowment is often a matter of many years, and is secured from time to time, during the progress of such institutions, by the gifts of those interested in their growth.

We think it would be unwise, then, to start our proposed University on the plan of running it for years mostly on the funds secured from its patronage. This would undoubtedly have a tendency to bring it in direct antagonism with the schools already established, and it is a well-known fact that they are in no condition to have their patronage lessened. We should open with such endowment as will better enable us to push the enterprise to a grand success. Let a high standard be established at the beginning. Let the terms of admission be such that none but competent students, those well prepared to be benefitted by a University course, can enter. Let us pay the President and professors from the start such salaries as will relieve them from the temptation to bid for the patronage that properly belongs to the colleges of the State. The University of Virginia maintains a high standard of scholarship, enforces rigid terms of admission, and is thus not in the way of the colleges of that State, such as Richmond, Randolph-Macon, Emory and Henry, &c. Vassar is not in the way of the female colleges of New York and other Northern States. Our University should fill the same sphere, and thus commend itself to the hearty support of the people of this and other States. Again we say, let us have the University.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. A. B. Earle, the evangelist, of Newton, Mass., is very ill.

....Rev. J. B. Boone met with very encouraging success in his trip last week.

....Rev. Dr. T. E. Skinner occupied the pulpit of the Baptist Tabernacle last Sunday.

....Prof. C. E. Brewer and Prof. J. F. Lanneau of Wake Forest College are both very sick.

....Rev. L. G. Broughton has entered upon his duties as pastor of the Broad Street church, Winston, N. C.

....Rev. J. T. Albritton of Mt. Olive, N. C., is improving, and will have something to say to our readers next week.

....Rev. C. C. Haymore says: "I will take collections for Foreign Missions at all of my churches next month," (March.)

....Rev. Dr. J. W. Carter of Raleigh delivered an address on education before Prof. Smith's school in Mount Olive on February 22d.

....Mrs. Fannie Peercy Mercer, wife of Rev. I. M. Mercer of Greenville, S. C., died of pneumonia on Friday morning of last week.

....Rev. J. L. White of Asheville writes: "We are all well. My church has given me and mine a warm welcome. Our work is hopeful.

....Rev. C. S. Farriss, editor of the Florida Baptist and Witness, and pastor of the church at Orlando, declines the call to the Pensacola church.

....Bro. A. B. Forrest of Raleigh in this issue makes our readers a most timely and important proposition. He is an experienced as well as reliable florist.

....Mr. John D. Rockefeller has given another million dollars to the Chicago University. This makes $2,600,000 he has given to that institution.

....Rev. Dr. J. D. Fulton, the irrepressible, or something else, has abandoned his efforts to convert the Catholics of Canada, and has returned to Brooklyn.

....Rev. Dr. J. J. Hall of Raleigh went up to Reidsville on Saturday last and preached the sermon at the ordination of Rev. L. G. Broughton on Sunday.

....Rev. O. L. Stringfield reports a glorious revival at Wakefield. Bro. N. B. Broughton conducted the meetings. Read Bro. Stringfield's letter in this issue.

....Rev. W. L. Wright of Leigh Street church, Richmond, spent last week aiding Rev. Dr. W. E. Hatcher of the Grace Street church of that city in a successful series of revival meetings.

....Rev. G. W. Greene of Canton, China, sends a letter to his brethren, and the missionaries of Chinkiang, China, sends a letter of thanks, &c., to the Board of Foreign Missions, in this issue.

....Rev. J. M. White of Apex has received a call to the pastorate of the church in Carthage. Bro. White is an able preacher and successful pastor. Carthage Baptists have made a wise choice.

....Rev. R. T. Bryan of Yangchow, China, says: "We are happily situated here. The people seem very friendly. Many men and women come to hear the gospel and listen attentively."

....Rev. C. W. Scarborough of Murfreesboro was on a visit to his brother, the Hon. J. C. Scarborough of Raleigh last week, and spent an hour at the Baptist headquarters to the real joy of his brethren.

....Rev. Dr. Hall requests us to say that although his lecture on Spurgeon was in manuscript, he did not recognize a sentence as delivered by him in the report published of the said address in our last issue.

....Rev. A. G. Willcox says: "I will do my best to have the whole amount pledged by my churches for Foreign Missions in the hands of the Treasurer before the meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention."

....Rev. J. R. Maynard says: "Just what my churches can do for Home and Foreign Missions I do not know, but they are Missionary Baptist, and it is always their pleasure to help the Master's cause."

....The Third Baptist church, Durham, unanimously denounces the liquor traffic, and pledges its influence to rid the church of God of the bar-keepers stigma, "Church members run my business."—C. W. Blanchard.

....Rev. R. W. Crews of Germanton, N. C., sends us a sad note saying: "Robert P., fourteen-year old son of Rev. P. Oliver, died of cancer Feb. 21st, 1892. A good boy has gone to heaven before he had many of the cares and anxieties of this life."

....The Louisiana Lottery has secured a perpetual franchise from the government of Nicaragua, and will locate at Greytown. They will build a castle for the offices and gambling games, and hotels for visitors, making Greytown the Monte Carlo of America.

....Rev. J. B. Pruitt of Onancock, Va., and Miss Sabra Pitts will be united in marriage in the Onancock Baptist church at eleven o'clock Thursday morning, March 3d. We return our thanks to Brother and Sister T. C. Pitts for an invitation to be present on the happy occasion.

....Rev. E. F. Jones of Zionville, N. C., writes: "I closed a meeting at Zionville on Feb. 7th. Baptized five on the last day. In all nine were added, and the church was revived as I have not seen it in years. Success to the RECORDER. I am in hearty sympathy with your editorials."

....Those who expect to attend the Baptist State Sunday-school Convention to be held in Winston in April, had best read the constitution of that Convention. If you haven't a Minute of that Convention, send two cents in stamps to the Supply Store and the Minute will be sent.

....Rev. J. A. Stradley says: "I have taken and forwarded collections from all of my churches since last Association for Home Missions, and during the next month I expect to send collections from all my churches for Foreign Missions. I am urging all to increase their contributions."

....Rev. H. W. Battle of Wilson was in Durham on Sunday, February 21st, and preached two able sermons for the First Baptist church. The brethren at Durham were greatly pleased with Bro. Battle, and are earnestly hoping that he will accept the call extended to him to become their pastor.

....On March 8th, at 7 p. m., a conference will be held in Winton to consult about centennial mission meetings in Chowan and West Chowan Associations. Revs. C. A. G. Thomas, R. T. Vann, L. M. Curtis, C. W. Scarboro, B. Craig and C. B. Williams are expected to be present in the conference.

....Hon. John R. Webster of Webster's Weekly, Reidsville, N. C., was in Raleigh last week, and called to see us. Bro. Webster is a good Methodist, but thinks it wrong for churches of Christ to take money from great "trusts" for religious or educational purpose. Many good christians will agree with him.

....Rev. D. S. Williams of Texarkana, Ark., a native North Carolinian, sends us a word about other days in this State. He is now a very old man, and only a few of our readers will recall his labors in North Carolina. Bro. Williams is the only survivor of the original Board of Trustees of Wake Forest College.

....We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Dennis Simmons of Williamston, N. C., on Friday, February 26th. Rev. Dr. Hufham, who was on a visit to friends in Scotland Neck, preached her funeral on Feb. 27th. Sister Simmons was a devoted christian, and one of the most liberal and consecrated Baptists of all her section.

....The First Presbyterian church of Raleigh presented Rev. Dr. Watkins a handsome and valuable testimonial of their affectionate regard on Thursday evening, February 25th. Dr. Watkins is deservedly popular both as a pastor and as a cultured gentleman in Raleigh, and his removal to Spartanburg, S. C., is regretted by all our people.

....Drs. A. J. Gordon of Boston, P. S. Henson of Chicago, A. C. Dixon of Brooklyn, and F. M. Ellis of Baltimore, having been invited by our Board of Missions and Sunday schools to make special addresses on the Centennial of Modern Missions at our next Baptist State Convention, to be held in this city December 8th to 13th, have each written Dr. C. Durham expressing a purpose to be with us.

....Rev. E. B. Hatcher, editor-in-chief of the Seminary Magazine, informs us that the next issue of the Magazine will be a memorial of the late Rev. Dr. Manly, and that it will contain pictures of Mr. Manly, the Seminary buildings, Georgetown College, and also the memorial addresses of Dr. T. T. Eaton and Dr. J. A. Broadus, and other interesting and valuable articles. The Magazine will be on sale at fifteen cents per copy, or twenty five cents for two copies. We advise our readers to send Bro. Hatcher their money now and secure a copy.

....Rev. J. A. Hill of Waxhaw neighborhood, departed this life on the 17th inst., after an illness of several weeks with pneumonia. Mr. Hill lived at Ames last year, but moved to his old home near Waxhaw about the first of this year. He was a minister of the Missionary Baptist church, and was in all respects an excellent man. His life had been one of great usefulness, and his loss will be felt. He was over seventy years of age.—Monroe Enquirer, Feb. 25. Bro. Hill was one of our most devoted and consistent ministers, spending his life in service for the Master. A sketch of his life will appear later.

....Rev. John G. Pulliam, who has returned from Butte, Montana, and is now making his headquarters at Marion, N. C., in renewing his subscription, says: "I like the RECORDER very much. It increases in ability. I read your editorial, 'Once for All.' Your position is sound. I sincerely hope that you may continue to 'cry aloud and spare not' along all such lines. Cowardice is a leading feature of some papers. Not so with yours. I take the Western Recorder, Central Baptist, Examiner, Standard and Pacific Baptist, but none are ahead of the BIBLICAL RECORDER in standing up for what is believed to be right, and for the glory of God and the good of the people. I am having a good rest since coming from the high altitude of Butte, Mont., (5,800 ft.) I have increased fifteen pounds in weight since December 9th."

....Rev. J. B. Boone of Raleigh was here for a day or two in the interest of the proposed Baptist University. We are not informed as to what success he met with. The cause is a good one, and the Baptists of this section, we do not doubt, will do their duty in regard to it. Mr. Boone occupied the pulpit of the Baptist church Sunday morning and evening and preached excellent sermons on both occasions.—Monroe Enquirer.

President John A. Broadus on Dr. Manly's Last Work.

Five days after his death, we received "The Choice, a New Selection of Approved Hymns for Baptist churches. With music Arranged by Basil Manly." He had corrected the last proofs before his strength failed.

It will not be strange, and it will be extremely gratifying on many accounts, if this little hymnbook shall gain a very wide circulation, and work very important changes in many of our churches. The edition without music, and bound in boards, is sold at ten cents a copy. (Per mail 12 cts.) This will make it easy for churches to procure an ample supply, such as many churches have never possessed, partly because the books were costly. Even this edition with music, very handsomely printed, making a large and beautiful page, is sold in boards at 35 cents. (Per mail 40 cts.) Now one of the things our churches most need is that every worshiper shall have a hymn-book, including the younger children, with copies to hand to strangers. This will promote congregational singing, as few things can. The number of hymns is only 254, but two things are to be observed: every hymn is a really good hymn, and in the edition with music every hymn has a tune of its own, while five or six of them have two tunes each. This will stimulate trained singers to introduce a greater variety of tunes than is common in most churches, and will lead many pastors to gather the young members on Sunday afternoon or some other time, and let them be taught to sing first rate new tunes, which the whole congregation will then learn by hearing them repeated a few times.

Dr. Manly has made an admirable selection and adaptation of tunes, but singers can of course use some other tune for any hymn whenever they choose. He has not given us any hymn of his own in the selection, but has given six of his own tunes which are all good. Probably the best are 144 and 249. The former is named Work and set to the hymn, "Work, for the night is coming." One wishes he had also introduced his companion hymn, "Work, for the day is coming." The other tune mentioned is set to the hymn, "I'm but a stranger here," and is named Harris, after an accomplished daughter of Theodore Harris, the well-known banker and railroad president in Louisville, she having aided him in harmonizing several of his hymns. He was also much helped in selecting and harmonizing tunes, by W. H. Doane, Mus. Doc., of Cincinnati, who in conjunction with Professor Johnson, of Crozer, arranged the excellent music of the Baptist Hymnal. Dr. Manly's tune for 253, "We speak of the realms of the blest," is based upon Bradbury's tune for that hymn (Baptist Hymn 686), the second line being the same, but will be regarded by many as a decided improvement. It is named Georgetown, after the Kentucky College and village in which he lived for eight years.

Besides using hymn books at church, it is greatly to be desired that they should be much used at home, in family worship, or on Sunday afternoons or evenings, when the family are alone or when visitors are present. Give everybody a hymn-book, and encourage all to sing. Or if there can be no singing, let every one be asked to select a favorite hymn and read it. Some of us remember well enough to have seen these things done with the fine old Virginia Selection, fifty years ago; and it will be much more interesting where the books are so cheap and every one can have a copy.

We earnestly hope, and fervently pray, that this last work of the rarely gifted and widely beloved author may in this very year reach a very large circulation. It is published by the Baptist Book Concern, Louisville, and every copy will yield a royalty.—John A. Broadus, in Religious Herald.

We have personally examined every hymn in "The Choice," and are of the opinion that it is the best collection of hymns ever published for the use of Baptist churches in this country. In the number of hymns, in solid scriptual teaching, in the tunes, in the variety of subjects, in the arrangement of indexes, and in the prices of the various editions, "The Choice" is all that is needed. Pastors could hardly do a better thing for their congregations than to put "The Choice" in their churches and the homes of the people. It will be sent to any address on receipt of price by our Supply Store in Raleigh or in quantities by express or freight to churches, or schools. C. DURHAM.

The Poetry of the Bible.

Mr. C. F. McKesson, a prominent lawyer of this place, by special request, repeated his lecture on "The Poetry of the Bible" to an exceedingly appreciative audience at the town hall a short time ago. It was truly a intellectual feast, enjoyed by all who were favored with the opportunity of hearing this charming speaker. Chaste in thought, elevating in sentiment, ornate in style, and smooth in delivery, it electrified the cultivated audience who showed their appreciation by the repeated cheers which greeted this orator of wondrous magnetism.

Everything is moving on smoothly in our work here and at Hickory.

Yours in the work,
H. D. LAUGHLIN.

From Rocky Mount, N. C.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I am an unsettled Bap-
I move about. There is an old say-that "a rolling stone gathers no moss," another, that "a setting goose gains nu thers," so I strike it even and go where siness calls me, if I think it is best for me do so.

I was just thinking of the different church-to which I have belonged and of the dif-ent pastors I have had. So to commence ith:

I was reared under old Bro. N. A. Pure-y at Gardner's church in Warren county, ear old place to me. I joined the church ere and was baptized by Bro. Purefoy on e third Sunday in September, 1878.

The following week I left that section and ent to Brookston, better known as Church's ore, situated on the Raleigh and Gaston ilroad, five miles east of Henderson.

There I remained several years, and while ere the church at Middleburg was built, had for its pastor the well known and e minister, J. L. White. He, at that time, as a student at Wake Forest. Though a udent, he was a power in the hands of the rd, and is at the present time, according my way of thinking, one of the best achers I ever heard.

I was about to leave out a very amiable n, Rev. D. A. Glenn. He was not a all preacher either. I was converted unr his ministry at Sharon church in Warren unty, August, 1878, and learned to love m like a brother. I have lost sight of the od man. He left the State and went to tersburg, Va, about 1883, as near as I member. If you know of his whereabouts, ease inform us through your paper. He as my pastor at Gardner's. [Bro. Glenn now pastor in Hendersonville, N. C.—ED
R.]

Well, to get my church membership and tors in rotation, I will have to state that hen I left Brookston, I went to Henderson, d moved my membership there from Mideburg. At Henderson I had another big an as my pastor, Rev. R. VanDeventer.
e needs no praise from me. I understand is a worker, and by the help of the Lord s added many to the church in Henderson.
ell, he is capable of doing such work.

Well, from Henderson I went to Oxford
d had there for my pastor, No. 5, Rev. J.
Hardaway. He is very small in stature, t he is a big preacher, and has accomished a good work in Oxford, and I think long stay there speaks well for him. He admired by all and his church rightly conders him a great man.

From Oxford I came east last September d cast my lot with the Baptists of this ce, and have for my pastor, No. 6, Rev.
F. Love. He is also a true man, an ear-st preacher, and loved by us all. We had th us recently my pastor, No. 3, Rev. J.
White, who conducted a revival of ten ys for us, and did some good preaching, d had right many converts. Sunday afr the meeting closed, seventeen were re-ived into the church by immersion. Oths have joined who have not yet presented emselves for baptism, and others were re-ored.

Bro. Love left us to-day to do some mis-onary work in the extreme eastern part of e State. Dr. J. D. Hufham will preach r us next Sunday morning and a young
o. Davis at night.

CHURCH FINANCES.

One of the greatest difficulties connected ith church work is the question of finances.
his difficulty would soon vanish if our urches would inaugurate a practical sysm, and conduct the system upon business inciples. I am fully convinced that if our urches would adopt the weekly or monthly velope system, and, in connection with his system, appoint a competent treasurer d an efficient finance committee to visit e delinquents every month, there would be t little trouble along this line.

Recently, I have had the opportunity of amining several systems for church nances. The first was "The Powell's Rev-nue System." This is widely advertised d highly commended by leading men in any sections, but it is so complicated that is of little value to the average church easurer, and even to a skilful one it will be uch trouble. Then there is the expense of umbered envelops to suit the record.

The next I saw was the "Revell Church easurer's Record," which is simpler and I ink superior to the "Powell" system. his system can be used with any envelop.
ith this system you can use plain or inted envelops. This is the best system I ave seen.

Another system is "The Offertory Calenar" system. The calendar has a picture f the widow casting her mite into the treas-ry. Also fifty-two envelops with the days f the week printed on each and Sunday arked as the "offering day." Upon each velop is an appropriate passage of Scripure. This is a capital arrangement, and he calendar feature is a constant reminder f the weekly offering. This system has the umbered envelop which I consider unneces-ary and troublesome. If the publisher will ut a space for name and amount, instead of he number, I believe it will take the lead
f all the systems published.

Any of these systems can be ordered hrough the Supply Store, Raleigh, N. C.

MINISTERIAL DISCOURTESY.

There is a custom with many brethren to unt up every preacher who arrives in town nd press him into pulpit service. Every me a preacher is seen in the audience, he e also called out to speak. I have known reachers, after traveling a long journey, to hus be pressed into service. I have known others to tremble in their seats for fear of being called out to speak to a strange audience when in no condition to speak. Sometimes this is meant for courtesy. I should call it discourtesy. Sometimes it is done to save a sermon. The brethren should not save their own ammunition at the expense of another's. Rarely the brethren hear preaching; they have a great deal to do at their homes; now when they pass through your town, let them rest, unless you have arranged beforehand for a service. If a preacher happens at your service, let him sit quietly and unobserved in the pew to enjoy the service, he will appreciate that much more than to be called out into public notice. If you desire to recognize his presence, a request to lead in prayer will do it, and his talk with God might be more powerful than a talk to the people. In our desire to show courtesy to our brethren, let us not burden and embarrass them.

NEWS ITEMS.

The work in Elizabeth City is progressing.
Large crowds attend all the services, and the church is united in all matters of work. In proportion to means, the church stands as the peer of any other in liberality. We have had many difficulties to face, but they have vanished as we have gone forward. There are many difficulties now to contend with.
Wherever and whenever Baptist principles begin to triumph, evil and envious eyes are cast, and then follows evil words and deeds.
But above all, these Baptist principles have triumphed, and thus it shall always be in the history of our work the world over.

At Salem the work moves along. At the last appointment we raised in cash and pledges enough and over to meet the Associational pledges.

Roanoke Island is still pastorless.

Bro. J. B. Harrell is doing well in his field and the work seems to be making solid progress under his direction. It is a pleasure to have him living in Elizabeth City.

Dr. Overby is holding his own at Sawyer's Creek. The frost is thickening upon his head, but still he is doing faithful work and preaching powerful sermons to his people.

Bro. Josiah Elliott is at his work once more, to the great delight of his brethren.

We are all anxious about the work in Edenton. May God guide the brethren there to a worthy successor of Bro. Vann.

Brethren Burfoot, Stallings and Davis are doing well in their fields.

I want to say that I heartily endorse your editorial on the "Misappropriation of Public Funds." It was timely and to the point.
We need to ring the changes along that line until the evils are corrected. I hope the next Convention will unanimously protest against such misappropriations. Let the Masons support their own institution or sell out their interest to the Methodists, and let the State establish a Reformatory.

The old RECORDER gets better. I get a number of the leading papers. The RECOR-DER is the equal of the best and far ahead of some which claim supremacy. May God bless the RECORDER and its sound and able editor. CHAS. A. G. THOMAS

Elizabeth City, Feb. 23, 1892.

From Rev. D. S. Williams of Texarkana, Texas.

Dear Bro: Bailey:—In the reception of my mail I find that dear old paper, the BIBLICAL RECORDER, published by you in the city of Raleigh, N. C., and paid for up to 1893. To whom I may send my thanks I know not, but I sincerely thank them for the privilege of reading that paper again. It was my privilege to read that paper from its change in the year 1834 from the INTERPRETER to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for many years before I left the State thirty-five years ago.
Its first editor, Rev. Thomas Meredith, I loved as a brother in the flesh. He was my particular friend. I read over the last issues and see the names of many ministers and prominent brethren, but only two do I know, Bro. T. H. Pritchard and Bro. N. B. Cobb; all others are strangers. I feel lonely, though separated by miles, I see I am not forgotten.

I rejoice to know that there are so many active, energetic christian workers engaged in the great work of building up the cause of the Master.

I ask you, dear reader, to go with me to the time when we had no BIBLICAL RECOR-DER, no Baptist State Convention, no Wake Forest Institute nor College, and only two city churches, Newbern and Edenton, that had pastors for all the time. The country churches were scattered over the country, wide apart, and the dear old brethren Purefoy, Crocker, McDaniel, Tims, Dennis, and many others were doing all they could to lead men to Christ. But God was with them. Their united prayers went up to the throne of the great I Am and help came through the instrumentalities that God designed to bless. Union of effort in the ministry, love and brotherly kindness, that brought out the Baptist Convention at Greenville, that brought out the RECORDER, and that brought up the great need of the Baptists, a literary institution, and God sent a Wait, an Armstrong, and a Meredith to help us in the great instrumentalities that were to be used in the work of the Master.

I rejoice that I have lived to see and know that so much has been done for my native
State in the building up of the cause of soul liberty. D. S. WILLIAMS.

C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec.

"A Good Moral Character."

The civil "Code of North Carolina" requires "a good moral character" of every man who proposes to sell "blockade whiskey," "Jersey lightning," stinking lager, or any other villainous compound of liquid hell-fire, by the drink, to degraded white men, low-down "niggers," and scape-grace boys ready for the penitentiary and the gallows.

Oh yes, "a good moral character" must be proven to the satisfaction of the law, presumably, before a man, in the Old North State, who will be allowed to set up a legal, twenty-five-dollars-taxed drink hole, that will as certainly corrupt and degrade the drinkers frequenting it, and bring down God's curse upon them, as that the woe is already pronounced against the man who putteth the bottle to his neighbor. But the "good moral character" must be certified to, all the same, in the petition to the County Commissioners, before license to sell is granted.

And who certifies to the "good moral character" of the aforesaid certifiers to the good morals of the whiskey seller? Surely if the grog-man who sells, needs to have his character propped up, so also, it would seem, the character of those who sign his petition would require bolstering, too. One is about as shaky and flimsy as the other, we might judge. They must be "hail fellows," moving in the same rut, and running on the same schedule. One sells, and the other drinks; where's the difference? One sets up a grog den; and the other certifies to his "good moral character," and helps him in his business of drunkard-making by going there to drink, or secretly sends his jug to get filled. Where's the difference?

The original framer of the bill, requiring "a good moral character" in order to deal out liquor by the drink, no doubt, meant well in the advocacy of his bill before the Legislature of North Carolina. He very reasonably supposed, being a good citizen, that any man who had a proper regard for his moral character at all, would never apply for a permit, or license, to sell the ruin-making "stuff" to his neighbors, much less would he be able to find a decent man in all the community willing to certify to the morals of the man applying for such license; and therefore, the bill, if it became a law, would in fact, be prohibitory altogether.

But we see that such is not the case; and grog-sellers do find plenty of signers to their petitions—men of standing, some of the "best people," (a good sister says, in her letter, last week, from Henderson,) "prominent church-members"(!) she declared, put their names to a liquor-seller's petition to the County Commissioners, that he might deal, to the Henderson husbands, brothers, and sons, the damning drink that makes demons of all who follow after, and patronize the drink shops! It is to be hoped, for the sake of humanity, that the Commissioners had the backbone to refuse positively, like the noble Board of Commissioners in Robeson county, where the grog-sellers, and their minions, appealed to the Judge, and were defeated; then to the Supreme Court, and again were defeated; and to-day Robeson county stands disenthralled, free from the dire curse and disgrace of legalizing the whiskey traffic, in all her borders!

"Prominent church-members" signing a liquor petition to open a hell—a place, in every town, that all true men avoid, as they would the bottomless pit! "Prominent church-members," we repeat, did that! So that good woman said. Let us think over this, a little moment, till we can recover our breath, for it just nearly stifles us, and makes us hot in the collar. May-be, that sister is mistaken. For the sake of the church that holds fellowship with those "prominent members" we would, in all charity suppose, that she was misinformed.
What! church-members become particeps criminis," willingly, in the eternal damna-tion of immortal souls!! What moral corruption is here exhibited! Just think of a father certifying to the "good moral character" of a grog-seller, and some dark Saturday night, finding his own son, a drunken idiot, reeling out of the very den of iniquity that he himself helped to set up, and by which the whole neighborhood is scandalized and disgraced! And that father a "prominent church-member!" Alas! alas!

Brethren, let us turn on the light. The sound of freedom's notes is in the air. Let the preacher, preach deliverance. Let the press, both religious and secular, advocate
it. Let the "medal contests" of temperance, go on, and on, in every county. Let the good women, all over the land, set their faces like flint, against the dram bottle.
Let every teacher in all schools stand for the cause of the youth, in regard to evil of the whiskey traffic; and thus doing, and all working together, the whiskey and lager-beer devil, will be driven out; and all the arches of heaven will shout "Hallelujah!
Hallelujah! the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth!" W. B. HARRELL.

Letter from Rev. R. E Peele.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Yes, I found myself growing weaker and the work in Wilmington growing heavier, and so dropped it. It was like dropping my heart, but I dared not do otherwise.

I resigned with no special field in view,
but as you will doubtless hear through Bro.
Vann, a work of some importance impresses itself upon me and has for some time. It remains to be seen what the brethren will think and do about it, but I could have no rest in failing to lay the matter before them.

The Lord has called me to cut down, grub, burn, plow and plant, and my highest usefulness is in this direction, so it seemed to me; but if the way is not open for this, I must do what my hand finds to do as much as in me is. You see I am a stimulant and must be taken only for the stomach's sake and oft infirmity, and must not be continued too long, for while the people do not grow tired of a stimulant, they may like it too well and also lose their appetite for better things. My people usually think too much of me and not enough of my Lord.

During my twenty-seven months' stay in Wilmington, I have preached more than six hundred sermons (in and out of the city), and between three and four hundred have been added to the churches directly or indirectly through my ministry under God who alone sent the increase.

You spoke of the Onslow field as my probable location. This is doubtful, as the work is rather heavy for my present condition.

I am helping Bro. Jenkens at Clemmons-ville in a meeting, and the work is hopeful.

Fraternally, R. E. PEELE.

"O I Didn't Know Preachers Cried!"

It was not a home of elegance, but it was a seat where happiness reigned, and now for five blessed years husband and wife had kept life's lights burning for each other.
The house was snugly set back among the trees, and vines, laden with sweetness, ran up on the porch in front. It was my custom to drop in often as pastor. But of late, I had gone twice daily. The mother was sick; fever was burning out her life. In health, she was the handomest woman I ever saw, a veritable Eugenie of France, splendidly formed, and with a set of features whereon beauty sat enthroned. But when the fever was raging, and her cheeks were lighted and her eyes aflame, she seemed more beautiful still.

There was only one little child in the house, a darling little tot of four summers, who used often to meet me at the door, and talk in the weirdest, old-folky kind of way about her sick mamma. One day she said,
"I think mamma dreams at night, and that makes her sick. She told me once I was sick because I dreamed about people with wings." Another day she said, "I don't think mamma can be so well to-day." "Why do you think so, Elsie?" "Well, I was under the bed trying to keep still, and I heard her say, 'O God, I'm so tired,' and when I crawled out and took her hand, she just covered up her head."

The fatal day came at last. "Beauty doth consume as a moth." The mother lay dead in the parlor. There was a sound of mourning upstairs, coming from a heart that was now left so lonely in the midst of the great world. When I opened the door, Elsie met me. Her demeanor was solemn, and I knew she had something to say. As I laid aside my hat she took my hand, and said, "The angels took my mamma last night. Didn't they have any mammas and had to take mine?" As I looked in at the open door and saw the dear dead and then down at the darling little one who did not know what she had lost, my eyes filled, and Elsie said, "O I didn't know preachers cried."

In the evening, just at sunset, we laid the dead away, and often, as I passed the home,
I had a word for Elsie. One evening, as I hurried by the gate, she stopped me, and said, "I'm so lonesome. If mamma knew how lonesome I am, I think she would send for me." C. C. BROWN.

Central Union, Cape Fear Association.

The Central Union of the Cape Fear Association convened with the church at Clark-ton on Saturday before the fifth Sunday in January. Rev. J. M. Register preached the introductory.

We then organized by electing Bro. Register, Moderator, and Bro. Everett, Clerk.

A resolution was unanimously adopted, recommending that the pastors of the different churches belonging to this Union take up collections regularly in their churches for the objects of this Association, and have the same forwarded by the clerks of the different churches quarterly. The object of this resolution is to get the pastors and churches to do their duty on this line, and thereby save the expense of an agent.

We discussed the following query, which was decided in the affirmative: Should the churches require all of their members to contribute to the support of the pastor and to the spread of the gospel?

The Sunday-school mass-meeting was conducted by Rev. D. J. Clark, and speeches were made by Bro. Elkins and Bro. Singletary Hilburn, after which the writer preached from the text, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

The next session will convene at Galeed church near Bladenboro, in May, near the
C. C. R. R.

We have in this Union several good brethren in the ministry, to-wit, Rev. J. M. Register, Robert Sessoms, R. M. and D. H. Hilburn, and D. J. Clark, and it is to be hoped they will attend every session of the Union.

Yours in Christ,

A. J. BORDEAUX.

Bladenboro, Feb. 19, 1892.

Sunday-school Convention.

The Sunday-school Convention of the Eastern Association will meet with the church at Lisbon, Sampson county, on Tuesday after the first Sunday in April.

Brethren, let's make this meeting an honor to the Sunday-school work. If this institution be the church at work, then it is high time we should arouse ourselves to action and swell the comparatively few at work all over the State, to thousands the present year. Let every good worker come and lend a helping hand, and devise ways and means by which the waste places all over our Association may be reached. If every man and woman in our churches would strain after the possibilities in the christian life as we do after the impossibilities of sinful pleasure, it would not be long before the waste places all over the earth would be swept onward toward the final goal of triumphant righteousness in Jesus Christ.

The first Convention held in this Association met with the church in Clinton, and every church in that town became more enthusiastic over the work, and where the different churches had very few engaged in the Sunday-school cause, now every church has a goodly number of profitable workers.

Now, brethren, the church at Lisbon proposes to have a profitable meeting of this body; and, to show you they mean business,

Murfreesboro Items.

Memorial services of the late C. H. Spurgeon were held in the Murfreesboro Baptist church Sunday night Feb. 14. There was no preaching in the Methodist church, so the congregations of the town worshipped together. Interesting and appropriate remarks were made by Rev. J. A. Lee, pastor of the Methodist church, Rev. C. W.
Scarboro and Rev. T. G. Wood.

Our community has been greatly bereaved by the death of Miss Fannie Myrick. She was the daughter of Mrs. S. J. Myrick of the Institute and had taught in several towns of the State. Here was one of the sweetest dispositions and loveliest characters to be met with anywhere and her numerous contributions to the poor and all other charitable objects will be greatly missed but the influence of her pure christian life remains behind pointing onward and upward to the better land.

Pastor Wood is expecting Rev. Dr. J. D.
Hufham of Tarboro to aid him in a series of meetings to begin in April.

Notwithstanding the hard times the pastors are bravely going on with their work and the West Chowan expects to meet its pledges.

Rev. J. N. Hoggard, the oldest pastor in the Association, has been very sick with the grippe, but is now much improved and will soon be back at his post. He has been preaching to one church over thirty years—a striking proof of his faithfulness.

A very enjoyable musicale was given in the Institute Chapel Friday night Feb. 19.
The young ladies acquitted themselves very creditably indeed. The following was the program:

1. Russian Imperial March—Miss Maggie
Ferrell, Raleigh, N. C.
2. Instrumental Solo. "Dause Lousiane" —Miss Kate Newsome, Winston, N. C.
3. Vocal Quartette, "Friendship, Love and Song"—Misses Penny, Garrett, Bullock and Montford.
4. Instrumental Solo, "Golden Bells"—
Miss Joyner, Franklinton, N. C.
5. Vocal Duet, "There is a Sigh in the Heart"—Miss Penny, Johnston county, N. C.
6. Recitation, "Not a Marrying girl"—
Miss Clellie Timberlake, Youngsville, N. C.
7. Instrumental Solo, "Spring Song"—
Miss Daughtrey, Suffolk, Va.
8. Instrumental Duet, "Overture to Gazza
Ladra"—Miss Vann, Como, N. C.
9. Vocal Duet, "Maggie Darling, Now
Good-bye"—Misses Bullock and Garrett.
10. Instrumental Solo, "Frolic"—Miss
Jessie Brewer, Murfreesboro, N. C.
11. Instrumental Solo, "Rondo Brilleant"
—Miss Biggs, Scotland Neck, N. C.
12. Recitation, "Ride of Jennie McNeal" —Miss Sophie Wood, Murfreesboro, N. C.
13. Instrumental Solo, Le Souambula"—
Miss Garrett, Edenton, N. C.
14. Instrumental Solo, "Souvenir de Notre Dame"—Miss Salsbury, Hamilton, N. C.
15. Instrumental Solo, "Recollections of Home"—Miss Bruce Brewer, Murfreesboro,
N. C.
16. Vocal Solo, "Lorelei"—Miss Daughtrey, Suffolk, Va.
17. Recitation, "A Woman's Answer"—
Miss Bullock, Pantego, N. C.
18. Instrumental Solo, "Marche de Muit" —Miss Norfleet, Franklin, Va.
19. Instrumental Solo, "Rondo Capricci-osa"—Miss Phelps, Henderson, N. C.
20. Instrumental Solo, "Impromptu in B Flat"—Miss Cannady, Granville, county,

Revival at Wakefield.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—We have a glorious meeting. I bless God for N. B. Broughton, who is with us preaching the gospel with great power. Many have found Jesus and many more are anxiously inquiring "what shall I do to be saved."

I will be one of ten to be responsible for a living salary for Bro. Broughton to leave his home and business and go out into the highways and hedges and urge men to accept Christ. It is a pity for such a man to be so situated as to be obliged to spend the most of his time behind or at a desk. We need judicious evangelists. A certain class we can get on without. God "gave Evangelists." They were not those however, whose delight it was to parade pastors before a grinning assembly &c., &c.

I want us to work for this—to have a faithful man of God to preach to our poor people who are not able to give a thousand dollars as thank offering to the minister.
These people need help and we are able to give it to them and be the better off. "The poor have the gospel preached to them," was worthy of the first attention of God's Son. Really. C. I. SPARROW.

Wakefield, Feb. 24, 1892.

The Baptist churches of Richmond, Va., are enjoying a gracious season of revival.

from the seventh to the first day of the week as the day of rest and worship? What do the brethren mean, anyway, by "Baptist simplicity in worship?" Who are the Baptists thus referred to? Are they the men who laid broad and deep the foundations of our Zion; the pioneer settlers of this country, who bequeathed to us our religious liberty and laid the foundations of churches, schools and colleges? Or do we mean their descendants down to the third and fourth generation? A line must be drawn somewhere, for all in this matter of simplicity of worship cannot be classed under the same head. And it would hardly do either to reflect upon the manners and customs of our forefathers by contending for modern simplicity as against the more formal worship of our ancestors.

Here is the reply which one of the most honored and talented pastors in a neighboring church sent to me when I wrote to tell him I thought of ordaining three deacons, and would like to know how he felt on the subject of ordination. (You know I have to go carefully and feel my way along up in this section, lest some brother pounce upon me and accuse me of making "innovations" upon the faith and practices of Baptist churches.) He said in these words:

"My dear Brother—I hesitate about solemnly setting a man apart for sacred work, and then the first thing that he does, maybe, is to use his 'ordained influence' in opposition to the teaching and practice of his pastor. These 'influential and leading brethren' do not always have their authority when endowed with it in the most sanctified way. I have always had a healthy,—some people would call it morbid,—fear of shorthorn (I think that is a Southern title) deacons. The fewer we have the less trouble we are likely to have, and in solemnly setting apart three men I hope, my dear fellow, you are not laying up wrath against the day of wrath."

This is funny, but it shows how some brethren feel about deacons, and why it is that they want as few as possible. But the situation can and ought to be different from this. Deacons can be and ought to be a help to their pastors. My deacons are to me, and there is less danger in having seven than in having three or four, so far as the comfort of the pastor is concerned. I think, however, that the custom of ordaining deacons in Baptist churches North was first abandoned chiefly because of the well known opposition of our Baptist people in the latter part of the last and in the first half of the present century to forms and ceremonies in church service and worship, and because it is not anywhere in the New Testament specially commanded.

M. V. McDUFFIE.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Mixing with Dabblers in a Mutilated Gospel.

When will Baptists find enough to do teaching and preaching God's truth as they learned it, without dabbling in religious matters with those who teach a mutilated gospel.

I am continually astonished and mortified by hearing of Baptists becoming partakers of the evil deeds of those who pick out such parts of God's law as suit their feelings or convenience, and calling these essential, treat the rest as non-essential, thereby virtually denying that God is the Lord.

But I was especially surprised when I read in the RECORDER of Feb. 17th a dear brother's puff of Fife's meeting in Tarboro.

I cannot but recall in this connection the saying of the prophet Isaiah, "They are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink."

If a man who is known to own unencumbered property worth twenty thousand dollars, and who is also known to be a man whose word can be relied on, should walk up to the paying teller's window of a bank which has money to lend and where he is known, and state verbally that he wanted five hundred dollars which he would repay in three months, expecting to get it without further ceremony, he would be politely informed that they had another way for him to say it before he could get any money there.

Now I suppose Mr. Fife is a very nice man. I suppose, too, that he claims verbally to be dead and buried to sin and risen to a new life. But our King has provided another way for him to say it, and when he says it that way, then, and not till then, are we authorized to recognize him as a subject of our King.

I am glad we have so many wise men who are mighty in the Scriptures. But we need some Aquilas and Priscillas to take one in hand occasionally and expound to him the way of God more perfectly; or, rather, to stir up their pure minds by way of remembrance—for they certainly know better.

Gastonia, Feb. 19, 1892.

People with delicate stomachs find Ayer's Sarsaparilla agreeable to the taste, and, therefore, prefer it as a blood-purifier to any other. This is one reason for its great popularity as a spring and family medicine. Safe, certain, and palatable.

Methods of Missions.

The criticisms of the operations of the Board of Foreign Missions, recently published in the Religious Herald, seem to be fraught with "only evil continually," notwithstanding the fact that some brethren see so much good to result from them. They remind me very much of the carping criticisms of newspaper correspondents during the late unhappy war upon the administration of the military department of the Confederate government. Snugly ensconced in some bomb-proof at a healthy distance from the seat of war, these self-complacent critics knew so much better than the President and his generals just how things ought to have been done, after they had been done. Their "hindsight" was so much better than the "foresight" of the brave men who were staggering under their weighty sense of responsibility; and the results of their unjust and untimely criticisms were not hard to discover in the sense of distrust and despondency which they inspired in the popular mind and which grew into a formidable barrier to the success of the cause.

I can see no good in the articles of our good Brother Goodwin, good as they afford Bro. Bell an opportunity, which he is so well improving, of showing up their light and frivolous character. How unfortunate these papers are just now when a grand effort is making to kindle enthusiasm among our Baptist people during this Centennial of Foreign Missions. The disposition to complain and criticise is sufficiently developed among us already. It needs no encouragement whatever. On the contrary, every effort should be made to discourage and suppress it, and enlist the minds and hearts of our people in the direction of more enlarged and liberal and consecrated effort to give the gospel to all the nations of the earth.

SUNDAY, MAR. 6—THE DOWNFALL OF JUDAH.

Jeremiah 39: 1—10.

For parallel Bible history, read 2 Kings 25: 1—12; 2 Chron. 36: 11—21.

Read the 34th chapter of Jeremiah containing a prophecy delivered by Jeremiah to King Zedekiah concerning the result of the seige three years before the fall of Jerusalem. This prophecy was delivered 589 B. C. Jerusalem was destroyed about the 1st of July, B. C. 586.

At the time of the seige, Jerusalem contained about 20,000 inhabitants. The army of Nebuchadnezzar is described as a vast host of different nations. "Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, and all his army and all the kingdoms of the earth of his dominions fought against Jerusalem," "beseiged it," surrounded it with their armies to prevent all provisions from being carried in, that the garrison and the people might be starved into submission, if they could not break down the walls with their strong battering rams.

The seige lasted a year and a half. "The city was broken up"—broken into. A breach was made in the walls, and the city was entered at midnight by the northern gate which could most easily be reached by the battering rams (Ezek. 12: 2—12) In Kings, it is said there was no bread. What a long, brave struggle against famine, pestilence and overpowering numbers! But all in vain; for the word of God was against them, because of their repeated rebellions against him. "All the chief of the priests, and the people transgressed very much after all the abominations of the heathen, and polluted the house of the Lord, which he had hallowed in Jerusalem. And the Lord God of their fathers sent to them by his messengers rising up betimes and sending; because he had compassion on his people and on his dwelling place. But they mocked the messengers of God, and despised his words, and misused his prophets, until the wrath of the Lord arose against his people, till there was no remedy. Therefore he brought on them the king of the Chaldees," &c. 2 Chron. 36: 14—21.

It is a fearful thing to continue sinning against God in the face of repeated warnings and entreaties. God will not always chide. Notice that he can use as his agents even the heathen who knew him not. "He maketh the wrath of man to praise him and restraineth the remainder of wrath."

Verse 3. "And all the princes of the king of Babylon came in and sat in the middle gate." Nebuchadnezzar was not with them for his headquarters were at Riblah, about seventy-five miles north of Damascus, from which point he could direct military operations against both Tyre and Jerusalem. These princes were the generals in immediate command. Only four are named: Nergal-sharezer, the Rab-mag, or high-priest, or chief of the sorcerers, Sarsechim, the Rab-saris, or chief of the eunuchs, Nergal-sharezer and Samgar-nebo. The breach in the walls enabled the Chaldeans to occupy the lower city to the north east of Mt. Zion and the "middle gate," probably separated the two parts of Jerusalem.

When Zedekiah saw them in this place, he knew that his capital was taken, and he attempted to save himself by flight; but the vigilant enemy discovered him, pursued him and caught him and his princes in the plains of Jericho.

The king and those with him were taken to Riblah to hear the sentence of Nebuchadnezzar. This sentence was a most cruel one. Zedekiah's sons were slain before his eyes; all the nobles of Judah were slain, and then his own eyes were put out, so that the last thing he was permitted to see was the agony of his dying children and nobles.

"The remnant of the people that remained in the city" Gen. Nebuzar-adan carried away to Babylon under guard, but "the poor of the people which had nothing, he left in the land of Judah" and "gave them vineyards and fields at the same time." They were not able to revolt.

Such, in brief, is Jeremiah's account of the downfall of Jerusalem, and the ruin of Zedekiah.

We find in it all a literal fulfilment of the word of God. God by the mouth of Ezekiel (Ezek. 12: 11—13) had said, "They shall remove and go into captivity, and the prince that is among them shall bear upon his shoulder in the twilight and shall go forth: they shall dig through the wall to carry out thereby: he shall cover his face, that he see not the ground with his eyes. My net will I spread upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare; and I will bring him to Babylon to the land of the Chaldeans; yet shall he not see it, though he shall die there."

Jeremiah, while confined in prison by Zedekiah, said: "Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it, and Zedekiah the king of Judah shall not escape out of the hands of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, and shall speak with him mouth to mouth, and his eyes shall behold his eyes; and he shall lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he be until I visit him, saith the Lord: though ye fight with the Chaldeans, ye shall not prosper." (Jer. 32: 3—5).

Both of these prophecies, the one written by the exiled Ezekiel in the country of Babylon, and the other written by Jeremiah in Jerusalem, though seeming to be contradictory, were literally fulfilled in the history of Zedekiah as recorded in this lesson. Wicked men who knew nothing of the prophecies fulfilled them. There are many other like instances in the Bible. The God of prophecy and the God of providence are one and the same.

The Most High still rules in the affairs of nations. The permanent security of any nation is more dependent upon the observance of God's precepts than upon able generals and brave soldiers. The fear of the Lord is a better protection to any country than standing armies or international alliances.

Don't be a spider and crawl in these days! Why not keep up with the nineteenth century? You would not buy a steam engine made like those of a century ago. Then why should you buy the old-fashioned, big, drastic pills that gripe and debilitate your system?

As great improvements have been made in pills as in steam engines. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are tiny, sugar-coated granules, or pills, are easiest to take, and never gripe or shock the system.

They are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless.

One little Pellet's a laxative, three to four are cathartic. They regulate and cleanse the liver, stomach and bowels — quickly, but thoroughly. They're the cheapest pill, sold by druggists, because you only pay for the good you get. They're guaranteed to give satisfaction, every time, or your money is returned. That's the peculiar plan all Dr. Pierce's medicines are sold on.

Can you ask more?

POKINE.

I have used the within remedy (Pokine) with great success. JAMES H. LASSITER.

I have used the Pokine Remedy (prepared by W. T. Cheatham, Jr.) in case of Sciatica with the result of positive relief in a few hours, and believe if used as directed is will effect a permanent cure.

J. L. H. MISSILLIER.

MARCH 6, 1891.

For the benefit of the public, I unhesitatingly recommend Cheatham's wonderful remedy, "Pokine," to all sufferers of rheumatism. It has produced marvelous results in my case. I was a sufferer of the malady for five years, and after taking a few bottles was entirely cured.

Very respectfully,

W. W. DOWTIN.

HENDERSON, N. C., March 7, '91.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM:

Dear Sir—My wife was down in bed with rheumatism, and the Pokine I bought of you gave her relief after taking four doses. She has not been troubled since. It is the best medicine she ever took for rheumatism. Respectfully,

ZACK DAVIS.

MR W. T. CHEATHAM, JR:

Dear Sir—I have been afflicted with rheumatism time and again, for the past thirteen years. I have received more relief from Pokine than any medicine I ever took, and therefore take great pleasure in recommending it to all sufferers of rheumatism. Very respectfully,

F. G. MITCHELL.

JANUARY 19, 1891.

W. T. CHEATHAM, JR.:

Dear Sir I desire to say that in January last I was down with rheumatism; my suffering was great, and I was completely prostrated. One bottle of your Pokine completely relieved me, and I have not had any rheumatism since. My son also was relieved of rheumatism by Pokine.

Yours truly,

CHARLES G. BURROUGHS.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM, JR.:

Your rheumatic cure, Pokine, has completely cured me. I. M. GREEN.

MR. W. T. CHEATHAM, JR., Henderson, N. C.:

Dear Sir—Being asked my opinion of your rheumatic remedy, Pokine, will gladly state I deem it the only medicine of its kind on the market that will accomplish that which is exclusively claimed for it. Being a sufferer of rheumatism, I consequently tried many remedies, until finally relieved by Pokine. Very respectfully,

Subject for March: Brazil.

Brazil—"The Young Republic."

Dating back ten or twelve years, let us imagine ourselves overlooking a vast country having an area greater than that of the United States (exclusive of Alaska), and equal to four-fifths of Europe, with an imperial capital of more than 350,000 inhabitants.

To the North we catch sight of the "King of Rivers," with its navigable tributaries draining most of the country. This forming a vast river basin, is overspread with an almost endless variety of trees, among whose branches flutter birds of the most brilliant plumage, and in these forests animals of nearly every description make their homes, while insects of the most glittering hue shimmer in the tropic sunlight.

Coming farther down may be seen the rich mines of diamonds and gold. In short, the richness of its wood and water, the profusion of its diamonds and gold make the El Dorado of our imagination.

Dotted here and there are cities and towns of immense population, among which are Rio de Janeiro, Bahia, Pernambuco and Maccio. In these crowded places may be seen cathedrals, street processions and iron-barred convents casting their blighting shadow over this beautiful land which nature has so richly adorned. This Romanism which stands out so conspicuously is a mixture of Paganism, Judaism and Christianity, and entwining itself into every profession, industry and art. It not only seeks religious domination in matters of belief and conscience, but political control as well.

On entering the numerous temples, gorgeous altars surrounded by idols and images of the Holy Spirit, of Jesus, of real and imaginary saints, meet our gaze. The people who worship here are endowed with many noble and enviable qualities. They are kind, courteous and very sympathetic, but we do not fail to recognize as we see them bow down to these false gods that their moral condition is fearfully dark and sad. To them the Bible is unknown. Their priests, who ridicule personal purity, teach them none of the doctrines of the New Testament, and they know nothing of the way of salvation. We observe that no one thinks of devoting the Lord's day to God's service, but without scrutinizing very closely we find theatres, balls, racing, lotteries, card playing, and other kinds of gambling to be the amusements of the day.

As we who have had the benefit of the gospel behold these people grown up to manhood and womanhood with ideas utterly at variance with all christian morals, realize from the depth of our hearts how sad and terrible is the condition of ignorance, sin and wretchedness.

Up to this time the Baptists had done but little to promote the cause of christianity in Brazil; but in 1880, after the return and conversion of Gen. (now Rev.) A. T. Hawthorne of Texas, who, just after the late war, went to Brazil seeking a home for himself and friends, many hearts were stirred by the desire to carry the gospel to this benighted land. While there he was treated most kindly, and everything in the power of the people was done to induce him to settle there, but circumstances changed his purpose. He was converted near the time when this question of a missionary to Brazil was being agitated. At once his heart went out in christian love to these people who had welcomed him to their homes when he was a stranger in their land, and he longed to send them the gospel which he knew they so much needed. Hence it is that so many of our missionaries in Brazil are from Texas.

Among the first to reach this heathen land were Rev. W. B. Bagby and wife. They landed at Rio de Janeiro, and, going into the interior, began the study of the native language. A year after, Rev. G. C. Taylor and wife joined the mission, and these four went together to Bahia, a city of about two hundred thousand inhabitants in north Brazil. Here in 1882 the first native Brazilian Baptist church was organized. Senhor Texeira, a converted Brazilian priest, greatly aided them in this church. After two years of joint work at Bahia, it was thought best to open new fields, and Rev. Mr. Bagby and wife went to Rio de Janeiro, and Senhor Texeira to Macelo, an important city of twenty thousand inhabitants, north of Bahia. Churches were soon organized in these two places, and work commenced at Pernambuco, where W. Mello Lins, a native, is holding the fort. In 1866, Rev. E. H. Soper and Revs. E. D. Daniel and E. A. Puthuff, with Miss Mina Everett, joined the workers. In 1877, Miss Everett, owing to ill health, returned to the United States. Miss Maggie Rice went out during this year, and the year following, Rev. J. A. Barker and wife, but God in his providence saw fit to take Miss Rice to a brighter and better home ere she had remained a year. Her desire to carry the gospel to the heathen was very intense. Many of her friends pointed to the Homefield's need of earnest christian workers, but to her the command was imperative. She felt that if she refused to carry the gospel to the women and children of Brazil, they would rise up in judgment against her.

By the aid of these noble men and women, churches have been established in five cities and two towns. Many mission stations have been occupied and a good number of converts baptized. There are four native Brazilian preachers; the native members are earnest, zealous, active, intelligent and liberal christians and strive with great devotion to spread the gospel.

Since 1889 this great empire has become a "young republic," and this means not only political but religious freedom. Therefore, it makes it all the more important that we send reinforcements to this vast field, that they may take advantage of this favorable state of affairs and press the gospel home upon the hearts of the people. They readily understand it and embrace it with joy wherever it is preached. Shall we save them or let them perish? If we delay, it will be death to millions of immortal souls. We earnestly plead now that while favorable opportunities are offered, we take advantage of them. We need more laborers in the field at once—men and women whose hearts are burning to tell the "old, old story" to dying souls. Oh! how small is the force now laboring among these multitudes. Hundreds of towns and cities and provinces are without a single missionary of any denomination. We need buildings and means for carrying on the work, but more than all, we need the continued prayers of the children of God. May the Holy Spirit fill our hearts more and more with the love of Christ, and open the hearts of the Brazilians to the words of life.

The Advanced Quarterly.

The Advanced Quarterly, published by the American Baptist Publication Society, has since the reduction in price attained a circulation of half a million copies per quarter. It is superior in size of print to most similar publications and has been pronounced by competent judges the best help of its kind. The Publication Society aims to maintain its high reputation and to furnish in it everything needed by scholars in the advanced classes. If for any reason your school has not been using this quarterly, do not fail to send to the Society for a specimen copy. Better try it.

Early Life of Adoniram Judson.

Adoniram Judson, the eldest son of Adoniram and Abigail Judson, was born in Malden, Mass., August 9th, 1788. In the sixteenth year of his age, being sufficiently advanced in his studies, he entered the sophomore class in Brown University, becoming a member of the institution on the seventeenth of August, 1804. He graduated in 1807 with the highest honors of his class. At the time of leaving college he was inclined to be skeptical in his religious opinions. The sudden death of a classmate, under circumstances of peculiar interest, was the means of arresting his thoughts and putting him upon a course of serious examination of the claims of religion to his personal attention. For the purpose of pursuing his inquiries, he was admitted as a "special student" into the Andover Theological Institution. He soon became a hopeful christian, and was received into the fellowship of the Third Congregational church in Plymouth, Mass., of which his father was the pastor, on May 28th, 1809. Regarding himself now as not his own, but the Lord's, he began to seek for light upon the pathway of his future career. The result of his prayerful deliberation was the determination reached in February, 1810, to consecrate himself to the work of foreign missions. In the seminary he found other young men of kindred spirit, who joined with him in urging upon the christian churches the claims of the heathen. The zeal and the earnestness of these students gave power to the spirit of missions, which had already been aroused in the hearts of christians. That honored society, the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, was formed June 28th, 1810. Mr. Judson had been licensed on the seventeenth of May previous by the Orange Association of Congregationalist ministers in Vermont. September 24th of this year he graduated at Andover. Soon after his graduation he was sent to England by the American Board to confer with the London Missionary Society on the matter of combining the efforts of the two societies in the work of carrying the gospel to the heathen. He embarked Jan. 1st, 1811, in the ship "Packet." The vessel had not been long at sea when she was captured by the French privateer "L'Invincible Napoleon," and carried to Bayonne in France, where he was immured in a dismal dungeon. From his short confinement he was soon released, and, after various adventures, he reached England, presented his credentials, and was cordially received by the christian friends to whom he had been commended. He and his fellow-students, Newell, Nott and Hall, were appointed by the London Missionary Society as missionaries in India, with the expectation that their pecuniary support would be provided for by the friends of missions in America. The object for which he was sent to England having been accomplished, Mr. Judson returned to this country. The board, after mature deliberation, came to the conclusion that the wiser course to pursue was to enter upon the work of missions independently of any other organization, and they accepted as their missionaries the four young men, and pledged themselves to see that they were supported in the undertaking upon which they had embarked. Mr. Judson, with his wife, Ann Hasseltine Judson, and Messrs. Nott, Newell, Hall, and Rice, sailed Feb. 19th, 1812, from Salem, Mass., and reached Calcutta the seventeenth of the following June. During the voyage Mr. Judson's views on the mode and subjects of baptism underwent a change, and, on reaching Serampore he was baptized by Rev. William Ward, Sept. 6th, 1812. This event severed his connection from the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, and led to the formation of the Baptist Triennial Convention on the eighteenth of May, 1814, under whose patronage Mr. Judson and his Baptist associates were taken.—Selected.

Missionary Baptist Work.

It is gratifying to know that the good seed of the Missionary Baptist faith are being sown in every land where the Bible has been carried—north, east, south, and west. In every land and clime where Jesus and him crucified has been preached, with few, if any, exceptions, the Missionary Baptists have been in the front ranks, and are the armor-bearers. They are spreading out in territory and sowing the good seed that will spring up and bring forth an abundant harvest to the good of mankind and the glory of God.

We read some time ago of the advantages that grand old Wake Forest College was holding out to young men who were preparing for the ministry, and were forcibly impressed with the charity extended to young men who were not of the missionary faith, though members of other churches and their future ministers, yet unselfish Wake Forest gave them free tuition. What better proof do we want that the Missionary Baptist church is willing to do all the good she can outside of the pale of the church as well as in it?

That "God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform," is true in spirit and meaning. A few months ago Rev. W. R. Carawan withdrew from the Primitive Baptists and connected himself with the Missionary church. Being regularly licensed, he went to preaching in a territory where there was no membership and where the Methodist, Primitive Baptist, Episcopal and Disciple churches have each a large membership. This good man went into the work with all his heart and soul, preaching to large congregations all through Hyde county, organized a Sunday-school in his own neighborhood, teaching whenever he can get a school, and when not, working as a laborer on the farm. The laborer is worthy of his hire, and in a new field like this help should come from another direction.

The good work of Mr. Carawan will live after him, and others will follow him and enjoy the fruits of his labor. ANON.

How is It?

I see in the Baptist Almanac for 1892 a sketch of the life of Rev. Thomas Stradley written by Dr. T. E. Skinner, from which I quote the following:

"He was truly the missionary of the mountains. He carried the gospel through twenty of the counties west of the Blue Ridge, and the growth and influence of the Baptists of Western North Carolina, have arisen from the foundation laid by him and his coadjutors."

The counties west of the Blue Ridge, of which I have some knowledge, are as follows: Alleghany, Ashe, Watauga, Mitchell, Yancey, Madison, Buncombe, Henderson, Transylvania, Haywood, Jackson, Macon, Swain, Graham, Clay and Cherokee. Sixteen in number. Will Dr. Skinner be kind enough to give us the names of the other four counties of North Carolina, west of the Blue Ridge, through which Rev. Thomas Stradley carried the gospel?"

I quote again from the same article:

"Asheville, with its few huts there, has grown to a city, with a population and trade superior to any mountain town in America, with so great an elevation above the sea, nearly 2,300 feet."

Are there not more than a dozen cities of America with a trade, population and elevation far surpassing that of Asheville?

Much-needed Advice.

Dr. Hatcher gives in the Baltimore Baptist, of Feb. 10, the following good and much needed advice to churches:

"In looking for a pastor, a church would do well to avoid men whose past life is mysterious. A luminous and accessible record is a sine qua non in any preacher. A good man can generally account for himself. We must not get so far from our base that we cannot touch it, when anybody gets after us. Men with tangled records who have been tried for something, who are divorced or who wish to be, or who have untransportable families, or whose reputation consists in a bundle of mouldy certificates, who are shy of other preachers and afraid of newspapers, who supplement their ministry with magic lanterns or photographic machines, (or quack medicine), or who seem to come from nowhere and are ready to resent all questions, as insults, such men we say may be excellent subjects to feed when they are hungry or clothe when they are inadequately costumed or to lend money to with no wish of getting it again, but they are not safe material for making pastors of. This notice is free and published for the benefit of wayfaring churches, which, though Solomonic in wisdom, now and then go to pieces along this line."

Ten Truthful Thoughts

BY MARY AINGE DE VERE

When we feel the narrowness of these lives of ours, each in his own small circle, we are consoled by knowing that every star must move within its limits, though space be around it.

The rich are only enviable in one attribute—their power to help the poor.

It is only in looking on death that we comprehend immortality, and only utter weariness gives promise of perfect rest.

The friend who becomes a lover continues still to be a friend; but the lover who becomes a friend ceases forever to be a lover.

When it is said of a man that he treats men and women just alike, you mak be sure he treats them all as if they were men.

Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof; but sufficient unto a lifetime is often the evil of a single day.

Children are taught more than they ever learn, and learn more than they are ever taught.

Our bodies live in houses, because our souls live in bodies.

Wisdom, like many other human attributes, is only for the time. We are wise today, that to-morrow we may look back and say, "How foolish we were."

The desire to teach is stronger than the desire to learn. We only study that we may be enabled to impart again.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Plea from the Chinkiang Mission, China.

THE CHINKIANG MISSION TO THE FOREIGN MISSION BOARD—GREETINGS:

Dear Brethren:—While we feel truly grateful for the reinforcements which you have recently sent to our Mission, and while we know that many urgent appeals come to you from every Mission field, we also think that if you could know the needs of the great field around us as we see them, you would make one more effort to send us more missionaries.

We believe, too, that when the Lord's people of our Southern Baptist Convention read this appeal, they will furnish the men, women and money to enable you to grant our (reasonable) request.

We do not ask you to supply our needs, but only to send us the help which we must have in order to hold our own in carrying on the work already begun.

Our work demands at once two more men (married or single, one a physician, if possible,) and two single ladies.

We are always glad to have married missionaries, because we then get two instead of one, but it is a mistake to think that every man ought to be married. We need some single men without home responsibilities to do traveling evangelistic work. Married men can do a great deal of this kind of work and have done it, but it can be done much better by single men.

The Chinkiang station needs another single lady, and a man to take Bro. Chappell's place when he moves to Yangchow.

Yangchow needs another single lady and a physician. The missionaries would be in a sad plight in case any one of them had a serious spell of illness in Yangchow. To go to Chinkiang to the physician would involve enormous expense and great loss of time. Medical work, too, among the Chinese in Yangchow would be of incalculable benefit to our work.

It is very discouraging to open new stations and then to have to give them up. Every missionary should have just as distinct a field of labor as a pastor at home; and when, for any reason, he has to give up his field, his work ought to be taken up by another. We may sow a field and work it until almost harvest time, and then have to give it up and let another denomination step in and reap the harvest, or, which is worse, let the work go down and lose the result of all that has already been done.

A missionary ought to study at least a year before taking up the work of an older missionary.

Brother and Sister Bryan have the consent of the Board to return home in the spring of 1893, and sooner for Sister Bryan and the children if necessary, and she may be compelled to go this year. If their place is taken in Yangchow by Brother and Sister Chappell, there will be a vacancy in Chinkiang, and some of the work will have to be given up, unless a man is sent out at once to prepare for this vacancy.

It is sad to have to plead for simply missionaries enough to hold our own when our hearts ache with desire to go forward.

By all means, give us as soon as possible the number for which we ask to enable us to hold our own and make a little advance. Other missions around us are advancing, and we wish to go forward, too. The glory and honor of our king demand it. The salvation of perishing millions pleads for it.

Sending the missionaries for whom we ask would not involve a large increased expense for homes.

Mrs. Davault in Chinkiang has room for one single lady. There will be a vacant house in Chinkiang when Brother and Sister Chappell go to Yangchow. The reinforcements, then, for Chinkiang would require no increased expense whatever, for the present at least. We rented and repaired homes in Yangchow for four new missionaries, and only two came. We can easily accommodate a man, or man and wife, and a single lady in Yangchow, without paying anything more for rent. Several hundred dollars would be required for repairs.

You see, then, that we are only asking for the missionaries for whom there is a vacancy in the work, and for whom only a few hundred dollars would be required to prepare homes. Send us the missionaries and we will ask for only a small amount of money for homes.

God is blessing us in our work. Many people come to our services and listen attentively. We are very much encouraged in our work. In January many prayers went up to God for China. It is a good thing to pray, but a better thing to help answer our own prayers. Will not the Board ask those who have prayed for China, to help answer their own prayers, by going themselves if God permits, or helping others whom God may call?

"The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few." "Come over into Macedonia and help us."

Letter from Rev. G. W. Greene, Canton, China.

MISSION WORK IN SOUTH CHINA.

I have already written, I think, something about the missionary forces in this part of China, mentioning somewhat in detail the Baptist missionaries. At present, these last all reside in Canton, making frequent tours into the surrounding country. If there were a physician to go along, one or more of the families would soon move to some place in the country. The Presbyterians have a hospital here, and three regular physicians, and these are very kind to serve any of the missionaries who may need them. But it seems too great a risk to take a family of children two or three hundred miles from a physician. The brethren and the unmarried ladies go out and remain several weeks and do most effective work.

When we speak of the country, let no one think of a sparsely settled country like North Carolina. Canton, a city with more than half as many people as in all North Carolina, is the center of a very populous district. We speak of the country as distinguished from the city of Canton. Sometimes mention is made of the villages in this district, but some of them have more people than any city in North Carolina. Just twelve west miles of Canton is Fat Shan, said to have a population of half a million of people, and the Baptists have not been able to do any work there at all.

It has been the policy of this mission to employ native laborers, who gave evidence of call to the ministry, to preach both in Canton and in the villages around. These work under the careful supervision of the missionaries. One of these has long been the pastor of the church here in Canton and is supported by the church. He seems to be a good preacher and an earnest, faithful pastor. One gives several hours a day to teaching the younger missionaries the language, preaches in the city every other day, and frequently preaches on Sunday. Another was converted in New England, spent some time in Moody's school at Northfield, and was then sent by the church of which he is a member, and at their expense, to study awhile with Dr. Graves, and then to labor in connection with this mission. He has now spent three years in study, meanwhile superintending one of the Sunday-schools in the city, and frequently preaching on Sunday. This year he will go either to Hong Kong or to the district in which he was raised, being still supported by the New England church. On the same steamer with us, there came over a young man, at the expense of Bro. Frank Dixon's church in Oakland, Cal., to study with Dr. Graves, preparatory to the ministry, either here or in California. During the past year, there was one other who preached regularly in Canton, besides superintending the main Sunday school and being clerk of the church. He is the son of the leading deacon of the church, and was raised in a christian family. This year he will probably go to some country station.

Last Sunday, I heard a sermon from a young doctor, who practices medicine for a living and does not count himself a preacher, but frequently preaches excellent sermons. Some time ago he had the government appointment to vaccinate all who needed it, which gave him quite a good salary for a Chinaman; but as the position required him to work on Sunday, he gave it up.

Another very efficient worker at one of the country stations was converted in Brooklyn and is supported by one of the churches in that city. These are some of the native workers whom I have met or heard of. Besides these there are several others who give all their time to preaching at various country places. The work at these stations is divided among the brethren of the mission, and they make frequent visits to the stations to see how the work goes on, to counsel with the preachers and to instruct the converts. In this way these missionaries have been able to occupy nearly a dozen stations, and the work is very hopeful at them all. At most of these stations there are chapels erected by the native christians with occasional help from private contributions by the missionaries. Not long ago Brother McClay, in writing to friends in Scotland, mentioned as a matter of news a liberal collection by one of these churches for a chapel, and by next mail came more than enough to duplicate this collection. Last year there were baptized at the various stations of this mission 116 converts, most of them at the out stations.

North of this district, whose people speak the Cantonese dialect, are people who speak a dialect close akin to this, but so different as not to be understood by those who know Cantonese. This dialect is called Hakka. Some of the people speaking this dialect have in some way received a knowledge of the gospel, and occasional efforts have been made to reach them. Several of the Hakkas have been baptized, and there seems less opposition to the gospel among them than among the Cantonese. One of the native preachers speaks Hakka, as well as Cantonese, and it is proposed for him to labor among them this year. Besides the preachers, there are three or four colporters who take christian books and travel through the country to sell them. These men make a large part of their salary by the sale of books, and circulate much gospel truth.

By means of these native helpers, the work of the mission is doubled, and with a very small increase of expense. A Chinaman can live on much less than a foreigner. A few cents' worth of rice and a cup of tea without sugar or milk will often constitute his whole bill of fare. Of course, these native workers will need for many years to come the supervision and direction of missionaries. Occasional efforts to carry on work without such supervision have shown its necessity; but thus directed by the missionaries, they seem to be doing valuable work.

Ordination.

A presbytery consisting of Elders Thomas Carrick, S. F. Redwine and J. D. Newton, met at Fork church, Davie county, N. C., on Saturday, Feb. 13, 1892, for the purpose of examining Bro. J. B. Newton with the view of setting him apart to the full work of the gospel ministry.

After hearing Bro. Newton's experiences of conversion and call to the ministry, and a thorough examination as to his views of Bible doctrines having been passed satisfactorily, the presbytery decided to proceed with the ordination on Sunday morning at eleven o'clock.

A large crowd of interested people came together at the appointed hour. Elder Thomas Carrick preached the sermon from Acts 8:35: "Then Philip opened his mouth and began at the same scripture and preached unto him Jesus."

Prayer and presentation of the Bible were rendered by Elder J. F. Redwine. The charge was delivered by Elder J. D. Newton, and the charge to the church by Elder Thomas Carrick. The hand of welcome was extended by the presbytery, and the benediction was pronounced by Bro. J. B. Newton.

May the blessings of heaven attend the new pastor at Fork church and his family, and wherever he may be called upon to labor, the Lord grant him abundant success and many seals to his ministry.

THOMAS CARRICK, Chairman.
J. D. NEWTON, Secretary.

While in the military academy Stonewall Jackson compiled for his own use a set of rules and maxims, relating to morals, manners, dress, choice of friends and aims in life. Perhaps the most characteristic of these was: "You may be whatever you resolve to be." Another was: "Through life let your principal object be the discharge of duty. Disregard public opinion when it interferes with duty."

Have you a Pittsburgh, Rochester, Duplex, or a Student Lamp?

Do they work satisfactorily?

Do your Lamp Chimneys break? You get the wrong sort!

The RIGHT ones are the "PEARL GLASS," made by Geo. A. Macbeth & Co., Pittsburgh, makers of the celebrated "Pearl-top" lamp chimney, which have given universal satisfaction.

If Darwin's theory is to be accepted, then the fact that I am the sole survivor in the trade of those who began with me the same line of business, gives significance to the fact that my sales of seed to market gardeners, well known to be the most critical of all buyers, has increased year by year until it has now reached vast proportions. That I raise many varieties on my five seed farms, make 1700 tests annually for vitality, and test novelties, that no one may be imposed on, will explain much to the thoughtful buyer. What the Home Board Needs Now.

The draft upon the Home Mission Board is greater this year than ever. We entered the conventional year with a debt of $7,500. We have carried forward our work this year under this burden. We have also paid twenty one thousand dollars on the house of worship, in Havana, but to do this we had to anticipate the pledges of some of our brethren and borrow $6,000. These pledges will no doubt be redeemed so as to enable us to repay this loan.

But brethren will at once see that to pay our missionaries for the current year, and the debt of $7,500 coming over from last year, will require an addition of $15,000 to this year's receipts over and above the amount paid on the house of worship in Havana. This increased obligation comes in the hardest financial year known in our history and will require to meet it greater courage and self-denial on the part of our brethren. But we believe they will be equal to the emergency.

While we would be glad to see those who have been liberally supporting the board increase their contributions, we suggest, where they feel unable to do so, that they would help in another way. In most of our churches contributions are made by comparatively few of their members. Now let those who have given liberally heretofore use their personal influence to induce others to unite with them in their contributions to missions. In this way, if our brethren and sisters will do it, all the needs of our boards can be met. Let there be a canvass of the entire church gathering the dimes and nickles from those who are not able to give larger sums.

The increase in some churches may be but a few dollars, but even such small offerings from so many of our churches as can and ought to do it, would be very helpful. Will not our pastors and leading brethren and sisters see that this is done? If but three thousand churches out of the sixteen thousand will adopt and vigorously prosecute this method, we are sure the Board will receive an amount equal to its necessities.

Dear brethren, this is so simple and so easy, will you not do it? And are there not a few brethren or sisters who are in this crisis will come to our help with large contributions?

DIED.

McINTOSH—After suffering intensely for six months, Bro. Daniel McIntosh, on January 29th, 1892, answered God's summons, "It is enough, come hither." So great was his christian fortitude, patience and resignation during his illness that we were often constrained to say there is a power in the religion he professes. A wife, four children, and a host of friends mourn his loss. W. M. G.

UPCHURCH—Sister Nancy, wife of G. A. Upchurch, Green Level, Wake county, N. C., went to rest on February 19th, in her eightieth year. In early life she gave her heart to God and for many years has been a member of the Baptist church, faithful and consistent to all its demands. She leaves a husband and several children to mourn her loss.

G. W. BLANCHARD.

COLE—Mary Cole, wife of Bro. H. C. Cole, Moore county, N. C., died Dec. 31st, 1891, aged forty-six years, seven months and eighteen days.

Sister Cole lived a consistent member of Friendship Baptist church for about twenty-nine years. She was a good neighbor, a tender and affectionate wife, a kind and loving mother; and leaves her husband and seven sons, the youngest under five, to mourn her death. We feel that their loss is her eternal gain. Rev. 21: 4. PASTOR.

LAWHON—We were made to feel sad when the intelligence reached us that on the morning of Feb. 18th, 1892, Bro. Leonard W. Lawhon passed from this world to the saints everlasting reward. Had he lived until the twenty-ninth of March he would have been eighty-nine years old. He was baptized about the year 1828, being among the first baptized by Elder Noah Richardson.

A large portion of his christian life he was deacon and clerk of Bethlehem church, of which he died a member. As he patiently waited for the hour of his dissolution he would often exclaim, "Lord, hasten the day;" and as his friends would gather around his bedside he would urge them to meet him in heaven.

While in health (being a fine workman) he made with his own hands the coffin and case in which he wished to be buried, and purchased his own tombstone, with proper engravings, save the date of his death.

He leaves five children, among whom is our highly esteemed brother, Rev. W. H. H. Lawhon, and a host of friends and relatives, to mourn their loss. The funeral was preached by the writer to a large and a weeping congregation at Bethlehem church, where his body rests to await the resurrection morn.

W. G. KING.

GRISSETTE—Died, on January 11th, 1892, Mrs. Ann George Grissette, and on the 30th of the same month, Mr. Reuben George Wooten Grissette, aged respectively seventy-six and seventy-seven years, at the residence of their son-in-law, B. L. Beaty, at Buckaville, S. C.

During the fifty-seven years of their married life they reared a large family of their own, besides the orphaned children of several other families. God in his mercy permitted them to live beyond the alotted years of man, and to see nearly all of these happily settled, and many of them surrounded by happy families of their own; and with few exceptions following their worthy example of consistent and God-fearing life.

For several years previous to her death, Mrs. Grissette was a great sufferer, but bore it all with christian fortitude and patience, being resigned to God's will, and ready whenever he should call to come up higher.

Mr. Grissette lingered nineteen days after his wife's departure, frequently calling for her whose life united to his had for so many years been as one, yet too ill to realize that she had preceded him to that happy home where there is no more parting, until his spirit being ready to depart together with hers, they winged their happy flight to the paradise of God. Lovingly for many years they walked on earth, and having well finished their work which their Maker allotted them here, together he has taken them to him, where their united voices are joined in never-ending anthems of praise to their Redeemer and King.

"All she lacks of beauty is a little plumpness."

This is a frequent thought, and a wholesome one.

All of a baby's beauty is due to fat, and nearly all of a woman's—we know it as curves and dimples.

What plumpness has to do with health is told in a little book on CAREFUL LIVING; sent free.

Would you rather be healthy or beautiful? "Both" is the proper answer.

A SHORT HISTORY

OF THE

BAPTISTS,

BY

Henry C. Vedder.

12mo, 245 pages. Price, $1.00.

Mr. Vedder has taken great care to have it accurate on points with respect to which there is difference of opinion.

The book will have a large circulation among our young people. To make it more useful to them, copious tables of contents have been prepared, which can be used as questions in classroom work, and a full and complete index.

Prof. Benjamin O. True, Prof. of Church History, Rochester Theological Seminary, writes:

"Mr. Vedder's 'Short History of the Baptists' is history, not assumption or romance. Its brevity is the result of the author's fixed purpose to write a book neither too large nor too expensive for general use. It is by far the best manual of Baptist History extant."

Prof. J. B. Thomas, Professor of Church History, Newton Theological Institution, says:

"'A Short History of the Baptists' is a valuable accession to our denominational literature, being judiciously concise, while perfectly lucid and fairly comprehensive. It will prove attractive and instructive to the young people."

The Home Circle.

Obscure Martyrs.

They have no place in storied page,
No rest in marble shrine;
They are passed and gone with a perished age—
They died and made no sign.
But work shall find its wages yet,
And deeds that their God did not forget,
Done for their love divine—
These were the mourners, and these shall be
The crowns of their immortality.

Oh, seek them not where sleeps the dead—
Ye shall not find their trace;
No graven stone is at their head,
No green grass hides their face,
But sad and unseen is their silent grave—
It may be the sand or deep sea wave,
Or lonely desert place;
For they needed no prayers and no mourning bell,
They were tombed in true hearts that knew them well.

They healed sick hearts till theirs were broken;
And dried sad eyes till theirs lost light
We shall know at last by a certain token
How they fought and fell in the fight.
Salt tears of sorrow unbeheld,
Passionate cries unchronicled,
And silent strifes for the right—
Angels shall court them and earth shall sigh
That she left her best children to battle and die.

How to Rest.

SOME GOOD SUGGESTIONS AS TO NEEDED RECREATION.

In addition to the night's sleep, it is a good plan to take a short nap in the middle of the day. It divides the working time, gives the nervous system a fresh hold on life, and enables one to more than make up for the time so occupied. It is well to guard against too long a sleep at such a time, since that is apt to produce disagreeable relaxation. There has been much discussion regarding the after dinner nap. Many believe it to be injurious; but it is, nevertheless, natural and wholesome

Much can be accomplished in the way of resting, otherwise than in sleep. It is very important to economize the opportunities for rest during working hours in the day. The great principle that underlies daily rest is relieving one part of the organization from duty while the others are at work. This can be done to a great extent.

When the muscles are tried and worn from mechanical work that requires but little attention of the brain, stop motion and set the brain at work. The laborer can read, think and speak while his limbs are at rest. His brain need not be idle because the hammer or chisel has droped from his weary hand. On the other hand, a man can work with his hands when his head is tired. The book-keeper, whose head is weary with business facts and figures by five o'clock in the afternoon, has considerable time in the evening to sing, play, dig in the garden or black his boots, all or either of which he may do while his head is partly at rest.

There is another very important way of obtaining rest mentally; that is, by changing from one occupation to another. The dexterious gold-beater, when he finds one arm getting tired, takes the hammer in the other; and so may the man that hammers thoughts out of his brain exercise one set of mental functions while the others are at rest. One may read until tired, and then write; may acquire knowledge until weary, and then teach to others.—Medical Age.

Don't Judge a Man's Life by its Exceptions

It is not just to judge a man's life by its exceptions. A single brick, if it be an exceptional brick, is not "a fair test of the whole structure." This is true whether the brick is far above or far below the average. Because a man has once in his life sunk down below his true character, if he has risen again never more to sink it is not fair to sneeringly single out that blemish as a specimen of his manhood; and because a man has risen once in his life to extraordinary lofty achievements, if he has fallen back to his own level never more to rise it is not fair to refer with pride to that achievement as a specimen of his strength. While it is true that a man is no stronger than his weakest point, when that point is involved in the testing, yet that weakest point may be now entirely eliminated from his character, leaving behind nothing but the ugly surface blemish on his record; and while it is true that what we have done once we can generally do again, yet if, as a matter of fact, we have never succeeded in doing it again, it is not fair to credit ourselves with a present ability which does not in reality appear to exist To ferret out past mistakes and fasten them on another's character as its label, or to herald an isolated past achievement as a sample of our present power, is to reverse the first principle of truth, and make the exception the rule. How much harm and injustice are done by such unsound judgment! To be fair, and to make legitimate deductions, one must judge a character, a principle, a tendency, at its normal best, not from the highly forced single success—still less from its poorest illustrations.—Sunday school Times.

Cease your coughing and enjoy refreshing slumber, which Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will insure you.

"Are you going to the races?" "Yes, and bet on the winning horse." "Not the handsome Abdullah, he is lame. Didn't you know?" "I'll whisper in your ear, he'll win. They're using Salvation Oil."

The great battlefields of the world are in the hearts of men. The great struggles are within. A soul once committed to God and truth finds in its fierce fights a field of battle where grand victories may be won and crowns be found.—H. W. Thomas.

About Hoarding.

THE FOLLY OF STORING AWAY USELESS ARTICLES.

"Economy and hoarding are two widely different things, although the one is too often mistaken for the other. The true law of life is to receive, to use, to pass on." Thus says a helpful article. It is wisdom to make provision for the future. For the improvident and shiftless I have small respect. It is not of this I speak, but of what is useless to its possessor that might do another good service.

Do not fill garret and closet with cast-off clothing, broken furniture, old books, etc. This is waste, and adds the burden of caring for worthless things. Give your poor neighbor your gowns and wraps that are out of style in fabric and fashion. When the day of making over comes, if it ever arrives, ten to one the new material and cost of work will lead you to decide upon new, and the old, growing older, is still on hand. Pass on your old garments; there is a world of good for some one in them. The home missionary barrel would rejoice should you decide to swell its contents. Do not hoard even old trumpery. If you allow your house to be cumbered, moth, and rust will corrupt.

It is a law of nature that nothing be lost. Everything gravitates to purpose and use. Follow this law and send old books magazines and papers to those who have no money to buy them. They will be a godsend to many hungrying and thirsting for this very sort of mind-food, and you will be enshrined in their memory, especially if the packages you send are labled "pass on." You will understand the compound interest that accrues.

If there is positively no other use for old, broken-down furniture, let it be split for kindling. It is better so than to fill up, and gather dust, and be consigned to the wood-pile at last.

How can a family live without a store-room for useful, needed articles? What folly to fill it with useless trumpery! Let everything that can serve for convenience to others be passed on, otherwise clear out and clear off. If true that the maximum of good housekeeping is the minimum of old trumpery, our housekeepers will rouse to the subject. Remember there is that that scattereth, yet increaseth.—L. Eugenie Eldridge, in Good Housekeeping.

How an Ocean Cable is Made.

Let us first see what a submarine cable is, and how it is made. To do this a visit must be made to the enormous factory on the banks of the Thames, a few miles below London. Here the birth of the cable may be traced through shop after shop, machine after machine. The foundation of all is the conductor, a strand of seven fine copper wires. This slender copper cord is first hauled through a mass of sticky, black compound, which causes the thin coating of gutta-percha applied by the next machine to adhere to it perfectly, and prevents the retention of any bubbles of air in the interstices between the strands, or between the conductor and the gutta-percha envelope. One envelope is not sufficient, however, but the full thickness of insulating material has to be attained by four more alternate coatings of sticky compound and plastic gutta percha. The conductor is now insulated, and has developed into "core." Before going any further the core is coiled into tanks filled with water, and tested in order to ascertain whether it is electrically perfect, i. e., that there is no undue leakage of electricity through the gutta percha insulating envelope.

These tests are made from the testing-room, replete with beautiful and elaborate apparatus, by which measurements finer and more accurate than those even of the most delicate chemical balance may be made. Every foot of core is tested with these instruments, both before and after being made up into cable, and careful records are preserved of the results.

After the core has been tested and passed, the manufacture of the cable goes on. The core travels through another set of machines, which first wrap it with a thick serving of tarred jute, and then with a compact armoring of iron or steel wires, of varying thickness according to the depth of water in which the cable is intended to be laid. Above the armoring in order to preserve the iron from rust as long as possible, is applied a covering of stout canvas tape thoroughly impregnated with a pitch-like compound, and sometimes the iron wires composing the armor are separately covered with Russian hemp as an additional preservative against corrosion.—H. L. Webb in Scribner.

The Way to Get Money.

The man that wants more money will find no royal road to the wealth he covets, no patent method for its acquisition. He must give something for it to make it honestly his own, and the man who sets himself earnestly to do this will find that all financial systems will bend to his conquering will. The gambler, whether he plays his game in the exchange, at a faro table, in a policy shop, or with smaller stakes in private circles at baccarat and progressive euchre, will find the issue precarious and unrewarding. The way to get more money without any loss of peace or self-respect is to earn it by toil of brain or sinew, and the funds thus acquired have no gnawing teeth. All other wealth eats like a canker.—David M. Stone in the Forum.

Sketches of Pioneer Baptist Preachers in North Carolina.

BY JOHN W. MOORE, STATE HISTORIAN.

Memoir VI—Rev. Martin Ross.

CHAPTER THREE.

The soul of Rev. Martin Ross must have been overflowed with thankfulness as he witnessed the growing usefulness and zeal of the new Chowan Association. This christian organization, which at once became the pride and hope of the whole denomination in North Carolina, exhibited so many signs of sympathy and support of the plans Mr. Ross was formulating for greater unity in the Lord's work, that like one of old, he "thanked God and took courage." But in the mysteries of providential ruling in the affairs of this world, a great loss and sorrow was close at hand. Just as the full blessedness of the work he and Burkitt had accomplished was made plain to the meanest capacities, the great preacher, who had done so much to aid him in his plans, sickened and died. It was like David, heart-broken over the fatal tidings from Gilboa, when Martin Ross fully comprehended that his chief brother in the Lord and hearty coworker in all good things was sure enough dead and at the end of all his many labors. It was indeed a cruel and inexplicable loss to the surviving partner in the Lord's work. He was hardly weak enough to do, as so many others in similar circumstances have done, in his sorrow and confusion suffer doubts and resentment to overcloud the clearness of his trust and faith in the goodness of God. Such men are only staggered in their perception of the wasted plans and hopes crushed in such calamities. As they realize how well even the greatest of men can be spared from the teeming millions of earth, the old faith and confidence replace the shadows of doubt and sorrow, and the future plans are rearranged.

It was so with Mr. Ross. God had taken his chief helper and friend, but a multitude of less effective and loving assistants were left to do what they could to supply the loss. His brother, Rev. Reuben Ross, had also grown into fame and usefulness as a preacher. He was to become a great light unto the regions north of Nashville, Tenn., and in the southern parts of middle Kentucky. He, too, turned from the extreme Calvinistic features of the Skewarkey creed and was heard proclaiming the same great doctrines of love and hope for the human race that illustrated the discourses of his elder brother. The old homestead in the Islands had been forsaken years before by John and William Ross and they were living also in the great West. Another brother, Rev. James Ross, went over into Bertie and planted the church which still bears his name. The old life of alternate labors on the farm and then of exciting weeks, as the young men captured the year's supplies of shad and herring from their nets in Roanoke river, still went on as when Martin was a boy and no great wars had called him to the tented field. The village of Williamston with its single straggling street and the Skewarkey church were both as sleepy and lifeless as ever; but Martin Ross was in the thick of a battle that excited his soul and mind as much as did the thunder of the guns at Yorktown and Eutaw Springs.

With a mind that delighted in system and organization, he was stretching all of his great powers, mental and physical, to the task of triumphing over the inertness and often mistaken conservatism of Baptist brethren all over the State. He saw what a power for good was already created in the Chowan Association; what limits could be set to a similar body embracing the organized Baptist hosts of the entire State! His dreams were not confined to a simple embodiment of the churches for promotion of missions. He longed for more light to the preachers and the people. No man better appreciated the blessings of education. He knew that ignorance had been the handmaid of superstition in all ages of the world's history. Though Wake Forest College was to be for many years still a thing of the future and no positive efforts were made for its establishment, still in the labors of the Rev. Luther Rice in building up Columbian College at Washington City, Mr. Ross saw the beginning of the end for which he prayed.

As the years went by and tidings came of the wonders Adoniram Judson was bringing about with God's help in Burmah, the earliest of his North Carolina supporters felt his soul lifted up with joy and thankfulness. When in 1803 he had dared to set this ball in motion, he was almost alone in his faith in such things; now great societies of many differing creeds, in widely-scattered nationalities, were contending in noble emulation as to which should do most for the salvation of the dusky races. Even the cold worldliness of the rulers of the British East India Company was relaxing under the blessed results they saw effected by Dr. Carey and his successors in that field of labor. Instead of jealous and hostile criticism from the reviews and newspapers, the press was true to its great work of education and enlightenment, and thus warm words of commendation were seen replacing the late diatribes of such men as the Rev. Sidney Smith. The home governments were no less changed. They were no longer alarmed at and opposed to the whole system; they ceased to leave the missionaries to the tender mercies of any native king or other petty ruler who should see fit to murder or imprison the daring men who came on their way in despite of his threats. The missionaries, on the contrary, were recognized as entitled to all the protection their citizenship might indicate, and the native rulers soon learned that these strange visitors were not to be harmed without a due penalty for such an outrage.

We have in this memoir dwelt more on Mr. Ross's labors and triumphs as an organizer and reformer in ecclesiastical relations than on his extraordinary gifts and graces as an evangelist. Like his lost compeer, Mr. Burkitt, he was so eminent in both respects, that it is hard to say in which particular department of usefulness he was greater or more successful. As a preacher, he was unmatched in all those thronging years of marvelous growth and advancement generally, which marked the first two decades in the history of the Chowan Association. In his comprehensive and exhaustive treatment of religious topics in the pulpit, there was something to be heard that reached the consciences of all his audience. Pride, prejudice and frivolity were arrested and so held up to the introspection of men and women concerned, that the last subterfuge and evasion were swept from their possession, and like Adam and Eve after their sin in Paradise, such sinners became fully aware of their shame and peril. He was the first Baptist preacher in our State to make heavy inroads upon the Episcopal and wealthy classes. Pride and social exclusiveness had almost barred access of Baptist truth to such hearts until attracted by the outcry of Martin Ross; these people ventured out to be amused, and in many cases went home happily converted to God, and for the rest of their lives became humble and useful members of Baptist churches. Such people were by no means rare in the beautiful peninsulas that lie north of Albemarle sound. The Harveys, Swanns, Porters, Skinners, Bakers, Blounts and others were rich enough to educate their sons at the great English universities and to deck their daughters in all the finery of the period. It was among such families that men like Mr. Thomas Brownrigg were won as jewels to shine in the Baptist coronet.

It was in this way that Mr. Ross planted that noble church in Perquimans county since known and honored as Bethel. He had been serving Yeopim as pastor up to this year of our Lord 1806, but from this time until his death twenty-one years later, the new congregation was added to his responsibilities. Ballard's Bridge was never directly under his pastoral care, but still enjoyed the benefit of his frequent visits. He was indeed in virtue of his superior age and talents a real Baptist bishop, largely directing and controling their religious affairs in all the ancient domain known as Albemarle. It was like the loving oversight exercised by the Apostle to the Gentiles, who, in virtue of his part in the salvation of his people, claimed the privilege of advice and admonition in the Lord's work. To no council, consistory, synod or conference did he or Martin Ross look for his credentials in such relations. They both recognized and enforced the independence of the separate churches, while still claiming, as their fathers, in God the right to condemn all such sin and disorder as was found among the men and women of the churches at Corinth and Galatia.

The Rev. Martin Ross was given a lease of life just twenty years longer than had fallen to the lot of his compeer, Rev. Lemuel Burkitt. They were born about the same time and had so largely shared in the same plans and aspirations for their people, that their brotherhood in the Lord became a very close bond of union between these born leaders of men. As the new churches crowded in upon the Chowan Association, and that great body year by year became more permanent in its influence in North Carolina, the only grief left in Mr. Ross's soul was the inefficiency of the body known as the General Committee of Correspondence. This consisted of delegates sent up each year, who generally met in Raleigh and transacted the small business affairs entrusted to their control. It was an abortive attempt by men doing the best that could be attained on of the obstinate aversion to change, that as a rule marked all Baptist movements of that and earlier days. He saw how far short this make-shift fell of what he had desired in his soul and was saddened at the failure. But this did not so becloud his judgment that despair of the future was his. He was laboring and hoping for years for the establishment of such a body as was seen in the town of Greenville for the first time in 1830. He was not spared to this world long enough to see and be happy in that great event, for he died in the year of our Lord 1827.

If he missed this realization of so many bright hopes in the past, Martin Ross was at least spared the grief and shame that filled the hearts of so many good people that year over the sad course pursued by the Kehukee Association. Since the formation of the Chowan Association and the death of Lemuel Burkitt, the Rev. Joshua Lawrence had been growing more and more powerful in his influence over these people. He saw and encouraged all the worst features of their fatalism and aversion to everything not sanctified by prescriptive Baptist usage. Instead of laboring to soften the asperities and gloom of such men and women, Joshua Lawrence added the venom of hatred and distrust of all others who dared in any way to differ from him and the people he thus misled. Under his influence the older ties of love and fraternity were all cast to the wind, and insults and open hostility were assumed as the proper treatment of those who had so lately also been members of the Kehukee Association. The most malignant and unfounded aspersions were spread broadcast over the country as to the creed and practices of the regular Baptists, while this ill-natured, little rump set themselves up as the only visible saints of the Lord then left in the world. Martin Ross or Lemuel Burkitt, had they been alive and visited again the Association, both of whom had rendered such great services to her in the past, would have received no more recognition than a horse-thief or a stray Jesuit. Mr. Joshua Lawrence completely succeeded in adding hatred and bad manners to the previous faults of his people, and must have enjoyed the charms of the Chinese wall thus erected against all outside influences. But Martin Ross was beyond the malice and machinations of all such spirits. After long and sore battle the veteran spent in the stress of such a conflict, at last rested from every ill and toil. He had not only been faithful in his day, he had risen so far superior to its general level that he entitled himself to a place in that short catalogue of men who have made whole communities wiser and better. "Surely the end of such a man is peace." But alas! "the strong staff and the beautiful rod were broken." The beauty and strength of Israel had fallen in her high places. The great preacher was in his grave and had not left his like in all our borders.

Ordination of Deacons.

THE MANNERS AND CUSTOMS OF OUR BAPTIST FOREFATHERS.

[CONCLUDED FROM LAST WEEK]

In their opposition to forms and ceremonies some of our churches have done away with nearly all apostolic forms except the apostolic form of baptism, and they hold to that with a death-like tenacity. There may be a return to some of these discarded customs in our churches some day. In fact there is in many of our large city churches a very manifest disposition now to return to the primitive customs with respect to some forms of worship. And while many of our brethren who are rigid in their notions protest against these things, I am inclined to believe that the city churches are right, and that our denomination will be the gainer by a return to these old apostolic customs, which some people speak of as "innovations" upon Baptist simplicity. They are not innovations at all. Neither do they squint toward Romanism, for they were in existence before the Roman Catholic church, as it exists to-day, was ever dreamed of. They existed in the age of the apostles and long before the age of the apostles, and for years after the age of the apostles, and for this reason, we say, they existed before the Roman Catholic church had been dreamed of. If Baptists should talk of setting up a private confessional, granting priestly absolution, and require people to do penance and things of that nature, then it might truthfully be charged that they were aping Rome, but not otherwise can such a charge be brought by intelligent students of history. If we improve the solemnity and dignity of our service and worship by following New Testament or apostolic examples as we do in the matter of baptism, we shall gain immensely in our church service and the effect will not only be pleasing but spiritually helpful as well. But let us be careful not to divert the minds of the people or the minds of the deacons themselves from the work they do by attaching too much importance to the forms to be observed. There is no command in God's word to us to ordain anybody by laying on of hands, and our people generally feel at liberty to do as they please with reference to that matter. But the poor of the church we must look after. I fear the sick, the poor and the unfortunate of our churches in this age are too much neglected by church deacons. Why magnify other things connected with the diaconate to the neglect of the principle thing which called the office into existence! Is it either wise or lawful so to do! No it is not. I want to emphasize the fact that it is the duty of the deacons of the church to care for the poor, and visit the sick and others of the church whose needs require christian sympathy—and church help. There will, with seven deacons, be no reason why any member of the church should be sick or in any trouble without receiving a visit from some one of the officers of the church. This is a much needed work, and if it is faithfully attended to, it will increase the moral power of the church and help to keep alive in the breast of all a tender love for the church and all its institutions.

It is an humble work, and may not always be congenial to the tastes of deacons, but they are to live lives consecrated to God and his people, therefore, they must not delay, but make haste to comfort such as are in any need. It has been the glory of the religion of God in all ages that it cares for the poor and needy, the sick and sorrowing. And it remains with the deacons of the church more than with other members to see that this glory of our holy religion does not depart. All christians are to be sympathetic, kind and charitable, but it becomes the double duty of deacons to perform for the people of God this Christ-like service. By doing it well, deacons will purchase "a good degree," that is, a good standing, and "great boldness in the faith which is in Jesus Christ."

But this is not the only work of the deacons, though it is the one which gave rise to the office, and which gave the office its name. The word deacon means "servant of tables," and has reference to their work of caring for the poor. But it is not the whole of their work. When you study the circumstances which gave rise to the first appointment of deacons you see that they were to be peacemakers in the church.

There were murmurings heard among the disciples, the harmony of the church was broken, and the complainers were loud and vociferous. They complained that their widows were neglected. And when the apostles saw this condition of things they asked the church to select out seven men whom they might appoint over this business. This then is to be a part of the work of church deacons. They are to constitute a bond of union between pastor and people, and deal with the complaints and complainers in the church and preserve the harmony of the church.

"Blessed are the men of peaceful life
Who quench the fires of growing strife."

Christ said, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."

With this view of the work of deacons it is easy to see that they need to be "men full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom." For if they are not, they will in all such cases make bad matters worse. Then because they are to bear the vessels of the Lord assisting the pastor at the Lord's table, passing the bread and wine on the communion occasions to the people, and so moving before the congregation and community as representative christian men, they need to be model men in respect to moral and christian deportment. Therefore must the deacons be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre—that is not what is known as "lovers of money," avaricious or covetous men. Then they should be men who know the word of God and can instruct the people when occasion requires in the teachings of the Scripture, "holding the ministry of the faith in a pure conscience." Thus you see that the work of deacons is manifold, and it is a responsible position which they hold. It is a position of great honor, and one in which they may have great opportunities to serve the Lord Jesus Christ. I believe when the ministers of Christ receive their heavenly rewards the deacons who held up their hands will share their blessedness.

I have found in churches a feeling against the deacons among some of the people because these members foolishly held the deacons responsible for the discipline exercised by the church. But this is due largely to ignorance. It is the duty of the deacons to make reports from time to time to the church of the conduct of such of the members as do not live Godly lives, and of the conduct of such as depart from the faith of the church, but in all such cases the church itself must decide on the matter of discipline. Deacons do not discipline any one. They have no such authority. They are not in any sense to be looked upon as a governing body. They have no power or authority over the church or the pastor in any respect at all whatever. Their chief and only business is to care for the poor, the Lord's table, and in spiritual affairs of the church assist the pastor in any and in all the ways in which he has need of their assistance. At least this is the Baptist position on the subject.

Other denominations have other arrangements, and a different order of church government, but a Baptist church, and all who come into it, are expected to be Baptists in deed and in truth.

The deacons of the first apostolic church preached, as did many other laymen of the church. And we know that the ordinance of baptism was also administered by them. And it is still allowable in all Baptist churches for deacons to preach, and if in the absence of the pastor the church should appoint a deacon or any other laymen to administer the ordinances it would not be contrary to Scripture or to Baptist doctrine. Any other view rests on what is called "Sacerdotalism."

But it is not because or by virtue of their being deacons. Such work is no part of the office of deacons in Baptist churches. Any other member might be called upon by the church to do the same thing. It is important for members of the church to understand these things, for a misunderstanding in the minds of people with reference to the position and work of the deacons often causes serious trouble that might otherwise be easily avoided. We hope that with respect to these things we may have the wisdom that cometh from above to guide us, for "it is profitable to direct."

Dear brethren and sisters, pray earnestly for all the officers of the church, and give them your earnest sympathy and hearty cooperation. In the words of the apostle I close:

"These things write I unto thee, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth."

The Benevolent Side of Christianity.

[Synopsis of a sermon delivered by Rev. Dr. T. H. Pritchard, Sunday evening, Nov. 22d, 1891, in the First Baptist church, Wilmington, N. C., and reported by Mrs. M. F. Williams.]

Text—"And at even, when the sun did set, they brought unto him all that were diseased, and them that were possessed with devils, and all the city were gathered together at the door. And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and suffered not the devils to speak, because they knew him."—Mark 1: 32-34.

It would seem from the preceding verses that these miracles were performed just after the healing of Peter's wife's mother.

When the subject of the Thomasville Orphanage was before the late Convention in Goldsboro, Bro. J. H. Mills, the superintendent, delivered a speech in which he said some very striking and original things, one especially which struck me very forcibly. In a very kindly way he arraigned the ministers for preaching only one side of the gospel—for presenting to the people only the spiritual claims of the gospel on men, and their duty to God, and failing to enforce upon them their duty to their fellow men. They should preach about the bodies as well as the souls of men. This set me to thinking, and I asked myself, "Am I amenable to this criticism?" And upon reflection, I felt that I had not done my duty in this regard.

I do not believe we make as much of our duties to the poor as the gospel demands. We must learn christianity from its Author. He was the great exemplar, illustrator of its character and duties, and he certainly knew what he intended to teach. What are we to learn from the Lord Jesus Christ, the author and finisher of our faith?

There are in the Scriptures thirty two distinctly recorded miracles, as well as references to many others not recorded. Indeed John says if all the Saviour did and said had been recorded, the world would not contain the books that could have been written. Of these thirty-two recorded miracles, all but three were performed in behalf of the bodies of men—the healing of the blind, the raising of the widow's son, and Lazarus, the feeding of the multitudes, all in fact, but three, of which we have any distinct record, called forth the powers of Jesus over the ills the physical man is heir to.

Turn to the parables, and you will find that some of them relate to our duty to men. One of the most notable is the Good Samaritan; and the Saviour has set there in living light, and in characters of great force and beauty, the duty of kindly charity and personal help to those around us.

In thinking of all these things I said, surely if so much of the life of Christ was spent in relieving the physical man there is something in it. In the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew we have the form by which we shall be examined and judged at the last day. Christ says to those on his left hand, "Inasmuch as ye did it not to the least of these, ye did it not to me," meaning the clothing of the naked, the visiting of the sick and distressed, &c. And to those on his right hand, "Inasmuch as ye did it to the least of these ye did it unto me;" and on each he passes sentence—to the former, "Depart, ye cursed;" to the latter, "Come, ye blessed of my Father." And the record says, "These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."

Here is recorded the final retribution of the Judgment day pronounced by the Lord God Almighty, and they are irrevocable words of solemn import. Christ identified himself with the poor of this world, and he esteems what we do or fail to do for them as done or not done for him. Is not this in perfect harmony with the spirit of Christ, so far as his acts were concerned?

Go further. To heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, &c., was a power conferred on the apostles for awhile, and a part of their lives was spent in exercising that power for the relief of suffering humanity.

Follow Paul and see how his miracles were related to men; and when he healed the father of the governor of the island of Melita he not only challenged the esteem of the people, but a spirit of kindness which they showed, not only to Paul but to all his fellow voyagers.

Dorcas was raised by the power of Peter, and restored to the benediction of the community where she had labored because of her works of charity and her ministries

J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

THE NORTH CAROLINA BAPTIST MINISTERS' RELIEF BOARD.

At the meeting of the Baptist State Convention held at Edenton, N. C., in November, 1888, an effort was made by honored brethren to put on foot some plan of making better provision for the support of our aged and needy ministers, and for the widows of those who were dead. The matter was referred to a committee that brought in a report recommending the organization of a "Baptist Ministers' Life Association." The Association was soon after organized; but after an existence of some three and a half years the organization dissolved. The plan did not seem to take with our ministers. No further effort was made at the Convention until the meeting of that body at Henderson, N. C., in November, 1889. At that meeting the following resolution offered by Dr. T. H. Pritchard was adopted:—

Resolved, That it is the sense of this body that some better provision should be made for the relief of our aged, infirm, and indigent ministers; and that a committee be appointed to prepare and submit to this Convention some possible plan for the accomplishment of this object."

A committee consisting of T. H. Pritchard, B. Cade, C. E. Taylor, N. L. Shaw and E. F. Jones was appointed, which later in the session made a report through their chairman, Dr. T. H. Pritchard. After some remarks by Dr. Pritchard, Rev. C. A. Woodson and Dr. C. E. Taylor, the following substitute for the first report was offered by Dr. Taylor, and adopted:—

The committee appointed to consider the relief of aged and needy ministers of the gospel, beg leave to report:

1. That a Board of nine Trustees be annually appointed by the Convention, whose duty it shall be to collect, appropriate and invest funds for the relief of aged and indigent Baptist ministers.

2. That this Board be located at Wilmington, N. C.

The first Board of Trustees appointed according to the above report, consisted of J. L. Stewart, J. S. Allen, J. T. Bland, L. B. Highsmith, D. L. Gore, W. A. French, J. C. Stevenson, L. R. Carroll and T. H. Pritchard. Soon after their appointment, this Board met and elected the customary officers. A committee was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws for the government of the Board and the prosecution of their work in accordance with the instructions of the Convention. This constitution was drawn up with care, and has been continued without amendment by each annual Board since the first organization. The Board located at Wilmington reported to the Convention that met at Shelby in 1890. The report was not encouraging, as the receipts of the Board had been light, after considerable effort on their part, during the first year of their existence. During the discussion of the report, a motion to table the report, followed by a motion to discontinue the work, excited a lively debate, which was participated in by brethren F. C. Hickson, W. L. Wright, C. A. Woodson, J. D. Hufham, and others. When the vote was taken on the motion to discontinue the work it was found that a very large majority of the Convention heartily favored its continuance, and the original report of the Board, after some slight amendment, was adopted by an almost unanimous vote.

At that session of the Convention, the annual Board appointed consisted mostly of new members, as the location of the Board was changed from Wilmington to Durham, N. C. The following brethren constituted the new Board: Rev. J. L. White, (Pres.), Rev. C. A. Woodson, (Cor. Sec.), J. L. Marham, (Rec. Sec. and Treas.), F. P. Hobgood, (Vice Pres.), H. A. Reams and W. A. Albright, (Auditors), D. L. Gore, Dr. T. H. Pritchard and W. N. Jones. During this second year of the Board's existence over seven hundred dollars were raised, and it was evident that the work was getting a firmer hold on the affections of our people. The Board brought in a cheering report at the last Convention which met at Goldsboro, and this work that had rather feeble beginnings at once forged to the front as one of the most important denominational enterprises in the State; and the beautiful fact was developed that some few brethren who had rather stood aloof from the work of the Board fell in cheerfully with their brethren of the Convention, and showed a willingness to help rather than hinder the work.

At the last meeting of the Convention the Board was continued at Durham, and little change was made as to its membership. [illegible] we think, as it should be. When [illegible] are found to push this work, and a good centre from which it may be conducted, as few changes as possible should be made. At the end of the last conventional year the efficient Recording Secretary and Treasurer, J. L. Markham, resigned, owing to a press of business, and T. E. Cheek was elected to fill his place. At the last meeting of the Board at Durham, Rev. J. L. White, expecting soon to remove to Asheville, resigned as President of the Board, and that sterling laymen, Col. W. A. Albright, was elected to fill his place. Brethren White and Markham continue as members of the Board. Durham seems to be a good location for the Board, and as the work has developed with the change of location to that city, it will doubtless be the pleasure of the Convention to continue the location at that place.

In accordance with the instructions of the Convention, there is a clause in the constitution of the Board that requires that body to safely invest in solvent securities one-third of all receipts for the Ministers' Relief Fund, leaving two-thirds, with the interest from the invested fund, available for current expenses. There are now nine aged ministers, and three widows of deceased ministers, on the list of beneficiaries. There are others applying to have their names placed on the list. This list will doubtless grow. We are happy to believe that the funds to meet the wants of our aged and needy brethren and sisters will also grow as the years pass. We are glad to notice that a larger number of our churches are contributing to this worthy object; but contributions are not yet by any means as general as the importance of the subject and the needs of the Board demand. The plan is not to provide a central home for our aged brethren, but to pay them at the humble homes such as they now have monthly installments of some five, eight or ten dollars, according to their wants. This is a great deal better, we think, than the plan of a central home. These old men can be supported at much less cost at such homes as they have. Besides, they have local attachments; and they can at times, when strength will admit, visit their children, or their neighbors, and join them at the sanctuary in the worship of God. When they die they wish to leave their bones in the old family or church graveyard, near those of their children, grandchildren, or neighbors. Ah, how we may add to the joys, and lighten the burden of old age, by thus ministering to their wants!

As a matter of fact very few of our ministers are able to lay up anything for old age, and hence at times may find themselves in quite needy circumstances at that period of life. It is often the case that their children, however, have the means and the willingness to provide for them and do so. The Board of course is not at all inclined to interfere with such an arrangement, in fact heartily encourages it. They are careful, and they request those who endorse to be careful to inquire as to whether the aged ministers who are mentioned to them can depend on their children for support. It is sometimes the case also that aged ministers, or their widows, spend their declining years with churches that they have served, and that offer them a support when they are too feeble to do active work. All this is well, and the Board will promptly decline to extend aid when such churches have the means and the willingness to support them when needy. Oftener than we might suppose, however, the children of our aged ministers have neither the means nor the willingness to support their aged parents; and sometimes also they are members in old age of weak churches that they have never served, that have never been trained to give, that have not the means to support properly the pastors who are then serving them. In such circumstances the Board proposes to help; in such cases they are helping now.

Surely, brethren, this is a noble charity, if it be proper to call it such. We are only paying to those faithful men the debt we owe them by contributing to their wants when they are too feeble to labor for their denomination and for their Master.

As has been recently said by the Corresponding Secretary of the Board, Rev. C. A. Woodson, the manner in which our churches have responded to the appeal of the Convention, through Dr. C. Durham for the Havana House, was a "handsome thing." Why may we not have an equally generous and general response to meet the wants of our aged brethren? It would indeed be a handsome thing for each church in the State, as requested by a resolution adopted at the last Convention, to contribute regularly for this object, as for any other denominational work. A generous contribution from each church in the State would meet the current expenses of the Board for the present year, besides increasing the interest-bearing fund. Let us rise in the strength that the Lord has given us, and see to it that these aged men and women do not suffer for the necessaries of life.

DEATH OF EX-GOV. W. W. HOLDEN.

On Tuesday morning, March 1st, Gov. Holden died at his home in this city, in the seventy-fourth year of his age. He was a native of Orange county, and at an early age entered the office of the Hillsboro Recorder, under the control of Mr. Dennis Heartt, to learn the art of printing. At the age of eighteen he came to Raleigh and secured a position with Mr. Thos. J. Lemay on the Raleigh Star. He was an expert type-setter and a ready writer, and assisted his new employer by writing editorials and otherwise contributing to his paper. He read law and obtained license to practice, but we believe did not follow the profession. In 1843 he became the owner of the Raleigh Standard, and as editor of that paper commenced his famous political career. Under his management the Standard was advanced to the front rank of journalism, and exerted great influence in the politics of the State. He continued his connection with this journal until after the close of the war, and parted with it during his administration as Governor.

During his life, Mr. Holden was printer, lawyer, editor, member of the House of Commons in 1846, member of Literary Board under the administrations of Governors Bragg and Ellis, member of the Secession Convention of 1861, Provisional Governor by appointment of President Johnson in 1865, and Governor by election of the people in 1868. From the last-named position he was removed by the Senate in 1871. He then located in Washington City, and for awhile was on the editorial staff of the National Republican. He severed his connection with that paper, returned to Raleigh, and was appointed postmaster by President Grant, in which position he continued eight years.

In 1870 Gov. Holden made a profession of religion during a revival meeting in this city conducted by Evangelist A. B. Earle. He has been an active christian, gave much time to church and Sunday school work, often employed his pen on religious topics. In his last years he withdrew all affiliation with political parties, and devoted his time to reading, reflection, writing, and christian labor, until disease and infirmity rendered these no longer possible.

He possessed much information, was a very engaging conversationalist, and his accurate memory readily recalled interesting events of the past.

He was twice married; first, to Miss A. Young of Wake county, and secondly, to Miss Louisa V. Harrison of Raleigh. The latter, with seven children—three by the first wife and four by the last—survive.

The funeral took place on March 2d from the Edenton Street M. E. Church, of which the deceased was a member, and was largely attended. The flags on the State capitol and city hall were displayed at half mast in respect to the memory of the deceased.

Thus has passed from among us this distinguished man. For about thirty years he was a very prominent factor in the politics of North Carolina. He was a vigorous partisan fighter, and often encountered the most violent antagonisms. He experienced largely life's triumphs, and shared a full measure of its disappointments. He realized the emptiness of the world, and turned from it to seek that which is more enduring—the heavenly inheritance, "incorruptible, undefiled, and that which fadeth not away." He rests. The strong man has laid himself down to his last sleep, and awaits a joyous resurrection.

THE many readers of the RECORDER will receive with great anxiety the announcement that the Editor, Dr. C. T. Bailey, was attacked with a stroke of paralysis last Sunday while preaching at the Fayetteville Street Baptist church. He read the 13th chapter of 1st Corinthians and commented on it for about twenty-five minutes, when it was observed that he was hesitating in his words. He announced a hymn, and at the close of the singing, he arose and lifted his hand as a signal for dismission, but could not utter the benediction. He was taken home in a buggy, and the doctor pronounced the case partial paralysis of the tongue and throat. Up to the time of going to press, Tuesday morning, the physician says his condition is as favorable as could be expected.

....Rev. J. T. Jenkins entered upon his duties as pastor of the Brooklyn Baptist church, Wilmington, N. C., on Sunday last.

....Rev. W. R. Gwaltney of Wake Forest will spend a week in Taylorsville, N. C., aiding the pastor in a series of special meetings.

....Bro. W. A. Albright, the biggest and one of the best brethren of Durham, was in Raleigh on Wednesday last and called to see us.

....Now is the time to send in your orders to our Supply Store for your Quarterlies, Teachers, papers, cards, &c., for the next quarter.

....The next meeting of the Board of Missions and Sunday schools will be held Tuesday, March 22d, in Mission Rooms, at 8 o'clock p. m.

....Dr. R. D. Fleming of Warrenton, Rev. J. R. Maynard of Morrisville, and Rev. W. A. Barrett of Franklinton, called to see us on Friday last.

....If you expect to go to the next session of the Southern Baptist Convention, read what the Corresponding Secretary says about it in this paper.

....Rev. W. R. Gwaltney of Wake Forest was in Raleigh on Thursday last and called to see us. He reports the sick brethren of the faculty improving.

....Rev. E. J. Edwards, agent of the N. C. Baptist, was in Raleigh on Wednesday last on his way to visit the churches of the South Fork Association.

....Rev. Dr. E. G. Robinson, ex-President of Brown University, has been appointed professor in the department of philosophy in the University of Chicago.

....Maj. J. H. Foote writes: "The RECORDER improves as it grows older. I shall read it while I live, and transmit it to my posterity to be read when I am gone."

....There is nothing better on "William Carey" and his work and times than a little book, "Beginnings in Modern Missions," sent out by our Supply Store for 25 cents.

....The Baptist State Sunday-school Convention will be held this year in Winston, April 14—17. See the program and other statements about it in another part of this paper.

....There is growing up in society a Pharisaic system which adds to the commands of God the precepts of men; to that system I will not yield for an hour.—C. H. Spurgeon.

....During March and April collections for Home and Foreign Missions should be taken in all of the churches and forwarded in time to reach the Treasurer before the first of May.

....Elders H. A. Brown, L. G. Broughton, L. R. Pruett and C. C. Haymore will speak to the churches of the Pilot Mountain Association on the Centennial of Missions April 19—20.

....Elders J. K. Fant, J. B. Richardson, Thos. Carrick, H. Sheets and J. N. Stallings will hold Centennial Mission Meetings with the churches of the Liberty Association during April and May.

...."The Choice," by Dr. Basil Manly, his last effort to serve the churches, is more than meeting the expectation of those who have examined it, and is being rapidly adopted by the churches.

....Six new members were received into the Tabernacle Baptist church on Sunday last. Large audiences attended the services, both morning and evening, and a good interest seems to be manifest.

....The programme for our Baptist State Sunday-school Convention, with a letter addressed to all the superintendents, can be found in this paper. Let every school in the Convention be represented.

....Rev. Dr. Hufham of Tarboro, Rev. R. T. Vann of Scotland Neck, and Rev. R. VanDeventer, met in Weldon last week to arrange a plan of work for missions in the Tar River Association.

....Rev. Dr. J. F. Latimer of the Union Theological Seminary, Hampden-Sidney, Va., died Feb. 29th. He was a gifted and learned Presbyterian minister and teacher, and was in his forty-seventh year.

....Rev. Dr. A. C. Dixon of New York has been sued by Col. Ingersoll, the infidel lecturer and author, for libel, and places his damages at $5,000. Bro. Dixon seems to have touched him up rather sharply.

....Dr. C. A Rominger, Elders S. F. Conrad, J. A. Howard, W. B. Wingate and J. R. Jones will talk to the churches of the Beulah Association on the Centennial of Modern Missions during April 19—30.

....The first church of Asheville and the Reidsville church are the only North Carolina Baptist churches that have determined to support a foreign missionary. Are these the only churches among us able to pay the way of one missionary?

....Rev. A. B. Caudle of Monroe in renewing his subscription extends us an invitation to attend the next session of the Union Association to be held with his church at Waxhaw. The church is now united and prosperous.

....We are glad to learn that Capt. Jas. S. Ray is thought to be hopeful of recovery from the stroke of paralysis he had about a week ago at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. W. G. Allen, where he is comfortably cared for by his physician and friends.

....Rev. M. R. Pernell of Franklinton says: "I found in the RECORDER of February 17th a sermon preached on the subject 'The Birthday Ball,' by Rev. C. A. G. Thomas. I think this sermon worth all the paper cost. I wish every dancer in America could read it."

....The best tributes we have seen [illegible] Spurgeon were written by Drs. Thomas [illegible] Skinner and J. J. Hall of Raleigh, and published in the BIBLICAL RECORDER. Dr. Skinner was well acquainted with Mr. Spurgeon and Dr. Hall is one of his boys.—Baptist Record.

....Rev. George W. Greene of Canton, China, reports all well, and that he is making progress in his work. He adds: "There are no riots in Canton, nor any signs of riots, nor have there been any disturbances. Things are so quiet that I have not thought of mentioning the matter in my letter. Love to all the brethren."

....The Reidsville saints go up head. In addition to aiding largely with all the work of the Baptist State Convention, they pay the expenses of a young man at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, and have determined to pay his entire salary when he goes to China. What church will be next to step to the front on missions?

....Strange how puritanic and extreme some men who call themselves christians can be in their opposition to and condemnation of mere peccadilloes in others when they themselves are guilty of gross sins. These are the spots in our feasts of charity and bring our religion into reproach. Hypocrites are despised by all men.

....Rev. J. R. Matthews of Hexiana has accepted a call to the church in Pantego and is gladly heard by the people. Rev. Mr. Carawan will be ordained to the ministry on the third Sunday in this month, and will labor in Hyde county. He is an able preacher of the gospel, and we are hoping much for the cause from his labors.

....Rev. Dr. J. W. Carter of the First church, Raleigh, will preach the baccalaureate sermon at Chapel Hill in June. We congratulate our friends on the selection they have made. Dr. Carter is one of the ablest preachers in the country, and his sermon on this occasion will add much to the interest of the commencement exercises.

....We call attention to the article in this issue "From Depot to Depot," by Mr. Dossey Battle. We have known Mr. Battle [illegible] years as an editor and gentleman. We have had a pleasant interview with him since his return from the Keeley Institute, Greensboro, N. C., and we not only endorse what he says, but recommend the treatment to all who need it. Its results are wonderful.

....Dr. C. Winston of Franklinton, N. C., is now in Ocala, Florida, on a visit to dear Dr. T. D. Crawford and family, formerly of Oxford, N. C. He writes us that sister Agnes Morgan, formerly of Granville county, N. C., an aged and most worthy sister, died at her home in Florida on January 13th. Though a professor of faith in Christ, she remained out of the church for many years, but united with the Baptists on settling in Florida. She was a noble, true woman, and an humble follower of Christ.

....Here is a paragraph from the Congregationalist which if it were printed in every church paper and read by all fathers and mothers might do immense good: "What if you criticise your pastor you hurt yourself and your children." One who heard the remark said: "Would to God I had been told that twenty years ago." No doubt he was thinking of boys and girls grown to manhood life without interest in religion or regard for public worship. A pastor honored in the home is a constant blessing in it.—Inquirer.

....It is said that Colonel Ingersoll is about to sue Rev. A. C. Dixon of Brooklyn for libel. It is really gratifying to find that the Colonel has any sensitiveness as to public opinion. If Mr. Dixon had not a first church before, it is probable that a good many strangers would visit Brooklyn and go to Hanson Place Church just to look at a man who could so upset the imperturbability of Colonel Ingersoll as to provoke him to a suit to vindicate himself. If now the lawyer and the preacher would both do their own talking in court it would be a gladiatorial contest in eloquence that thousands would be glad to attend.—New York Inquirer.

....Rev. G. M. Webb of Randleman, N. C., writes: "We are nicely fixed up in our new home. Our goods all came safe without damage. What do you think? Last Tuesday night a large crowd of the brethren and sisters and friends in Randleman and Worthville came to our house and told us to surrender the dining room to them, which we did without resistance. After they had full possession for awhile they all came into the house and spent a few moments very pleasantly. When they left my wife and I went into the dining room and found that these friends had left fifty-eight packages, consisting of flour, meal, coffee, sugar, hams, beef, sausage, rice, canned fruit, &c., &c. Don't you know we were happy! I am glad to inform you that my work is starting off in good shape, and I hope to be able to do some good in the name of my Master."

....Rev. F. H. Jones of Chatham, Va., writes: "It seems to me as the years go by the RECORDER grows in ability and efficiency. It has had much to do in producing the great missionary spirit that pervades the Baptist brotherhood of North Carolina, and has increased the spirit of activity and enlargement on many other lines of work. The Baptists of North Carolina are acting wisely as they increase its circulation. It comes to our Virginia home as an old friend to tell us the news from our former home and dear brethren in North Carolina. May the benediction of heaven be on you and the RECORDER, and upon all God's elect servants in North Carolina. The fourth Sunday in May will be the anniversary of my seventh year's pastorate in Virginia. We are grateful to God for any good he has enabled us to accomplish in Virginia. During the last year one hundred and twelve have been added to my churches. The contributions to the Boards were larger than in any previous year, and besides, the church at Chatham has raised and paid out about $9,00[illegible] for their house and lot during the last year.

BASIS OF REPRESENTATION.

The Constitution gives the only basis of representation as follows:

ART 3. This Convention shall be composed of one male lay delegate and one associate from each Sunday-school, regardless of contributions, and of Baptist ministers and superintendents of Baptist Sunday-schools in North Carolina who shall pay annually one dollar each to the Treasurer, and of male delegates chosen by the Sunday-schools and Sunday Associations. Each school and each Sunday-school Association shall be entitled to one delegate on the payment annually of five dollars to the Treasurer, and to two additional delegates on the payment to the Treasurer of ten dollars for the objects of the Convention. Each school shall be entitled to two delegates chosen by the school on the payment of five dollars to the Treasurer. The associates shall be women. This Convention shall co-operate with the Baptist State Convention and its Board of Missions and Sunday-schools and with the Southern Baptist Convention.

ART. 4. Only members of white Baptist churches shall be eligible to membership in the Convention as delegates or as associate delegates. The associate delegates shall not be entitled to the "floor of the house."

ENTERTAINMENT.

Delegates will be entertained by the people of Winston. The committee on hospitality, however, will be responsible for the entertainment of those delegates only who notify the pastor, Rev. H. A. Brown, by Thursday, April 7th, 1892, of their expectation to be present.

ROUND-TRIP RAILROAD FARE TO CONVENTION.

From Rutherfordton, $9.35; Shelby, 7.80; Lincolnton, 6.60; Charlotte, 5.95; Fayetteville, 6.65; Henderson, 6.10; Maxton, 7.95; Sanford, 5.05; Marion, 7.55; Wilmington, 8.30; Weldon, 9.05; Goldsboro, 7.05; Selma, 6.45; Raleigh, 5.40; Durham, 4.80; Greensboro, 1.65. Intermediate points in same proportion.

TO THE SUPERINTENDENTS.

Will you kindly hear our statements, and then, if your good judgment approves, aid us in our plans?

The Baptist State Convention divides its work, committed to the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools, into six distinct objects or departments, viz., (1) State Missions; (2) Home Missions; (3) Foreign Missions; (4) Colportage; (5) Sunday-school Missions, and (6) Supply Store.

The Convention, through its Board, asks every Sunday-school in its bounds to give one collection this year—only one—to each of the above five objects first named. We do not ask aid for the Supply Store. This more than sustains itself. Its profits aid the Sunday-school Mission and Colportage work of the Convention. Money given for any one of the above objects is used only for the specific work for which it is given. This rule makes the donor the sole judge of the special work to which his money is applied.

Sunday-school Missions.

The money given for Sunday-school Missions is used judiciously in furnishing a small supply of Sunday-school literature for only one quarter, a few Bibles and Testaments, and sometimes a few song-books (second hand or otherwise, as we are able to secure), to destitute communities where schools do not exist, and, too, where schools could not be organized without this small, timely aid rendered through our Board.

In our Sunday-school Missions the last Conventional year, 198 new schools were organized, out of which have already grown seven new Baptist churches. No one can foresee the great and good results yet to come from these 198 new schools. But did your school send anything for this work during last year? Please find out from your Treasurer.

With every four dollars sent for this work, we can, it is believed, organize a new school. How many new schools will your school help the Board to organize this year?

Our Board hopes to organize at least 250 new schools this year. To do this, however, money for the purchase of supplies, as shown above, is needed. We are seeking the co-operation of all the schools in our Convention. Now, if your good judgment approves this work, we shall be thankful for your aid. We suggest that you explain these things to your school April 3d, the first Sunday in April, and give notice of a collection for Sunday-school Missions, to be taken on April 10th, second Sunday in April, and on the 10th, again explain this object, take the collection, offer a special prayer for God's blessings on its use in some destitute neighborhood, and on Monday thereafter forward whatever is given to J. D. Boushall, Raleigh, N. C. It is important, in view of our State Sunday-school Convention in Winston, April 14th—17th, that the collection for this work be taken at the time indicated and that the same be forwarded at once to the Treasurer.

Yours very truly,
C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec. Bap. St. Con.

Three Things we Pastors Should Remember.

First, that the Southern Baptist Convention is only two months off and that the money our churches have pledged to Home and Foreign Missions should be collected and forwarded at once.

Second, that as this is the Centennial year of Missions, we ought to keep the subject before our churches. At the instance of Bro. Shipman, I have adopted the plan of a prelude in some department of missionary work before preaching. Ten minutes of compact statement of facts on this subject will go far to enlighten our congregations in the course of the year, and that is all they need to make them interested in and liberal towards this cause.

The third suggestion is furnished in the March number of the Missionary Review. It is on the Salvation Army, and was written by Dr. Noble, a Congregational minister, who was Editor of the Advance of Chicago a few years ago. I traveled with him in Italy three years ago. The whole article is intensely interesting, but the thing which especially struck me is the fact that these people have each year a week called Self-Denial week, and what is saved by living hard that week is given to missions. Dr. Noble says these people saved $200,000 last year by this week's self denial. I put the matter to my people last Sunday, and intend to get as many of them as possible to try this plan of raising money for the Centennial. It is practicable—it is easy—it can be done and will be done, if our pastors will take hold of it. In this way all the money asked for can be secured and not a dollar taken from the regular collections for missions. Let us all try it, brethren. A full half a million of dollars can be realized if we will go about it in earnest in this simple way. I see Dr. F. M. Ellis of Baltimore has made the same suggestion, but I had intended to put it before our people before I saw he had advocated the plan. It does seem to me that we are very poor christians if we can't do this much for Christ.

T. H. PRITCHARD.

Who are the Primitive Baptists?

It is said that a tourist, a few years ago, visited Mt. Gerizim, the holy mountains of the Samaritans, and found there all the Samaritans assembled for the celebration of the Passover. The tourist, Yankee-like, began to ask questions:

"How many Samaritans are there?"

"153 in all," replied the leader of the Samaritan worshippers.

"What is your belief?"

"We believe in the Samaritan Pentateuch, and reject the rest of the Old Testament and the whole of the New Testament."

"What will become of the 1,399,999,847 human beings that don't believe as you do?"

"They must either come over to us 153, or be irretrievably lost," emphatically replied the Samaritan leader.

We have the counterpart of this story of the infallible 153 Samaritan worshipers on Mt. Gerizim in the preposterous claim, put forth with all the assurance of papal infallibility by a little religious sect found in North Carolina and a few other States, that they are the Primitive Baptists,—a claim having as little foundation as "the baseless fabric of a vision."

In the year 1827, a few churches in North Carolina, finding themselves out of harmony with the Baptist hosts of America, adopted some non-fellowshipping resolutions against all Baptists who favored Bible societies, missionary societies, and theological seminaries, and called themselves "the Reformed Baptists in North Carolina." Tract societies and Sunday-schools were subsequently anathematized by these "Reformed Baptists."

It was largely through the influence of a renegade Baptist by the name of James Osborne of Baltimore, that this anti-mission faction went off from the Baptist brotherhood. Osborne was a member of the Second Baptist church of Baltimore, and was pastor of the Third Baptist church of that city, a colony of the Second. Both of these churches were missionary bodies. Further, Osborne was appointed a missionary in the Baltimore Association in 1817.

Now I would not dispute the right of these "Reformed Baptists" to discard any doctrine or society, or to declare non-fellowship with the whole christian world, if they choose to do so. Every man has a right to enjoy his religious convictions, so long as said enjoyment does not conflict with the duties of citizenship. Nor do I object to the name they gave to themselves in withdrawing from us. I only regret that they dropped the name "Reformed Baptists" for the misnomer "Primitive Baptists."

They have so long persevered in calling themselves Primitive Baptists, that many outside of the little fraternity are found to day who believe in the justness of their claim, and that the Regular or Missionary Baptists are the offspring of the so-called Primitive Baptists.

The spirit that animated the christians of the Apostolic age was emphatically a missionary spirit. It moved them to part with houses and lands, imperil life, face imprisonment and martyrdom, that they might preach Jesus and the resurrection as the only hope of a perishing world. Their red-hot zeal for the propagation of the kingdom of their Lord drove them beyond the confines of their native land into the domains of heathendom. Paul was a great foreign missionary.

I confess I know of no christian people who are worthy to be considered the successors of the Apostolic christians. But I ask, which has the stronger claim to the epithet "primitive," the anti-mission Baptists who are doing comparatively nothing for the evangelization of the world, and are manifesting unceasing hostility to almost all individual and organized effort for the enlargement of Christ's kingdom, or the Regular Baptists, who, though far behind their obligation and ability, are yet, to a gratifying degree, prayerfully studying the opening fields of destitution, looking to the Lord for laborers to be qualified and sent, and trying to provide adequate means for their support, that they may give themselves to the work of the ministry? I ask the question. The reader may answer it.

The spirit of our anti-mission brethren is very unlike that of the Baptists of England and Wales. Here have dwelt Baptists from the first century to the present time. About A. D. 597, Austin the monk, with about forty others, was sent by Pope Gregory the Great to bring the British christians under the dominion of Rome. The monk met with considerable success, and, having consecrated the river Swale, near York, he caused ten thousand of his converts to be baptized in its waters in one day. Austin sought and held an interview with the Welsh Baptists on the borders of Herefordshire. There were present twelve hundred pastors and delegates, who positively refused to comply with any of the demands of the Pope's emissaries. Among these demands was one requiring their children to be baptized. For refusal many of them were put to death.

These Baptists of England and Wales were missionary brethren. At Bangor, according to D'Anvers, was a body of 2,100 christians who consecrated themselves to mission work.

The General Assembly of English and Welsh Baptists which met in London, Sept. 3—12, 1689, resolved to raise funds for missionary purposes and for ministerial education. So says Rippon's Register for 1796.

Our English brethren organized a missionary society which they called the "Particular Baptist Society for Propagating the Gospel among the Heathen," nearly one hundred years ago, and soon thereafter sent out Wm. Carey and others as foreign missionaries. This society was formed in the home of widow Buby Wallis at Kettering, Oct. 2, 1792.

It will be seen that the so called Primitive Baptists can not be the successors of the English and Welsh Baptists, since they are antagonistic in spirit.

Neither are the "Reformed Baptists," as they first called themselves at all in harmony with the Baptist brotherhood of America. For at the time of the withdrawal of the anti-mission brethren from the Baptist body, and for many years prior to 1827, the Baptists of America were engaged in tract and Bible distribution, ministerial education and missionary work at home and in foreign fields. For want of space, I will reserve what I have to say of the doings of the American Baptists for another paper.

A short extract from Benedict's History of the Baptists will close this article. The author, speaking of the anti-mission faction, says: "Old School and Primitive Baptists are appellations so entirely out of place, that I cannot, even as a matter of courtesy, use them without adding so-called, or some such expression. I have seen so much of the missionary spirit among the old Anabaptists, Waldenses, and other ancient sects;—so vigorous and perpetual were the efforts of those christians whom we claim as Baptists, in the early, middle and later ages, to spread the gospel in all parts of the world, among all nations and languages where they could gain access, that it is plain that those who merely preach up predestination and do nothing have no claim to be called by their name." Mt. Olive, N. C.

"The Baptist Female University of North Carolina."

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have before me the RECORDER for this week in which I find an article on the above named school, which I have read with interest and much disappointment. I have been watching this proposed school all the while with extreme interest, seeing the great disadvantage by which the Baptist girls of the State secure an education compared with the boys. I have listened to several speeches by the advocates of this school, but I must confess with sadness that according to the idea advanced by you, I have had the wrong conception of this work all the while, and that I have entirely misunderstood the import of the speeches which I have heard.

You say: "Let the terms of admission be such that none but competent students, those well prepared to be benefited by a University course, can enter."

Now if I understood the purpose for which this school was first proposed to be established, it was to give our Baptist girls an equal chance with the boys.

To establish a University for girls on the order of Wake College College—where the girls could have an opportunity to acquire an education equal to that of the boys—with as small cost as possible.

But according to your plan, before a girl can enter the University, she must take a full course in one of the best female colleges of the State. In this way, only a few would ever get any benefit from this school, only those who are able to send their girls to a female college, and these would not specially need the advantage of the University, for they could get an education any way.

I thought this school was to be established for the purpose of giving our Baptist girls a living chance to get an education, not only the rich who could get it any way, but for all. How can you expect the Baptists of the State to endow the University, when only a few, the rich, can ever get any benefit from it?

Do we need a University where a few can go where they have taken a college course, and tip off, or do we need a college for girls, like Wake Forest, where they can go when they are prepared for college and stay till they have acquired an education equal to that of any college in the State, male or female.

Don't place the education of the Baptist Female University above the people's head, where they can see it but can never get hold of it. We live on the earth yet. Let the grade be equal to that of Vassar or the University of Virginia; but make steps, so we can get to it.

J. E. GREEN.

Wake Forest, March 2, 1892.

Meeting of the Board of Missions.

The next meeting of the Board of Missions and Sunday schools will be held in the Mission Rooms in Raleigh, Tuesday, March 22d, 1892, at 8 o'clock p. m. All those who expect to attend the next session of the Southern Baptist Convention, to be held in Atlanta, Ga., May 6—10, and wish to be appointed delegates by the Board, will please drop me a postal to that effect at once.

Each delegate will be expected, this year after his appointment, to forward his own name to the committee on hospitality.

The following are the delegates appointed by their Associations, viz:

Alexander—W. E White; Atlantic—Rufus Ford; Anson—E. A. Covington; Ashe and Alleghany—D. W. Thomason; Beulah—W. B. Wingate; Columbus—J. L. Memory; Chowan—C. S. Vann; Central—W. R. Gwaltney; Cedar Creek—E. J. Edwards; Catawba—H. D. Lequeux; Caldwell—H. M. Croom; Cape Fear—E. W. Wooten; Flat River—J. A. Stradley; Green River—M. M. Landrum; King's Mountain—H. F. Schenck; Liberty—J. K. Fant; Mecklenburg and Cabarrus—D. M. Austin; Mt. Zion—J. L. Carroll; Pilot Mountain—D. F. King; Robeson—F. H. Martin; South Yadkin—J. B. Holman; Sandy Creek—W. H. H. Lawhon; Stanly—J. C. Denney; South Fork—W. A. Graham; Sandy Run—T. Bright; Three Forks—E. F. Jones; Union—J. A. Bivins.

So far as we can gather from the minutes, the following Associations did not appoint delegates to the next session of the Southern Baptist Convention, viz:

Brier Creek, Brushy Mountain, Eastern (no minute published), Elkin, Little River, Montgomery, Richmond, Raleigh, South River, South Atlantic, Tar River, West Chowan, and Yadkin.

When an Association fails to elect a delegate and have the same recorded in its minutes, there is no provision in the Constitution by which it can be represented in the Convention.

C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec.

Dr. L. G. Broughton Ordained.

On Sunday, Feb. 28th, in answer to a call from Reidsville Baptist church, a presbytery of the ministry, composed of Revs. J. J. Hall of Raleigh, J. O. Alderman of Hawley's Store, J. A. Howard of Reidsville, and S. F. Conrad of Winston, met in Reidsville to consider the propriety of setting apart Dr. L. G. Broughton to the work of the gospel ministry.

After due examination, it was unanimously decided that he possessed the spiritual and intellectual qualifications which were requisite for this high and responsible office.

The ordination was preceded by a sermon of deep interest and appropriateness by Rev. J. J. Hall of Raleigh, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation unto every one that believeth."

After the sermon, the ordaining prayer was offered by Rev. S. F. Conrad, and the hands of the presbytery imposed. An address of welcome to the ministry was extended by Rev. J. O. Alderman. The Bible was presented (which was a present from Dr. Broughton's friends in Reidsville), accompanied by a solemn and impressive charge by Rev. A. Howard. Benediction by Dr. Broughton.

Dr. Broughton enters upon the work of pastor at Broad Street, Winston, on Sunday, March 6th.

S. F. CONRAD, Sec. Pres.

Ordination of Rev. Jas. Long.

In compliance with a request from Hopewell Baptist church, Union county, N. C., where Bro. Long holds his membership, the Baptist church in Warrenton, N. C., called a presbytery, consisting of Rev. T. J. Taylor and myself, on Feb. 22, 1892, to examine Rev. Jas. Long, with a view to his ordination. After a satisfactory examination, Bro. Long was set apart to the full work of the gospel ministry by the laying on of hands. Bro. Taylor preached the sermon and made the prayer; the writer delivered the charge and presented the Bible. Bro. Long is now a student at Wake Forest College, and promised to be a man of usefulness.

W. R. CULLOM.

Feb. 29, 1892.

Received for endowment under proposition of Mr. J. A. Bostwick, from Mrs. C. B. Justice, $16.50; Miss Annie E. Justice, 19.50. Total, $36.00.

A Cry from the Coast.

1. Much trailer, few Baptists. Eastern destitution is the jeremiade of North Carolina Baptists. A single western county of twelve thousand population has twenty-six Baptist churches and seventeen ordained Baptist preachers. The Atlantic Association, embracing eight large counties and extending in one direction a distance of one hundred and twenty-five miles, has only twenty-nine churches (several recently organized) and fifteen ordained ministers. There are only five churches along the entire length of the Atlantic and North Carolina railroad. Yet these swamps and plains swarm with immortal souls. Wide is the field for Baptist exertion!

2. Once a mission, now a church. For several years there has been preaching, more or less regular, at a little school-house five miles west of Morehead City. Revs. Jacob Utley, W. R. Gwaltney and T. J. Leary with the recent pastors of this church, have toiled for the Master in that vicinity and the fruit of their labor is now being gathered. During the past sixteen months this arm of our church has received my continued attention. Last August after a week's meeting it was my pleasure to baptize thirteen persons in the blue waters of Bogue Sound. Last October we organized a church of twenty-four members. Four have since been added and one lady is now awaiting baptism. The present is encouraging and the future is full of hope.

3. Notes and Needs. In this community Pedobaptists have always been in the ascendency. The tide is now turning in our favor. The people are poor but kind and open-hearted. The house, in which we have been worshiping, is small, incommodious, and ill fitted for church services besides belonging to the public. A good church building has long been one of the sorest needs of the locality and its erection essential to the permanency of rising Baptist influence. Hence, last fall we decided to erect a structure, plain but comfortable and with a seating capacity of two hundred. The congregation pledged and paid to the extent of their abilities. The Morehead City brethren gave a liberal response. Help from New Berne, Kinston, and Goldsboro enlarged our limited means. Some of the Caldwell county churches also contributed kindly to our work. Still, the building, now under way, cannot be completed and free from debt without further aid. The sum of $150 is needed at once. The cause is deserving. Who will help us? How many individuals and churches will come to our rescue?

Address, HIGHT C. MOORE.
Morehead City, N. C.

The New York papers announce that a noted infidel has sued Rev. A. C. Dixon, pastor of the Hanson Place Baptist church, Brooklyn, for $5,000 for alleged defamation of character. We know nothing whatever of the merits of the case, but we shall be slow to believe that A. C. Dixon has slandered any body. On general principles, and from what we know of the parties to the suit, our sympathies are entirely with the defendant.

The incident suggest a serious question. How far does personal denunciation add to the real power of the pulpit? That is a question which ought to carefully considered by the ministry before they enter upon such a course. If we take our Lord's ministry as the model, we shall find him on one occasion, and on one occasion only, indulging in personal denunciation, and that was not in a sermon, but in the form of a private or semi-private message. He freely and on several occasions denounced classes of men—lawyers-scribes and Pharisees—but he did not denounce individual men.

So far as apostolic preaching is concerned, there is an entire absence of such denunciation. Of course such denunciation, if incisive and dramatic, creates a sensation and gives to the preacher an opportunity to "tear a passion into tatters" to the admiration of his flock, but whether his hearers are made more Christlike by such a performance is seriously to be doubted. On the whole, our plain plodding pastors who preach "the unsearchable riches of Christ," who believe in the "doctrines" seasoned with grace, who are instant in season and out of season, may not attract much attention at the hands of the newspapers, may not have their sermons sent out by a syndicate for the quasi religious newspapers who have "patent outside," but let them feel no discouragement. They are working wisely. They go the way the fathers went. Their sober, thoughtful, weighty discourses, freighted with the word which shall not return void, will do its work. The Humes, Ingersolls, et id omne genus, come and go. They are but shadows like the rest of us. It is vain to pursue them. But the word of the Lord, unsubmerged and insubmergible, endureth forever. Be willing to forego the cheap notoriety which comes from attacking some blatant blasphemer and preach the word!

Nevertheless we hope that in this projected suit the jury may find for the defendant.—Religious Herald.

We call special attention to the announcement in another column of the Sunday-school Board of the Southern Baptist Convention. This Board represents the churches and the publications of the Southern Baptist Convention, and the publications should find a place in all our Sunday-schools.

Some communications and a number of obituaries are crowded out of this issue. We ask the forbearance of our contributors. Their articles now on hand shall be inserted next week.

The grand jury of New York City have investigated the charges made in the pulpit by Dr. Parkhurst, a leading Presbyterian pastor, against the city administration, and report no sufficient grounds for the charges.

the hardness of their lives; and was not a special and peculiar prominence given her character in the Scriptures because of labors of love.

I am trying to get at what seems to have been the demands of the early christians. James says, "If ye say depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body, what doth it profit?" Then he says, "Show me thy faith without thy works, and I will show thee my faith by my works."

What are those works? He tells us in the context. Our duty to man is in the word, and is made much more prominent than in the lives of most professing christians. I have been remiss myself. Think of what Christ says. Our destiny for heaven or hell is determined by our faithfulness in this regard. We may be as orthodox as the thirty-nine Articles of Faith, or as the Confession of Faith of the Presbyterians, or the faith of the Baptists, but if we be not the living exponents of these creeds, dead is our faith.

If this be true, what is the principle? We have abundant opportunities of helping our fellow man. If you find a man who attends to all his religious duties, visits the sick, and gives of his means to help the poor, you find a man of whom the world says "that is the sort of religion we like; that man is illustrating the life of Christ."

Mark you, I do not mean to say that these good works are to be relied on to justify us in the sight of God. We are to be justified by faith, but these good works identify our faith as genuine—as metal of the true ring. There are many ways in which we can exercise this principle—among them the Orphanage. To my mind nothing so appeals to a thoughtful mind and heart like a helpless little child. Thank God, christianity is waking up on this line, but it is an everlasting reproach that the christians of North Carolina should have allowed the Masons to build the first orphan asylum. True, Bro. Mills, the projector, and for more than ten years the manager, was a christian man, but I was in the Grand Lodge when he presented the subject, and five hundred dollars was appropriated toward it; and I say it is a reproach that the first orphan asylum was built by the Masons, which is not a religious order, but an organization formed by men and not of God. I mean no disrespect to the Masons. I am not only a Mason, but also a Knight Templar, and still I say it is not a religious order.

The Baptists were the first to establish a denominational orphanage in this State; the Episcopalians next, then the Presbyterians followed, (the Methodists ought to have one,) and the Odd Fellows are now trying to establish one. The Lutherans, while they have none in this State, they have more in this country than any other denomination.

I come now to another feature relating to foreign mission work; that is, medical missions. I have had opportunities of learning something on this subject. While in London I was the guest of a Presbyterian elder by the name of Maxwell who has a brother distinguished as a medical missionary. I had a conversation also with J. Hudson Taylor, perhaps the foremost missionary of to-day, and who, to my surprise, told me he was a Baptist preacher. I heard Dr. Post, who has been for many years stationed at Beyrout, Syria, address the great World's Missionary Conference in London, and he gave several examples of how graciously the work of the medical missionary operated on the minds of the people. Among others he gave this instance: He was attending a Christmas festival being held in a hospital, where he met an old man with white beard, turban and loose flowing robes—a Mohammedon, and a lineal descendant of Saladin, the great captain who fought Richard of the Lion's Heart. He was proud of his lineage. "A month before," said Dr. Post, "if I had gone to his house he would have driven me away as a christian dog, but now he seizes my hand and covers it with kisses, and bows himself to my very feet. What led him to do this? He came to that hospital blind, and I had restored his sight, and with his eyes opened his ears are ready to receive the message of the gospel."

Dr. Valentine, a Presbyterian medical missionary, went to India. His health failed, and he was recommended to go to the Himalaya Mountains. On his way thither he had to pass through Jeypore, where he met the Maharajah, or king of that province, whose wife was very ill, and for whom he besought the services of Dr. Valentine. Through the blessing of God she was restored, and the king said, "What can I do for you?" Dr. Valentine said, "Let me preach the gospel to your people." The king said, "Won't you stay here as my private physician?" The doctor replied, "Only on condition that you will allow me to preach the gospel without let or hindrance." The king agreed. He remained there nine years, and now the United Presbyterian church has a prosperous mission there.

Dr. Maxwell, in his paper read at the same conference, said, "It is my absolute conviction that in heathen and Mohammedan lands, there is no class of men to whom the Lord has entrusted more opportunities of sowing the seed of the word in the hearts of men than those enjoyed by the medical missionaries, and I am satisfied that a right appreciation of this ought to constrain the church of Christ to enter with a far more confident and liberal heart upon a ministry so nearly after the Lord's own pattern."

I do not mean that we should feed and clothe people to bring them into the church.

There are more miserably poor people in Wilmington than in any community I ever saw. These are so many who come here from the country to be sustained by the church; so many with so little principle that the members of the families will join different churches in order to secure help from each. They are never seen at church, and you never hear of them until they appear before the Associations. I have very little respect for [illegible]. But there are some old infirm members for whom we are not caring as we ought.

We had at the Goldsboro Convention a Bro. Newhall, who has for years been a missionary to the Telugus. I asked him to tell us about the great revival among that people. He said, "Brahminism and Buddhism do not antagonize the selfish principle in man. For years the work in that country languished, and three times an effort was made to discontinue the mission. A Bro. Clough was sent out there. A famine came, and the people of America and England sent supplies to aid the people. News came to Bro. Clough that there had been many converts to the christian religion. He examined two hundred who gave satisfactory evidences of true religion; but he was told they had no caste, and if he took them into his church it would ruin it. He was distressed, and one day he read the passage, 'This man receiveth sinners and eateth with them.' As he was reading his wife came in and called his attention to the same passage. He baptized the two hundred, and in a few weeks a message came to England from him saying, 'We baptized two thousand and twelve yesterday,' and now there are between fifty and sixty thousand converts in the Baptist missions of that country. The people said, 'When we had nothing to eat the people in America and elsewhere sent us supplies; they did not know us, and were no kin to us, but sympathized with us, and that is the kind of religion we want.'"

I believe that many times the way to a man's heart is through his body. I believe the Catholics are ahead of us on this line. I do not approve of all their methods, their monks and nuns, but I do say we can learn lessons from them, for they send out into the by-ways and slums of our cities and make every effort to minister to their miserable inhabitants. When yellow fever was ravaging Norfolk the Catholic priest died at his post and thus gave that church a standing in that city it could never have had, had not its representative proven himself a man of God.

You ought to go out among the poor. Leave your business for awhile—it will not suffer—and go out with me, and instead of delegating your charities to me, come in contact with them and make them respect the religion you profess.

Are You Going to Get a New Song Book?

Many of our Sunday-schools will introduce a new song book this spring, and, as I had seen no notice of it in the RECORDER, I thought it might not be out of place to call the attention of our schools to the book, "Hymns New and Old," just published by the Baptist Book Concern, Louisville, Ky., and edited by brethren D. B. Towner, T. T. Eaton, D. D., and G. H. Simmons.

Many of our brethren complain that nearly all our Sunday school music must be prepared by other denominations. I have examined the book and am highly pleased with it, and two of my churches have already adopted it.

The spirit of true devotion is not found in much of the singing heard in our Sunday-schools. I consider this book a great improvement along this line. There are several pieces appropriate for missions, &c. Some few old hymns are placed in the book, also.

Let us not only preach a pure gospel but sing it, and learn the children to sing it. Examine the book. Price thirty-five cents by mail. I hope the Supply Store will keep it for our schools. J. A CAMPBELL.

Rules for Everybody.

The Rev. Charles Simeon, the distinguished preacher of the English church, once said that the more he tried, the more he felt the importance of adhering to the following rules:

1. To hear as little as possible what is to the prejudice of others.
2. To believe nothing of the kind till I am absolutely forced to it.
3. Not to drink in the spirit of one who circulates an ill report.
4. Always to moderate, as far as I can, the unkindness which is unkindness toward others.
5. Always to believe, that if the other side were heard a very different account would be given to the matter.—Exchange.

The Papers and "Helps"

Published by the American Baptist Publication Society are in every way worthy of the truth and of the churches in whose interest they are published, in the finish and perfection of their typographical appearance; in their spirit and scope; in the ability of the editing; in the analytic skill and spiritual insight of their Scriptural comment; in their comprehensive adaptation to all ages and every grade of mind, and last, but not least, in their loyalty to the truth which is our own as Baptists. In all these respects, these periodicals are all that could be asked. Our schools, therefore, will do well to give not "a trial" merely, but a constant and lasting use.

No great characters are formed in this world without suffering and self-denial.—Matthew Henry.

For all derangements of the throat and lungs, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the speediest and most reliable remedy. Even in the advanced stages of consumption, this wonderful preparation affords great relief, checks coughing, and induces sleep.

POKINE.

I have used the within remedy (Pokine) with great success. JAMES H. LASSITER.

I have used the Pokine Remedy (prepared by W. T. Cheatham, Jr.) in case of Sciatica with the result of positive relief in a few hours, and believe if used as directed is will effect a permanent cure.
J. L. H. MISSILLIER.

MARCH 6, 1891.
For the benefit of the public, I unhesitatingly recommend Cheatham's wonderful remedy, "Pokine," to all sufferers of rheumatism. It has produced marvelous results in my case. I was a sufferer of the malady for five years, and after taking a few bottles was entirely cured.
Very respectfully,
W. W. DOWTIN.

HENDERSON, N. C., March 7, '91.
MR. W. T. CHEATHAM:
Dear Sir—My wife was down in bed with rheumatism, and the Pokine I bought of you gave her relief after taking four doses. She has not been troubled since. It is the best medicine she ever took for rheumatism. Respectfully,
ZACK DAVIS.

MR W. T. CHEATHAM, JR:
Dear Sir—I have been afflicted with rheumatism time and again, for the past thirteen years. I have received more relief from Pokine than any medicine I ever took, and therefore take great pleasure in recommending it to all sufferers of rheumatism. Very respectfully,
F. G. MITCHELL.

JANUARY 19, 1891.
W. T. CHEATHAM, JR.:
Dear Sir—I desire to say that in January last I was down with rheumatism; my suffering was great, and I was completely prostrated. One bottle of your Pokine completely relieved me, and I have not had any rheumatism since. My son also was relieved of rheumatism by Pokine.
Yours truly,
CHARLES G. BURROUGHS.

Need for Chapels in Brazil.

As a wise, loving parent looks after the discipline and training of his children, so should a wise and christian administration provide for its new missions and converts.

Some one might ask, why the Apostles did not see to the building of churches, etc. Christianity was new and fiercely opposed then, and all temporal monuments would only have provoked more hostility. To day, christianity is an accepted institution in nearly all the world; the preaching of the word is everywhere attended, its schools patronized, and its humanitarian centres preferred to all others.

When a man is converted, he desires a sacred place of worship for himself and family, a christian school for his children, an orphanage where he may have to leave his own children some day, a christian hospital where he may find mercy and kindness bestowed, should he need them. Or in case the christian should never need them, he wishes them for those who have them not. While sin reigns, these institutions are a necessity. If on a journey one finds a wounded or sick man without home and friends, he ought to take him to the nearest house and provide for him; but in cities, where such cases appear many times in a year, month or day, a standing, ready institution is a necessity—an evidence of the loving care of christians.

A house of worship is the first public necessity of the new convert who is nearly always poor. If he is rich, the missionary hesitates and often will not ask him to give largely for such an object, for fear the new convert should think that he was seeking his money; and perhaps the missionary or his Board will be obliged to provide an ill-suited rented room for years; many people will not attend such a place of worship.

But some one will say: To build the people chapels, will spoil them, but these facts do not prove the statement true. On the same reasoning it will spoil a child to educate and provide for him while young.

The Presbyterians who have been in Brazil over thirty years have built several churches and helped to build many more; but the natives are taking it up and are now building many by themselves, with a number of other good works going on. What is needed is a good missionary who will teach the native christians their duty. Those who are truly christians are not going to be lost by the lack of a little good will and good works. Evil men will abuse the best and purest blessings.

Though we preach the gospel everywhere without price, hardly the most enthusiastic would favor building in every town, but in places, and in proportion as God raised up pastors and congregations. Neither would we favor building fine structures, but plain ones, and even in these cases, requiring that few native christians in that place give a half or fourth of the cost. These first buildings should be in the larger cities, and as God raised up congregations around the cities, those who had their house given them should be taught to aid other present weaker churches.

In Brazil the Baptists have only one building; that is, in Bahia. The Board gave $4,000 and the natives gave $1,000. The Board has no more expenses with this church, i. e., pays no more rent, lights, etc. During the eight years preceding the purchase, the Board paid some $4,000 for rent, etc. That expense has been cut off. The native christians could not have accumulated so much perhaps in ten or fifteen years, impeding them in their work of evangelization.

Rio, Juiz de Fora, Macelo, Pernambuco, Valenca and some other places in Brazil are sadly in need of buildings. In all the places mentioned, the churches are contributing regularly for a building. In Rio de Janeiro a good sum will be needed; in Juiz de Fora, $2,000 perhaps would enable the brethren to buy. In Macelo and Valenca, $500 each would enable them to secure a convenient building. In all these cases, correspondence would be necessary, so I can only speak approximately. Our house is a large old building which we have repaired and prepared to our desire. In it we have our press, a school-room, pastor's and editor's office, apartments for printer and colporteur, and still other rooms for rent. We are no longer renters. When the church becomes able, she can build as occasion needs. The Baptists, I think, will never regret purchasing this one and so may be encouraged to aid more.

In Samoa, when a christian dies, his name is retained on the church-book with a mark after it to signify that though dead, his contribution shall be continued by others, that the cause may not suffer by his removal. These Samoans were cannibals fifty years ago! Now 30,000 of them are christians.

In 1866, there were but thirty-eight members in the Baptist Mission to the Telugus in India. In 1878, 10,000 were baptized. In 1890, the total membership had risen to 33,838! So has the work prospered in one of the fields opened by Carey and Judson.

The treaty of Brussels, in which seventeen of the great nations pledge themselves to use their influence to stop slave-dealing and regulate the liquor traffic in the Congo Free State, has at length been signed by the United States.

March 13, 1892—Ezekiel 36: 25—38.

THE PROMISE OF A NEW HEART.

Motto Text—"A new heart will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you." Ezek. 36: 26.

Place in Bible History—2 Kings, chapters 24 and 25; 2 Chron., chapter 36.

This is the only lesson from Ezekiel that the Committee have provided for us during the whole seven years' course of Bible study. We would do well, therefore, to take up the whole book and read it through, remembering that it covers three important periods of history and prophecy: First, those prophecies delivered during the four years preceding the final seige of Jerusalem of which we have just been studying (chapters 1—24); second, those concerning the surrounding nations during two years when Ezekiel was silent concerning the Jews, (chapters 25—32); and third, the prophecies of hope and comfort to the Jews after he heard of the downfall of Jerusalem, (chapters 32—48.) Our lesson is taken from the prophecies of this last period. Ezekiel was born in or near Jerusalem about 623 B. C. in the reign of the good king Josiah, at or near the time of the finding of the Book of the Law. His name means "God strengthens." He was carried away captive to Babylon along with Jehoichin and "all the princes and all the men of valor and all the craftsmen and smiths," 598 B. C. (2 Kings 24: 14–16,) when he was twenty-five years of age, and settled with the exiles on the river Chebar. He began to prophesy five years later when he was thirty years of age, and continued to prophesy twenty two years, Ezek. 1: 1; and 20: 17.) He was married, and his wife died about the beginning of the last siege of Jerusalem. While Ezekiel was prophesying on the Chebar in Babylonia, Jeremiah was prophesying at Jerusalem six years. He was also contemporary with Daniel, possibly with Obadiah, and also with Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon; Pharoah Hophra, king of Egypt; the "seven wise men" of Greece; Tarquinius Priscus of Rome; Solon, the wise law-giver of Athens; Æsop, the writer of fables; Sappho, the Greek poetess; and Pythagoras, the philosopher.

Ezekiel, like Jeremiah, was both priest and prophet. The Lord did not suffer his people even in captivity to be without religious teachers, nor did he permit their overthrow, without warning them of the consequences of their sins before sending the destroying armies. Even Sodom had a preacher of righteousness sent to it before its overthrow, and a godly Enoch preached to the antediluvians "of all their ungodly deeds which they had ungodly committed" before "the flood came and took them all away."

The early part of Ezekiel's prophecies are full of warnings to the Jews on account of their sins. Now that Jerusalem is overthrown and destroyed, he comes to the Jews in captivity with precious promises. When man is down, man abuses and kicks him; but God comes knocking at his heart and offering to come in and sup with him.

Read the whole chapter.

Verse 25: "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you and ye shall be clean."

"Then," when "I take you from among the heathen and gather you out of all countries" (verse 24). You need cleansing from idolatry and other sins, you need a new heart before you will serve me aright. Read the 19th chapter of Numbers to see how this clean water was prepared. A red heifer was selected with great care. It must be without spot or blemish to typify the spotless purity and sinless perfection of Christ; red, because of the rarity of the color and perhaps to typify the blood of Christ; "slain without the camp" as Christ was to be crucified without the city of Jerusalem. The priest took of her blood and sprinkled it directly before the tabernacle of the congregation seven times, denoting the completeness of the atonement. Then the whole heifer with her blood was burned, the priest casting cedar-wood and hyssop and scarlet into the midst of the burning. A man that was clean then gathered up the ashes of the heifer and laid them up in a clean place without the camp, where they were kept to be mingled with running water and sprinkled with hyssop upon the people as "a purification for sin." (Num. 19 ⁊⁊, 6, 9, 17—19.)

The blood of Christ is called the "blood of sprinkling" (Heb. 12: 24), and in Isaiah 52: 15 it is said he "shall sprinkle many nations." David in the 51st Psalm doubtless alludes to this use of this "clean water" when he prays "purge me with hyssop and I shall be clean, wash me and I shall be whiter than snow," and his meaning is more apparent when you connect these words of his with the verse that immediately precedes them, "Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts; and in the hidden part thou shalt make me to know wisdom."

There is nothing here to teach "baptism by sprinkling," as some shallow-minded people think.

"And from all your idols." The captivity completely cured the Jews of idolatry.

Verse 26. "A new heart also will I give you." The heart is the centre of life to the body. If that is affected the whole body is affected, for the blood flows from the heart to every portion of the body. The deepest need of humanity is a heart that loves, fears and obeys God. "Truth in the inward parts" and "wisdom in the hidden part" will make the outward life right. No outward forms of control or restraint will reform a man. The thief may be kept from stealing by confinement in prison, but unless he is taught to hate theft, he will commit it again as soon as released from restraint. The Jews gave up their slaves when they were in dread of captivity, but as soon as the seige was raised, they enslaved their brethren again, and their natures must be changed before they would be obedient to God's laws.

V. 27. "And I will put my Spirit within you." The new heart is the work of the Holy Spirit. God is its author, and God's Spirit the agent. Men can not make themselves new creatures. The Creator alone can do this; but he promises to "give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him."

Verses 28, 29 and 30 contain a list of the temporal blessings that would follow the spiritual change in the hearts of the people. Jeremiah had the spirit of God in him and though he was beaten and forced into prison because of his faithfulness as God's prophet, he was fed from the bakers street, as long as there was any bread in the city, while some were killing and eating their own children. God will provide for his own children even in times of pestilence and famine.

V. 31. One of the offices of the spirit is to make us remember and contemn our own evil ways and loathe ourselves for our iniquities and our abominations David said, "My sin is ever before me."

V. 32. It is not for our own sake, but for the glory of God that we are regenerated and blessed (read verse 22). We ought to bear this continually in mind.

Verses 33 and 34 relate the temporal blessings that were to follow when the people cured of idolatry should return to Jerusalem.

V. 37. "I will yet for this be inquired of." Blessings promised of God came to his people through prayer and by prayer we connect both temporal and spiritual mercies with the love of God.

V. 38. In times of the Passover at Jerusalem great flocks of sheep and lambs were brought to the city for the sacrifice and the feasting, "So shall the waste cities be filled with flocks of men," brought back to the land of their fathers that they may be used by the Almighty for his service and the honor of his name.

Dr. Guthrie says, "As I can empty a vessel filled with air or with oil by pouring water into it, because water is the heavier fluid, so the only way you can empty my heart of the world and the love of the world is by filling it with the love of God."

It is common for worldlings to speak of certain christians as "stumbling blocks," as if that were sufficient excuse for their impenitent lives. What could be thought of a traveller who, seeing a stumbling block in the highway, should deliberately fall over it? Would you not call him a fool?

Deafness Can't be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Camm's Emulsion of Pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil combined with the Hypophosphites, is recommended on its merit alone. It is prescribed by many of the leading Physicians of every state in the Union, besides being recommended by the Doctors and teachers of Medicine in Europe. This alone goes far to establish the justice of its claim to superiority. It is beyond doubt the best remedy in the world for the cure of Consumption, and all kindred diseases. It will positively cure consumption, if used before this fearful disease has made too much headway, particularly if it is persevered in after the arrest of the disease. Wherever there is any wasting disease of any kind, Camm's Emulsion is the remedy. To derive the full benefit from this truly valuable medicine, it is recommended that it be used only by the advice of an intelligent Physician. For sale by all druggists. Manufactured only by E. A. Depot to Depot.

HOW THEY CURE A MAN OF ALCOHOLISM IN TWENTY-ONE DAYS AT THE GREENSBORO, N. C., KEELEY INSTITUTE.

Editor of the Biblical Recorder:—What a vast difference in a man's feelings from the time he leaves the depot at Greensboro, N. C., for the Keeley Institute, to the end of the twenty-one days' treatment, when he embarks at the same depot for home!

There can be no greater metamorphosis than from a besotted alcoholic-diseased victim to a man in full mental and physical stature, with intellectual faculties in proud play, as the great and good God intended.

"But I can't understand," doubtingly replies an uninitiated RECORDER reader, "how four injections of the bi-chloride of gold in the upper left arm every day for three weeks and taking a two teaspoonsful of the Keeley tonic every two hours while awake can cure and eradicate the irresistible thirst for strong drink."

And a man cured by the Keeley treatment is as much in the dark as the RECORDER reader. All he knows, or cares to know, is that he is cured.

There is no restriction placed upon a patient, no prison bounds or fetters. He is given pure whiskey by the physician in charge and is permitted to carry it to his room, or in his pocket as he strolls around Greensboro, and there is nothing to restrain him from drinking it whenever he feels disposed.

Yet, the hardest and longest drinkers, the most confirmed sots, after a few days, refuse to drink it and refuse to take it, and not because of anything in the liquor, but simply because he does not want it. His stomach does not refuse it; he has no nausea; his stomach would retain it, but his desire for it has fled and he can't understand how it could elevate or exhilarate him. He does not dignify it by abhorring or despising it, because it requires some active exercise of the intellectual faculties to do that; he is absolutely indifferent to it! It has passed out of his life and he "does not need it in his business."

Of course, then, it affords no temptation. He is cured and must cultivate the taste for strong drink anew. This no sane man will do, who has passed through the fearful ordeal of a drunken life and experienced the horrors of "sobering up," with nerves shattered and brain filled with the terrors of disordered fancies. The writer has seen men shaken and racked with convulsions from drink and shrinking in fear and horror from imaginary pursuers in the frenzy of delirium, yet straightened out and brought back to a normal condition in a few hours without suffering. No drug is employed to produce this change; it is effected by the treatment.

The patient who has finished the course of treatment finds himself so changed as to almost require another introduction to himself. He expands, broadens out in his charity and love for his fellowman, especially to those diseased with the alcoholic habit, as he once was, and his earnest desire is to rescue them.

Some go back to drink by recultivating the taste, until the disease again becomes uncontrollable by his will power, and these are estimated at about five per cent. of the sixty thousand who have taken the treatment. Many young men are carried to the Institute by relatives against their will, who do not want the taste banished, and often men, especially the aged, are mental and physical wrecks, until they have lost all will power, and are over-persuaded to swallow liquor when they don't want it. But no remedy for the maladies of man has ever been conceived or concocted that has had grander success and produced greater and more far-reaching beneficial results.

Think of it, ninety-five per cent. of a disease, hitherto regarded as incurable, redeemed and restored by the Keeley method! Yet if a man dies, or goes crazy out of the sixty thousand who have taken the treatment, it is borne on electricity all over the country, heralded abroad in the salacious and sensational press and rolled as a sweet morsel under the tongues of the opponents—and whiskey has many and powerful friends—just as if men didn't die, or go crazy every day, who never subjected themselves to the Keeley method.

So, if one minister of the gospel totters and falls before the seductions of sin, it is published over the world under "horse head lines," while not a word is said about, nor a thought bestowed on, the thousands of staunch, true, God-fearing and serving and loving preachers who have given their lives to his work.

The one is done in favor of whiskey, and the other to disparage religion, and it all amounts to the same thing.

There are now living in this State eighty-nine men who have been cured of the liquor habit and only one has been known to drink afterwards, and this poor fellow was crazy when he was brought to the Greensboro Keeley Institute, was crazy all the time he was there, and did not possess sufficient strength of mind to prevent taking what he didn't want.

But how do you know the cure will last? is a common question. How does a man know how any cure of any disease will last? He knows he had to begin drinking to produce the disease, and there can be no excuse for a man to expose himself a second time, with no temptation to lead him in that direction, because he doesn't want strong drink. If he again exposes himself, he does it with malice aforethought.

The grand remedy has, by a contract with Dr. Keeley, been introduced by the government into twenty-nine National and State soldiers' and sailors' homes and hospitals, and no higher endorsement could be given.

If this blessed discovery had been made [illegible] think of the wrath of destitute widows and orphans that would have been [illegible] and the curses of criminals and the [illegible] of crime that would never have [illegible] and made!

It is pleasant to turn to the other picture and witness the thousands of happy homes before resting under the gloom of the curse of drunkenness, now alive with smiling, cheerful wives and gleeful children, and all because husband and father has been cured of his soul and body-engulping craving for the reeking broth of hell.

Pittsburg. GEO. A. MACBETH & CO.

We print in this issue the annual report of the president to the members of the Connecticut Mutal Life Insurance Company, because we desire in all possible ways to encourage this sort of insurance literature, and also because it tells some things which have a bearing upon recent events in life insurance. During all the struggle for an enormous new business, which has resulted in driving one president from office, the Connecticut Mutual has stood for conservative methods. Other companies have been conservative, but this one has been, if we may use the term, aggressively so. Colonel Greene has not failed, in season, and many persons have thought out of season, to preach against this rush for size. He has been content to see his company stand still for twenty years, and even to go backward in amount of business, so that to day the Connecticut Mutual stands as the strongest and most conspicuous example in this country of the safety of the foundations upon which the structure of life insurance is built. It is a complete refutation of the assertion so often made that new blood is necessary to the stability of life insurance. Twenty years ago the Connecticut Mutual had in force policies insuring a hundred and eighty three millions of dollars, while its assets were less than thirty-two millions. Now it has in force one hundred and fifty-five millions, with assets of sixty millions. Its insurance condition is certainly not an unhealthy one, as the president says that its death losses last year were less than eighty per cent. of the table rate. That shows health. Further, only one fourth of the company's business is on lives under forty-four and one quarter of it is on lives over sixty-one. These facts prove conclusively, as it seems to us, that life insurance is founded upon unalterable laws, and does not depend for success upon "new blood" or patent devices. It is well in every community to have men who "spurn the rage of gain," who conduct their business affairs on the theory that life puts upon them a duty to others as well as to themselves. So it is well for us that we should have corporations managed with an eye single to the work for which they are organized and not to minister to the ambitions or follies of their managers. The Connecticut Mutual, from its age and its locality, stands a conspicuous figure in the life insurance history of this country, and whatever may be one's views in regard to the proper prosecution of the business, he cannot but feel grateful that this corporation has stood unmoved amid wars and panics, a representative of all that is best and strongest in life insurance.

BALTO. 1864 SADLERS BRYANT AND STRATTON COLLEGE

FOUNDED 1864 by the present executive—Occupies four buildings—Unrivalled in facilities for educating YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN for success in life. The outlook for the most favorable for business opportunities. The demand for our graduates is unprecedented. No vacation; pupils can enter at any time with equal advantage. Never attend a school because the tuition is cheap, for CHEAP is very dear; it means cheap surroundings, inferior facilities, and offers NO opportunities for securing POSITIONS for its pupils and graduates. This school, owing to its HIGH standard of excellence, has placed in business more young men and women from Md., Va., N. C., S. C. and Ga. than all similar institutions combined. Catalogue and particulars mailed. W. H. SADLER, PRES.—F. A. SADLER, SEC'Y, BALTIMORE, MD.

BRIGHTON, ENGLAND, Oct. 1st, 1891.

My dear Jim:—Yours of September 19th, received. We are comfortably fixed in this "Queen of Watering Places," my office being just at the Jubilee Clock Tower. I had no idea of the amount of prejudice that exists against anything that is American, or their slowness to adopt improvements. I saw them cutting wheat here with the old fashioned sickle. Of course, mention of the Electropoise, causes smiles of incredulity; but those who were persuaded to try it when I first came, are finding my prophecies verified, and are beginning to talk for me.

One man especially who laughed when I told him I could cure his Varicose Veins, is now telling how he walks miles, where he could not formerly go blocks, with comfort. As experience shows that quickest results are obtained with Dyspepsia and Constipation, I place then first on the list of chronic diseases, and persons put under treatment for those and Rheumatism, are beginning to be good advertisements for me, so that it will not be long before I will have as good testimonials as you have in the Old North State.

My success has also been good with Female Complaints, and wherever I can get them to report regularly, find no difficulty in producing satisfactory results. My best case is a man, who had Grippe two years ago, which run into Chronic Bronchitus; he is doing as nicely as he could ask. Another good one is an old woman who sprained her ankle three years ago, and has never been able to walk or stand since. The swelling is disappearing and she has now a good appetite and is able to sleep. I am glad to hear that you are having such good success; the character of your references is very gratifying, as is also the fact, that our oldest patrons are our best friends.

Make all who are not perfectly satisfied with their own treatment, report to you frequently, and give them plain directions by letter, and there will be no difficulty in getting the best results. Yours truly,

John N. WEBB.

MARRIED.

DICKIE—COPPEDGE—On March 2nd, 1892, in Wakefield Academy, by Rev. O. L. Stringfield, Mr. George T. Dickie of Vance county, to Miss Manolia K. Coppedge, daughter of Rev. Geo. W. Coppedge of Wakefield.

FERRELL—VEASEY—On Feb. 17th, 1892, at the residence of Mr. A. J. Veasey in Granville county, N. C., by Rev. J. F. McDuffie, Mr. G. E. Ferrell of Wake county and Miss Lala Veasey of Granville.

DIED.

CARTER—Sister Amelia Carter departed this life February 21st, 1892. She was a member of Mt. Vernon Baptist church, and was loved by all who knew her. She leaves a husband and three children to mourn her loss. She died as she lived, in full faith of the gospel. May the kind Heavenly Father sustain by his grace the family, and may they be comforted by the thought that their loss is her eternal gain. She was a kind wife and a loving mother. A FRIEND.

BOBBITT—In Littleton, N. C., January 21st, 1892, William H. Bobbitt, Esq., aged seventy-one years, three months and twenty-one days days.

The deceased was a worthy member of the Baptist church in Littleton. For fifty years he had been a faithful follower of the Lord Jesus Christ, and had great delight in his service.

He was both farmer and merchant, and successful in both. Just to all, humble and peaceful, a loving husband, and a kind and indulgent father. He leaves a widow and four children, two sons and two daughters, and many friends, to mourn his loss. His end was peace. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." J. M.

SUTTON—Died at his home in Perquimans county, February 19th, Bro. T. J. Sutton, in his seventy-first year. He had been in feeble health for two years, and bore his afflictions through all those months with christian resignation. For many years he was deacon of Bethel church, and an earnest worker in the Sunday-school. He was a good man. He leaves a wife and a host of friends to mourn their loss. May all be prepared to meet in heaven. A. W. B.

WELLS—Bro. Eli Wells died in Wilmington November, 1891, after a long illness. He was in his fortieth year. A short while before his death he lost three of his children. He bore his loss like a christian soldier. He was a member of Mt. Holly Missionary Baptist church, Pender county. He made a faithful member, and filled the office of a deacon well for a number of years. We mourn our loss, but rejoice at his gain. His life was a victory, his death a triumph. We as a church and fellow pilgrims, tender our heartfelt sympathies to his grief-stricken wife and children. And we do humbly pray the Captain of our Salvation to watch over and keep his wife and little orphans until they shall meet in the glory land.

Done by order of the church at Mt. Holly, Feb. 14th, 1892.

I. CARROLL, for Com.

POOL—Near Auburn, on Feb. 12th, 1892, Mrs. Mary Pool, wife of Mr. Hardy Pool and daughter of the late Mr. Eurias Baucom. Mrs. Pool was seventy-four years of age and had been a consistent member of Mt. Moriah Baptist church for over forty-one years, leaving besides a devoted, aged husband, eight children, five sons and three daughters, to mourn her death. She was loved and respected by all who knew her. But one so lovely and attractive in person and disposition, so guileless and gentle, could but win, as she did, the admiration and affection of all with whom she was brought in contact. Especially did she abound in that charity which thinketh no evil, but hopeth all things and believeth all things for the best. Indeed, the whole life of this gentle, sweet, humble and faithful christian woman was a living sermon whose influence for good extended far and near to all who were privileged to know her. Our heart-felt sympathies and prayers go out with and for the bereaved family. May the God of mercy and comfort heal their sorrow and give them peace. COM.

MOORE—Died at the home of deacon Geo. L. Parker in Rocky Mount, N. C., on Sunday, Feb. 21st, 1892, Mrs. Alice Moore, aged thirty-three years.

Month after month have we watched this uncomplaining child of God pursued by that silent, relentless foe, consumption, until at last, wearied and wasted, she could hold out no longer, this enemy of her body claimed its victim, and transporting angels took her soul and left us only memories of one of the purest, sweetest lives we have ever known. For cheerfulness under shadows, patience in suffering, uncomplaining submissiveness to an inscrutable providence, loving mindfulness of the comfort and pleasure of others, she excelled any one whom the writer has ever known. Her departure has left sadness in the home, the church and the community, but the fragrance of her pure sweet life, and the inspiration of her unquestioning and unfaltering faith in her Saviour, will linger with us and influence us until we too shall be called up higher and shall meet her, not wasted by disease and fatigued by suffering, but clothed in all the freshness and beauty of eternal youth and health. Until then, let us "sorrow not even us others which have no hope."

J. F. LOVE.

HOBBS—Abailla A. Hobbs died January, 1892, aged fifty years. She was a faithful member of Warwick church, and was a kind neighbor, and loved her brethren and her pastor. The humble christian life she lived will never be forgotten by those who knew her. While sick in bed she insisted on her brethren and sisters visiting, talking and praying with her. It was indeed a source of comfort and strength to any child of God to stand by her bedside and listen to her cheering words.

As she was nearing the other shore she said, "It is pleasant to stay with husband, children and friends, but it is far better to go and be with Jesus. I do not want to stay longer; I ask not to get well; but let me go to meet Jesus." And calling her children to her she bid them farewell, charging them to live christians and meet her where parting would be no more.

She leaves a husband, three children, one sister and three brothers to mourn their loss. Sister Hobbs will be missed. Her place in her home will never be filled. All who visited and knew her loved her.

God bless Bro. Hobbs and the dear children, sanctifying her death to the good of them and the church, is the prayer of the preacher.

JOSIAH ELLIOTT.

SIMMONS—Sister Martha Alexander, the beloved wife of Bro. Dennis Simmons, died Feb. 26th, 1892, in the fifty-ninth year of her age. She gave herself to Christ while young, was zealous in christian work and died triumphant in the faith. In coming to Williamston where there was no Baptist church, nor preaching by a Baptist minister (except the Anti-missionaries), she began work to have one. A preacher, Elder C. J. Nelson, was invited to come and preach as a house might be secured. Finally, a little band of five ladies including herself were organized into a church. Services were held in the old hotel, the court-house, the masonic hall, the old corner-store, for years, until locked out. She began to solicit funds, and, through the kindness of her husband, the present building was erected in which we worship to-day. In 1882, her husband was given in answer to prayer and joined the little church to be a faithful servant of Jesus Christ.

She was a friend of the young and never failed in the Sunday-school, at her home, on the street, or in the stores, to talk to them words of wisdom and love. Several of these have made men of themselves, and they do not hesitate to say that Sister Simmons was the spirit who inspired them. She was a good and substantial friend to the poor, and many were the charities which came from her hand. She was her pastor's comforter and sympathiser at all times, in every thing true and loyal to her husband, friends, her church and her God. Her place can never be filled. The blow falls heavily upon the town, the church and her dear husband. For thirty-five years she had been the light and comfort of his home, and the separation was hard. On Friday morning, 10:25, surrounded by near relatives and friends, she passed from the scenes of earth to those of heaven. From Tarboro, Scotland Neck, Rocky Mount, Norfolk and Columbia, came those who had known her to pay the last tribute to her memory.

On Sunday morning in the presence of a large congregation, her funeral sermon was preached by her pastor from 1 Cor. 15: 55, 56. Amid many sobs the coffin was closed and her body conveyed to the cemetery and laid away to await the resurrection of the just. G. J. D.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, Bro. Geo. W. Scarborough passed peacefully away on the morning of January 20th, 1892, in the eighty-fourth year of his age, at his residence in Mark's Creek Township, Wake county. He has been a member of Hephzibah church fifty-four years, and an active deacon for a number of years. Hephzibah church feels that she has lost one of her truest friends. But to see him at his best you would have to be intimately acquainted with him, and to be thus was but to love him the more.

Resolved 1. That Hephzibah church realizes a great loss in the death of our beloved Bro. Geo. W. Scarborough, yet bows in humble submission to divine will. We herein express our appreciation of his membership as a high honor to the cause we represent.

Resolved 2. That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved wife and family, and comfort them with the noble thought that they have, as do Hephzibah church, so bright a representative in the world above.

Resolved 3. We trust that the mantle of the father may fall upon the sons, and that the influence of his life may so dwell in them that being dead he may yet speak.

Vile cod-liver oil has lost its vileness in Scott's Emulsion and gained a good deal in efficiency.

It is broken up into tiny drops which are covered with glycerine, just as quinine in pills is coated with sugar or gelatine. You do not get the taste at all.

The hypophosphites of lime and soda add their tonic effect to that of the half-digested cod-liver oil.

Let us send you a book on CAREFUL LIVING—free.

Think Gently of the Erring.

Keep back the words thou fain would'st speak
Against the erring one;
Revengeful thoughts and scornful words
Will never cure the evil done.
Remember, we ourselves oft err,
And oft from duty's path depart;
Against the weak and erring one
O, harden not your heart!

Think over all the trials borne,
The struggles and unrest;
Be not to hasty to condemn,
Have pity—that is best.
Another's faults oft seem so great,
When placed beside our own.
"Let him who is without a sin
Be first to cast a stone."

Uplift the fallen and the weak,
Bid them look up and live;
Tell them of him who on the Cross
Died so that they might live.
O lead them gently by the hand,
Till darkened roads are passed;
Then Jesus, who forgives thy sins,
Will lead you, too, at last.

The Power of Example.

A well-known christian merchant of this city not long ago had an urgent telegram calling him to see an old friend residing in a suburban town. When he arrived at the house of his friend he found the latter very ill only expected to live for a few hours. The friend asked to see him alone, and when by themselves, said: "My doctor tells me that I can live at the most but twenty-four hours. I wanted once more to see you and say to you something that I have never told you." In early life, as young men, they had met in this city in business relations, and it was at that period that the close bond of personal friendship was formed. They went much together in society, and had great happiness in each other. The one who was about to pass away had in their young manhood a cousin, a beautiful young lady in this city, in whose society both these friends passed much time. On one occasion she gave an elegant party, at which both were in attendance. During the evening when refreshments were served, she came to the friend of her cousin and asked him to drink with her a glass of wine. Very fond of her, the young man was sorely perplexed, but finally declined, saying: "I will do anything for you that I properly can, but I cannot drink the glass of wine." Turning from him with somewhat of an air of displeasure, she said: "Well, I will go to—"(her cousin), "he will drink it with me." She crossed the room to her cousin, extended the invitation to him with the air of confident expectation, but he also declined, greatly to her astonishment, and not a little to her chagrin. In this last interview, many years after the party in question, one thing which passed between these two old friends was the statement of the one who was about to die, which he wished to make as something of a confession, to the effect that he was at that time an observer across the room of what transpired with his cousin, and although he had never before thought of abstaining from intoxicating beverages, to the social use of which he had always been accustomed, influenced by the example of his friend in declining, he also determined to decline. He wished now to make acknowledgment of his gratitude for this eventful incident in his life, which he had no doubt had saved him from excesses and ruin which, in his case, would have almost certainly followed the continuance of the drink habit.

In this incident may be seen a practical illustration of the power of right example. Its influence is sometimes more potent and far-reaching than words of counsel alone, however good they may be. May every one, young and old, realize in the light of this dying statement of one friend to another, the great value and importance of the abstainer's example to others.—National Temperance Advocate.

"Is That So?"

Why should intelligent persons, as if they were parrots, adopt and utter certain phrases and exclamations? I sat by Mrs. Blank (her husband is a clergyman) in the street car a few days ago, and after we had exchanged greetings, I said, "My Cousin Angeline sails for Liverpool to-day." "Is that so!" said Mrs. Blanks. "Yes," I said, rallying as well as I could, for this reply takes all the spirit from me, "and she is always very ill on the ocean." "Is that so?" said Mrs. Blank again. A pause followed. How can one continue to pay out the coin of conversation if not even the interest comes back?

I was glad to get out of the car and meet pretty Amy Dexter. I had a bit of news for her. Amy is in the high school, and I told her at once that Miss Cummins, who taught her botany last year, was to be married soon. "Is that so?" returned Amy. I love Amy, but I do not like "Is that so!" and I hastened on to get out of its way; but as I went along Frank Sullivan overtook me, and will you believe that when I asked Frank if Mr. Stockton had really promised to answer the question, "The Lady or the Tiger?" he exclaimed, "Is that so?"

Later in the day I told Mr. Emory that his playing of the organ last Sunday had been complimented, and he smiled and murmured, "Is that so?"—Annie M. Libby, in Wide Awake.

Our Enemies.

There is within us a tendency toward sinning—that is one enemy. However we may have contracted the tendency, it is in us powerful, terrible. Down below act, down below volition, down into that which all evil acts, thoughts, choices strike their roots, is a black soil of evil. Sinning starts and blooms from it as poisons do from swamps. All the trees of our bad actions suck up lusty nourishment from it. Our depraved nature—certainly that is one enemy.

A personal devil is another enemy. There is a personal devil, all of whose energies are concentrated towards destruction. Let us not think he is not. The Scripture declares he is. "For your adversary, the devil, goeth about like a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour."

Companionship may be another enemy. Men often march to death in companies, under the lead of Captain Scoff and Lieutenant Sneer. Friends gather round a man. Friends! they are hornets, furnished with implements, hornets always carry something to suck with and something to sting with. "Treat; be generous," they say. They touch the man's fancied honor, and money flows like water. These so called friends welcome the man, praise him. "Open hearted, manly," they call him. The young man is fired, careless of anything but this momentary esteem. But the heated moments speed apace; the revel ends; leaving what revels always do—emptiness of pocket; fullness of remorse.

No young man can live and not be obliged to meet such enemies as these—his own evil nature; his devil; bad companionship. Yes, but he may master them. If he will have it so, the Holy Spirit will regeneratingly change his evil nature; the omnipotent Christ will stand with him in his fight against the devil; and the prayer "Lead us not into temptation" will keep him from bad companionships. Let us arm ourselves with all divine helps, that we may be vanquishers ourselves. Let us put on the whole armor of God. Let us have unfaltering faith in the prowess of righteousness. Let us do all we can to aid our tempted brothers in their fight with the enemies it is the doom of life to combat, and so likewise shall we help ourselves.—Wayland Hoyt D. D., in Young People's Union.

A Selfish Measure.

Our interest in the misfortune of others is likely to be measured by our personal esteem for those who are newly in trouble, rather than by their needs, or by their personal relation to others. We read of a railroad accident. Quickly our eyes run over the list of killed or injured, and it is with a feeling of relief that we find no one of our dear ones named there. If, indeed, there be no name which we have heard before, no neighbor or prominent fellow-citizen mentioned in that list, the accident seems a less important one than we feared. And if it be shown that no passengers were among the injured, but only employes of the railroad company, the whole thing is likely to pass out from our mind as a matter hardly worth another thought. Yet why should we feel that our circle of affection or of acquaintance is alone of importance to us? Why should we fail of being impressed by the thought that every one of these killed or injured was a center interest and influence in a circle as important as that of which we are a center? Why should we not see that the very fact that it is an employe of the company who was stricken down increased the probability that a needy home was be reft of its support, and that striken hearts had now the double burden of sorrow and of want? It is a selfish measure of misfortune that is gauged by its effect on ourselves and our dear ones. If we would but go outside of ourselves in our thinking, and would consider how other hearts are affected by the misfortune that attracts our attention, it would seem a very different matter to us. And if we would but think of those who are newly sorrowing as those who are dear to our Friend of friends, and who are commended to us as his representatives, we should find that our relation to them is closer than we had imagined. It is true that we can not take the whole world into our hearts; but it is also true that we ought not to think and feel as if there were no world of importance outside of our personal circle of acquaintance.—Sunday-school Times.

Girls and Business.

Don't cry when things go a little wrong. The bane of success in a girl's work is often found in her quick sensibility, her readiness to take offense at a word of criticism, or to be hurt and show wounded feelings, if some one who has a perfect right to do so, finds fault perhaps with unnecessary frankness and directness. The soft cheek suddenly hangs out the storm signal of a crimson blush, the eyes fill, the girl is hurt, and shows it in a place where feeling should have no room to press in an entering wedge. A girl who has her way to make in this world, with its many cares and responsibilities, must remember that sentimentality has no standing ground in the proper performance of her task, and must expect her work to be gauged precisely as a boy's would be, by its real value.—Mrs. M. E. Sangster.

Pure Cod Liver Oil And Phosphates

It has required much experience and care to enable the proprietor to combine the Oil and Phosphates so that they would become thoroughly efficacious together, and he has the only recipe by which this can be accomplished. Another important advantage which the Pure Cod Liver Oil possesses prepared in this way, over the plain cod liver oil, is the fact that besides adding largely to its medical qualities it preserves the oil pure and sweet for a longer period than it can be done in any other manner. This fact alone would recommend this form of using the Oil even if the phosphates did not also add vastly to the healing qualities of the preparation. The perfect incorporation of the phosphates with the cod liver oil has only been accomplished by the adoption of the most perfect rules of chemistry; and a medicine has been produced which while it is so efficacious is also perfectly

Sketches of Pioneer Baptist Preachers in North Carolina.

BY JOHN W. MOORE, STATE HISTORIAN.

MEMOIR VII—REV. JEREMIAH WALKER.

CHAPTER ONE.

When the young king, George III., made his late Scottish teacher the Earl of Bute and Prime Minister of the British Empire, many tide waiters hastened to do homage to the man who was thus shown to be so high in the monarch's trust and affections. Among others who thus sought to recommend themselves both to the king and his minister was the adroit and unscrupulous Gov. Tryon of North Carolina. That fair region now included in the counties of Warren and Franklin was formed into the county he and the General Assembly called Bute. But the name proved as evanescent as the power of the man whose patronymic it bore. The great Revolution came and with it the name of Bute disappeared from our map to make room for those of the statesman and the hero who are still preserved to human remembrance in the names of Franklin and Warren. It was in this favored region that in the year 1747 a man child was born who was to be widely known and honored of men. They called him Jeremiah Walker, but in such poverty and ignorance were his parents and neighbors that small hopes were entertained by even those who loved him best as a child, that anything beyond humble obscurity could ever be his lot in this life. But that obscure child amid the red hills of Warren was not to be chained down by either the accidents of birth or the stress of social environments. In the miserable system, or rather, absence of all system as to school facilities then seen in our country, the lad early evinced a passionate desire for acquaintance with books and letters. Turning aside from all the amusements so dear to the great majority of boys and girls, young Jeremiah Walker could be found, book in hand, whenever the stern requirements of labor on the farm did not compel his assistance. With the small start he managed to get at the hands of a strolling teacher, the dauntless and tireless orator of the future managed to continually augment his slender store of acquirements until long before his majority was attained, the country side was filled with the fame of his knowledge. He early became a member of the Baptist church and in conference charmed all hearts with the ease and grace of his elocution.

As young Walker seemed deeply pious, it was no wonder that a people who rejoiced in such weak preachers as generally served our churches of that day should have leaped to the conclusion that here was a chosen vessel of the Lord. Of course, a young man who so far surpassed all they had ever heard in his utterances on sacred subjects and who also professed to feel that he was called of God to preach the gospel, was gladly welcomed into such holy and tender relations. It was thus while still in his ruddy youth, ere the beard and bronze of manhood had visited his cheeks, that young Mr. Walker was ordained and set apart to the full functions of the gospel ministry. In his marvelous success in such relations, it seemed that all the haste and precipitation of his exaltation were abundantly justified. He went on to astound and conquer all hearts in the magic of his splendid oratory. Nor were the more needed graces of humility, zeal and devotion to God wanting in his conduct. As matchless as he was in the pulpit, the more trying ordeal of the fireside but the more endeared him to the purest and best of his brethren in the Lord. He seemed to them some miracle of grace vouchsafed from on high to lead them on in the green pastures and by the still waters of a higher life in the Lord. As they listened to his glowing addresses in church meetings or heard his ready and luminous expositions at home of the deep things in Scripture that had been so dark and inexplicable to them, they would wonder and ponder by what possible means this youth, reared amongst their own unlettered neighbors, should have gained so much insight into the deep things of the Scriptures. [illegible] has been intimated before in the preceding memoirs of this series, the Baptists and a vast majority of the other white people of the Colony of North Carolina had relapsed into a state of profoundest ignorance so far as literary learning was concerned. Most of their preachers had managed to learn enough to be able to read the Bible, because this was the one sine qua non necessary to their license and ordination. But what a pitiful stock of extraneous and yet necessary learning was theirs, to aid them in understanding and explaining to audiences still more ignorant than themselves, the many historical, geographical and oriental allusions so thickly scattered all through the holy book. What, for example, would be such a commentator's understanding of Luke's enumeration of the nationalities represented at the famous feast of Pentecost. Such men, ignorant from the start as a rule, toiled all the week on their farms, with neither hope nor desire of higher attainments. The beggarly salary allowed them for their pastoral services was so small, that it scarcely entered into their estimate of necessary revenue as a support. They could say with the Indian, "If my preaching is poor, so is my pay." In the general poverty of the country at the time, the people were sorely put to, to get hold of money by any means. English merchants, to aid their own selfish schemes, had procured orders in the councils of royalty in London forbidding the issue of Colonial script, and there was no other circulating medium worth mentioning in the Colony of North Carolina. The steady drain of gold and silver coin sent over the seas to purchase things needed by the wealthier families kept the Province entirely stript of the valuable metals. Besides this, the annual taxes had to be paid in coin after the suppression of Colonial issues of paper bills. We can, then, neither wonder at the smallness of the amounts paid to pastors or the poverty of means generally in the land.

In such a community and amid such clerical peers, Jeremiah Walker flamed up like some resplendent meteor on the bosom of a starless night. His zeal, piety, eloquence and affability to all classes made him a paragon to admiring thousands as he passed on his victorious way from county to county, and later, from State to State. It may be that some reader may incline to the opinion that this picture of the youthful divine is overdrawn. For the benefit of such doubting Thomases, the following fine picture of Mr. Walker is copied from the pages of Rev. Dr. R. B. Semple's History of the Virginia Baptists:

"The invincible energies of his genius towered above every obstruction. He quickly shone forth with such splendor as to make it questionable whether the obscurity of his education, as well as the unlearnedness of his society, did not, by having his mind unshackled from scholastic dogmas and critical strictures, rather advance, than impede, his real greatness. After preaching in his native neighborhood and in Pittsylvania county, Virginia, for some years, he was induced by the new church called Nottoway in Amelia county, Va., to move down and take charge of them. This took place in 1769. Here he became very conspicuous. Great talents seldom fail of great success. Mr. Walker, though pastor of Nottoway church, disseminated his evangelical principles far and near. He was almost incessantly employed in preaching the gospel. In a few years, aided by others, particularly certain young preachers of his own raising, he planted between twenty and thirty churches south of James river. In these were also a considerable number of gifted characters, who afterwards became distinguished preachers, all of whom were either brought to the knowledge of the truth through his ministry or were nurtured under his fostering hand, after they were brought to conversion. All who knew him about this time coincide in ascribing to him everything that is desirable in a minister of the gospel. In talents as a preacher, he was equalled by few of any denomination. His voice was melodious; his looks were affectionate; his manner was impressive and winning; his reasoning was close and conclusive; his figures were elegant, well chosen and strictly applicable;—all of which advantages were heightened by the most unaffected simplicity. In private conversation he was uncommonly entertaining and interesting to all, but especially to young preachers. Affable with all sorts of people, he was beloved and admired as far as he was known."

It was no wonder that a young preacher of such extraordinary powers should have been early induced to leave his North Carolina home. In our strange appreciation of men and events, our people see but little difference between man and man, when the proper rewards of human excellence are to be awarded. Had Jeremiah Walker remained where he was born, he might by close living have avoided actual starvation; but where were the food and clothing proper for such a man's family to come from. The orator who entranced listening multitudes and enjoyed communion with the loftiest minds that have left us their thoughts in the books that delight all ages and nations, would scarcely be content to eke out the scanty pittance paid him by the churches, by the drudgery of manual labor on a Warren farm. Men in Virginia and elsewhere beyond our borders were willing to give of their substance a proper support for such men. And thus it was with Mr. Walker and a host of the same kind of men who have expatriated themselves in self defence, while our short-sighted population continued to express wonder that so many of our brightest youths leave their native State. When will we learn that the workman is worthy of his hire, and that labor is valuable in proportion to the skill with which it is accompanied.

With all his popularity and success in his new field of labor, Mr. Walker was yet doomed to some bitter experiences in Virginia. The eyes of the jealous and enraged members of the Established Church had been for some time on his movements, and they were resolved at last to use every means in their power to silence this eloquent advocate of Baptist principles. It will be remembered by the reader that Mr. Walker left North Carolina for Amelia county in the Old Dominion 1769. This period was precisely coincident with that of the greatest Baptist effort at propagating their faith and practice in the commonwealth, and also of the most bitter and unfair means of resistance on the part of the Church of England authorities. While North Carolina had been cursed and burdened with a similar imposition on the rights and liberties of the great mass of the inhabitants, yet for many reasons, the men of the Established Church had forborne the acts of injustice and oppression so common in Virginia. In the first place, the Episcopal portion of our people was a mere fragment of the population, and in the next, long and bitter experience had shown all such exotic combinations that North Carolinians would not tolerate, without armed resistance, very serious infringement of their previous privileges. Gov. Burrington was very right when he wrote back to the men who sent him over to manage the unruly Colonists, that only the plan of peaceful rule in Albemarle was to let the people govern themselves in their own way. So many previous governors had come to grief in their struggles for supremacy that even head strong and hard drinking George Burrington could see the danger of arousing their jealousy and wrath. Even then, as danger thickened around Rev. Jeremiah Walker as he went on his way proclaiming a crucified Redeemer, the bold men of Orange, Rowan and Guilford were arming for the bloody struggle at Great Alamance. Virginians might crouch down in submission to jealous rectors and maladministrations of the law, but such things were only possible in North Carolina in such places as New Bern, as it was under the very shadow of Gov. Tryon's new palace. With his strange ascendency over the hearts and minds of the sternest patriots, the church authorities on the Neuse might seize and imprison Rev. James Brinson, but nowhere else were such outrages attempted.

The Primitive Baptists of America.

I give in this article a few facts gleaned from my reading concerning the operations of the early Baptists of this country along the lines of religious literature, ministerial education and missionary effort.

I may be unfortunate in the selection and arrangement of my facts, but I hope the reader will accept them as I present them, and find them somewhat interesting. Of one thing I feel assured—that the reader will recognize a vast difference between the early or primitive Baptists of this country and the Reformed Baptists of 1827, who afterwards called themselves primitive Baptists.

RELIGIOUS LITERATURE.

Long before the Baptists of America had any agency for the dissemination of religious literature, they had keenly felt the need of such an agency. Neither could the Religious Tract Society of London, established in 1799, nor the American Tract Society, established at Boston in 1814, supply this want of the Baptists, though they highly commended and heartily supported the latter up to the formation of their own Tract Society in 1824.

Between 1799 and 1814 the publications of the London Society had circulated "from the shores of the Baltic to the Cape of Good Hope, through the whole of Europe and India, and were pressing upon the inhabitants of China." In the first fifteen years of its existence the Society sent out thirteen millions of tracts.

The American Tract Society has been sending out for nearly eighty years its millions of tracts and books of pure, uplifting, soul saving literature, the good results of which only eternity can tell.

I have before me the sixth annual report of the "Baptist General Tract Society," organized in 1824. Wm. T. Brantley was President and J. L. Dagg was Vice President of the body at its sixth anniversary. These were Southern men, and the former was a native of North Carolina, and at that time editor of the Columbian Star and Christian Index.

From their sixth report I gather the following facts: The Society received during the first six years $15,761.03, and printed 15,393,000 pages of religious literature. There were, in 1829, 329 auxiliary societies engaged in the circulation of the publications of the General Society. I am glad to know that three of these auxiliaries were in North Carolina, and that the names of Jas. McDaniel, W. G. Gray and C. W. Skinner appear as agents of the Society. The Chowan and French Broad Associations recommended the Society to their churches.

The reports of the various Associations on Sunday-schools during the year 1830 were so encouraging as to lead the Society to say, "The time may come when the number of schools in our denomination will be so great as to require the Tract Society to publish a series of Sabbath school books suited to their wants."

I have not given a tithe of the facts concerning tract distribution, nor have I said anything about Bible distribution; but I have submitted enough to show that the Baptists of America very early felt the need of religious literature, and made commendable effort to supply it.

MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

Another pressing need of the denomination was proper equipment for training young men called of God to preach the gospel.

The earliest movement in this direction, so far as I have been able to find out, was made by the old Philadelphia Association in the year 1722. The churches were instructed to seek out young men hopeful for the ministry, and "to give notice of it to Mr. Abel Morgan before the first of November, that he might recommend such to the Academy on the account of Mr. Hollis."

Isaac Eaton's Academy, Hopewell, New Jersey, was the first school opened by the American Baptists for the education of young ministers. It was a child of the Philadelphia Association, and was born in the year 1756. The school was placed "under the care of brother Isaac Eaton and the inspection of our brethren Abel Morgan, Isaac Stelle and Peter Peterson Vanhorn." Phila. Asso., p. 74. Among the many distinguished ministers who received instruction at this school were President Manning, for a quarter of a century at the head of Brown University, Dr. Samuel Jones, Dr. Hezekiah Smith, Dr. Isaac Skillman, and many others.

In the Minutes of the Philadelphia Association for the year 1766, Rhode Island College or Brown University is warmly recommended to the churches. It is added, "this college hath been set on foot upwards of a year, and has now in it three promising youths under the tuition of President Manning." I need not say more of this honored and useful institution that has sent out so many distinguished men and able, consecrated ministers of the word.

Other Baptist schools sprang up in the South about the beginning of this century. Benedict mentions several of them in his old work. Among these are Mt. Enon Academy, not far from Augusta, Ga., which came into existence in 1800, principally through the exertions of Dr. Henry Holcombe.

Mr. Roberts' Academy at Statesburg, South Carolina, was opened in the year 1800. The history of this institution is intimately connected with the Charleston Baptist Education Fund, commenced in 1791 by the Charleston Association for the gratuitous education of pious young men called of God to the work of the ministry. Richard Furman was chairman of the General Committee to whom was entrusted the management of this fund, and Henry Holcombe was Secretary.

One of the rules of the committee reads: "No person shall be admitted on the bounty but such as come well recommended, and appear on examination to be truly pious, of evangelical principles, of good natural abilities, and desirous of devoting themselves to the work of the ministry."

Joseph B. Cook and John M. Roberts were sent by this committee to Brown University in 1794. Jesse Mercer was assisted in 1793. Sydenham Morton and William Jones were adopted as beneficiaries in 1800, and sent to Statesburg Academy, just opened by J. M. Roberts, one of the beneficiaries of the committee and a graduate of Brown University. In 1803 Samuel Eccles and Ezra Courtney were accepted as beneficiaries. Wm. T. Brantley was placed under Roberts in 1805, and afterwards went to the South Carolina College, from which he graduated in 1808. I have mentioned these brethren to show that the Baptists of the Charleston Association were at an early date wide awake to the importance of having well-trained ministers of the word.

I must leave out much that I intended to say about ministerial education, and reserve what I have to say about missionary effort for another paper.

Words of Encouragement to Sister Hicks.

Dear Recorder:—In your issue of Feb. 17th I see where Sister Lucy E. Hicks is hurt because some prominent church-members signed a petition gotten up by whiskey men to annul the proceedings of the commissioners who refused to grant them license to sell whiskey in Henderson.

Sister, you must not allow little things like that to hurt you. There is a (christian!) nation which is in partnership with every old distiller in the country. A (christian!) nation that says to the barkeeper, your business is necessary to the perpetuity of the government. Had you thought of that? Well, it is so, and there are not only lawyers who will plead for any one that is imposed on by local laws, but there are scores of preachers who vote every chance they get with the parties that give them their license, protection and encouragement.

Sister, it is not in a general way good advice, but I would advise you to harden your heart a little. Yours in Christ, Power from the Lord.

BY J. B. TAYLOR, D. D., LEXINGTON, VA.

"When one that holds communion with the skies
Has filled his urn where those pure waters rise,
And once more mingles with us meaner things,
'Tis e'en as if an angel shook his wings;
Immortal fragrance fills the circuit wide
That tells us whence his treasures are supplied."

Men wonder at the strange power of the preachers who have been eminently successful. They study their rhetoric, and seek by adopting their methods to obtain their power to draw the multitudes and win souls. But they often overlook what alone constitutes the true secret of power.

The Apostle Paul explains the mystery, when in his epistle to the Thessalonians, he says, "Our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance."

That power which comes with the Holy Ghost, and with the strong assurance of faith, is what gives true success, not only in preaching, but in all christian effort. Those who have had this subtle power have been the men and women whose souls were surcharged with the fire of God. Others who came nigh them felt the strange mysterious influence. These honored ones of the Lord have not always been "gifted," according to man's judgment, but blessings attend their lives and labors, for they toil not in their own strength, but "with demonstration of the spirit and with power."

It is needless to write of the way by which this power may be obtained, for that is set forth by our Lord in Luke 11: 13. Aye, Jesus himself will be with those who truly seek his presence.

It is related that some two hundred years ago there was a Scotch preacher whose labors were signally successful. He was a mighty man of prayer. He had an appointment in a certain community. The time for beginning arrived, but the preacher had not come. His host sent word that the people were waiting. The servant came back and said that he did not knock at the preacher's door because he seemed to be talking to some one. "Did you hear anything that was said," inquired the master. "Yes; he said, 'I will not go except thou come with me,' and he kept begging the other to come." "That will do," said the host, "he will come, and the Other will come with him, and great things will be done here today."

That blessed Other was with Baron Stow of Boston when he preached a single sermon which resulted in the awakening of a hundred souls. The preacher had prayed a whole night over that sermon.

Ah, the presence, the company of the Other, is what we all must have. Pastors, evangelists, editors, secretaries, agents, Sunday-school teachers, colporters, deacons, church members, male and female, let us ask him as never before to be with us. If we go forth in his might we cannot go in vain.

A Correction.

Dear Recorder:—I see in the RECORDER of the 24th inst. a clipping from the Carthage Blade in which it is stated that the membership of Crain's Creek church had joined the Cameron Baptist church. Now, I want to say by way of correction that there was no Baptist church in Cameron until Crain's Creek church by a unanimous vote of its members agreed to move their organization to that place. It is still Crain's Creek church, but I suppose it will at an early day be changed in name to Cameron Baptist church. This church is about thirty-eight years old, and has had its days of prosperity as well as of adversity. It is the only Baptist church in a territory of about twenty miles square. We are now getting the material on the ground to build a house of worship, and expect to begin work on it soon. The church has received several new members into its fellowship since its removal to this place, and soon we expect more. The church is still a weak one financially, and we will be under the necessity of asking our brethren and friends, whom the Lord has trusted more largely with the keeping of his talents, to help us. A little help just now will be greatly appreciated by us, and we believe will be blest of the Lord in the establishment in this vicinity of those principles which are dear to every Baptist. Please forward contributions to Bro. E. P. Rodwell of this place, and they will be duly accredited.

May the RECORDER ever go forth advocating truth. Fraternally yours,

WM. ROGERS.

Responsive Reading.

In some Sunday-schools the superintendent or teachers of the classes will read a verse of the Bible lesson, and then the school or class will read the next verse.

I do not like this responsive reading. It smacks too much of Popish or Episcopal formality. It is objectionable, because some read fast, and some read slow; some read loud, and some read low. It creates a perfect jargon and tangling of voices. No one can in this way read God's word reverently and intelligently. Many people attending our Sunday schools have but a limited education. The Sunday-school affords many of these the best opportunity they have to improve in reading. Teachers should kindly and pleasantly aid the members of their class to read correctly. This cannot be done by responsive reading.

LESSONS FROM THE LIFE OF SPURGEON.

The nineteenth century has given birth to no preacher of the gospel who was such a mighty factor for good as Chas. H. Spurgeon; and we are only speaking what the trend of the religious sentiment of the age declares, that no man has died within the the century whose death has attracted more attention, or has been more sincerely lamented by the christian world. He was in many respects a remarkable man, and we desire in this paper to impress upon our readers some lessons derived from a study of his life that are evidently worth our attention.

One is, that a man may commence preaching with moderate intellectual gifts, and yet develop into a mighty preacher of God's word. It is a well-known fact that Spurgeon was not by any means a scholar when he commenced preaching. At best, we can only claim for him at that time a fair academic training. He was never a college student. We must not lose sight of the fact, however, that he had quite a retentive memory, with a remarkably inquisitive and receptive mind, and was really a student all of his life. His later sermons, and his published works, declare the fact that he had after years of arduous study acquired an education that would have been helpful to him at the commencement of his work. We mention the above fact, then, with no intention to disparage education, or to encourage our young men at college, or at the Seminary, to fail to use to the best the advantages and opportunities they enjoy. When possible, they should complete their courses, and be well prepared to grapple with the living theological and other questions of the day. Yet we desire to impress upon the minds of those who have not enjoyed first class educational advantages the importance of not turning back from their duty, if they feel called to preach, or desponding after they commence the work of the ministry, for the reason mentioned. The Baptist theory is right. If God has called a man to preach, whether he be learned or unlearned, as the world uses those terms, let him preach. If Spurgeon had belonged to some peoples that we now have in mind, who require graduation in a regular college course as a condition for entering the ministry, he would have been debarred the privilege of entering the pulpit, and the world would have been deprived of one of its greatest preachers. We must never forget that most of the immediate followers of Christ were unlearned men. God has always found pleasure in using the "weak things of the world to confound the mighty."

Another lesson we may learn from Spurgeon's life is, that it is possible to draw and hold a large congregation of hearers at one place of worship for long periods of time without resorting to any of the mere accessories of worship now so common, or to any sensational methods, such as are becoming popular among modern ministers. Spurgeon's Tabernacle in London cannot be called a fine or very costly building. Yet many modern churches imagine that it is almost impossible to draw and hold the multitudes without very elegant and costly buildings, such as shall please the eye and gratify the esthetic taste of the multitude. We are not opposed to building fine churches when the cause demands such buildings. Nothing that we have ought to be so dear to us as to be withheld from the Lord's service; but we fear that a good deal of money is unwisely spent at places that do not demand such expenditure, merely to gratify church vanity; and the point we make is, that it is possible to fill a large house continuously, if the pulpit has the right man in it, without the house of worship being specially costly or attractive. People went to Spurgeon's Tabernacle not to behold the costly building, but to hear him who made its walls resound with the old, old story, told with a pathos, quaintness, and earnestness, rarely excelled.

Spurgeon had, we believe, no regular choir, and the singing was congregational. Those who attended his Tabernacle almost always spoke of the mighty volume of congregational praise that went up to the Lord in song when his great multitude of hearers joined in that part of the worship. Yet how often do pastors and churches conclude that it is almost impossible, especially in the cities, to draw and hold a large congregation without a trained choir, a costly organ, and all the modern accompaniment of first-class choir worship. We are not opposing choirs, nor the highest form of melody in praising God in public worship, but we make the point that it is possible to fill a great house to overflowing continuously without these things. It is quite well for our people to remember this, and there is no occasion that a pastor or people should be discouraged in their work if they be not able to command such a choir or worship in such a building as others about them happen to have. Some of London's immense piles of grand church architecture, with all the elegant accessories of the establishment, were during Spurgeon's lifetime often occupied by slim congregations, droning out responses, or stereotyped prayers, with surpliced dean, bishop or archbishop, whilst the plain preacher, in his plain house, was preaching to packed thousands. "Not by might (human) nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord."

Nor did this greatest of modern preachers resort to any sensational methods to draw and hold his congregations. There were no preludes nor interludes. He did not select, so far as we know, sensational subjects, and announce them from the pulpit or in the city papers. It was known that the doors of the great Tabernacle were open to all, to the rich and the poor alike, and that the great preacher would preach the old, and yet ever new, story of the Cross, and thousands flocked to hear him. We are not lecturing our brethren here. There are some honored men among us that use methods that may be considered more or less sensational; but again we say that we are only making points from the life of this distinguished preacher which, to say the least, are significant, and deserve the attention especially of our younger students in the ministry.

Another lesson we learn from the life of Spurgeon is, that plain, simple, direct preaching is best adapted to reach the people and effect permanent good. One may read the sermons of Spurgeon in vain for anything like theological curls or flights of oratory. The search is equally vain for dark and mysterious passages that might puzzle the author himself to interpret. The man's style, like himself, is transparent, simple, direct. Ah, what a difference here, from the opinions that prevail among some churches or congregations! In the estimation of many church members now, the greatest and most essential qualification is that the preacher should be a "good pulpit orator," that he should be "brilliant, able to draw a crowd," &c. Yes, the preacher may be able to meet all these demands, and yet do little good in the world in the way of winning souls to Christ! Ah, how often do preacher and people forget that any man can be eloquent when he has a great theme to talk about, and is earnest in delivering his message. One of the most gallant battle cries ever heard during the American struggle for independence fell from the lips of the gallant De Kalb, as he cried in the thickest of the battle that ended his life, in his broken English, "Forwarts, bruden, forwarts!" Ah, what a poor figure does a preacher of Christ cut when he stands before mortal men and women, with the grave yawning beneath them, and all the dread realities of eternity staring him and them in the face, to be feeding them on sweet poetic platitudes, or the bon-bons of oratory! What would be thought of a watchman on the walls of the city, when he sees a host of the enemy approaching, if he should deliver to the people a beautiful homily about the "beauty of their situation," their business outlook, before he raised the alarm.

Another lesson we may learn is, that it is not necessary for the highest measure of success in the ministry for the preacher from time to time to preach exclusively to particular classes of his hearers. We have no account of his preaching to men to the exclusion of women. He did not preach to the children to the exclusion of grown people. Nor was there need, for his style was so simple, that children could understand him at any service. There be those who think it quite the thing to preach exclusively to classes at times. There is no precedent for it in the preaching of the Nazarene, or in that of his greatest modern minister.

Why can we not have more Spurgeons? We will have, when all of our ministers realize the nature of their calling, and the weight of the message they are sent to deliver. We will have, when our churches and pastors cease placing so much reliance upon the mere accessories of worship, and call in the aid of the Holy Spirit in the worship of the sanctuary and in the proclamation of the gospel.

WHY NOT?

The statement of the President of the Foreign Board, printed last week, reveals the fact that a special emergency confronts the Board. The treasury is empty, the present debt for borrowed money is over $35,000, and receipts are considerably behind what they were at a corresponding date last year, while expenditures in obedience to the instructions of the Convention have been much larger than ever before.

This condition lends force to the suggestion of Dr. Ellis, that the churches adopt and observe a special season of prayer and self-denial in the interests of this great work. We heartily second this suggestion, and commend it to pastors and people throughout the South.

Perhaps no one week would suit all equally well, but we might generally take the week beginning with the first Sunday in April. On Sunday, particular mention might be made of the pressing need of the Board, and the people exhorted to offer special prayer and exercise self-denial during that week in its interests.

This suggestion is not made at the instance of the Board, but we have no doubt such a course would be very gratifying to them. Let us cheer the hearts of these servants of Christ and the people in this season of anxiety by our united prayers and gifts. Above all, let us honor him who "loved us and gave himself for us."

We should be glad for our pastors and private members who approve the suggestion to write us a line to that effect at once.

The above has been sent out by the editors of the Religious Herald, and will appear as editorial in that paper this week. The effort is to secure, if possible, simultaneous action throughout the churches of the entire Southern Baptist Convention.

We most earnestly and hopefully commend the suggestions to the prayerful consideration of all the pastors and churches in this State. Our risen Lord has said, "All power is given unto me—go ye therefore—I am with you always."

Here inclosed by the Omnipotence and the Omnipresence of the Lord are his people who go forth to give the gospel to the nations.

William Carey caught not only the real spirit of missions, but also the divine order in the work given to the Lord's people—"Attempt great things for God, and expect great things from God." Our great attempts must not only precede, but in part be, the basis of our great expectations.

It is the Lord who works in us to will—to attempt great things—and to do—to perform in his strength the work planned. We must trust him by large missionary "attempts" before he will trust us with large missionary donations. The Baptists have succeeded far beyond all others in teaching the people to give themselves to God. Now let us go ahead of all others in teaching our people to give themselves to mere humanity. Allegiance to Christ involves allegiance to humanity. The gospel is the only remedy for the world's troubles. The gospel is the one thing the risen Christ has commanded us to give to all the world.

The consecration of ourselves and our means is the one demand now upon us in giving the gospel to the world. Let us all make the first week in April—3d to 10th—a time of special prayer and self-denial in the interest of missions.

EXPRESSIONS OF SYMPATHY.

Since the announcement in the last issue of the paper of the illness of the editor, a great many letters containing tender regard and deep sympathy have been received. A great number have given assurance that earnest prayers have gone to the throne of grace for the speedy recovery of one whom they so highly regard and so tenderly love.

Sister Bailey, the wife of the editor, and the family, extend their hearty thanks and express their appreciation for all these tokens of kindness. They will not be able to make individual responses to the extensive number of these letters. But they are read and will be preserved as sacred treasures.

CONDITION OF THE EDITOR.

There is very decided improvement in the health of the editor. He commenced to improve on Wednesday night last, and has since continued to grow better. His physician says he is doing as well as could be expected. He is able to walk about in his room a little, and to receive a few of the many friends who call to see him. We hope before a great while to see him at his post of duty again. Many prayers are being offered for his recovery, and we trust that a merciful Heavenly Father will hear and restore to health again.

QUERY.

"Is a deacon of a Baptist church a Scriptural office of a church who has been ordained by a preacher who himself was ordained by a presbytery called by himself, through his church, when both the pastor and the clerk of said church were not present, and, too, without the endorsement of the church at any subsequent meeting?"

ANSWER.—Such a preacher has not been properly ordained and is not to be encouraged. His work, therefore, in the ordination of deacons should not be recognized by Baptist churches.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

CARTHAGE, N. C.

The Tyson & Jones carriage factory is the nucleus around which most of the business and growth of the town has centered. There is hardly another business anywhere which has enjoyed a better success. It began probably fifty years ago to operate on a very small scale, making only a few buggies a year. But while the output was in the beginning small, and continued so for a number of years, yet from the first the policy of the company has been to do good, honest work. The business has continued to grow, and at the end of each year the proprietors have had cause to make some new additions in the way of enlarging and improving the facilities for carrying on the business to meet the increased demands for the products of the factory. For recent years the work of this factory has not only held all the local trade of Moore and the adjoining counties, but is now being sent to every Southern State in the Union. The operatives here compose some of the very best citizens of the town, enjoying, as many of them do, the comforts of a good house, which they own in their own names, and which are free from incumbrances of every kind. This is the result of good wages and steady work. This is the only time in the history of this business when the men have been asked to work on half time, and the probability is, so I learned, that this is not to continue but for a short time.

The brethren had just called Bro. J. M. White to preach for them once a month, and were awaiting his decision, hoping, however, to hear that he would take the church for this year at least. The church has greatly improved here for the last few years under the pastorship of Bro. W. F. Watson, and we shall be sorry if the work should take a step backward, as it is certain to do if the church remains without a pastor.

The Cameron brethren feel some encouragement in their work. They have their house built, but not entirely paid for. But Bro. Rogers stands ready to take a collection out of every one who passes, "be he Jew or Greek," and the probability is he will soon have the church out of debt.

A freight train came on to carry me down to Jonesboro in time to look in on Brother Jones for a short while before taking the regular train for Fayetteville. Bro. Jones is well situated in his new home, and feels hopeful of his work. There are but few members at Jonesboro, but they are making a heroic struggle to carry on the work.

I reached Fayetteville at 2 p. m., and found the old town moving on just about as it has been for years past. Nobody ever heard of Fayetteville being "on a boom," and as a consequence there are very few failures among the business men of the town. There are some men in the town who have done business here in the same house for nearly a half century, have made large fortunes, and are now pursuing their business in the same conservative and careful method which has characterized them in all the years that are past. The Baptist cause is growing stronger here year by year. Bro. Oliver is just the man the brethren here delight to have for their pastor. I do not know any preacher in the State who seems to be more justly appreciated. Bro. Oliver is not only a splendid preacher, but does an unusual amount of pastoral work among his people. And in this he is blest, too, by the sympathy and help of Sister Oliver, who realizes that she may share in this part of the pastor's labors. After having spent the time I had in Fayetteville in this pleasant home, I was not surprised that the brethren and sisters of the church were delighted with their pastor and his wife, for their lives seem to be wrapped up in the interest of the church and in the comfort and happiness of each of its members.

But for the rain and wind I should have reached in exactly the right time. This, however, was copious and most disagreeable. I found the fishermen "mending their nets," which had been broken by the large number of fish which had been caught a few days before. Men who have been in the business for years told me there had never been as fine fishing there at that season before, and that in a single day there were more than two thousand dollars worth of fish sold and shipped from Morehead City. So I found the brethren here happy and in the best of humor, and ready to renew their subscriptions to the RECORDER. What a blessed thing it is to find a place where people don't talk "hard times!"

Bro. Moore is moving right on with his work here; and besides, is building a church a few miles in the country.

I heard many express the hope that Bro. R. E. Peele would cast his lot in the Atlantic Association. The brethren think he is the man they need. The Association is now in the best condition it has ever been in, and will do more for all objects this year than ever before.

Something from Newbern, Kinston and Goldsboro will appear next. J. C. C.

....Rev. Geo. B. Eager of Anniston, Ala., has been called to the pastorate of the First Baptist church, Montgomery, Ala. He was recently called to the First church, Savannah, Ga.

....Rev. T. J. Taylor says that arrangements have been made for a thorough canvass in behalf of the Centennial of Missions in the Warren Union of the Tar River Association.

....Rev. Alvin Betts of Raleigh, who has been suffering with a cancer on his hand, submitted to an amputation last week. The operation was a success and Bro. Betts is said to be doing well.

....In addition to the list of Sunday school Associations to be held, as appears on the fifth page, are the following: Sandy Creek—Moon's Chapel ch., May 27-29; Little River, Hector's Creek ch., May 27-29.

....The title to the lot for the site of the Baptist Academy in Lumberton, N. C., has been executed by Mr. B. Godwin. It conveys the splendid three-acre lot on Walnut street, between Sixth and Eighth streets.

....Bro. J. W. Brady writes that there has been one of the greatest meetings at New Life church in Brunswick county ever known at that church. The pastor, Rev. J. P. Lennon, was assisted by Rev. N. A. Callihan.

....The second Sunday is the day on which all of the Sunday-schools in the State are asked to make a contribution to Sunday-school Missions. Let each superintendent see to it that his school does its best for this important work.

....Rev. C. A. G. Thomas says Dr. Overby, Chairman of the Ministers' Conference, has called a meeting for April 6th, at Edenton, to confer about the canvass of the Chowan Association in behalf of the Centennial of Modern Missions.

....Rev. E. B. Barrett has rented his farm and moved to Peachland. He has determined to give himself entirely to the ministry if he has to support himself and family to do so. Here is an opportunity for some vacant field to secure a good man.

....Since the beginning of the present year, three of Oxford's leading citizens have died. Mr. L. H. Smith, an elder in the Presbyterian church, Capt. R. V. Minor, a prominent member of the Methodist church, and Bro. D. A. Hunt, for many years a deacon in the Baptist church, have all died within a remarkably short time of each other. These were all good and true men, and their passing away is a serious loss to the community as well as to the churches to which they belonged.

....Rev. H. A. Brown and his people are looking forward with pleasure to the approaching Sunday-school Convention which meets with the First Baptist church in Winston, April 14th. Those who desire and accept entertainment must send in their names by April 7th.

....Rev. J. A. Smith says: "My churches have already given to Home and Foreign Missions; but I will take up special collections in March and April. I will also take the field for about ten days and go from house to house to see and talk to the brethren about missions."

....The first week in April and the week following is the time which has been suggested for special consideration, prayer and self-denial in behalf of missions. Let every pastor and church in the State make this a time of special prayer and self denial in behalf of the world's salvation.

....Rev. W. R. Gwaltney gave us a pleasant call last Saturday on his return trip from Taylorsville. He reports a good meeting in progress when he left. He also reports the encouraging fact that Bro. J. A. White will take charge of the valuable school property there and conduct a school therein.

....Rev. J. H. Edwards, the justly beloved pastor of the Missionary Baptist church here, preached his first anniversary sermon Sunday morning before a large congregation, which was well received. During his one year's labor among his flock, the church has greatly prospered, showing now a larger membership than ever in its history.—Goldsboro Headlight, March 10.

....The brethren of the Broad Street church at Winston has held a service of welcome to Bro. L. G. Broughton, their newly-elected pastor. The meeting was largely attended and the services were participated in by several pastors from other denominations. The brethren are delighted with their pastor, and already plans have been laid for more enlarged work in the church.

....Bro. C. A. G. Thomas writes of Sunday, March 6th: "We had another fine day. Took a collection amounting to $238 to day. This winds up a round $1,200 paid out for heating our house. God has greatly blessed me in my work here. And I can't well understand how he can use such an imperfect fellow as I. All the glory to God for this work. Great crowds attend our services, and the work goes on, and I am contented and happy."

....An evangelist who distributes cards and who counts his converts by the thousand, has been holding a meeting in a neighboring city. The cards are distributed in the audience and all "who desire to lead a better life" are requested to sign, to indicate denominational preferences and return to the evangelist. These are the "converts." Twenty such cards were given to a Baptist pastor, and he found eighteen were signed by members of his church.—Western Recorder.

....A new issue. Gov. Francis of Missouri, it is said, insists on the "swallow tail" coat at his receptions. Col. Richard Dalton and Dr. Yeaman, the two principal aspirants, must needs take position. Col. Dalton says that, if he is elected, the people can, if they wish, call on him in their shirt sleeves; but Dr. Yeaman awaits developments before naming his position on this great issue of the day. How are our North Carolina aspirants to the Gubernatorial office on the "swallow tail" issue?

....The Baptist (Baltimore) and the Alabama Baptist have been objecting to Senator David B. Hill as a Presidential candidate. While we have no defense to make for Mr. Hill against the many charges brought against him, yet we doubt the wisdom of religious papers expressing decided preferences for candidates. In what they say on such subjects, they had better confine themselves to moral questions. If it were proper for us, we would say that our preference for a Presidential candidate is Senator Palmer of Illinois. He is a thorough christian gentleman and a good Baptist, and we think it is time that the country had a Baptist for President. We would say this, if it were proper, but it is not proper, and so we do not say it. We even withdraw these remarks, and beg pardon for making them.—Western Recorder.

....The Rev. Mr. Battle has resigned the pastorate of the Baptist church in this place, and accepted a call to the First Baptist church in Petersburg, Va. The pulpit of that church has been filled by such shining lights as Dr. Hatcher, Dr. Eaton and others of similar lustre, but when that congregation shall sit under the brilliant beamings of Mr. Battle's grand and colossal powers, and feel the thrilling glow of his magnetic and soul melting fires of dramatic passion and oratory, they will catch the sunbursts of an intellectual splendor never seen in that church before. And in addition to his grand and brilliant mental endowments he has the sweetest manners and the loveliest disposition that ever graced and adorned and beautified christian character. With a wife who is just as sweet and as lovely and as charming, his ministry is a benediction, and his presence in any community is a sweet and precious blessing.—Wilson Mirror.

Meeting of the Board of Trustees.

The Annual Meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Baptist Female University will be held at 4 p. m., April 12th next, in the Mission Rooms in Raleigh.

"Hymns New and Old."

In the RECORDER of March 9th, Rev. J. A. Campbell commends "Hymns New and Old," because, as he seems to think, it is a denominational, Baptist book.

"Hymns New and Old" is undenominational Professor Towner, the author, is a Northern Methodist. The book is now in its third or fourth edition, being called "Hymns New and Old Revised."

In Manly's "Choice," and in all Baptist and Presbyterian books, that line in "How firm a foundation" reads "The soul that on Jesus hath leaned for repose," is in "New and Old" changed to suit the Arminian view to "The soul that on Jesus doth lean for repose," thus dodging even the singing of final perseverance. It would be injustice to Dr. Manly's family, who receive a small royalty on "The Choice," and injustice to Baptist churches and Sunday-schools that might buy "Hymns New and Old," under the impression that they were buying a Baptist book, for the sale of "The Choice" by Dr. Manly to be injured by the introduction into our churches and Sunday-schools of "Hymns New and Old," however good that book may be in the opinion of our Methodist brethren.

Let the pastors examine "The Choice," and, if their good judgment approves it as the very best Baptist hymn-book now published, as I thing it is, introduce it into their churches and Sunday-schools. Then we can, as Bro. Campbell says, "not only preach a pure gospel, but sing it, and learn the children to sing it."

Unwise Work.

It is exceedingly hard to get some christians to do any work at all. Others seem willing to work, but it is very hard, often impossible, to get them to work at the right place and in the right way. Unwise work is often no better than no work at all.

When a company of christians agree on a place as most suitable to build a church-house, it is clear as a sunbeam that that is the right place for these church members to meet and do their church-work, their prayer-meeting work and their Sunday school work.

No church can truly prosper without the united labors of her members within her walls and for her up-building. No one can be a loyal christian who does not work in the right place and in the best way to build up his church. But do all church members do this? Sadly we answer no. The tendency of the times, especially among country churches, is to an unwise and ruinous division of christian work. Brethren who live in easy distance of their churches will go into neighborhoods convenient for all to attend church and will build up Sunday-schools and prayer meetings and work in them, and leave this christian work to languish, and often die, at their churches for lack of their aid.

Now what are some of the results of this unwise work?

1. Churches organized where they are needed and where they might do a blessed work for God, are being weakened and discouraged.

2. Many are kept away from church services and church work. They say, "I have my own work to do elsewhere, and I cannot go to church." This is disheartening to pastors and church workers.

3. Those who do this outside work soon love it better than their church or church work, and are thus gradually weaned from their church and care less and less for it.

4. Many weak and unneeded churches are thus started, which beg and beg all over the land for money to build church houses; and then the State Mission Board is flooded with petitions to help pay preachers at these points.

5. Baptists do much of this kind of work, and it often results in the building up of Pedobaptist churches. Thoughtful Baptists see that churches are not needed at many of these points, therefore they discourage their building. Pedobaptists are quick to see their opportunities. They get a preacher to have occasional, and then regular, appointments for preaching. Then a protracted meeting is held, and a Pedobaptist church is organized largely by Baptist work and out of Baptist material. This is not imaginary. Exactly such results have followed, and will continue to follow much of this unwise work done by Baptist brethren.

Many of our best pastors and church workers are grieved and discouraged by this unwise division of work. If these good workers would work at their churches, how it would build up, strengthen, and encourage the churches.

One of the great needs of the times is a concentration of christian work at our churches. Could we have this, then a constant revival of religion might be enjoyed.

Letter from Rev. R. R. Moore.

Buchanan church building is now newly covered, logs and brush taken out of the way, and things look so much neater. The few members are talking of painting the house. This church is about five miles east of Greensboro, N. C.

The Goodwill church, twenty-two miles north of Greensboro, has the brick pillars up, and the frame-work at the place, sash and doors at the depot and nails ready. This is the eighth church building I have been blessed in worrying about. This is a much larger building than the old house. We are not building a house here before we have use for it, for many that came to the old house could not be cared for as well as they should.

The house of worship at Piny Grove is not ceiled yet; it is well seated, has a good stove, and is painted on the outside. We have good congregations, but no church organized here as yet. It is strange to think that Guilford county is yet mission work with the Baptists. Other denominations are well represented here, and it is equally strange to some that we feel such intense interest in giving this people the gospel as we hold it.

The one main reason why I love the BIBLICAL RECORDER is because it is outspoken to friends or foes. We have to meet with people who have not been taught a definite Bible religion. I am convinced that true godliness should be followed by suffering for it as was done in other days. The scoffs and jeers of many religionists is hard to stand before in this so called polished age of refinement.

The country around Greensboro is fine. Baptist preachers have not remained long among us. It is needless to state the cause of this. Even the State Board has become tired of our cries as a people.

The young men of Greensboro have built a neat house of worship that they call the Baptist Chapel; it is well seated, has a good stove, and is nicely painted.

R. R. MOORE.

Treat Both Alike.

Many a man has a character as foul as the smoke of hell. They have gone down to the lowest depths of moral pollution. They live in constant and known criminal intimacy with the most abandaned characters. And yet these foulest dregs of creation are treated with the highest consideration, and are welcomed into what is called the best society.

Ladies of culture, intelligence and purety will receive these degraded men into their parlors; they will walk and ride with them; and even dance with them in ball-rooms; and when these most degraded of mankind conclude to marry, they find no difficulty in wedding ladies of virtue and high social standing.

Ladies who will treat degraded men with respect and kindness, will treat with neglect, scorn and contempt, women who are guilty only of the same sin. And when a woman has sinned, and repents of it, and longs to rise to a better life, and is striving to do it, she gets but little or no encouragement. Good people refuse to notice, or help her, and she is forced still to mingle with the bad, where it is impossible to rise above her surroundings.

This is all wrong. The very best people are the ones who ought to help the fallen to rise to lives of purity and christianity. Our Saviour has set us an example in Luke 7: 36—50. If we are not going to imitate this example, let us stop singing:

"Help your fallen brother rise,
While the days are going by."

If parents will allow their daughters to associate with men of the vilest character, do be charitable and Christ-like enough to encourage and help poor fallen women to rise to a better life. Do not treat women worse than you do men. Give them at least an equal chance.

Meeting Closed at Wakefield.

Our meeting, which closed last Friday, was one long to be remembered on account of the presence and power of the Spirit. There were about twenty professions, sixteen of whom gave their names as candidates for baptism. Bro. N. B. Broughton was with us and did the most powerful preaching we have heard in a long time. Surely the Lord was with him. We all want him to come again and stay longer.

We have very much to encourage us in our work here. Our churches are in fine running order, many are earnestly inquiring the way of life, a larger number of pupils in school than usual, and a heartiness worthy of the school interest in the large building we have undertaken. All this causes us to feel that our past efforts have not been in vain.

A resolution will be offered next Saturday to move Whitestone church to this place and occupy the Concert Hall for a while at least.

A number of new dwellings are being built and will be occupied by men whose influence for good will be felt.

The RECORDER gets better and better.

Saying Unpleasant Things.

There is a certain class of people who take great satisfaction in saying unpleasant things They call this peculiarity "speaking their minds" or "plain-speaking." Sometimes they dignify it by the name of "telling the truth." As if truths must be unpleasant in order to be true! Are there no lovely, charming, gracious truths in the world? And if there are, why cannot people diligently tell these, making others happier for the telling, rather than hasten to proclaim all the disagreeable ones they can discover?

The sum of human misery is always so much greater than the sum of human happiness that it would appear the plainest duty to add to the latter all we can, and do what lies in our power to diminish the former. Trifles make up this amount, and in trifles lie the best and most frequent opportunities. It may seem a little thing to tell another what is out of place in her appearance or possessions; but if the information is unnecessary and makes her unhappy, it is clearly an unkind and unfriendly action.—Harper's Bazar.

The most attractive advertisement in this paper is the picture of the large sheep, the trade mark of the well-known Elkin Woolen Mills. These mills had the most extensive exhibit of the kind at the Southern Exposition in Raleigh last fall, and all who saw their goods were surprised at their excellence. Send these gentlemen your wool to be worked your orders for goods. They are thoroughly reliable, and will please you every time.

Resignation of Rev. W. S. Ballard

In order that our beloved and efficient pastor, W. S. Ballard, might have a broader scope of usefulness, he deemed it best to resign the pastorate at Southport and neighboring churches. Therefore, be it Resolved, That the church has lost a faithful minister and efficient pastor—one loved not only by his own church and churches of other denominations, but by the entire community. The whole field in which he labored, marked with so much success, mourn his loss. Therefore, we commend him to any people with whom he may mingle as pastor or otherwise.

Done by order of conference.

Southport, March 10, 1892.

Expression of Respect to Rev. G. P. Hamrick.

Your committee submit the following expression of the Shelby Baptist church on accepting the pastoral resignation of Rev. G. P. Hamrick:

January, 1892.

A servant of God and faithful minister of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, Bro. Hamrick, has ably and acceptably served the Shelby Baptist church for 1890 and '91, and his godly walk, gentle manners and kind disposition have gained for him the hearty commendation of both church and community, and his forcible presentation of Christ and him crucified has brought many souls to God, adding eighty or more members to the church. The poor and needy, the sick and afflicted will ever hold him in loving remembrance for his many kind offices and ministrations. Therefore be it Resolved, That the Shelby Baptist church tenders to Bro. Hamrick her christian gratitude for his untiring labors as her pastor, and that we, her members, extend to him an invitation to visit our church and our homes whenever it is in his power to do so.

Resolved, That this be spread upon our church book, and a copy be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER with request to publish the same.

The Importance of Organizing the Children.

I scarcely think that at this late day it is necessary to assert the importance of organizing the children. But many persons have never asked themselves the question, "Why is it important?" This question, dear sisters, I shall now try to answer.

As far back as the days of Solomon we have this proverb: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." I think the best way to begin training a child is to make him feel that he is of some value in the world, and at the same time educate him in the unselfish, out giving life. We We have this illustrated in the pleasures of the little tot who has been asked to do something for mamma. This to me is a strong argument in favor of organizing the children. In no other way can they be made to realize so fully that they, too, must stand in their "lot and place." It encourages them to be helpful, and if properly instructed, they learn to work methodically and to give systematically, and in the knowledge and love of God.

In the next place, if we wish the next generation to be liberal, earnest and energetic, we must begin, not as some one has said, one hundred years before their birth, but must certainly as soon as their little hands can drop the pennies in the Sunday-school basket. As they advance in years they realize that Jesus was just as much in earnest when he said, "Freely ye have received, freely give," as when he said, "He that believeth shall be saved." They become interested in mission work and read missionary papers, so that they will not be forced, in coming years, to ask, as I once heard a member of the church ask, "What is the difference between Home and State missions?" And I tell you, my sisters, unless we read our mission papers, and thus identify ourselves with our missionaries and their work, we can never realize the great responsibility God has placed upon us of holding up their hands. The children must read as well as give; and in no other way can they do this more thoroughly than by having their own societies, taking their own papers, and thus growing up beautifully and symmetrically in the vineyard of the Master, doing his will and enjoying his favor.—L. C. J., in Baptist Courier.

In connection with the above, it is probably known to most, if not all, that the "Kind Words" weekly (the children's paper published by the S. B. Sunday-school Board at Nashville, Tenn.,) has a missionary department of two columns in every issue, under charge of Woman's Missionary Union. The subjects are in line with the prayer-card topics, thus bringing in annual review every field of missions cultivated by S. B. C. Boards, Home and Foreign. These subjects are treated historically, geographically, the customs of the people described, their needs depicted in storied form, while suggestions for bands and young people's societies aim to give practical aid. Especially, attention is given to the Centennial celebration, seeking to enlist the active sympathy and interest of the young people in its observance. Different lady writers, of known ability over the South, contribute weekly to this department, and we commend the paper to leaders of bands as a help to their work. The Home and Foreign Boards have called on Sunday-schools to make collections through the Chapel Card, and this method is prominently brought forward in the missionary columns of Kind Words. Send to Dr. J. M. Forst, Sec. S. S. S. Board, Nashville, Tenn., for samples.—Miss Alice Armstrom, in Foreign Mission Journal.

"According to our observation, Baptists know a great deal more about the doctrines and practices of other denominations than other denominations know about the doctrines and practices of Baptists. We do not know of a single Pedobaptist editor, except the Congregationalists, who does not talk about 'the Baptist church' in utter ignorance of the fact that there is no such thing in existence"—Western Recorder. .... Will the Recorder kindly tell us what to call the people known as Baptists? We know a little band of people, up in the mountains, who meet once a month in a school-house, when the weather is not too cold, sing, pray, and preach, and they call themselves the Baptist church. Are they such? If a little squad of two dozen, more or less, constitute a church, how is it that a large squad of 4,000,000 do not constitute a church? And if you are not the Baptist church, what church are you? Will the Recorder kindly light its tallow candle and turn the rays this way?—Central Methodist.

The above is a capital illustration of the ignorance of other denominations concerning Baptists. When we deny that another denomination, as for example the M. E. church, South, is a church according to the New Testament, they are up in arms at our "narrowness" and "bigotry" in "unchurching" them. "Unchurching," by the way, is something we never understood. Then when we say that our own denomination is not a church, these other denomination are amazed, as is the editor of the Central Methodist, and as was the editor of the Christian Observer sometime since. They are ignorant of Baptist doctrine on the subject of the church. If these editors will agree to publish it for the information of their readers, we will gladly furnish them a brief statement of what the Baptist doctrine of a church is. We will do this in no controversial spirit and without arguing at all for the correctness of the doctrine, but simply to let their readers know what the Baptist position is. The editors can refute the doctrine to their hearts' content, but we would be glad for them and their readers at least to understand us.

The Methodist asks, "Will the Recorder kindly tell us what to call the people known as Baptists?" Certainly; call us Baptists. You have it there all right, just hold to it. Talk not of "the Baptist church," but of "the Baptist churches," or of "the Baptist denomination," or simply of "the Baptists." There are three names for us, all of which are true and acceptable. We never heard of "a little squad" of Baptists who called themselves "the Baptist church," and we think the editor is mistaken in his facts. He asks, "If the little squad of two dozen, more or less, constitute a church, how is it that a large squad of 4,000,000 do not constitute a church?" This question shows that the editor never informed himself as to Baptist polity. It is precisely because the little squad is a church that the 3,000,000 are not a church. A church is a local body. The many thousands of Baptist churches in the land do not constitute a church. That would be to have a church composed of churches, which would be absurd. According to Methodist doctrine, as we understand it, the local body is not a church at all, but simply a society, while the aggregate of these societies form a church which is called the Methodist Episcopal church, South. Thus a Methodist church is composed of societies, while a Baptist church is composed of individuals.—Western Recorder.

Liberty of spirit is a mighty boon. It dispenses with many things. But woe be to him who dreams that it dispenses him from watchfulness.—Faber.

In putting man to struggle against misfortune, God purifies him from his past faults, puts him on his guard against future ones, and ripens him for heaven.—J. de Maistre.

Self interest, as well as conscience, sometimes makes cowards of us all.

International Bible Lessons, 1892.

MAR. 20—REVIEW OF THE QUARTER'S STUDIES IN THE PROPHETS ISAIAH, JEREMIAH AND EZEKIEL.

Scripture lesson to be committed to memory: Isaiah 11: 1, 2, 9; 26: 3, 4; 53: 4, 5; 55: 1, 6, 7; Jer. 31: 33, 34; Ezek. 36: 25—27.

If the pupils have not committed these verses, let them turn to them in their Bibles (not in their quarterlies or lesson papers), and read them. Bibles are so cheap now, that there is no excuse for any Sunday-school or congregation being without them, and when a pupil reads from the Bible as a whole, he is much more apt to take in the lesson as a message from God, and not simply a lesson to be learned for recitation. Besides, it enables him to see readily the connections of the lesson with the other Scriptures around it.

Repeat the subjects and motto texts of of the quarter's lessons. The superintendent might arrange these on the blackboard either beforehand or while they are being called for from the different classes in the following way: Draw three perpendicular columns on the board making three wide spaces. On the first, write "Date;" on the second, "Titles;" and on the third, "Motto Texts." Under heading of first space, write "Jan. 3;" then ask for subject of the lesson for that date and write "K. of C." for Kingdom of Christ, in the second column, and the first few words of the motto text, "He shall have," &c., in the third. Then rehearse the main points of the lesson for Jan. 3d. Proceed in the same way with "Jan. 10th," putting "S. of S." for Song of Salvation in the second column, and "Trust ye," &c., for motto text in the third; and so on through all the lessons of the quarter. Require different classes to give subjects and motto texts of different lessons as you point them out or write them down. Afterwards review the whole school on the same.

Let the pupil know that these lessons cover a period of 170 years of very important national and individual history (from B. C. 741 to B. C. 571), during which time Rome was founded, Æsop wrote his fables, the "seven wise men of Athens" flourished, the kingdom of Babylon rose to great power and splendor, and the kingdoms of Israel and Judah declined in religion and morals till destroyed. Egypt was waning in power. Numa Pompilius, second king of Rome, reigned while Isaiah was prophesying. During the whole thirty-nine years of his reign, the temple of Janus was shut and no war was carried on by the Romans. He erected a temple to faith, forbade all costly sacrifices, allowed no blood to be shed upon the altars, nor any images of the gods to be made. (See Anthon's Classical Dictionary). Joel in Judah and probably Amos and Jonah were still living and old men when Isaiah was a young man.

Jeremiah lived in the last days of the kingdom of Judah. He was contemporary with the prophets Zephaniah, Habakkuk and Huldah in Judah, and Daniel and Ezekiel in Babylon. Isaiah had been dead seventy years when Jeremiah began to prophesy. He prophesied during the reigns of the good young king Josiah, and all of his wicked successors, till the downfall of Jerusalem and the blinding of Zedekiah. Jeremiah never married.

Isaiah and Ezekiel were both married men. We have an account of the death of Ezekiel's wife in Ezek. 24: 1—16. This occurred at the beginning of the last seige of Jerusalem B. C. 586, when he was thirty-seven years of age. Isaiah's wife was a prophetess. They had two children with very strange names given them as prophecies to the people. One of them was called Shear-jashub, which means "A remnant shall return"; the other Maher-shalal-hash-baz, which means "Speed—spoil—hurry—prey." (See Isaiah 8: 1—4).

Ezekiel, as we have seen, was contemporary with Tarquinius Priscus, the fifth king of Rome, with Æsop, the celebrated maker of fables, and with Solon, the wise lawgiver of Athens. His prophecies were delivered in Babylonia whither he was carried away captive with king Jehoiachin and many of the nobles of Judah, B. C. 598, when he was twenty-five years of age. He began to prophesy when he was thirty years of age (B. C. 593) and an exile in a foreign land.

Note the difficulties under which all great and godly men labor. Isaiah prophesied during the reign of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah. Uzziah and Jotham were good kings, and did that which was right themselves, but failed to undo the idolatrous work of their predecessors. Ahaz broke out into great wickedness and the people grew worse and worse under his rule, so much so that Hezekiah's example had but little effect upon them, and the Lord allowed Senacherib to invade their country. Jeremiah was maltreated and imprisoned and died in a foreign land, while Ezekiel died before the fulfilment of his glorious predictions and while his people were still strangers among the heathen. To all human appearances, their ministry seemed unavailing and unsuccessful, but not so in reality. They were faithful to God and to their people, though they made themselves unpopular thereby, and Jeremiah was bitterly and grievously persecuted.

A good man's life can never be a failure. The faithful preacher's work lasts from generation to generation and blesses the world long after his body crumbles to dust and his burying place even is forgotten. Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel are more widely known to-day than any of the world's great ones who held their persons and ministry in contempt. They still live; for they have by their writings of prophecy made all coming generations their contemporaries. The man whose character is builded on Christ and moulded according to the precepts of divine truth shall never perish, but his name and his influence shall wax stronger and stronger in the earth as the generations come and go, until all the affairs of this world shall be wound up at the great judgment seat of Christ.

NEEDHAM B. COBB.

From Caswell County.

Perhaps a few lines from this county, once noted for its membership of firm and devoted Baptists, may interest the readers of the RECORDER.

There are eight churches in the county, one at Milton, on the Virginia line; Trinity; on the Rockingham line, and the others at long distances apart. There ought to be sixteen.

There are only three ministers in the county, and for work, only one and three-fourths, Rev. J. R. Jones giving one-fourth of his time to a Virginia church just across the Dan River, and Rev. J. J. James, who has been unable from continued ill health to do any ministerial work for several years. This honored brother is very ill at his home near Yanceyville, and peacefully waiting his Master's time to enter into "his house not made with hands," willing to suffer on, or be "gathered to his fathers," as seemeth good in his Master's sight. He is still deeply interested in denominational matters and in every thing good and useful.

Rev. J. R. Jones has just entered on his pastorate at Yanceyville. He is pastor at Shiloh, and is also Principal of Milton Academy; has two ladies assisting him in his school. Board is cheap, and Milton is noted for its beautiful scenery and the refinement and culture of its inhabitants. There is no reason why we should not expect great success in this work.

Rev. J. K. Howell is pastor at Providence, Trinity, Kerr's Chapel, Lea Bethel, and expects to take Beulah by preaching at that place and Lea Bethel on the same day. By this arrangement all the churches have monthly preaching.

We hope to establish some mission schools in the early spring.

Kerr's Chapel is rejoicing over the making almost new of their church building—new roof, weather boarding, windows, benches, blinds, and a vestibule added; and when it is painted, it will be the prettiest country church in the county. I know that Rev. F. M. Jordan, F. H. Jones, H. Vernon, A. Hord, former pastors, who labored so faithfully, will be glad to hear of this improvement.

Trinity, so long one of the best churches in this section, has suffered severely in the loss of some of its best members, one fourth of the entire membership with drawing at one time to join the Roxboro, Reidsville and other churches; but the faithful few who remain feel like they must take up the whole burden and go forward. Instead of saying "let us rise and build," they say, "let us rise and paint," and it will be done.

Lea Bethel, named in honor of Bro. Sidney Lea, who contributed so liberal to its building fund, was organized in 1890 with five members. It now has twenty-one from the beginning they have kept up a good Sunday school numbering from forty to sixty. They recently purchased from Bro. J. J. Lenard an organ, which has given great satisfaction. Bro. Murray, a young man recently received into the church, has just been elected Superintendent and is working hard for the interest of the school. How encouraging to the pastor to see the young men consecrating themselves in the Lord's work.

Providence church, eight miles from Danville, is nicely located in a good neighborhood. From a reference to the minutes of their Association, we find it has gained more in numbers than any church in the Association during the past decade and have had quite a number added to them during the past year. They do not believe in debt, and pay their pastor quarterly.

Yanceyville, Milton, Trinity and Lea Bethel have evergreen Sunday-schools; Providence and Kerr's Chapel have summer schools. Yanceyville Sunday-school has had the same Superintendent for fifty years, and during all this time Bro. Lowndes has been faithful to his trust. He has been blind thirty-five years. His fine form, grey hair and dignified bearing as he is led into the school-room every Sunday morning, is a sermon without a spoken word. He is always gentle and cheerful and his whole life is a reproach to those who, blessed with sight, youth and health, do nothing for the good of the world. Bro. Lowndes's work in Yanceyville should not be forgotton. His daughter, one of the accomplished and popular teachers in the Oxford Female Seminary, has furnished me an interesting statement of her fathers life and labors, but I have not access to it at present. I hope soon to write an account of the life-work of this eminent servant of God.

Help Asked for Maxton.

A little band of Baptists at Maxton, Robeson county, N. C., ask that you help them build a church. This is an important railroad junction, and it is desired to build a house of worship worthy of the goodness of the Lord, and commendable of the great Baptist brotherhood.

ROBESON BAPTIST ASSOCIATION,
January 19th, 1892.

We are acquainted with the membership of the First Baptist church at Maxton, N. C., and do cheerfully recommend them to the brethren as earnest and zealous workers, and request that their petition for aid in building a house of worship be liberally responded to. A. R. PITTMAN, Mod.
E. K. PROCTOR, JR., Clerk.

All the elements which nature requires, to make the hair beautiful and abundant, are supplied in Ayer's Hair Vigor. This preparation keeps the scalp free from dandruff, prevents the hair from becoming dry and harsh, and makes it flexible and glossy.

Come what will, I will keep my faith with friend and foe.—Abraham Lincoln.

Meeting of the Board of Missions.

The next meeting of the Board of Missions and Sunday schools will be held in the Mission Rooms in Raleigh, Tuesday, March 22d, 1892, at 8 o'clock p. m. All those who expect to attend the next session of the Southern Baptist Convention, to be held in Atlanta, Ga., May 6—10, and wish to be appointed delegates by the Board, will please drop me a postal to that effect at once.

I don't say a man is not a christian who will aid or give his influence for the sale of whiskey; but I do say he is failing to let his light shine.—J. R. Maynard in Biblical Recorder, Feb. 24, 1892.

Wrong, brother. He is letting his light shine for the devil, and holding open the doors of the devil's ante-rooms to hell. How can a christian do it? A man may get on the fence in politics, but not in the church. "The Lord knoweth his own, and they do follow him." "By their fruits ye shall know them." Is the man who supports the whiskey traffic bearing fruit for God or for the devil? This question is an open one.

D. T. HARGROVE.

Laurinburg, N. C.

They poulticed her feet and poulticed her head,
And blistered her back till 'twas smarting and red,
Tried tonics, elixirs, pain-killers and salves,
(Though grandma declared it was nothing but "nerves.")
And the poor woman thought she must certainly die,
Till "Favorite Prescription" she happened to try.
No wonder its praises so loudly they speak,
She grew better at once and was well in a week.

The torturing pains and distressing nervousness which accompany, at times, certain forms of "female weakness," yield like magic to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and adapted to the delicate organization of woman. It allays and subdues the nervous symptoms and relieves the pain accompanying functional and organic troubles.

It's a legitimate medicine—an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine, and a positive remedy for "female weaknesses" and ailments. All functional disturbances, irregularities, and derangements are cured by it. There's nothing like it in the way it acts—there's nothing like it in the way it's sold. It's guaranteed to give satisfaction in every case, or the money paid for it is promptly refunded.

You lose nothing if it doesn't help you—but it will.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P. O. address.
